Another prerogative which Hunt and every true artist shares with the poet is seen in this—that he makes us perceive and enjoy many characteristics and latent beauties in the objects as depicted which we should neglect or fail to discover in the objects themselves. This complete realisation could, of course, only be secured by the balanced excellence of drawing, composition, light and shade, colour, and other obvious qualities. As a colourist he is one of the greatest in the English school. But it is in their "execution" that Hunt's drawings have furnished the chief problem both to painters and critics. This execution is on all hands confessed to have been founded upon principles which lie among the most deeply-hidden arcana of art; and it is in the hope of throwing some light on those principles that we have endeavoured to discriminate between the still-life painting of Hunt and others. The execution is the perfection of finish—understanding the word to imply not more elaboration, but completeness of impression. "A degree," says Mr. Ruskin, "of slightness of execution, or evanescent, appears to be an element in the process elaborators, admirable in other respects, have neglected or overstriven to avoid." To this it may be added that Mr. Hunt (like those great masters whom Hayden significantly classed as "the Toothers," in contradistinction to "the Polishers," or little men) relied for optical effect upon his works being seen at a certain focal distance, and that he knew perfectly how to calculate the effect of manipulation. The "mattiness" to which Mr. Ruskin alludes is less observable in Mr. Hunt's flesh painting, a system of regular "hatching" being more apparent. Yet the blending of the colours is so wonderfully truthful that we have never seen flesh painted so perfectly otherwise than in water colours. In larger drawings of interiors the touch is still more distinct and decided; while in sketches and bits of character and effect, such as those in the present Winter Exhibition of the Water-Colour Society, and which we recently reviewed, the application of the colours could scarcely be more simple and direct. It has been one of the most conspicuous advantages of the winter exhibitions of water-colour sketches and studies in Pall-mall that they have afforded thousands interested in his processes the opportunity to examine the preparatory stages of William Hunt's drawings. Two of his more remarkable unfinished sketches—"The Flycatcher"

THE LATE W. HUNT, WATER-COLOUR PAINTER.

"SUMMER," BY T. W. REVE, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.—SEE PAGE 188.

and "Blowing Bubbles"—we have engraved from these exhibitions. In a hasty memorandum of colour-effect on the breast of a pheasant in the exhibition now open, the visitor may observe, that there is a finished drawing, the masses of body colour which the artist often freely used. In fact, to the constant employment, especially in still-life pieces, of opaque white, alone and mixed with other colours, he applied, or applied in thick couches, that he coved the solid texture and the soft, pearly bloom so remarkable in his finished works.

The interest attaching to the practice of this great water-colourist has led to many an inside inquiry—curious which is rarely a little space for a biographical notice. But in so doing we can hardly have been long astray. William Hunt's works are but the reflex of his life. He was a modern artist, unlike those of so many of the heroes of Vasari, in point of no assumed mystery—and Hunt's early associations, from 1790, at No. 8, Bolton-row, Piccadilly (since re-christened Rudell-street, Longacre, he never quitted, the first to have studied under John Varley, and the teachings of nature's "common things," and to have gone through little academic schooling or high-art practice. He was, however, from a member of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, in 1824. From that time to this—that is, for forty long years—William Hunt trod the same rout in all earnestness and in all humility—assiduously recording by his use the simplest forms of rural life, village in shade and scenery, and the beauty of and blossom, fruit and flower, that bordered his path. The English peasant boy and girl were his favourite subject with the painter during many, many generations of the same. He is painted with evident gusto in smockfrock and corduroy—tattered, child, just as he is. He is dealt with here, possible humour but always unaffectedly and entirely free from that conventional picturesqueness which has induced other painters contrive to deprive such subjects of all interest. Mr. Hunt has—we repeat—by said as a former generation have reminded him to us in the most undignified situations, under circumstances which would have made the representation impossible to any other hands; yet our laugh at the awkward bumpkin has never lessened our respect for the painter. Whether we look at the rustic urchin as he must pie with the energy of a young savage, or suddenly salute after cleaning the immense dish; whether shivering in the cold or eating a scalding hot pie to his mouth with hot pertness; whether grinning from ear to ear, or puckering up his lips into a white star, blowing bubbles, or fluctuo his force sweep upon a fly—he is true to his artistic purposes; whether spilling his puzzled way through a newspaper, scratching his shaved head with the pen behind his ear, or, finally, so coolly dozing in the chimney corner, "scared," "astonished," downright" insensible," or "dreaming" of "Home, sweet Home," or "pattern," or "a turning bogie," aping his seniors, and "giving himself Odairs," or contemplating the chances of a fight with "Bobby Shafto," and affording a new reading of "Cymon and Iphigenia"—through all his characteristic vicissitudes of joy and sorrow the painter has by nature invariably compels interest and admiration. A less extensive but similar series of portraitures was furnished by the "peasant girl," showing her often in the village pig, or "dressed for church," sometimes as "nursing a pig," then again in her best frock as a "Sunday scholar," or as "confirmed orphan," or perhaps as "Little Red Riding Hood." Occasionally these were diversified with labourers, vagrants, gipsies, a smuggler, "a pedlar," "a shepherd boy," "a fisher boy," and Hunt showed a kindly interest in the coloured races. Among old catalogues there is a frequent recurrence of such subjects as "Sambo," "Sambo Samboa," and "Topsys." A few of his figure-subjects have a higher aim, such as "common versions of Scripture," "The Prodigal Son," "Asking a Blessing," &c. And there are a few miniature portraits of himself and his family.

It is not easy to indicate the range and variety of his still-life painting, gathering, as he did, his subjects from the hedge-row, the field, the orchard, the flower-garden, the farm-yard, the poultry-yard, the kitchen, the drawing-room, the game preserve, the woods, the seashore, and the river—the pleasure-boat, the angler's punt, and the fields to gather a "bunch of May," as, like a genuine rustic, he names the hawthorn-blossom. Apples, pears, plums, cherries, figs, plums, quinces, pineapples, birds and birds' nests, preserved ginger, primroses, and nosegays, "pinks," "sweet Williams," and "carnations," some other subjects painted for Mr. Ruskin, to be presented to schools of art—have all been employed by unconscious artistic selection. Lastly, there is a long list of interiors, of cottage, hayloft, and old barn-hall of fishing-boats, woodshores, laboratory, kitchen, and drawing-room; together with a large number of studies of landscape, sky, and foliage.

It follows, from what we have already said of Mr. Hunt's painting, that the very essence of his works can never be reproduced in another medium. The "Illustrated Library," "The Art Journal," "Cassell's," and several others have been engraved or lithographed; but their choicest virtue and charm have been, necessarily, left out of the account. Photography is, from the great difference in the activity of various colours, a still more imperfect translator. The "Bird's-nesting" of Hunt's drawings of black and white grapes was turned out by the camera exactly the reverse of the original: the white grapes appeared as if cut from spinous became black in the photograph, while the "bloom" on the dark ones translated almost white. Mr. Hunt's photographic so-called "reproductions" of fruit pieces by Hunt are not sufficiently adequate, but they are very objectionably so. They have just that amount of resemblance which may mislead the public, and which may be eye insensible to all the higher mental and artistic qualities of the original. The same difference has been visible in the works of the learned it is complete. Chromolithography is legitimately and successfully employed in obtaining the results of Mr. Hunt's art. The drawings of William Hunt are, we think, among the number of those which we should suppose process should prove successful.

We have only to add a word or two on Mr. Hunt's habits. Like Mulready, he will work every shortly after breakfast, a duty to his particular art-body with which he was connected. Mr. Hunt had long been Member: in a great measure, by an inferiority from the pleasures of society; but his health permitted him, at the usual meeting-time, on the Thursday on which he died, to work at his easel till midday, and then to visit the gallery in Suffolk-street, where the contributors' pictures of the candidates for associateships of the Water-Colour Society were then exhibited. Independently of his great professional home, and this was quickly succeeded by paralysis. Mr. Hunt had been elected an honorary member of the Old Water-Colour Society, in addition to being a member of the Water-Colour Society.

Our Portrait of Mr. Hunt is from a photograph by Messrs. John and Charles Watkins, of Parliament-street.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

At this time last year an experienced Parliamentarian laid it down that the Session was to be essentially dull, or, as he emphatically phrased it, a humdrum one. For some reason or other, everyone seemed indifferent and lethargic. Ministerialists having nothing to do, and the Opposition nothing to strike at. This year, however, we may venture to say that a more lively, though by no means ardent, spirit has come over the House. The Ministerialists are still dozing, and there seems a kind of stir and movement in their ranks which may betoken a forthcoming awakening. Opposition, too, when one considers his usual habit of sitting motionless, silent, stern, and unapproachable, Mr. Disraeli has been flitting about the benches behind his party, and holding confidential and conservative members of all degrees: while Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald, well-known as the whip of the party, was also seen actively running in and out of the house on matters of immediate import, and all in the Conservative camp seemed to be astir. Mr. Bentinck, indeed, will easily understand what is meant by the word), and originally supposed to be a mere matter of form, has developed into important debates which have hitherto occurred have been carried on with considerable spirit. The fact is that the Tories have taken sides which is quite remarkable. It would seem as if the House, imagining that Mr. Bright had left it, had resolved to make up for the principle of the ambitious pushboy who always kept a gallop in his horse for the last mile of his journey—is determined to finish with a "spurt."

One could hardly have expected that a discussion on the amendment of the law relating to the representation of the people, and on special features; nevertheless, the debate was kept up with no little spirit, and was conducted in a manner which did great credit of how on which the conviction of Daniel O'Connell was successfully appealed against. The speech of Mr. Serjeant Colman O'Loghlin is a professed adherent of the present Government; but, assuming him to be a fair specimen, the Irish Bar is not represented.

Solicitor-General for Ireland when Mr. O'Hagan obtains his well-deserved seat in the House, we shall have a Law Officer who is obviously at hand. In this same debate the influence of the general spirit which we have noticed as pervading the House before was exhibited in the case of a member who is usually remarkably grave, Mr. Scourfield, or, as he is well known as Mr. G. H. Phillips, probably, we may say certainly for the first time in his life, he appeared to be, experienced the sensation of raising and keeping up a hearty laugh. He was evidently pleased with himself for doing so.

Would any one suppose that fun, or rather a vein of humour, could be struck out of the Ballot? Yet even out of this has been the feeding of cattle." Yet even out of such a barren source a highly humorous speech was elicited from Mr. Bernal Osborne, the Hotchkiss' little bills, and every one knows how assiduously he watches over the interests of the "Ring." The Ballot question has happened to be absent when it was called on, he was subjected to a nice little measure of "chaff," which, however, he met with a grim good humour peculiar to himself. Then Mr. Morrits, a new and promising member, who last Session, in a speech which showed him to be prepossessed in favour of the Ballot, declared that he came to it from opinion which he had come to this question by any; and, last and least place he was absolutely obliged to knock under to Mr. Alderman Lusk, who, however, is the first former feature of the kind elected to Parliament, was probably on that account allowed to seize on this, which is an advantageous position in the house. And so Mr. Bentinck fills up a tall gaunt figure, and looks down on the House from Olympian height, but finding no permanent rest there, he keeps warm those of the regular supporters of the Government who are not in office, and occasionally those who are all present. Curious persons are asking what is the reason of this, and, really, nobody can give a satisfactory answer. Some suppose that Mr. Bass turned Mr. Bentinck out of a seat he has so long occupied without any reason being given for it. Mr. Bass, however, denies this, which, as they may or not be true, we do not choose to set down as fact. The old gentleman's former feature of being the elected of very voluminous, and its publication would tend to prejudice the claims to which it would refer. He justified the proceedings of the American police courts, while as regarded the Saxon sample-bottle, it had been made by the Captain of the American cruiser for what had occurred, and as to the number of bottles, he could only say that he had ordered them to be sent for trial. The Tuscarora had been seized under the advice of the law officers of the Crown. He repudiated now, as he had always done, any claims arising out of the depredations of the Alabama.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Tuesday.

Mr. Adair, on behalf of Mr. Forbes, gave notice of a motion on the subject of the Crawley court martial.

Mr. Sheridan gave notice of a motion to abolish the duty on fire insurances.

Discussions of unimportant character took place on several private Bills. The Beckenham, Lewes, and Brighton Railway Bill was rejected, and the Cockermouth, Blindburgh, and Glasgow, and Dublin and Belfast Bills read the same time. The Harwich Corporation Bill was opposed by Mr. Crawford, but, as a division was about to be taken, the House was counted out.

PRIVATE BILL LEGISLATION.

Mr. M. GIBSON rose to call the attention of the House, which are intended to make considerable alterations in the conduct and the expenses of private bill legislation, and to move for the report of a Select Committee to consider, for convenience, to take each resolution separately, and, in the first place, to move—1. That the Standing Orders relating to the deposit of plans of railway and other Bills should be altered, so as to require the consent of those Bills to be given on the second of all parties promising or opposing, to refer the same, wholly or in part, to the Committee of Selection, or to the Standing Committee of Ways and Means, and that such chairman, together with members to be appointed in the manner as members of the Committee of Unopposed Bills, be empowered to hear the parties promoting or opposing such Bills at their option, and to report into the same to the House.

Lord R. CECIL moved as an amendment that, in the opinion of the House, it is expedient that the duty of considering private Bills should be taken away in respect to private bills, to proceed thereof, and to transfer the same to a Committee of Selection, to be appointed by the House for the purpose of negativing the resolutions, but in order to improve the constitution of the Committee of last year, which had not adequately met the grievance which was attached on the House and the members. He was glad to see that the hon. Member's private legislation which was thrown upon them, and which constituted no part of the functions of Parliament. He was with much force that the system as at present existing was unsatisfactory so far as proper and adequate discussion of Bills was concerned, while the expense cast on railway companies and private individuals, instances of the most unnecessary character, was enormous, and to the height of a denial of justice, and certainly exercised a baneful influence on railway property. He was glad to see that the Bill of last year was not to be introduced under this Bill now, at least, he hoped it would make a preliminary inquiry into the subject matter of private bills.

Mr. M. GIBSON replied that the amendment could not be passed, and observed that the noble Lord should submit his plan to the House by a substantive resolution. He agreed that something must be done, otherwise the noble Lord had been tried in vain, but it was found to be a source of additional expense, while no improvement in it was introduced by the Bill of the legislative powers if Parliament to any other body.

Lord H. VANE expressed an opinion in favour of some such plan as that proposed by the noble Lord, could it on a future occasion be brought forward, being convinced that the present system was attended with great evils, and was also unsatisfactory to the country.

Mr. P. PAYNE also stated his preference for the committing of much of the conduct of private legislation to some responsible body, as the Solicitors of the House; but he deprecated any sweeping alteration at the present moment, when the great private business of the session was before them.

Mr. MACKY hoped that a fitting opportunity would be taken to ask the decision of the House on the important question of the transfer of private legislation should be transferred to some other tribunal; but the plan of the noble Lord was one which would be found unsatisfactory, and was not adapted for the evil which it proposed to obviate.

After some observations from Mr. Whalley, Mr. Scourfield, Mr. Bruhen, Carter, and Mr. Kinnaird, the amendment was withdrawn.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

A resolution was then brought to the effect that the fee of £5 per day now paid by opponents of any private bill be reduced to £2.

Mr. HADFIELD moved an amendment, that a Select Committee to examine petitioners, owners, or tenants of property affected by bills from the payment of fees in such cases as the Committee of Selection may arrange promises of bill with all fees to be paid in respect of the same.

On a division the amendment was negatived by 65 to 42.

Resolutions were then moved reducing the fees paid by promoters of private bills for proceedings before the House, from £5 to £2 per day, and the fees having moved an amendment proposing a reduction to £3, which was, on a division negatived by 65 to 42. The resolution was then agreed to.

On a resolution being moved to the effect that the fees should be raised to £10 each,

Lord B. CECIL opposed it, characterising it as an inhuman proposition, and moved its rejection.

After a somewhat animated discussion, the resolution was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

A new writ was ordered for the county of Dorset, in the room of Mr. Ker Seymer, who has resigned.

UNION RATING.

Mr. BERNARD moved for leave to bring in a bill for the relief of the sick and destitute.

Mr. COX seconded the motion.

Mr. PAGE, Mr. Warner, and Sir B. Leighton made some observations.

Mr. PEACOCKE, while he had disposed to offer any opposition to the introduction of the Bill, thought the measure required much fuller and the application of subsisting unless for parochial rating.

Mr. HUNT was of opinion that the principle of the bill were agreed to his effects on the labourers' cottages question would be the very reverse of what was expected, for proprietors of Bills would be induced to pull down rather to lessen the number of cottages on their estates. It would not only make the condition of the poor worse, but, by diminishing the number of cottages, would steps to remedy themselves as well as they could, and eventually a cry would be raised, which it would be impossible to resist, for the enlargement of workhouses. Such an alteration of the law would, in his opinion, be a great curse to the country.

Mr. HADFIELD opposed any alteration in the present system as it stood.

After a somewhat animated discussion, the resolution was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

A new writ was ordered for the county of Dorset, in the room of Mr. Ker Seymer, who has resigned.

UNION RATING.

Mr. BERNARD moved for leave to bring in a bill for the relief of the sick and destitute.

Mr. COX seconded the motion.

Mr. PAGE, Mr. Warner, and Sir B. Leighton made some observations.

Mr. PEACOCKE, while he had disposed to offer any opposition to the introduction of the Bill, thought the measure required much fuller and the application of subsisting unless for parochial rating.

Mr. HUNT was of opinion that the principle of the bill were agreed to his effects on the labourers' cottages question would be the very reverse of what was expected, for proprietors of Bills would be induced to pull down rather to lessen the number of cottages on their estates. It would not only make the condition of the poor worse, but, by diminishing the number of cottages, would steps to remedy themselves as well as they could, and eventually a cry would be raised, which it would be impossible to resist, for the enlargement of workhouses. Such an alteration of the law would, in his opinion, be a great curse to the country.

Mr. HADFIELD opposed any alteration in the present system as it stood.

After a somewhat animated discussion, the resolution was withdrawn.

CHAIN CABLES AND ANCHORS.

Mr. LAIRD moved the second reading of the Chain Cables and Anchor Bill, the object of which he explained to be the protection of the property of shipowners and of the lives of crews and passengers from the use of defective tackle, by making the manufacturer of chain cables and anchors responsible for their efficiency. The bill had received the approval of the Board of Trade and the London Shipowners' Society, of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, and of the great shipping companies throughout the country.

The motion was seconded by Sir J. RUSHINTON.

Mr. BUTT was willing to admit the principle of a strong feeling in favour of legislation upon this subject, but expressed his opinion that some important alterations and improvements would have to be made in the measure.

Mr. HUME approved of the bill, because he could see no just reason why the owners of ships should not be responsible for the loss of property and life. He should not like to see the law in respect of these matters altered.

Mr. W. S. LINDSAY would not oppose the second reading; but he condemned the measure as one which, at present state, would be found to operate to the interests of small manufacturers, by throwing the trade into the hands of the large manufacturers in Scotland and in Wales.

Mr. CAVE was in favour of the principle of the bill, but suggested the introduction in Committee of a provision similar to that in the Merchant Shipping Act, under public notice, not being trading companies.

After a few observations from Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Horsfall, Mr. Lefevre, and Mr. Kinnaird took part, the bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Thursday.

A vast number of private bills were read a second time.

CLERKS OF THE COURTS.—The Earl of DERBY called the attention of their Lordships to the state of the law with regard to the removal of clerks of the peace from the offices, and, after a long discussion, the noble Earl moved would consider the subject, with the view of amending the law in this respect.—The Lord CHANCELLOR said that the matter was one of the greatest moderation, with a view to see what judicious amendment of the present law could be made.—Lord CLARENDON thought that the duties of the clerks of the peace be altered, so that the clerks of the peace might be made removable by the Lord Chancellor on receipt of a proper representation from the Court of Quarter Sessions to that effect.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—Thursday.

BRAZIL.—Mr. HUNT asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the Brazilian Government had tendered its good offices as a friendly power towards the settlement of differences between this country and Brazil; whether her Majesty's Government had accepted the offer; and, if not, whether any papers upon the subject will be laid upon the table.—Mr. LAYARD said these good offices had been offered, but he could not yet say whether they had been accepted. The papers would be laid on the table.—Mr. BUTT inquired whether it was true that the French Emperor had stated that he could not accede to the proposals made, because he did not know what were the intentions of the English Government.—Mr. LAYARD said he had seen the statement, and he was totally at a loss to account for it.

THE KAGOSIMA DEBATE.—THE "ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS."

Mr. BUXTON: Mr. Speaker,—In a debate that took place a few days ago on a motion of mine respecting the burning of Kagoshima, I find I had fallen into a mistake, and I now ask leave to correct it. In the list of ships enumerated, as I believed, the historical record on the subject on which I was then speaking. I have since ascertained that I made a mistake in attributing the bombardment of Kagoshima to Admiral Kuper, the fact being that Admiral Kuper was only second in command, and acting under his superior officer.

Mr. LAYARD: I am also desirous of taking this opportunity of saying that I did I did an injustice to a very meritorious paper, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS (Hear, hear), by stating that I believed they had no correspondent in Japan. The Editor has since assured me that they had a Correspondent there, and that he was really in Japan at the time of the bombardment of Kagoshima. I am, therefore, glad to make this explanation.

VENTRY CREK (IRELAND) BILL.—After some discussion amongst the Irish Members, Mr. Fitzgerald withdrew the motion for the second reading of the bill, which was consequently withdrawn.

THE ARMY AND NAVY ESTIMATES.—A Parliamentary paper issued on Monday gives the Navy Estimates for the year 1864-5, as voted in Committee of Supply. The total amount voted for the year 1864-5 was £21,829,786, which was reduced to the extent of £297,217 by the Committee of Supply, leaving a total of £21,532,569 to be voted for the total expenditure £21,832,565. The estimates for the year 1863-4 were £10,760,202, which was reduced to the extent of £1,000 by the Committee of Supply, the estimates) as extra receipts and repayments paid or to be paid into the Exchequer, leaving a total net expenditure of £21,532,565. The estimates for the year 1864-5 are given as £10,462,615. The estimated amount of extra receipts and repayments to be paid into the Exchequer during the year is £10,169,072. The net estimated decrease in the estimates for 1864-5, as compared with those of the year 1863-4, is £297,217. The total Army Estimates for the year 1864-5 were delivered on March 4, 1864, and amounted to £15,829,786, which was reduced with £12,232,979 to be voted for the total expenditure

BUILDING PROPOSED TO BE ERECTED IN THE ALEXANDRA PARK, MUSWELL-HILL.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE ALEXANDRA PARK BUILDING.

We give, on the preceding page, an Engraving of the building which will, it is expected, appear on Muswell Hill, part of the estate of the Alexandra Park Company. The directors have entered into a contract with Messrs. Kelk and Lucas for this structure, which has been designed by Messrs. A. Messon and John Johnson. Considering that the architects have had to deal exclusively with the materials of the International Exhibition building of 1862, they have managed successfully to give it entirely new features. The length of the nave will be 459 ft., the central transept 456 ft., and the smaller transepts 314 ft. The dome in the centre will be covered with metal, with the exception of a circle of light at the top. The general arrangement of the ground plan is extremely convenient, and includes concert-rooms, theatres, orchestra, and picture-galleries. There will be a terrace running the whole length of the front of the building, commanding views extending into the counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, Surrey, Hertfordshire, and Berkshire. On the northern side of the building provision will be made for a general railway terminus, the design of which will be in harmony with the main building; and measures are being taken for the construction of a railway through the park, which will be united with all the great main lines. During the time the building is in progress the management propose to utilise the park by the encouragement of outdoor sports and amusements. A fine cricket ground, which will be adorned with a pavilion in the Swiss style of architecture, has been begun. A similar structure is being formed for archery, and it is intended to be used in July next at the Great National Archery Meeting of England, when prizes to the amount of £500 given by the Alexandra Park Company, will, it is stated, be competed for. A large pavilion, 200 ft. long and of proportionate width, also in the Swiss style, from a design by John Giles, Esq., has been commenced. The directors have provided this building for the purpose of affording shelter to the visitors and providing them with refreshments while the larger office is in course of erection. The charming grounds of "The Grove," adjoining the Alexandra Park, which belong to the company, are also to be thrown open to the public. The directors appear to be taking active steps to secure "healthy recreation and rational amusement" for the north side of London, which contains a population four times greater than that of the south, and which includes the termini of the London and North-Western, Great Northern, Midland, Great Western, and Great Eastern Railways.

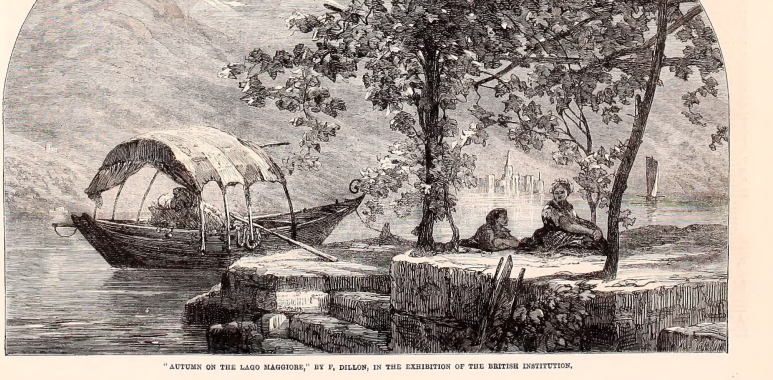
"AUTUMN ON THE LAGO MAGGIORE."

If ever a picture—or "sketch," as we ought rather to call it, without disparagement and without depreciation, for often a sketch is more precious than your finished picture—if ever a sketch was painted con amore and with internal evidence of study direct from Nature it is the brilliant and glowing "bit" of colour and effect which we have engraved.

Frank Dillon is well known as an effective and poetical painter, particularly of Egyptian scenery. We are under obligations to him for several engravings from his pictures and sketches of scenes in that "land of mystery" submitted to our readers, especially on the occasion of the Prince of Wales's tour in the East. In the present exhibition of the British Institution, besides the little work which is the more immediate subject of this notice, there are two pictures of memorable Egyptian views—"The Gate of the Colossi, Karnac" (36), and "Mariette's Temple, with the Great Pyramid" (365), both very noble—worthy for their colour locale and appropriate feeling. But of these all the painter's works, though some are, of course, far more impressive and elaborate, we really remember none painted with more charming taste and beauty relish than the little piece we have engraved. It glows and palpitates in every part with the glorious autumnal hues of the lovely Italian lago. The sunlight sleeps on the still lake, yet the while hinting, in its sparkling here and there, of the emerald, the sapphire, and the chrysoprase; it dreamily trembles among the vine-leaves, but permeates many—the young, and save alike—in a shower of green and gold, ruby and bronze, like the chromatic changers of a grand glass: it flushes into orange the distant purple shore: it turns the blocks of the quay, broken as are the colours by reflections of the blue sky, into something beautiful almost, to the artist eye, as the opal or pearl. Well may the boatman moor his crazy barcello, with its load of cool melons and gourds, screened from the hot sun by that ragged but picturesque awning, alongside the pier, and seek the far niente of the Italian's paradise prone on the earth, under the grateful shade of the pergola, exchanging the fierce blaze outside for the softer light of a sweetheart's loving eyes. And all these reminders of the sunny South, in subject and colour, are conveyed with a slight but happy facility of touch which, like the rest, suggests much more than it expresses.

"THE HOP QUEEN," SCULPTURED BY O. HALSE, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

"THE HOP QUEEN."



THE marble bust herewith engraved is one of several ideal heads, modelled in plaster or sculptured in marble, in the newly-opened Exhibition of the British Institution, Pall-mall; and of the number there is none more pleasing in fancy or more admirable in execution. We have included this as among the ideal heads because it is not a portrait bust, and because the beauty of the forms justifies it being so classified. At the same time, we should have it understood that the bust has so much fidelity to nature: and the crowning a child with the graceful hop-bines (as children are crowned with hawthorn, and styled "May Queens," in another season of the year) is so simple and probable an incident of rustic life, that the sculptor's work may be legitimately be considered a study direct from nature, without treatment or idealisation of any kind. It is no small merit of a work of art to thus bring the real into harmony with the ideal, and in one conception satisfy the requirements of both. The bust, we need scarcely add, refers to one of the most animated and picturesque scenes of rural life—the hop-picking of Kent and some other of the great plantations in England. The chubby child has drawn over its little head and snoods its laughing face with one of the cut bines at the hop-gathering, drawing the vinelike leaves and tendrils to its bosom; and so striking is the ensemble of crown-wreath and happy, radiant face of childish innocence, that the sculptor may well call the subject of his chisel, whether it be a creation of fancy or simply suggested by nature, "The Hop Queen."

"SUMMER."

THE little picture of "Sheep," No. 390 in the newly opened exhibition of the British Institution, is not its commonplace, another group of sheep in a snowy landscape, entitled "Winter" (261)—prove that the artist, Mr. Keyl, is not only very conscientious and painstaking, but also that he is one of the painters of that large class of subjects which our classifying neighbours the French designate paysage et animaux, from whom the most may be expected. It is not merely that the picture we have engraved—and it is a careful and precise truth to nature which, though accompanied by a little hardness, is one of the best characteristics of a comparatively young or rising painter; but it has a feeling for general character in the animals and effect in the landscape which we of still happier augury. The scene of the picture is some elevated down of a pastoral district, which commands a view of the middle distance, but allows the eye to wander over a long reach of flat remoter scenery. The rough foreground is dotted over with clumps of furze, long grasses, thyme, and other wild shrubs or flowers which perfume the bracing and health-giving air of our noble undulating downs. The sky is dappled with light, fleecy, sun-illumined cirrus and cirro-cumulus clouds, giving that endless variety to what may be called the "skyscape," and moderating the heat of the fair English summer season. One of the sheep, it will be observed, is a large black wether, and, like its companions, is—as any one might say who had something of the gourmet as well as the artist in his character—in splendid condition.

First upon the Roll for the Session of 1864 come nine names which take precedence of the rest of the House:—The Prince of Wales, the King of Hanover (Duke of Cumberland), the Duke of Cambridge, the Lord Primate, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of York, the Irish Archbishop on the rota (Armagh), the Lord President of the Council, and the Lord Privy Seal. Then follow the 26 Dukes, 21 Marquises, 139 Earls (besides the Lord President), 28 Viscounts, 27 Bishops, and 218 Barons, besides the Lord Chancellor and the Lord Privy Seal, and counting Lord Auckland among the spiritual Lords. This is the Roll of the House make up according to the right to sit in Parliament; and here, therefore, five Dukes (Athole, Beaufort, Leinster, Montrose, and Roxburgh) take rank only as Earls or Viscounts, and many of these last as Barons. The Representative Peers of Scotland and Ireland are, of course, included. The Roll of the Lords has now only 452 names upon it. Some names, Lyndhurst and Clyde among them, are there no longer. Henry White, Lord Annaly, and R. Monckton Milnes (Lord Houghton) are new names upon the Roll, the junior Barons of England.

The Oxford local examinations will be held this year at Oxford, and also at the following places:—London, Bath, Birmingham, Brighton, Cheltenham, Exeter, Leeds, Lincoln, Liverpool, Manchester, Northampton, Nottingham, Southampton, Truro, and West Buckland. The examination will commence in each place on the 24th of May. The forms which candidates are to fill up will be ready by March 1.

"AUTUMN ON THE LAGO MAGGIORE," BY F. DILLON, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 16th inst., the wife of John Molesworth, Esq., of Twickenham, Lincolnshire, of a son.

On the 16th inst. at Norton House, near Dartmouth, the wife of Captain John Horner, 59th Regiment, of a daughter.

On the 16th inst., at Eyeland-hill, South Cave, East Yorkshire, the wife of G. G. Marriott, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGE.

On the 4th inst., at Naples, in the chapel of the Prussian Legation, Adolphus Frederick Gustavus, youngest son of the late David Augustus Berthoud, Esq., of Southcoat, Sutherland, to Gustava Caroline, daughter of Joseph Ley, Esquire, son of Heinrich Leopold, Count of Bruinck.

DEATHS

On the 9th inst., at Townhouse, Lancashire, Ann Lupton, daughter of the late Thomas Lupton, Esq., aged 1 year and 10 months.

On the 7th inst., at Archancrock House, Aughrim, Ballymoney, Daniel Duncan, son of John Duncan, M.D., of Ballycastle, Londonderry, and late of Liverpool. Friends are requested to attend his Funeral.

On the 16th inst., at Hardingham Rectory, Norfolk, Emma, daughter of the late Rev. George Fawkiner, Rector of West Harlsey.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

From our City Correspondent.

Most of the Continental Exchanges today of a more favourable character, and the demand for bullion for export has ceased. Of late there has been an improved feeling in the market for Home Stocks, and prices have risen on repeated dealings. The Bank rate of discount very little has been required; but some rather large amounts have been taken in at the Bank of France.

The supply of money and the demand have been very low on the Stock Exchange, and the demand for accommodation has been by no means active, on the usual terms. The current bank rates have been as follows:—

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Thirty days' bills	3½	Four months' bills	3½
Sixty days' bills	3½	Six months' bills	3½
Three months' bills	3½

The amount of gold in the Bank of France has declined to about £14,000,000.

The New York banks hold about a similar amount. In most countries, gold is becoming more plentiful, and silver scarcer, and a universal approximation to the relative value of the two precious metals is taking place.

The Bank return for the week ending Wednesday, the 17th inst., shows the following results, when compared with the previous statement:—

	Bank rate.	Open market, per cent.	per cent.
Paris	4	3	3
Hamburg	4	3	3
Frankfort	4	3	3
Berlin	4	3	3
Amsterdam	4	3	3
Brussels	4	3	3
Madrid	5	4	4
Hamburg	6	5	5
Vienna, Trieste	6	5	10

Another sale of 100,000 in bills has been effected by the Bank for India, at specimen rates. The applications within the limited amounts are 3 times over.

Several parcels of gold have been sold at the Bank of England, and the supply of the rapidly important has been realised from the Continent. The total supply of the International Exchanges has made a dividend equal to 50 per cent per annum, leaving a balance of 1 per cent.

The Bank of the United States, New York, declared a dividend of the International Stock Company's per cent per annum.

There has been a good demand for Consols, and the transactions and prices have been important, and Consols have been done at 92¼ for Money, 92¼ for the account, 92¼ for January, 100 dollar shares, 99¾, 100.

The Grand Metropolitan Railway Company, Saturday, and the remainder called home ... Monday, 92½; Tuesday, 92¼; Wednesday, 92¼; Thursday, 92¼; Friday, 92¼; Saturday, 92¼. Bank Five per Cents, 103 to 104. Bank Stock, 219 to 220. Exchequer Bills, 3s. to 5s. discount. Bank Stock was

NEW MUSIC.

FANCHETTE, by W. C. LEVEY, is the town talk of its scene. "Miss L. Pyne's song." How sad all nature!" always encored. Mr. Harrison's finest song. "Look! this is joy." Sung by Madame Sainton-Dolby, Miss Dolby, and Mr. Harrison. "Sweet and charming." Dame of new year's." and "The good old times," are universally admired. The songs, post-free, 24 stamps each; the duets, 30 stamps; all illustrated.—J. WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside.

FANCHETTE. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. "A Three Song Romance," sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, with great effect by the piano. "How sad all nature seems it is," by Brinley Richards, is an already impressive composition. Post-free, 24 stamps.—J. WILLIAMS.

FANCHETTE QUADRILLES. The Gems of LEVEY'S Operetta are so arranged by BERTHOLD VOLLERTHUN as to form a most effective and brilliant dance-music for the pianoforte. Post-free, 24 stamps.

CHARLES JEFFERYS, Soho-square, London.

FANCHETTE WALTZES, from LEVEY'S Operetta. No one could fail to be charmed by a set of waltzes on such delicious themes. MISS BERTHA VILLIERS' selections and arrangements of FANCHETTE are the best.—CHARLES JEFFERYS, 21, Soho-square, London.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN NATIONAL SONG.
THE POLISH NATIONAL SONG.
THE GREEK NATIONAL SONG.
THE GREEN NATIONAL SONG.
Arranged for the Pianoforte by ARTHUR HENRY. Just published from five on receipt of 12 stamps each.
CHARLES JEFFERYS, 21, Soho-square, London.

NOW SOUND BY CLOSING.

MABIONIS SONG. Price 32.
The most popular song of this accomplished Composer.
Order of any Musicseller, or, post-free in Half price, of HALE and CO., Chichester.

MABIONIS'S SONG, Mabionis, &c., on the wonderful Harmonium, by Hale and Co., Chichester.

THE LAST NEW SONG.
WHEN THE SILVERY MOONBEAMS SHINE. By E. HUTCHINSON. Words by Song, with elaborated Appliance, by M. Adler Irving. Order of any Musicseller, or, post-free in stamps, of HALE and CO., Chichester.

ALL NEW MUSIC AT HALF PRICE
BY POST, AT HALF PRICE.
Any Music sent by return of post, at half price, by
HALE and CO., Chichester.

NEW SONGS.—"The Ruler of the Sea," "Sorrow," and "Love's Young Dream." Words by D. O. KELLY. Music by S. SOOTHWELL.
Published by Robert Cocks and Co., London, W.C.

MUSIC, HALF PRICE and Post-free, by the Musical Exchange, 192, Aldersgate-street. All new Music and Musical Publications immediately on publication to any part of the Kingdom at half the published price, and carriage paid. The Pianoforte and Treble supplied to sell at half price.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, Corner of Gt. Marlborough-street.

MUSIC AT HALF PRICE.
C. G. ROBINSON'S Monthly Circular, containing a List of Music, Old and Recent. Lists of Standard, Classical, &c., Music gratis.

CHISSHOLME and SONS, Pianoforte and Harmonium Manufacturers, Wholesale and Retail, Oxford-street, W. Studio Finger, in solid Walnut, Mahogany, or Ash Cases, from 30 guineas. Manufactory in Hatton Garden, E.C.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPÔTS, 56, Cheapside, and 26, Ludgate-street, NICOLE'S large Musical Boxes at £1 per air; Double Cylinders, 30 to 100 Airs. Catalogues sent post-free on application to NICOLE and CO., sole-agents. The largest Stock in London. Country orders executed.

MUSICAL BOX DEPÔT for the Sale of Messrs. WHEELER and WILSON'S Wonder Machines, in Silk Stitch from 5s to 15 and 18 Cornhill, London. A large assortment of all kinds of Musical Boxes, from 5s to 50 guineas. Lists sent on application and postage-free.

TO LOVERS OF MUSIC.—Come and hear NELSON'S MUSICAL BOXES, £1 per Air, 15 Airs, £11 10s. Manufactory, 56, Cheapside, and 26, Ludgate-hill, E.C., 3rd floor.

FRAMES for "LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD," Gilt Frames, plain, and Rich Gilt Frames, with Glass and backs, in Mediums of every description for the Trade and Exportation, at 6HO. RIEDI, 27, Drury-lane.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price £5 5s. By CHARLES BRIDGE, 313, Strand.
21, Cornhill, E.C. (late 6, Coleman-street).
Catalogues of Microscopes, Models of all descriptions, &c.

FOUNTAINS, STATUES, JARDINIÈRES, &c. ARTIFICIAL STONE for Garden Vases, Terraces, Balustrades, Steps, Tazzas, Chimney-pieces, Fire-backs, Stoves, Grates, Kitchen Ranges, Baths, &c. Illustrated Priced Catalogue sent free by post on application.—ROBERT WALKER, 21 to 31, Regent-street, Lambeth, S.W.

GOLD CHAINS and FINE JEWELLERY. A choice and large assortment of GOLD CHAINS, in the Albert and Guard pattern, from 10s. to £20; Albert Gilts, 12s. to £10; Gentlemen's Studs, 2s. 6d. to £5; Lockets, 5s. to £10; Gold Rings, 5s. to £5; Gold Bracelets, 10s. 6d. to £5; Gold Brooches, 5s. to £5; Gold Pencil Cases, 5s. to £10; Diamond Rings, 5s. to £10; Diamond Brooches, 5s. to £10; Diamond Pins, 5s. to £10. Watches, Clocks, Plate, and Jewellery purchased or taken in exchange. Illustrated Catalogue sent free by post.—FREDERICK HARVEY, Goldsmith, 144, Regent-street, W.

CLOCKS! CLOCKS! CLOCKS!—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers, guarantee the following assortment of Timing and Dressing-room Clocks, which are now on view at their Show-rooms, 220, Regent-street, Paris Depôt, 4, Place de la Bourse. Their Manufactory, West-end, and 71 and 72, Cornhill, opp. Clarence-passage.

THE WAR IN DENMARK.
MAPS, with all OUR BOMBPROOFS, FORTS, BATTERIES, GUNS and HAMMERS facing GUNSTONEMARSH THIRE, Dorchester, Dorset, and Portland, Dorset, and many other places, and every country in each order, will be sent at 20 per cent below the Shipping Price, or
HARTNOLL, WEBB, and COMPANY,
71 and 72, Cornhill, and 17 and 18, Gutter-street.
The Royal Navy Victory Memorial.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.
The Penny-Printing Press, price £2 2s. A Benefit to the Art Preservative of all Nations. Sold by all Stationers. Send for Specimen printed by it. MAY, FOLKARD, and CO., 17, Drury-lane.

WASHING, WRINGING, DRYING, and MANGLING MACHINERY and APPARATUS, for Family Use, Laundries, Hospitals, Workhouses, Prisons, Asylums, &c. Sent on Trial. Illustrated Pamphlets free.—WILLIAMSON, BROS., Kingston, Surrey, and 109, High Holborn.

PANKLIBANON.—The largest Furnishing Establishment in the World. Illustrated Catalogues free by post. Every article marked in plain figures at the lowest price. J. BESSON, Manager, 31 and 32, Bed-street.

GRAND FANCY SALE, to be held at 23, HILLS-ROAD, on the 8th, 9th, and 10th of MAY, in AID of the LADIES' ASSOCIATION for the Improvement and Endowment of the NATIONAL HOSPITAL for PARALYSIS and EPILEPSY. Patroness—Her Royal Highness the Princess of Hohenlohe. President—H.S.H. the Duchess of Cambridge and Hills. Vice-Presidents—The Nobility.
Contributions of useful or ornamental Articles amounting to £5 in approved value will entitle to all the privileges of a Life Governess. Contributions will be received by the Duchess of Cambridge, Miss Palmer, a Committee of Ladies, Messrs. Coutts and Co., and a Practice Fund for the Institution.
Contributions of Money will also be constituted Life Members. Subscriptions of £1 1s. per annum. Bankers—Messrs. Coutts. Hon. Treasurer—The Hon. Mrs. Ashley. Secretary—The Hon. Mrs. Stanhope.
Hon. Secretary—Miss Hamilton, 23, Hills-road, Cambridge.

THE Albany-street, Regent's Park.

THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY.—Will the Author of the Advertisement in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of the 30th of January, dated John I. Blackmore, be so obliging as to forward his Address to Henry Price, Esq., Editor-road, Bristol, when he will hear of something to his advantage.

SUIT FOR A PUBLIC INSTITUTION.
It is being in contemplation to remove THE ASYLUM FOR FEMALE ORPHANS from its present locality in the City-road to a site in the suburbs, the Committee are prepared to receive the Tenders of Builders for the Erection of the New Asylum, to accommodate 300 children, conformably to the Plans, Elevations, &c., with full particulars, to the Secretary and Solicitor, G. BOOTH, Esq., 2, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry.

HIGH-CLASS EDUCATION for the SONS of CLERGYMEN.—The Rev. John H. Blackmore, late of CLERGYMAN RECEIVES a FEW NUMBER of PUPILS, to whom he offers the highest educational advantages with every care for comfort. Terms, from 80 to 100 guineas per annum. Reference kindly permitted to the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Harrow-on-the-Hill; Rev. Dr. Jeune, Pembroke College, Cambridge. Address, Mrs. E., Brunel's Library, Inverness-terrace, Bayswater.

£1000 IN CASE OF DEATH, or an Annuity for Life, or a Provision for Children, may be secured by every Gentleman between the ages of twenty and sixty, by forming, during the short space of one month, a Policy of the CONSOLIDATED ASSURANCE COMPANY. For particulars apply at the Offices, 15, Regent-street, S.W.

SMART'S WRITING INSTITUTION, 97B, Quadrant, Regent-st. (entrance to Swallow-st.).—Reward from Society, Mercantile Offices, Schools, Private Families, and Gentlemen requiring a quick and legible writing can attain their own ideas in a few lessons. Mr. SMART'S Method of Teaching is the most successful in Europe. Testimonials from Professor Faraday, Sir Fenton Hort, Sir Leslie, to which department (if preferred) Mrs. Smart will kindly attend. Prospectus forwarded on receipt of Stamp. Hours, 10 to 4 and 6 to 8.

INTEMPERATE HABITS.—A Gentleman who has suffered from them, perfected, after many years, a remedy that entirely relieved him in three days, having tried a similar case under the care of Dr. Gully, Dr. Lane, and other eminent physicians, without any other result than to increase the malady. Full particulars, references to cases, &c., sent free on receipt of Stamp. Address, Mr. Ellis, Chemist, Ramsgate.

TO DRESSMAKERS.—Wanted, in a first-class Establishment, a Young Lady, as Assistant to the Superintendence of the Workroom, and who has had experience in the Making of Ladies' Dresses, Mantles, &c. Address, by letter, to Mrs. Wilson, 1, Bond-street, Bath. Apply only, personally, to Mr. Harper, 147, Cheapside.

TOINVENTORS.—The GENERAL PATENT OFFICE undertakes the Registration of DESIGNS and INVENTIONS, and affords unusual facilities to Inventors. Printed Instructions gratis.—Offices, 166, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS post-free, at 6d. per packet, or 5s. per dozen packets. Catalogues, 2d. 50 sorts, 2s. 6d.; 12 sorts, 1s. 3d. Fuchsias, with sample packet, 3d. each. Post-free.—HENRY SLATER, Seedsman, Manchester.

FLOWERS.—BROWN'S PATENT FEEDING BOTTLES for Watering Flowers.—Ladies should be happy to give the process. Manufactured by Messrs. BARKER and CO., Lowther-arcade, Strand, and sold by Ironmongers and Florists.

A BOROWROOT OFFICIALLY CERTIFIED as PURE.—The Analysis published by Dr. PAVENPORT, Public Analyst for Sheffield, certifies that the Arrowroot supplied by agents of THE LANCASTER and MANGAL to Government, and to the Army and Navy Stores, is genuine, unadulterated, and of superior quality. Sold by GROCERS, OILMEN, and CHEMISTS, everywhere, by grocers. Established 1818.

MEINER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE delicies the most fastidious palate. Sold in packets and tablets. Also, for invalids, Meiner's Vanilla and Cocoa Nibs. Analysis and testimonials sent on application. Sold by respectable Grocers.

CANDLES. Price Medal. PARAFFINE. Price Medal. Manufactured for Her Majesty the QUEEN, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Minister of the Great Chief for the Sandwich Islands, by J. C. and J. FIELD, Manufacturers by Special Appointment, to the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

FIELD'S CELEBRATED UNITED SERVICE SOAP TABLETS, 4d. and 6d. each, sold by all Grocers, Oilmen, Chandlers, &c. Ask for FIELD'S. Sold wholesale by the Manufacturers, J. C. and J. FIELD, Lambeth, S.E. Field's Soap is cut into tablets, but, and labels. Wholesale agent for exportation to the Cape of Good Hope, Messrs. Hutton and Co., Cape Town. Sample size can be obtained from Price-room, Parrott Candles.

FIELD'S CELEBRATED PATENT SOAP, cut, stamped, and dried, in 4-lb. pieces, 4s. per box. Can be had of all Grocers, Oilmen, Chandlers, &c. Ask for FIELD'S. Sold wholesale by the Manufacturers, J. C. and J. FIELD, Lambeth, S.E. Field's Soap is cut into tablets, but, and labels. Wholesale agent for exportation to the Cape of Good Hope, Messrs. Hutton and Co., Cape Town. Sample size can be obtained from Price-room, Parrott Candles.

COALS.—COCKERELL'S COALS, price 20s., each. Centre Office, No. 13, Cornhill, E.C.

TO BUILD THE PRINCESS OF WALES.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
is the best and purest Starch.

INDIGESTION.—MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE and LOZENGES are the most effective remedies for this painful disease. Sold in Bottles at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 10s. each. Pepsine Lozenges, in boxes, at 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. each.

DR. DE JONGH'S
Light-brown Cod Liver Oil
Is the Purest, Most Efficacious, and Palatable.
"I consider Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod Liver Oil to be a very pure Oil; pleasant to the taste, and a therapeutic agent of great value."—Dr. Hassall.
DR. DE JONGH'S
Light-brown Cod Liver Oil
Is Sold only in Imperial Measure, in Capsuled Bottles, by Chemists, Wine Merchants, and Grocers.
Sole Consignees, ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, London, W.C.

A PERFECT CURE FOR TENDER FEET.
ANGUS SLEIGH'S SALVEO PEDES is a sure remedy for tender and offensive feet, highly recommended by Chemists and Perfumers in bottles, 2s. 6d. each.—Wholesale, A. Sleigh, 30, Duke Street, and 241, Tottenham Court Road.

LADIES' ABDOMINAL SUPPORTERS, of Lasting Excellence, Elegance, and Comfort, in Coutil, Satin, and Silk, 42. Directions for Self-measurement by post free.—ELKIN, 16, Oxford-street. Improved Dresses, 10s. 6d. each.

ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers, guarantee the following to be of strong quality, and exhibit an assortment of pattern:—

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread Pattern.	Old Antique Pattern.
Table spoons or forks, per doz.	£1 7 0	£2 14 0	£2 16 0
Dessert spoons	0 15 0	1 12 0	1 14 0
Tea spoons or forks	0 10 6	1 4 0	1 4 0
Gravy spoons, full size	0 15 0	1 12 0	1 14 0
Sauce ladles, each	0 7 0	0 14 0	0 15 0
Fish carvers and forks, in pairs	0 15 0	1 5 0	1 5 0
Pickle forks and spoons, each	0 4 0	0 8 0	0 8 0
Salt spoons, gilt bowls, each	0 2 6	0 5 0	0 5 0
Tea and coffee services, per set	4 10 0	7 0 0	9 10 0
Bread baskets, each	2 10 0	3 10 0	4 10 0
Cruet frame complete, each	1 5 0	2 0 0	2 10 0
Ditto, with glasses	1 15 0	2 10 0	3 0 0

KNIVES IN RICH ELECTRO-SILVER HANDLES.

Knives, per dozen, extra large	£1 10 0	£2 0 0	£2 10 0
Ditto, ditto, smaller	1 0 0	1 10 0	2 0 0
Carvers, per pair	0 7 6	0 10 0	0 12 6

Fish carvers, per pair, Fiddle Pattern, 12s. 6d.; Thread, 16s.; Old Antique, 18s. 6d.
Electro-plated Nickel Silver, Fiddle Pattern, Table spoons, £1 4s.; Dessert, £1; Tea, 15s.; Thread Pattern, Table spoons, £1 8s.; Dessert, £1 2s.; Tea, 16s.; Old Antique Pattern, Table spoons, £1 8s.; Dessert, £1 2s.; Tea, 16s

NEW MUSIC.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST, a new arrangement of the celebrated Opera as Pianoforte Duets for 4 hands, containing Mr. Benedict's new Waltz, Soldiers' Chorus, and other selected subjects—"Ot, "Flower Song," "Chorus," "Faust's Cavatina," &c., not before published as Duets. In two books, 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Princess of Wales, and at Pollard's Juvenile Promenade Concerts. Just published, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CAMERON (Composer of the Burlesque Galop). Just published, grotesquely illustrated. Played with immense success at Mollon's Promenade Concerts, &c., &c., &c.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A set of Lancers founded on popular airs. Played with great effect by the D. GODFREY Band. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' FAIRY'S DREAM. Composed for the Pianoforte. A new edition of this charming Romance is now ready. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR ENGLISH AIRS.
No. 1. Home, sweet Home. 3s. 6d. Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Auld Robin Gray. 3s. 6d. Duet, 4s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. My boyhood is on the cold ground. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR IRISH AIRS.
No. 1. St. Patrick's Day. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Oft in the stilly night. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Fly not yet. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR SCOTCH AIRS.
No. 1. The blue bells of Scotland. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Auld lang syne. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Auld lang syne. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

A LBERT LINDAHL'S POPULAR DRAWING-ROOM PIECES.
Nocturne in E flat ... 3s. | Nocturne in A flat ... 3s.
Nocturne in C ... 3s. | Le lever des fleurs—nocturne ... 3s.
Le coucher du soleil—nocturne ... 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW HARMONIUM MUSIC.
Rapid's Flexible Exercises for Harmonium and Pianoforte, 3s.
Rapid's Le Coeur (just published), 3s.
Rapid's Le Rêve (just published), 3s.
Rapid's Harmonium Tutor, 3s.
Rapid's Harmonium Repertoire, 3s.
Rapid's Cavatina in A flat, 3s.
Rapid's Cradle Song, 3s.
Rapid's Harmonium Album, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAUST, Selected, Arranged, and Fingered as Studies on the most favourite melodies from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
Boosey and Co., 30, New Bond-street.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASONS. No. 43 of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE contains a selection of Hymns particularly adapted for the Sunday Lent. Price 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PFEIFFER'S HOMMAGE A GOUNOD, Grand Transcription de Concert on the favourite Romance Sanson Faust," for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
Boosey and Co., 30, New Bond-street.

THE FAUST POLKA, By F. BENEDICT. Just Published, Illustrated, Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 2s. Septet, 2s.
Price 3s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE POPULAR CAVATINA, in the Garden Scene of "Faust." Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves at Her Majesty's Theatre. 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG IN "FAUST."
LOVING SMILE OF SISTER KIND, Gounod's Composition, and sung by Santley in Gounod's "Faust," at Her Majesty's Theatre. Price 3s.
Boosey and Co., 30, New Bond-street.

FAUST, with ENGLISH WORDS. This popular Opera is now ready, with Italian, German, French, and English Words. Price 12s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera, Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Beautiful Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

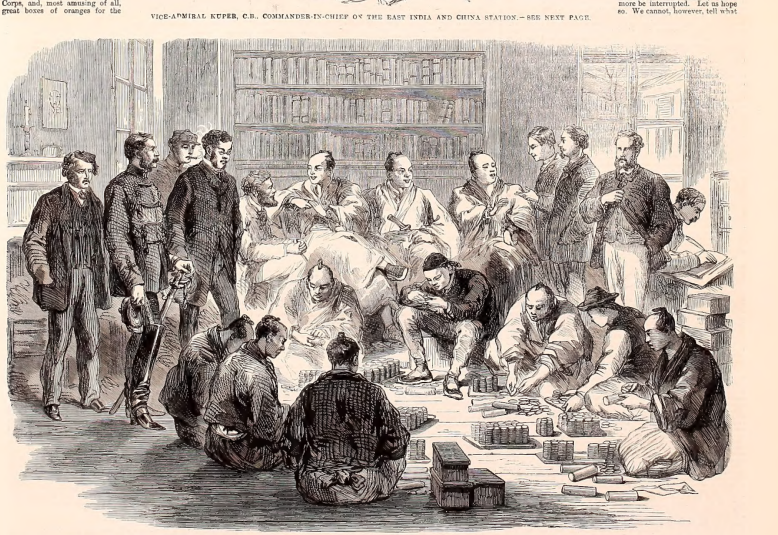
THE STIRRUP CUP. MR. SANTLEY'S most popular song, originally composed for Mr. Sims Reeves' Ballad, and rapturously encored, is now ready. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LEGERO INVISIBLE. NEW BOLERO. Composed by Miss Dolby, and sung by Miss Poole. Composed by Miss Dolby, and sung by Miss Poole. Composed by Miss Dolby, and sung by Miss Poole

JAPAN.

(From our Special Artist and Correspondent.)

YOKOHAMA, Dec. 17, 1863.



SATZUMA has paid the 100,000 dols., being the amount demanded of him for the murder of Mr. Richardson. His Envoys sought Colonel Neale, and, after numerous interviews, agreed to pay the money; but, with the usual slowness of proceedings in all Oriental countries, the time between the promise to pay and the fulfilment of that promise was so long that all hopes were given up. At the close of last week, however, the money arrived in carts, was carried into the courtyard of the British Legation, and there deposited. Satzuma's Envoys entered a protest, demanded a receipt, and stated that the money was a deposit only. These absurd claims being met with firmness and decision, the envoys immediately yielded, after the manner of Orientals generally and Japanese in particular. The money was counted, and an interview took place. The Envoys wished to know if they could buy a British man-of-war. Colonel Neale replied that they might as well ask for a regiment of British soldiers; but that, if they wanted a man-of-war, they could order one to be built. Their remarks concerning the fight at Kagosima were very interesting. They particularly admired the second black ship (the Pearl, Captain Borlase), which vessel, they stated, inflicted the most damage. She was the only ship that was not armed with Armstrong guns; and, talking about Armstrongs, they said that the shells of that celebrated gun did very little damage to the town, going miles into the country and wounding the trees, also killing several people in a temple far away in the interior. But the Pearl was their constant theme. The damage done to the town was considerable. Three miles of houses were burning at once; the trees on the hills high up were all on fire; the hulls and masts of the junks and steamers shone like burnished gold in the gloomy atmosphere; the hurricane roared like thunder —such was Kagosima on the 15th of August, 1863. And now these same men who came off to us at Kagosima, who then fired upon us and did battle with our ships, have been here, bringing with them the money demanded, and presents to the Admiral and Flag Captain, to Colonel Neale, and members of the Consular Corps, and, most amusing of all, great boxes of oranges for the gallant blue jackets who killed them. The Envoys were most communicative, and entered into numerous details concerning the fight. The loss to the Japanese appears, from all accounts, to have been about 1500 men. Satzuma's officers expressed a desire to go on board the Euryalus, and the Admiral kindly sent a boat for them, but the Tycoon's Government would not allow them. This, after their plea of weakness, seems rather strange. They could not punish the murderers of Richardson, but they had sufficient power to prevent his officers from visiting the Admiral!

Thus Colonel Neale has settled these most important affairs without a war, and the Government ought certainly to be proud of such a man. Colonel Neale has proved himself not only an able diplomatist, but a man thoroughly acquainted with the Oriental mind—a mind the same from Constantinople to Jeddo. His Turkish experience has well fitted him for the important post he holds, and a better man could not have been put at the head of affairs here. These Orientals are procrastinating in the extreme, and have no idea of time or its value. Colonel Neale's position was a most difficult one. On one hand, he was urged by the community to bring matters to a crisis; he was abused by the papers, not only here but in China, for the perpetual delays and the time he gave the Japanese. On the other hand, the Home Government desired him, if possible, to settle matters peaceably. How well he has accomplished his task I need not repeat. He has steered, like a skilful helmsman, between the two courses left open to him.

He could have ordered all the merchants to leave Japan; but what difficulties, what loss of time and money, would have been the result? He did not do so, and the consequence is that trade has continued all the time, and money has been pouring in. The harbour was never so full of native craft as it is at this moment, and the merchants thrive. Yokohama is growing into an important place; houses are springing up like mushrooms, and rent is enormously high. After Satzuma had paid, the Government of the Tycoon wrote to Colonel Neale stating how happy they were to see the affair settled and hoping that the amicable relations between the two countries would continue, and no more be interrupted. Let us hope so. We cannot, however, tell what may happen. The indemnity question is settled; but other complications may arise.

VICE-ADMIRAL KUPER, C.B., COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ON THE EAST INDIA AND CHINA STATION.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

SATZUMA'S ENVOYS PAYING THE INDEMNITY MONEY AT YOKOHAMA FOR THE MURDER OF MR. RICHARDSON.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN JAPAN.

We are enjoying the most seasonable Christmas weather. It is delightful to get up in the morning to take a walk over the frozen ground, the hoar frost glittering like diamond-dust in the bright sun. The sky is cloudless, and snowclad Pentyama looms grandly in the distance. The thermometer stands at 27 deg. Fahrenheit.

C. WIDMAN.

We give, on the preceding page, an illustration of Saturnin's Envoys paying the indemnity money exacted for the murder of Mr. Richardson. The sketch was taken from a picture in the Art Union of British Legation. Three of Satsuma's Envoys are talking about the operations at Kagoshim with the consular officials, while the fifth Envoy, Shimadzu Saburo, the Japanese is counting the money. The Portrait of Admiral Kuper (on the preceding page) is from a photograph recently taken by H. Okale in Argyll-street. The memoir of Rhodesbridge forwarded by our Artist will be engraved in future Numbers.

ADMIRAL KUPER.

REAR-ADMIRAL AUGUSTUS LEOPOLD KUPER, C.B., Commander-in-Chief on the Indian station, is a son of the late Rev. Augustus Kuper, Chaplain to the Prussian Gaelphic Order, a German Lutheran pastor, and a native of North Germany. Recommended to the favour of George IV. by his learning and piety, Mr. Kuper was appointed her Majesty's Chaplain, and became Chaplain of the German Chapel, St. James's, and, subsequently, Domestic Chaplain of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, was associated in promoting the education of her Royal daughter. The excellent old man died very recently at an advanced age, surviving his wife but a short time, leaving had several children, of whom one was Secretary to the British Legation at Frankfort, and discharged with ability the duties of Charge d'Affaires for the German Confederation.

Augustus Leopold Kuper was born on the 16th of August, 1809. Gifted with natural abilities, improved by a careful system of education, he entered the British Navy as a Midshipman under the auspices of his Majesty William IV., and Captain the Hon. Henry Duncan, in the Warrior, June 20, 1837, Emma Margaret, eldest daughter of the late Admiral Sir James John Gordon Bremer, K.C.B. and K.C.H., of Tyne, in the county of Haddington, immediately afterwards became Flag Lieutenant of that distinguished officer, who had been continuously employed in active service since the year 1793, in the establishment of a naval station and colony there. Sir Gordon Bremer hoisted the flag of the East Indian station, and Lieutenant Kuper was left in command at Table Bay, where his ship, encountering a frightful hurricane, sustained severe damage, and was nearly driven on shore by his indefatigable energy. With respect to the Admiralty on this occasion, marked by the receiving a letter of thanks from their Lordships, and that his arrangement was only frustrated by the abortive results of the expedition to the land period to overcome the difficulties encountered. This proposition could, of course, only have been entertained with the sanction, more or less direct, of the British Government. Captain Kuper was subsequently employed on the Cape station, and rendered essential services by the judgment and temper he displayed in encouraging the progress of peace. In the United States, in the Mediterranean, Ionian Island, Columbia, and by the aid he afforded in facilitating the establishment of the former colony, at Vancouver's Island, Rear-Admiral at an unprecedented early age, and combining capacity for civil administration with naval experience, he has established for his universal approbation of his profession and the public, for the highest and most important command in the service, and in the year 1854, on the station previously only conferred on officers of advanced life as well as distinguished services, and after having been for a short period a Lord of the Admiralty, he was selected to succeed Admiral Sir Charles Fremantle, as Commander-in-Chief in the Indian Ocean, which position has been filled with the greatest ability, energy, combined with judgment and tact, which he has conspicuously displayed.

Admiral Kuper had the grief, just before leaving this country to assume his Indian command, to lose from diphtheria, almost coincidently, two sons of great promise.

A statue of the Empress Eugénie is to be erected in the market-place of Puebla.

The Government emigrant-ship Sir John Lawrence, which sailed from Plymouth on the 6th of September, has arrived at Port Adelaide, South Australia, on Monday, the 14th of December, having on board 93 emigrants, and 1 died on the voyage. There is no record of any accident in the spar of a kind which is included in the Act.

At a meeting of the council of the Fisheries Preservation Association, held on the 12th inst.—Lord Saltoun in the chair—it was resolved that the following gentlemen be nominated as members of the council, and to their introduction in any new bill for the amendment of the Fishery Act of the present year:—Mr. Alexander Anderson, of Dunnichen, Forfarshire, who provided for in the last bill, and Mr. Hall, and Mr. Mackay. The first power should be given to the commissioners to define and regulate rights for floating fixed engines. It had an accountant's statement of the receipts and expenditure of the funds required for the preservation of rivers. 6. That further provision be made to prevent the pollution of rivers by the discharge of refuse in the maximum penalties shall be specified. 7. That justices in quarter sessions should have power to grant a license for the destruction of otters.

From the "Newspaper Press Directory" of 1864 we extract the following statistics of the current position of the newspaper press. It is published in the United Kingdom 1256 newspapers, distributed as follows in England, 911; Wales, 39; Scotland, 130; Ireland, 176; Channel Islands, 1. Of these there are forty-six daily papers published in England, one in Wales, nine in Scotland, and five in Ireland. Twenty-four new titles have appeared in this edition of this useful directory for 1864 we find the following—viz., that in that year there were published in the United Kingdom 1256 papers, of which nineteen papers were issued daily—viz., fourteen in London, one in Liverpool and four publishing editions daily, while the number of weekly papers published in 1863 there are now established and circulated 1220 papers, of which there are 130 in Scotland, 176 in Ireland, and 39 in Wales, and in every part of the country has increased. Included in the 1220 weekly papers are 24 published in two against nineteen in 1854. The magazines in course of publication, including the quarterly reviews, number 150 against 140 in 1863, and include the religious character, representing the Church of England, Wesleyans, Methodists, Baptists, Independents, and other Christian denominations.

NATIONAL INCOME AND EXPENDITURE.—A return has been issued of the gross income tax assessed under Schedules A, B, C, D, and E, for the year ending 5th April, 1863, showing also the balances in the Exchequer at the commencement and at the termination of the year, and the amount of exchequer bonds and bills created or redeemed in that period. The total revenue for the year was £71,643,251 9s. 10d., viz., £23,716,000 from customs, £20,000,000 from excise, £14,431,000; exclusive, £17,745,000; stamps, £5,250,000; land and assessed taxes, £3,300,000; property tax, £5,000,000; post office, £1,400,000; miscellaneous (incl., £302,200; and miscellaneous, £1,893,120 5s. 3d. In the same period the total expenditure was £70,686,787 19s. 10d., leaving a surplus revenue of £956,463 10s. The balance in the Exchequer on the 5th April, 1862, was £1,141,788 11s. 11d.; interest and deficiency on bills and bonds, £421,640 2s. 10d.; charges on the consolidated fund, £28,026,000; supply services, £36,758,261 16s. 11d.; and expenses of fortifications provided for by money raised per Act 23 and 24 Vict., cap. 109, and 26 and 27 Vict., cap. 31. The excess of income over expenditure in the year 1863 was, therefore, £5,957,452 19s. 11d. The "account of the balances of the public money" shows that the balances in the Exchequer on Dec. 31, 1863, were—at the Bank of England, £4,147,870; 14s., and at the Bank of Ireland, £2,120,501 6s. 8d.; by the creation of terminable annuities (to provide for forfeited sums expressed), £1,000,000; by the issue of exchequer bonds, £2,000,000; by exchequer bills, £370,140 4s.; and excess of income over total expenditure for the year ended Dec. 31, 1863, £2,023,031 13s. 11d.; total, £9,688,687 1s. 6d. On the other side of the balance account are the subjoined items:—Balance in the Exchequer on the Redemption of the National Debt, £80,877 17s. 9d.; Exchequer bonds paid off, £1,000,000; Exchequer bills paid off, £1,370,000; Bank of Ireland in the Exchequer on Dec. 31, 1863—at Bank of England, £6,319,320 4s. 4d.; at Bank of Ireland, £1,172,487 16s. 6d.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

"THE foremost of England's actors is not to be put off with a paltry Lachine, while a frog-eating Frenchman presents the noble Dane" to say the Saturday Review, and what that says many swear to. It is a powerful organ; it grinds many airs, look you! and never but such as those to which Goldsmith's bear condescended to dance to "the gentlest of tunes," and, being very genteel, it likes to have its music all measure, not even the allowance enough for the sensitiveness of a man's nature or the brassiness of his face. The Scotch, Mr. Macready, Mr. Sothern, Mr. Pellew, have certainly blundered in the matter to which we referred a fortnight ago. No one who has read the correspondence can doubt that Mr. Phelps has a right to be angry with the management, but although he has been forced into an ugly self-assertion, which perhaps no one but himself could do with a good grace, still, it may be very complimentary, if we look at it in that way, to have the chief creditor of a not great public concern, like the Sandbeach Lutchday, by a French gentleman; but if we look at it in another way it is very hard that a man who has spent the best years of his professional earn which vexation is dislocated by a Parisian accent and intonation, and who has been "the first actor in England" and they are so grateful for it! Why cannot critics speak the truth?

Out with it, Dogberd! let the matter pass.

Let us do so for once—Shakspeare's wrath properly zeal, is the sweetest in the world. That of Gray is not more polished, that of Coleridge is not more melodious; but sweetest concord unset becomes discord, "like sweetest melody out of time," and Mr. Phelps, Mr. Pechter, who chrums us in the hurried press of "Roy Blas" or "The Lady Mabel," positively ought to be ashamed of himself for such his new readings of Shakspeare. Let us hope that he will gracefully drop the subject, and remember that he has not to write leaders.

By-the-way, whilst these two gentlemen debate, a lady will snatch the grace from us, or at any rate will be "in it." Miss Glyn and Miss Marriott will, at Sadler's Wells, play Hamlet to a London audience. Miss Glyn is, we believe, the first lady performer, not in this the first time she has done so.

A "gaily Parisian life" is not to be seen, under any circumstances, at Stratford, and a very good thing too. Le Cymbeline" is not pleasing to a general audience, and "Le Roi Lear" and "Le Lie D'Ypreville" and Miss Faucit will, of course, be the Rosalind; Mr. Creswick the Jaques, and Mr. Compton, Touchstone. The reasoning of the cast will be very simple, the reasoning in which the performances will take place will be admirably fitted for it, and will hold a vast number of spectators, but the Stratford Committee will have a large benefit.

All the country is in a state of "Shakspeare mania," and at Mr. Dimsdi's assembly and party (the latter attended by "fit and proper persons") "Le Roi Lear" was the only subject talked of, and actually ended. The Austrian and Prussian Attachés did not seem very pleased at the whole affair and left early, as they could, and there was something whispered about the two provinces being reconciled to Denmark under a "proportionate settlement"—that is to say no one could understand the matter, a Danish part for the Danes and a German for the Germans. Let us hope this view does not mean impending war. Mary Anderson has been performing lately in Edinburgh, and, as a reciprocal movement, a total banishment of the Scotch from the Lyceum. Mary Anderson is a favourite with the Irish, and, of course, England for the English. Great would be the smashing of shillelahs if Miss Mary Anderson, "the Irish girl," and Mr. Mc Caudd kail in Aberdeen" and lost tears shed in Dublin; for, locally and all politics apart, our actors are universal, and we have sent English places, either here, at the Cape, India, or Canada, are filled by Irish and Scotch.

So, as we learn from the secretary of the Archæological Institute, Mr. Parnell, the Bachelor of Arts. Our most interesting harvest, as far as the Great Eastern Steam Launch is concerned, is likely to be of course to save them. This is as it should be. The great Alexander is said years that Mr. Phelps, Mr. Pechter, and Mr. Phillips was, however, for his wisely taken a beautiful couplet, which will be quite new to half the London critics, and yet John Fletcher wrote it in King Arthur's time:

Our acts our angels are, or good or ill,
Our fatal shadows that walk by us still.

From Fletcher to Shakspeare is an easy step. The National Committee met on Monday, under the presidency of his Grace the Marquess of Chandos, and resolved to celebrate the birthday of the bard of Avon. No mocking Theories asked troublesome questions, and the Committee separated with a cheer. Let us hope that "Cæsar's darlings" of sacrifices, were in such force that, had even the great Julius been there, he would have been "knocked down" and "trodden down stairs like a shove-groat shilling." This is symbolical, of course; but it is very much agreed with the Shakspeare Committee, as we know from Mr. Puff in "The Critic," "when they do agree they do it with a vengeance." Let us hope that the Bard of Avon and Shakspeare should sit eterne in the Green Park, "pedestrial's hugely great a pigeon and a half," and that the statue will be under a canopy, and will represent (at second hand) Sir Walter Scott "in Elinbro' town." So that he will not get wet. Let us hope that the committee will not be "done" and has under a glass case, else he will loom dreadful in the London fogs, and will be "wrapped up" as well as the statue of Peel in his innocent nose. Twas a poetic thought that of the park, and one with a mask stands for fancy and a lyre for poetry, and the statue of Peel, whilst Audrey and Touchstone can be represented by Corydon, of "Sylvia" and "Phillis," and "Strephon" and "Colin" and "Damon" and the Mighty Sage.

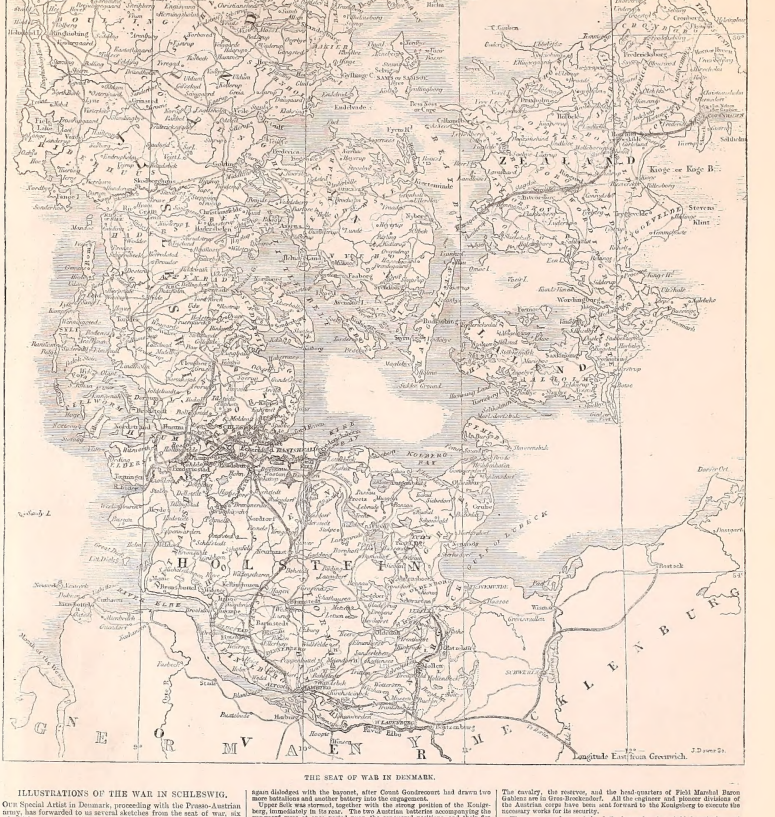
Are we still becoming very philological all over the world? Here we had a trial between a Duke and his tenant on the meaning of the word "Gorse," and the Duke lost it, and now we have in the Times the counsel cribbed whole columns from "Richardson's Dictionary," as was vouchsafed to the astonished world by the learned Dr. Vonnels's Study of Words." Not to be behind us over the Straits, the French, ingenuous people have got a "Dictionary of Words" by the Academicians. Madame, however, claimed the hysterica, the objets d'art, the mise en scène, the chiffonnier, the bric-à-brac, the mezzotinto, miniatures, and all those things included by our dealers in the two words "dignity" and "impudence." The Academicians, it is said, have left the dictionary of Trevoux and fell out of that by the Forty of the Academy; but they have left Shakspeare and Bacon, and Byron, and awarded only two thirds of the sanctuined. Let us learn, gentlemen, from this to be careful in the definitions of the words in our wills.

The new process of engraving by the photographic and electric art, which is to surpass photopalæography, photoglyphy, photolithography, and photoincnography, and which itself delights in the name of the "photo-electric process," is making great strides. A perfectly untouched plate, which, but that it lacks sky, is more beautiful than the finest aquatint yet produced, is issued with the Art Union for March. It does not do well, however, as it is only by mark how closely art and nature are allied. Here chemistry has done that in which mechanical eye could see only the handiwork of man.

THE FARM.

THE opponents of the malt tax have obtained from Mr. Gladstone the very just concession which he half promised last year respecting the repeal of the fifty per malt tax for the brewing of beer. There are still plenty of brave words about "going in for total repeal and nothing short of that," but the public is impatient, and the temperance societies in particular, will have something to say when such an enormous sum as 6,000,000*l.* is easily raised revenue is demanded from the Exchequer. Mr. Sydney did good service at the Brewers' dinner when he pointed out that the vision of the working man spending his evenings at home with his wife and children over beer was not the one brewing was hickly arcadian and recommended the repealers to abandon that picture, and to paint their own idea of the effect of the repeal because they pay their wages partly in beer and hope to get rid of cheaper. Everybody perfectly well that brewers are the beer-house not only to shake their "eternal thirst for beer," but for the sake of getting rid of the beer. It is not to be denied that they are for the moral elevation of the working classes, and with the next to recommend cheaper beer as their "panacea" for all ills. They will find thousands of the clergy and others who know the labourer well to be quite of opinion with Mr. Mechi, that as, of course, created with "Oh, oh!" and "laughter"), that it would in the course of a few years be scarce, so that labourers would get less of it and lay out their wages in better food and meat for their families.

The Mark Lane Express has just published its annual tabular account of the sale of corn in England during 1863. About 600 of the most respectable and reliable farmers have lent their aid, and private enquiry has ensured correctness in returning the quantity with which our Governments declined to enquire. Of the wheat returns five are from Scotland, and the rest are in England, and 305 ever an average. For barley and oats the corresponding figures are 55 and 64, 245 and 268, and 264 and 300. From all this it appears that the farmers are indeed no comfort. The figures of the potato crop are 14, 302, 211; but when the Mowing Grass and Pasture are analysed, we find that 1,178 "slightly diseased," 216; and "much diseased," 201. The weight of the wheat is cast at 63 lbs. per bushel; barley, 50 lbs.; oats, 39 lbs.; beans, 63 lbs.; peas, 63 lbs. per bushel; and the general prospects of the country are the same as they were in England during 1863. About 600 of the most respectable and reliable farmers have lent their aid, and private enquiry has ensured correctness in returning the quantity with which our Governments declined to enquire. Of the wheat returns five are from Scotland, and the rest are in England, and 305 ever an average. For barley and oats the corresponding figures are 55 and 64, 245 and 268, and 264 and 300. From all this it appears that the farmers are indeed no comfort. The figures of the potato crop are 14, 302, 211; but when the Mowing Grass and Pasture are analysed, we find that 1,178 "slightly diseased," 216; and "much diseased," 201. The weight of the wheat is cast at 63 lbs. per bushel; barley, 50 lbs.; oats, 39 lbs.; beans, 63 lbs.; peas, 63 lbs. per bushel; and the general prospects of the country are the same as they were in England during 1863. The barley crop, more especially in the north-west and midland counties, was generally laid damaged by the August rains, and hence the quality of malting barley will not be more than an average. The yield of oats, on the contrary, was uniformly fine; and, great as was the disease amongst roots, the yield of the Swede turnip was an average, and the price has not been injurious to the working classes, and an average crop of mangold.



The breeders of Hereford cattle have had a great loss by the death of Mr. Thomas Duckham, of Aylton, who survived his wife little more than nine or ten months. His herd was principally derived from that Mr. Knowles, and was remarkable for its celebrity as a breeder, who was purchased as a calf from Mr. Rogers of The Grove. This blood had an extraordinary run of luck in the Show Yard. At Worcester meeting, and swelled the average not a little at the Stourbridge sale in October. Mr. Richard and Delia were Mr. Rose's greatest loyal winners, and he created a prize of three lots of his best Herefordshire grounds of Hereford, Leominster, and Ludlow. The deceased was very fond of the sport, and was a liberal subscriber to the hounds of the late Robert Luther; and it was owing to an internal injury from a fall at a fence that he met with his death. He was a bachelor, and left a widow and an infant son.

The Hereford herd of the late John Powell, of Great Hampton, fetched a good price, and the sheep still better. Many of the eminent breeders of the day were present, including Messrs. Hewer, Price, Grove, Duckham, &c., were among the purchasers. The former possession gave 49*l.* 7*s.* for the two-year-old Leominster, and 52*l.* 5*s.* for her Mentor heifer-calf; and the top price (145*l.*) was given by Mr. Hunt for a two-year-old steer by the same bull. The Hereford Agricultural Society is also meeting on the spot with a show and fair in favour of Jan. 1 as the commencement of the breeding year.

Sixty-two members were present at the last monthly council of the Royal Agricultural Society, and twenty-one of them were from Durham and the North Riding. Among the latter was Mr. Lord Feversham, the champion breeder of "the Border Leicesters," which will, it is hoped, be more generally known by the name Feversham. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales has been elected a governor by acclamation. The new members on the request of the Duke of Richmond, the action of sheep for the Viceroy of Egypt; and a committee is appointed to consider the duties of calving in the cattle classes. The local prize-list committee of the Bath and Gallway rejoice, Baron Leicester, Hereford sheep, hunters, roadsters, ponies, agricultural horses, with, and Mr. Thomas Duckham, of Aylton, Herefordshire Butterfly, is in high dudgeon with Newcastle for getting the meeting a second time, and its agricultural show will lead as of old with the local bonds, to which the Northumberland Society subscribes 100*l.*

From various sales we learn that Mr. Thomas Duckham Butterfly, a noun heifer-calf from Burgundy Butterfly, and a roan bull-calf by Baron Hopeful from Burgundy Butterfly, three more lots of a month from Frederick's Farewell. Double Butterfly, and Young Butterfly (Lord Feversham's), and Mr. Hewer's Duke of Hereford catalogue to very nearly sixty lots. Besides the last-named trio, it contains twenty-five cows and heifers that have had calves, seven under three years old, and a few bull-calves, principally by the Duke of Wharfdale—a cross which has "it" exactly with the Butterflies. Of these Mr. Hewer's Frederick's Farewell, Frederick's Kingdove, and Precious Stone are at present looked upon as "double-firsts." Frederick's Farewell is a beautiful roan, and is sent to the First and the Second Dukes of Wharfdale—half-brothers from Dukes with a full sister to Frederick's Farewell. Baron Hopeful's two-year bulls; but Royal Butterfly, who is exactly a year younger and has already been successful at provincial shows, is considered the favourite of medals in his last "grand tour," will not be allowed to leave Towneley except some breeder is spirited enough to top a very high price for him. Two of his sisters, Royal Butterfly 14th and 16th, were sold last autumn; but four of them, Royal Queen, Pageant, Alice Butterfly, and Vesta 3rd, are left to console the bulls. The Towneley cows are in very striking resemblance to "The Royal," who is the sire of a good portion of the herd. Royal Queen is a beautiful roan cow; Duchess 2nd (who fairly swept the prize-board in her day) and her daughter Duchess 3rd, a pair of models of symmetry and excellence. Vestris 3rd. It has been reduced by heavy sales to five, of which Frederick's Kingdove is the sister of two calves by Baron Hopeful from an important item. The Butterfly or Barrington Rose tribe musters strong, there are Butterfly, Mary, and Princess Royal, and the milk, prizes, breeding, and high prizes combined, it has no rival that we know of in Lancashire. The Rose of Sharon 13th (the latter back to those Kirkleby dames, Bracelet and Madaline: the former through Pearly, and through Pearly's daughter Alice Rose) are the chief cows. Alice Rose Pearly, with her rare white heifer Perfume, and Alice Rose Brown, both of them by Baron Hopeful, and Alice Rose Brown's son, Prince Rose, make a perfect tribe, which is pure Booth, with the exception of the very slight "touch of Bates" in Vestris's pedigree. There are about twenty cows in the catalogue, all told, and we must have never been in the ring, in many cases because they were not wanted, and in many more because they were not for sale. The bull is represented by Mr. Brierley), but it has well earned its name of "Beautiful Butterfly." It is, perhaps, the gem of the younger females. He is but little more than seven weeks before its time, and nearly five too soon for the Royal Agricultural Society's show at Leicester. He was first shown after winning the first fat-cow prize at Liverpool in '62; and Frederick's Duchess was first-prize yearling heifer at Manchester in '63. Both cows were shown from Towneley in the yearling-heifer class at Chester in '62, and Duchess 3rd was first and Alice Rose second. Alice and Violette—are still left in the herd. March 17 will witness a regular clear out. Mr. Hewer's Duke of Hereford will, however, be retained as a general without an army. Let us hope that the Lancashire skies may clear up on the day, or, rather, that the Bentley pony-car precedent may be followed, and the shorthorn parliament be held under canvas. A cheerful luncheon loses half its rest at these carnivals with rain—a heavy soaking of buyers and catalogues to follow.

The share to be paid by Great Britain for the abolition of the Sound dues has been fixed at 8,762,320 francs (over £350,000). Half this sum is to be paid on the 1st of April, 1864, and the other half on April 1, 1865.

THE SEAT OF WAR IN DENMARK.

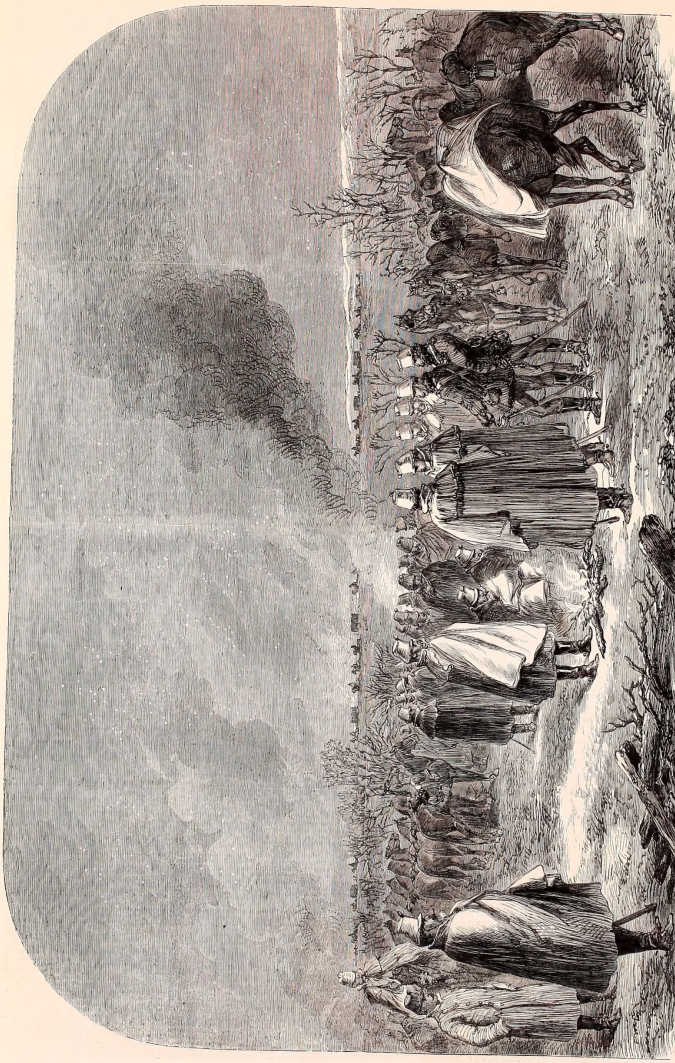
ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

OUR Special Artist in Denmark, proceeding with the Prusso-Austrian army, has forwarded to us several sketches from the seat of war, six of which are engraved in the present Number. Respecting the fight on Wednesday, the 3rd inst., illustrated on the first page, it may not be amiss to state that Upper Selk lies to the southward of Selk-Noor, a lake which flows westward from Schleswig in connection with the Hadeyle-Noor, but is separated from the Schlei itself by a small dam, over which goes the road from Eckernförde to Busdorf, Frederichsberg, and Schleswig. On the south of the Selk-Noor is Nottorf, on the line of railway to the north-west of Oestorf, while to the north-west of Lottorf lies the village of Jagel, near the Rendsberg and Schleswig road. These places form a triangle, towards the south-east front of which the Danes were posted at the commencement of the day. The Austrians, however, compelled them to retire from the triangle and occupied Jagel and Upper Selk, the base of the triangle, then took Kosigsberg, between the road and the Selk-Noor, and pressed northwards towards Veidelsberg, where the first line of the fortifications of the Dannewerk position is situated, and which extends on the east to the Schlei, and on the west to a place named the Red Krug. The following report of the battle, by Field Marshal von Wrangel to the Emperor of Austria, has been published :—

Head-quarters, Damendorf, Feb. 4.

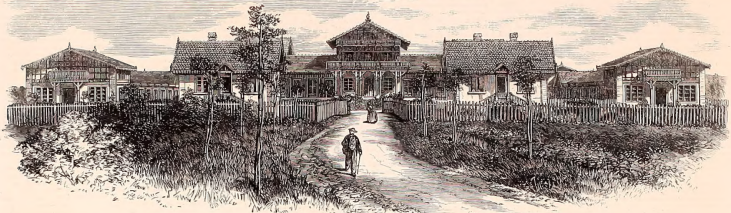
I beg most respectfully to inform your Imperial Majesty, in continuation of my telegraphic despatch of yesterday, that, in execution of the dispositions made by me, the 6th Austrian Army Corps marched yesterday in two columns upon Lottorf and Gottorf. The advanced guard, with these places the vanguard of the first column, Count Gondrecourt's brigade, first encountered two Danish squadrons, which retreated after a slight fire. Two companies of knights, six Danish battalions then became visible, with one or two batteries, which immediately opened fire upon the Austrian front. The Imperial troops, headed by the 19th Jäger battalion, returned the fire, and, as soon as one battery and two other battalions advanced, they rushed forward to attack with the bayonet. The Danes, who up till then had made a stout, gallant contest under fire, did not meet the attack, but retreated. They took up a new position upon the heights immediately in the rear, and were in like manner again dislodged with the bayonet, after Count Gondrecourt had drawn two more battalions and another battery into the engagement.

Upper Selk was stormed, together with the strong position of the Kosigsberg, immediately in the rear. Here the Danes made a stand, and their vanguard were at once pursued upon the conquered positions, and their fire directed upon the Danes during their retreat to the Dannewerk. The 11th Jäger battalion covered the batteries upon the Kosigsberg. At this period of the action the heavy guns from a Danish work, recently completed and armed, opened fire against the Kosigsberg, and were met with a vigorous reply. The balls of the Danish artillery passed far away over the Kosigsberg.



The brigade of Count Gondrecourt has suffered but little loss, the extent of which, in fact, have hardly been yet ascertained; but too great praise cannot be given to the bravery displayed throughout the engagement by the troops of the determined leading of General Count Gondrecourt, and the universal bravery of the troops. The brilliant and unforeseen result of the capture of the Kosigsberg, however, quite compensates the loss we have suffered. Among the Staff Colonel Benedek, of the King of Prussia's infantry, and an officer of the regiment Martini are badly wounded; further loss in killed and wounded exceed several hundreds, upon a cursory estimate. The 9th Jäger battalion of the Nostiz brigade has equally participated in the battle and the victory. No exact account can be given of the Danish loss. Many dead and wounded were left upon the field, about 100 prisoners were brought in, and a gun was captured in the advance by the 19th Jäger battalion.

Lieutenant-General von Gablenz, commanding the 10th Corps-Selk raid, in company with their Royal Highnesses the Crown Prince Frumia and Prince Albrecht (senior), as well as the Princes Frederick Charles and Albrecht (junior), who had come up to receive the dispositions for the following day. During this action the combined Prussian division of infantry of the guard had also advanced to take up the position assigned to it in the front. The column advancing on the Schleswig road came in collision with the Danes in Jägel. The village was occupied by 1000 men and four guns. Two Austrian companies appeared simultaneously at the eastern extremity of the village, and a general attack was made in combination upon the place. At the second attack the Danes were dislodged from Jägel and retreated to the Dannewerk. One gun, with ammunition waggons, fell into the possession of the Austrians. The division thereupon took up its position between Alt-Rensdorf and Jägel, to unite with the Austrian pickets across the Kosigsberg to Falmdorf.



The head-quarters of Lieutenant-General von der Mülbe are in Kropp. Count Gondrecourt's brigade, owing to its great losses, was relieved yesterday evening by the Nostiz brigade, which now has the advance. Count Gondrecourt's brigade occupies Upper and Lower Selk; Lottorf and Gottorf are held by the Brigade Dormus; and the Brigade Thomas is in Falmdorf. The cavalry, the reserve, and the head-quarters of Field Marshal Baron Gablenz are in three Bordenkrüger. All the engineer and pioneer divisions of the Austrian corps have been sent forward to the Kosigsberg to execute the necessary works for its security.

The correspondents of the daily journals give vivid descriptions of the battle-field of Selk after the fight. One gentleman writes as follows from Rendsburg on the evening of the 5th inst. :—

I have just returned from a visit to Over-Selk and the Kosigsberg. I set out at nine this morning, with three or four others. . . . At Breckendorf, which had been the Austrian head-quarters on Wednesday and Thursday, we began to see signs of life, and we had not advanced half a mile further on the road to Selk when we met the first detachment of Austrians. . . . In the open could we now here and there see regular fireworks, the smoke of camp fires. Since Monday 11,000 Austrians and as many more Prussians have had to bivouac in the open air. The country between Breckendorf and Over-Selk was of the bleakest and most inhospitable description. For miles not a tree was to be seen. Hedges there were none, as the Danes had cut down what few there existed previously to their retreat. The villages and farmhouses are few in number and at wide distances from each other. The inhabitants of the farmhouses had all fled since the end of last week, and they, or the Danes, had carried away every article of furniture and every bit of provender and foodstuff. Consequently the troops had had nothing to eat but what they had on the ground when we arrived, and the commissariat was not a degree above zero. As we afterwards learnt from the officers and men themselves, the privations they had undergone from Tuesday to Thursday were fearful in the extreme. By Tuesday night there was not a crumb of bread or a glass of drink in any of the few villages in the neighbourhood for miles round. On Wednesday and Thursday the majority of the troops had nothing beyond a slice of black bread to eat and cold water to drink. Wood was nowhere to be had without fetching it from a distance of several miles in the rear. The army had brought but a single tent with it, and in this wintry weather the men had had to pass three nights in the open air while it was constantly raining, hail, or snowing. Numbers of the men had no blankets, and the camp fire in many instances. When we arrived on Friday morning, however, the latter evil had been remedied, partly by the arrival of wood and turf from a distance, partly by the pulling down of the deserted farmhouses and cottages in the vicinity. The various parts of the camp which we may were full of bustle and activity. Here an ox was being slaughtered and cut up; while at the fire the regimental cook was preparing warm morsels for the famished soldiers.

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: THE 9TH REGIMENT OF HUSSARS (PRINCE LIECHTENSTEIN'S) BIVOUACKING ON THE BATTLE-FIELD OF OVER-SELK, AFTER THE FIGHT.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE FISH NURSERIES AT HUNINGUE, FRANCE.

THE HUNINGUE FISH NURSERIES.

Ponds or reservoirs for the breeding of fish are no new invention, but are as old as civilisation itself. We do not intend, however, to trace their history to a very remote age; our purpose will be served by a brief allusion to ponds which may yet be seen in the land of the golden carp (China), where the culture of fish and other denizens of the water is carried to a marvellous state of perfection. The trade in fish spawn on all the large rivers of China forms an important branch of commerce, and fish is, in consequence, one of the cheapest articles of diet in that great and densely-populated country. It was, no doubt, the knowledge of what was constantly being done in China that incited the luxurious Italians of the far back times to study the art of fish culture, and the acclimatisation of various fishes and crustaceans. If we can believe the classical writers who have left us various scraps of information on these matters, the most ingenious devices were resorted to in order to give to particular fishes an artificial flavour. Crustaceans were sought on the shores of Britain, and the seas of Russia were explored for fishes to be acclimatised in the fishponds of Rome or Naples.

The art of pisciculture, after being lost for ages, was rediscovered and practised in Germany a century ago; but nothing came out of the discovery of a practical nature, except a series of experiments by M. Jacobi on the artificial fecundation of trout spawn. The next time we hear of the art of pisciculture is in connection with the natural history of the salmon (1838-40), when the Duke of Buccleuch's forester, Mr. Shaw, undertook to solve, by means of gathering the spawn of that fish, that the parr was the salmon in its first stage. From gathering the spawn Mr. Shaw proceeded to artificial manipulation and fecundation, and so proved his case; but his experiments have been often detailed before, so that we shall not say more about them than that they were the first of the modern experiments in connection with pisciculture.

It has been asserted that a Scottish gentleman travelling in France communicated a knowledge of the art of fish-breeding to some peasants of La Bresse, in the Vosges; but we rather think this to be a mistake, and that the late Joseph Remy discovered the art himself while in pursuit of his vocation as a fisherman. It is certain at all events that France has been the first country to make a commercial use of the discovery, the Views of the fish nurseries of Huningue here given testify to this. It is now over twenty years since the French people began the systematic breeding of fish on the artificial principle—i. e. spawning and fecundating by hand manipulation; and during that period the fresh-water fisheries of France—and it is needless to say that, in a Roman Catholic country like France, fish is a most important food element—have been re-peopled with a healthy finny population, and that many of the rivers have, under this new system of fish breeding and protection, become of great value to the country.

The suite of buildings at Huningue is devoted to the extension of the piscicultural system, having been erected with a view to the reception and distribution of fish-eggs, as also with the intention of providing accommodation for such experiments in acclimatisation as were to be conducted there for the benefit of the French fisheries. M. Coumes, of Strasbourg, is the designer of the buildings and ponds which occupy altogether an extent of ground equal to eighty imperial acres of our measurement. It is not, as a rule, found convenient to hatch the eggs at Huningue, as the young fish could not be very easily transported to such great distances as the ova; but a few thousands are always hatched for the purpose of being experimented on so far as food and growth are concerned. Millions of eggs are annually collected by the capteurs of the establishment, and, with a small percentage of loss, these are successfully hatched—first for a brief period at Huningue, and afterwards in the particular water which they are designed to populate.

The establishment at Huningue and all its branches and other business have been incorporated into one of the Government departments of France—that of the roads and bridges; and it has been very well and cheaply administered, the annual expenses not being much over £3000, which, when we consider that it collects and distributes from fifteen to twenty millions of fish eggs per annum, cannot be considered at all extravagant. A good idea of the place will be obtained from the two Views which we publish. The reader is not, however, to suppose that the ponds are used (as has been erroneously stated) to hatch the eggs. All the ova which is collected is kept under cover in one of the long halls of the side building. There is, of course, an abundant supply of all kinds of water, and the engines are used for pumping the water from the south of each of the fish as are kept for study. The principal fishes manufactured at Huningue are the Rhine and Danube salmon, the Umbre chevalier, the lake and river trout, and the fera—a very plentiful fish.

EXPERIMENTING PONDS AT THE HUNINGUE FISH NURSERIES.

The fish nurseries of Huningue are situated about three miles from Bâle and are accessible from the St. Louis station of the Mulhouse and Bâle Railway.

FINE ARTS.

THE DECORATION OF ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

The decoration of the dome of St. Paul's seems likely to be long proceeding for want of funds, notwithstanding that advertisements inviting contributions have been very frequently inserted in the papers for several months past. Since 1858, when a subscription was first set on foot for the purpose in connection with the Fine Arts Exhibition, a total sum of about £1000 given for stained-glass windows and other special objects in the scheme of decoration by the London Corporation, the Government, and private individuals. Since the proposed national guinea subscription, about £600 has also been received. These sums have left a small proportion of the amount required for completing the work—namely, £7000. And yet what a bagatelle is this to the ten or twelve millions annually expended on the maintenance and decoration of St. Peter's, at Rome! That the public should so slow in responding to the appeal is the more inexplicable as it is perhaps, partly due to the supposition that the Dean and Chapter have funds at their command for the work. The fact, however, is that funds are barely sufficient to keep the building in tolerable repair; the cathedral underwent being on the reduced and limited scale determined by recent Acts of Parliament. The Dean and Chapter do not even share in the increased values which have accrued to property on the estates by the lapse of time. Of that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have the whole advantage. When it becomes more generally known that the Dean and Chapter endeavour to secure the proposed object, subscriptions surely must, in these days of universal competition, pour in freely. Meanwhile, we think of the enormous sums expended on trading speculations of all kinds, and now in connection with long-lauded exhibitions, and of the very shadow of the stately dome of St. Paul's, it seems—nay, it is—nothing short of the height of folly to suppose that the whole metropolitan cathedral should have remained—be it remembered—unfinished for ever.

That it is unfinished people appear to forget entirely, and rejoice to be told that Sir Christopher Wren had a complete plan for its completion, which he now proceeded to carry out, but which he had not the means to execute. With the exception of Sir James Thornhill's paintings subjects in the cupola, and some frigid grisaille by Mr. Paris, nothing whatever has been done to complete Wren's design. The mosaics proposed by Wren, and, indeed, challenge comparison with any similar structure in Europe, and is decided by the most competent authorities to be second in the great prototype, St. Peter's; but what a contrast is there between its symbolic scheme and the meaningless monotony of the decoration of Sir Joshua Reynolds and several artists of his day offered to paint a series of wall pictures in the nave and aisles gratis, but the offer was declined by the Dean of that time as "Popish." Public opinion has at length, however, even in Calvinistic Scotland (witness the Cathedral of Glasgow), come to admire these classic and noble works.

A renewed effort to stimulate the public to contribute towards the decoration of St. Paul's was made by the Archbishop of York, when, in his address to the Church Congress, held at the Mansion House recently, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, at which a resolution was also appointed to invite subscriptions of a guinea and upwards from the whole nation, the attendance of the Queen was solicited as the supreme metropolitan interest. We have ourselves endeavoured to advance the good cause in various former articles, and more than once have lamented that we have also expressed some regret respecting certain (as we think) ill-advised arrangements which resulted in the extensive employment of Mr. Stevens for the decoration of the cathedral, and the fact that public opinion was virtually ignored as regards the course of artistic effort. We have always held that the public should suspect that the course adopted was very considerably retarded the active and energetic labours of Mr. Stevens during the last few years. At present we will describe the nature of the decorations decided upon for execution by the Dean and Chapter, and which will determine for the completion of the interior (at the head of which is his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury), as the Archbishop of York intended by Mr. Penrose, the cathedral surveyor and accomplished architect.

The proposed decorations may be compendiously described as imitative of those of St. Peter's. The imitation is however, very limited in degree, and will be executed with materials of a very different order. We must not imagine that the interior of the London cathedral could ever rival in splendour the far more rich and magnificent shrine of the chief temple of the Roman Church. The proposal consists primarily in filling eleven windows at the east end of the choir and transepts with painted glass of "the highest quality, uniform in style, design, and execution." In filling the lancights of the clerestory and other suitable compartments, and ultimately the dome itself, with paintings in mosaic, and the general scheme will be one of a simpler description of mosaic, consisting of inlaid marbles (sometimes called "marble tarsia" the chiaroscuro inlay of the Italians), and generally in gilding and incrusting with coloured glass and marbles all of the architecture as require it to complete the decorative framework. It is also deemed of pressing importance to fill the great west door in the south transept, and to complete the stallwork of the choir and other works which have been left unfinished. The mosaics, as elsewhere, at present limited almost exclusively to the choir. Six of the windows will be filled with the twelfth verse of the Benedictus of St. Zachary, the Cross, Death, the Grave, the Resurrection, and Pentecost. Three compartments in the aisles will contain the three representations of our Lord, Moses, and Elijah—together illustrating the Transfiguration.

And now a few words on the works actually in progress. It seems, then, that the mosaic of the great window for the stained glass has been intrusted to Professor Schnorr, of Munich; and the windows are to be executed by Messrs. Heaton, Butler, and Bayne, of London. The lower central window of the apse, given by the Drapers' Company, and the great west window, given by Mr. Thomas Brown (of the firm of Longman, Brown, and Co.), have been commissioned from the German artist. Should the approval of the Archbishop of York, Mr. Penrose, as this gentleman has himself announced; and it is further stated that the mosaic for the former window is progressing rapidly at the apse. Now, we would not for a moment depreciate the skill of the veteran German painter and decorator, but we cannot refrain, as we must be confessed that our glass-painters have hitherto distinguished themselves chiefly in works of a Gothic character, and not those which would harmonise with the architectural style of the cathedral. Nevertheless, most of Schnorr's designs are tame or trite enough that manner is a comparative merit, and the artist is an academic and too pictorial for the proper function of stained glass. Our own artists have been sorely neglected in this respect, and even if they were all incapable, there is no reason why the designs should not be procured from the best Continental painters and artist-painters. At all events, English artists might have been invited to compete, and then, had they failed, the work given to them may like as much to British art might have been avoided.

The mosaic scheme of Professor Schnorr is perhaps given—though still provisionally, we hope, upon approval when executed to scale in a small model of the choir now being prepared for the purpose. Upon the circumstances, if possible still more regretable, because in this case there was some pretence of inviting open competition, he may pronounce, for what other word is applicable, seeing that only four artists (three English and one French) were asked to compete? One of these, Mr. Stephens, the sculptor, now nothing; another, Mr. G. F. Watts, contributed a slight sketch, but disclaimed to compete; a third, Mr. F. Leighton, contributed immeasurably the finest of the only two sets of finished drawings sent in; but he was passed over for no apparent reason, unless we discover except that his design might have been considered by an architectural purist somewhat free in the lines of the composition and draperies for the position it was intended to occupy; and the choice fell upon a French artist, whose drawings (whatever the merit of that gentleman as a sculptor may be) are of the character of mere marble inlays as that now in the South Kensington Museum), remembered—a "fer-de-lance" reminiscence of Michael Angelo, foiled almost ridiculously in expression and foreshortening, and had only this one merit, if such it be, of filling the space in stiffest symmetry. We now learn that this artist has been intrusted to prepare the designs for all the mosaic mosaics below the cast windows. Such a result is certainly startling. While we have to deplore the incapacities and designers as Messrs. Herbert, Maclise, Dyce, Watts, Armitage, Cope, Ward, Egg-Hall, Townsend, and Leighton, we cannot but think the choices before we need seek the assistance of any French or German artist, in which the Royal Academy, especially, has of late years been obliged to call in Baron de Triqueti or even Professor Schnorr. There is in the world right that every artist possessed of the walls of the building in the works of these foreigners; but it is absurd to suppose that, in the present day, they are the only artists fit for the architectonic requirements. Absolute identity of style in the mosaics is evidently not considered to be essential, and we are glad to learn that at last an English artist, Mr. Alfred Stephens, the successful competitor for the Prince Consort memorial, whose design was declined to compete before, has executed a design for one of the spandrels of the dome arches, of which report speaks favourably. It is also highly also to learn that the whole of the panels of the choir will be publicly exhibited, together with photographs of the designs for the mosaics, before execution. We regret, however, that entire publicity and open competition had been the rule in this case. The Royal Academy, in the case of the recent public competition that the drawings were not publicly exhibited (for they could only be seen after private application and delay at the Chapter House), and we suggested that a committee of taste, composed, say, of Royal Academicians, should be appointed to select the best from the national work. We have returned to this disagreeable subject now that it is necessary that the public should be made aware how it is adopted. Although one may not be permitted to have any very strong national and patriotic sympathies in the regard to a work of such vast importance as St. Paul's, nearly all the decorations in our English Protestant cathedral—the last resting-place of our great artists and statesmen—have been executed by Englishmen, probably Catholic ones? May we not be supplying in St. Paul's to some future artist a new and noble field for his genius?

Where spread the states of Verdo and Lugaret?

Only a fortnight since we announced with regret that Mr. Pyne, R.A., had been compelled by ill-health to finally relinquish all hope of ever being able to complete the series of frescoes relating to the history of York, Any difficulty in the way of the work—namely, that the Queen's Robing-room of the New Palace, Westminster, and that the Royal Exchange—has been overcome, and Mr. Pyne has been restored to the Exchequer. Already the poor painter's resentment has been somewhat softened by the receipt of a cheque for £1000 from the Treasury, at Streatham, Surrey. We shall give a biographical notice of Mr. Pyne's career in our next issue.

The next exhibition of the Photographic Society will be opened from the 23rd of May to the 28th of June, inclusive, at Pall-mall. These exhibitions have hitherto been held during the months of January and February, and have generally resulted in a balance on the wrong side. The change of date will, it is expected, attribute to the unfavourable season of the year chosen. The space in the new gallery being about 3000 ft. of wall-space, there will be ample room and made-up pictures, not the result of photography alone, with the usual accessories of photographic apparatus.

Mr. Francis Bedford, the well-known photographer, has published a series of photographs of Shakespeare's house and the grounds to many at the present time. These are seventeen views of scenes and localities in connection with the immortal name of Shakespeare. They comprise four exterior, and as many interior, views of the church—the latter showing the font at which Shakespeare was christened, the monument of Ann Hathaway's cottage. The remaining six views of the room in which Shakespeare was born, the gateway leading to the Chapel Lane, with the Grammar School, the rear of New-place, the High-street, and Townhall, and the old bridge.

Messrs. Cassell and Co. announce that the Art Union Association has just issued the Wimbledon prize certificates alluded to in the last issue. The design is by Arnold Koehler, engraved by Ward and handsomely illuminated card, containing the words (to be filled up properly) "Wimbledon Prize." Beneath is a shield bearing the Union illuminator. The rich design is in very good taste, and reflects much credit on the artist. Messrs. Cassell have also issued drawing by Miss Tenison, daughter of Lady Louisa Tenison, and a niece of Lady Waterford. It is a pretty sketch, and is framed in a handsome certificate, price 5s., at the office, Pall-mall East. One prize only can be awarded to each artist.

The celebrated Grimani breviary, full of magnificent illuminations of the Flemish school of the sixteenth century, and long the boast of the school, and which has long been one of the chief treasures of the Library of St. Mark's, Venice, is now exhibited in London.

Casts of two large and elaborate bas-reliefs of "The Passage of the Red Sea," by the late Mr. Gailey, of Rome, have been offered to and accepted by the South Kensington Museum. One of these remarkable works was, it will be remembered, in the International Exhibition.

On Art and Artists, by Leslie Walker, is announced as the first of the whole of the pictures by this artist forming the "Victoria Cross Gallery."

A small picture, called "The Death of St. Joseph," exhibited for the first time in public at the Fine Art Society's, has been brought to engrave as such, and which all London was by placards informed would be sold by Mr. Christie, in King-street, St. James's, and up by auction the other day at Paris and realised to some English bidder the magnificent sum of 1240*l.*—something under £50!

MUSIC.

The success of Mr. Macfarren's new opera, "She Stoops to Conquer," is a triumph not only to this admirable composer but to the English school of music, of which he is one of the greatest representatives. That it is a genuine success is proved by the fact that to which we have been so long accustomed—a compound of French, Italian, German, and English. It is not a "pasticcio," but in the words. Mr. Macfarren's style is drawn from "the well of English undefiled," and he has proved that he can, as he ever contrary, well established and enriched by all the resources of modern art. In this respect the libretto, which is compounded of the dramatic work of the composer, "Robin Hood!" the difference between them being that if the one is a picture in oils the other is in water-colours. Mr. Macfarren has also shown that he is less characteristic of the England of the eighteenth. In the subjects of the two operas—the one founded on Goldsmith's delightful play—one of the most genial and delightful comedies ever written, and the other—"Robin Hood"—one of the richest since the days of Shakspeare—a comedy abounding in humour, and a romance full of poetry. Mr. Macfarren's first opera stage has been intrusted to the veteran Fitzball, who, if he has not produced a work of the highest literary merit, has proved the fact of a writer of great experience in this walk of dramatic literature. It is not a lofty one; but still it demands greater skill and ingenuity than are possessed by the common run of the persons who are denominated "playwrights." Mr. Fitzball has preserved with tolerable completeness not only the plot and incidents, but much of Goldsmith's delightful ex cause and sterling humour. It is true that he has made some blunders—one, especially, of a serious kind, for he has ruined one of the most important characters of the drama—the Landlord, Tom Tiverton, by making him Hardcastle's cousin. Assuming it necessary to simplify the piece, he has left out Mrs. Hardcastle, while he has attempted to preserve the underplot of Hastings and Constance Neville, of which Mrs. Hardcastle's plots and intrigues form an essential part; and in doing so he has fathered upon Hardcastle much of the meanness, baseness, and falsehood which in the comedy belong to his thoroughly unsuitable spouse. The character is thus rendered a jumble of absurd inconsistencies. Had the underplot been retained, Mrs. Hardcastle ought to have been retained also; but this might have been turned to good account even as a musical part; but perhaps the better way would have been to leave out the underplot altogether. An opera can scarcely be made too simple in its subject and plot, and the delightfully comic incident of the hero mistaking his mistress's father for an innkeeper, and hereby hangs the whole comedy, would have made quite sufficient for a comic opera. With this fault, in our opinion a great one, the libretto of Mr. Macfarren's opera is much superior to the common run of opera librett. It is gay and amusing, with just as much of the sentimental as is necessary to create interest in the main interest. The music (as we have already said) is throughout English. It is, moreover, full of melody, and shows that the composer has been inspired by the spirit and gaiety of the subject. To speak in detail of the beauties would be to enumerate almost every piece, every air, concerted scene, and chorus in the opera; for there is not one of them that do not possess some characteristic trait worthy of notice. But we can only point out a few of the things which have made the greatest impression on the public. In the first place, the opening chorus of the village group, invited with the country people engaged in rural sports—a scene remarkable not only for the beauty of the composition, but for the effect, in its spirit and variety of the music. The song which Tony Lumpkin sings, with a chorus of his merry associates, is a gem of pure English melody, and the dance-tunes are full of the quaint polity of the olden time. The scene where the two ladies meet and arrive at the Hall, and begin calling about them, to the amusement of the Squire, whom they take for "mine host" of the inn, is delightful with music, which really heightens its comic effect, especially the trio formed by the Squire's description of his wife's favourite battle, constantly interrupted by the impatient exclamations of his guests. The introduction of the bashful boy to the ladies's presence is a truly comic piece, and forms the finale to the first act. Equally good is the scene between Marlow, when the latter appears as the barmaid: it is a duet which contains much humour, and is full of melody and beauty. The finale to the second act is one of those masterly and highly wrought pieces of concerted music which remind us of Mozart and Rossini. It is a scene full of dramatic action, rising to a climax of animation at the end. It is in this scene that the most beautiful morceau in the whole opera is introduced—the four-part song, "The Contrast," which Mr. Lloyd, Miss Julia Pyne's charming piece of pure vocal harmony, not surpassed in beauty by any composition of its class which we have had the fortune to hear. There are, scattered through the opera, many songs and ballads sung by the principal performers—the closing words of Tony's drinking-ruler finale the single. Some of them are commonplace enough, but most of them have the injurious effect of interrupting the action of drama. Such things, however, will be dispensed with in the English opera, for it is on them that the profit of the published music mainly depends. We do not blame the English composers, and lead to caution which he has not the power to break through. Some of the songs, however, are charming. Miss Julia Pyne's favourites in the drawing-room.

The opera is from the stage and is performed in a manner which does honour to the management of the theatre. The "cast" of the piece is as follows:—Miss Julia Pyne is Miss Hardcastle, and looks, acts, and sings the part charmingly. Mr. Harrison does every justice to the character of Marlow, as an actor as well as a singer. In the part of Constance Neville Mr. Weiss is quite perfect for it is not in his line, and (as has already been said) has been spoiled by the author. Mr. Fitzball has had good sense and judgment enable him to give an intelligent reading of the character, and his singing is often very effective. Mr. Lyall is a comic and amusing Tony Lumpkin; and the parts of Hastings and Miss Neville receive justice from Mr. Thorpe and Miss Cowell. Mrs. Aynsley Cook is very good as Mrs. Hardcastle, but contain some pretty music, which is exceedingly well sung. In respect to the mounting of the piece, considering that it is the second series of the stage, the theatre maintains its high and well-deserved reputation.

The MONDAY POPULAR CONCERT of this week, excellent altogether, presented some features of peculiar interest. One was a lovely Trio in C minor, for pianoforte, violin, and violoncello, by Mozart, composed in the year 1788. It was a piece called a "Divertimento" (a term now obsolete) for one of Mozart's pupils, Countess Thun. It was a delightful production, in the form prevalent at the time he began his career, but in no sense behind the age, when compared with the majority of the modern style, but full of grace and beauty, and redolent of the genius of Mozart. It was beautifully played, the principal violin being Mr. Viewtemps, the violoncello Mr. Paque, and the piano Mr. Charles Harper. The other remarkable feature of the concert was Mdme. Arabella Goddard's magnificent performance of Beethoven's sonata in B flat, op. 22, one of the earliest and at the same time one of the finest works of the great master. Mdme. Goddard also played (with Mr. Viewtemps and M. Paque) Mendelssohn's well-known trio in D minor. The vocalists were Miss Banks and Mr. Santley.

There was a morning performance of "FAUST" at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE on Monday last, and the house was crowded to the doors. Gounod's masterpiece was found exceedingly attractive for juvenile visitors and families reading at a distance. There is to be another on Monday the 25th inst. The last evening performance of this opera will take place on the 5th of March, when it is announced that the winter season will terminate.

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS.—The management have permitted but a brief run to poetical comedy, as "Romance," successful as it has been, is already superseded by a prose drama, skilfully constructed and well written, but with a melancholy ending. By Mr. Watts Phillips. The title of the new piece is "Paul's Return," a title so far objectionable that it discloses the secret of the mystery at the very first. Perhaps, however, to the principle of expectation rather than of surprise, we owe the interest with which the audience followed this supposed central piece to the story of the play. In this we trace a number of effective theatrical touches and some not unfamiliar situations, dramatic incidents, frequent not only in French but English plays. In fact, they form the common stock of what may be called the sensational drama, room drama, in general which deals in matters wholly conventional, and has already created a special class of actors for its delineation, and, in fact, has its own school. In the craft, however, filled many parts in this domestic and fashionable style of drama with considerable credit. We have not the slightest objection to mystery, to suspense of long standing, who has sustained the credit of his firm by the exercise of those qualities which he has not been slow to display on occasion of which he suffers much remorse. Of course, we require to know who is to be the victim in the end, and that rectification is somehow connected with Paul's return. Paul is the son of a wealthy but capricious commission merchant, who has adventured as a gold-digger in San Francisco, and serves to introduce us to a new set of scenes. Mr. Watts Phillips, who sufficiently established his claims on the occasion, Paul has been successful at the diggings; he has had a romantic experience, has returned to England with his earnings, and left him to make Bruisington, Sir Paul's native town, his future home. This leaves his way home as he best could, without means. This leaves Paul to turn up under the name of Abel Honeydew (Mr. George Fisher), as the suitor of Beatrice, the daughter of Goldsworthy (Miss Kate Saville), on whom Paul had set his own affections. Honeydew, the rich money-lender, would purchase the hand without the heart of the young lady by a loan to the merchant sufficient to replace the fortune of his niece, Blanche Wilton (Miss Rebecca Powell). The papers relative to this young lady's account with her guardian Paul has in his custody, having encountered Spencer Wilton, her father, abroad, who had confided the precious documents to his keeping. The reader will guess the rest. Honeydew is checkmated just when he thinks he has won the game, and is made to disgorge the wealth he ran away with, and give up fair Beatrice also to honest and persevering Paul. Blanche also is united to a lover, her cousin Herbert (Mr. H. Forrester), a disinherited young Lieutenant. There are other characters representing members of the Goldsworthy family, which are intended to the talents of Mr. H. Marston and Messrs. Mellon and Sexton. These were all well and distinctively played; but the greatest credit is due to Mr. Yardley, Mrs Saville, and Miss Fowell, who supported their respective roles with well-practised talent and consistence of purpose. The scene of action in the saloon on mansion of Goldsworthy, near Richmond; and a view of the Thames at Richmond forms a great attraction to the piece. The success of the new play was unquestioned, the author was called for, but being in Paris, could not appear.

Gretna.—On Monday a version of Mr. Mosenthal's "Deborah" was produced with very great success. The adapter of the play has not thought it necessary to add to the title of his piece that the whole now stands in its primitive simplicity. The management has shown laudable courage in placing so grim and severe a drama as poetry on its hands, and also in evident aim and desire to elevate the character of the performances at this theatre. No house was overcrowded on the occasion, but during the evening an extraordinary state of excitement prevailed, which indicated the highest interest in the experiment. The play was carefully mounted, the scenes being new and the costumes brilliant. The part of the colossal Yorkess was powerfully sustained by Miss Fanny Herrad, who gradually won on the audience until she completely subdued them by the spell of her acting. Some applause was delivered, and the concluding scenes were rendered with so much pathos that the house was completely hushed. Miss Herrad's delivery of the actress was called three times before the audience and greeted with boisterous applause. It must be confessed that the other characters, Jacob Isaacs, as Joseph, her lover, acted with great feeling portion. Mr. Addison as Hannah, the Jewess, and Mr. Hamilton, daughter, for whom the outcast Deborah is deserted, sustained the part with admirable grace and feeling. The action was relieved by a ballet in celebration of the wedding of the daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kean—The progress of Mr. and Mrs Charles Kean through the Australian colonies, from their first reception in Sydney has equalled that which they had already met with in Melbourne. Addresses were read to them at the Prince of Wales's Opera House, and they have also been complimented by the Governor-in-Chief, Sir John Young. Their engagement at Sydney is for eight consecutive nights. The first will probably realise a clear £600. After the 26th of January they were to return to Melbourne, and there remained for about a month, before a subscription was opened for one of the nights' representations. On the 20th of February they were to re-appear at Melbourne, remain until March 5, and then proceed to Hobart Town. Another £500 was offered to be raised for readings at Brisbane, the capital of Queensland, but the offer was not accepted. Mr. and Mrs C. Kean have, so far, no reason to regret their visit to the antipodes.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

Professor Tyndall's eighth lecture on "Experimental Optics," which was given on Thursday the 11 inst., was devoted to further illustrations and explanations of the phenomena of colour. The power of the molecules of the eye to any particular colour is blunted by exposure to that colour was shown by the ordinary experiment on a coloured wafer. The eye was fixed on the complementary colour; a red disk gave a green wafer, while blue produced orange, and so on. Another experiment, in addition to the facts that yellow and blue light, when combined, produce white light, while the combination of pure yellow and blue rays of light form white, was stated to be due to the former not being pure whites. The analogy of the combination of light and sound, in relation to the wave theory, was pointed out and illustrated by a series of tuning-forks, &c., and the properties of coloured media were stated to be due to actual mechanical impressions made by the vibrations on the ætherial and other media. White light was that ray which appeared to us low as 8 and as high as 30,000 vibrations in a second, they were in the case of the vibrations producing different colours, each one, represented by a certain number of millions. It was stated that the spectrum actually consisted of the three primary colours, red, yellow, and blue, and not of seven, as Newton, the English, and the late Dr. Young had asserted to be the case. The rays of the solar spectra, telling that the red rays (as those of heat) produced the great effects of warmth, whereas the blue rays, possessing the greatest force, the immense influence on the progress of vegetation. By means of a solution of sulphate of quinine, uranium glass, &c., the less understood sense of the rays of spectrum, which possess great chemical power, although invisible to the human eye. The lecture was concluded with an account of the phosphorence—viz., the property which some bodies possess of absorbing and emanating a portion of the light which falls upon them. It was stated by the final experiment was the exhibition of this beautiful spectacle, that of the phosphorescence of the diamond, which was considered to be the study of the luminous properties of the stone.

Professor Wanklyn, F.R.S.E. (of the London Institution), gave the Friday evening discourse on the 12th inst., on "Milk and Other Animal Bodies" (i.e., the artificial production of the substances commonly got from the animal and vegetable kingdoms). He began by stating that various organic products lying on a tray before him, pointing out how different they were in properties, some liquids, others solids; some hard crystalline bodies; others soft; some white or colourless, others most brilliantly coloured, and employed in the last account as dyes; some poisonous, others highly nutritious, pungent, or acid; some without marked physiological action on man. Notwithstanding these differences, they were all produced from one and the same source—viz., the living plant. They were all produced from one and the same source—viz., the living plant. They were composed only of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen, some of them consisting of carbon and hydrogen only; others of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, or nitrogen; and others, again, of all four. To call to pieces any one of the substances of these classes was easy enough—to obtain, for some sugar, extracted carbon and water from it, remarking that it was only necessary to abstract the water and they had the carbon in a state of purity into its ultimate elements—carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen. More than fifty years ago chemists could put to pieces any organic substance, and separate it into carbon; but not before the year 1828 had they succeeded in putting together in the laboratory any one of the products of the living plant. Up to that time it was considered that compounds which were produced by the agency of life were, as to a certain extent, living bodies. The artificial production of the body was considered as those of a living animal, and required for its complete disposal of this nation, and hence the great philosophical interest attached to the synthesis of Organic Substances. The first step in this direction that it was in vain that we took 72 oz. of carbon, 11 oz. of hydrogen, and 88 oz. of oxygen (the proportions of these elements in sugar), and mixed and heated them together: no sugar could be got in that way. In order to form organic bodies a much more roundabout way was necessary, and one which was only very slowly found out how to do this. The chief achievements in the way of the synthesis of organic bodies were the making of urea in 1828, of formic acid in 1855, of acetic acid in 1845, and of fatty matters in 1854 by Kolbe, 1861. Within the last ten years (1854 to 1864) "transformation by series," or what is the formation of simple substances by Berthelot, Wurtz, Frankland, Fridel, Berthelot, Beilstein, and many other chemists have made important contributions to the art of building up organic bodies. It was ten years, but we have no space for the purely chemical details. We must not, however, pass over the formation of organic bodies by the agency of life himself by the action of carbonic acid upon solanum-oleig, which was repeated in the presence of Professor Faraday, Professor Miller, and Professor Odling in the chair.

Professor Frankland began a course of twelve lectures "On the Metallic Elements," on Saturday last, Feb. 13, with a few introductory remarks upon the broad distinctions between the metals (now numbering fifty-one) and the thirteen non-metallic elements; 1, oxygen; 2, hydrogen; 3, nitrogen; 4, sulphur being opaque, and in the facility with which they conduct heat and electricity; 5, fluorine; 6, iodine, when combined with metals; 7, bromine; 8, chlorine; 9, selenium; 10, arsenic; 11, boron; 12, silicon; 13, carbon; and 14, phosphorus; the latter following carbon in the order of the quantity of necessary with that of ironstone, and the combustibility of phosphorus in the air. The lecturer then proceeded to the consideration of the silver-coloured, soft, and ductile metal, potassium, which was first obtained by Sir Humphry Davy in 1807, by the decomposition of potash by the agency of the galvanic battery. Potassium was found to be a constituent of all the above-mentioned qualities. The non-metal carbon occupies a metallic intermediate position, combining chemically with oxygen to form do not form bases with oxygen. Nevertheless, with few exceptions, it is the most ready to distinguish from the rest, as it is the most widely diffused in animal from a plant. As a rule, metals expand by heat more than non-metallic bodies, and consequently are less dense or heavier. Diminution of sensible, but this is not the case with lead, and consequently is also more malleable than the rest. The metals and non-metallic substances are next applied to many important uses in the arts and manufactures, bridge, Armstrong guns, boiler rivets, &c. Metals differ among themselves in regard to expansion by heat.—The melting points of metals extend through nearly the entire ranges of temperature at our command. By means of the intense cold produced by ether and the condensed carbonic acid in the form of snow, mercury was solidified; but it became liquid when put into icy-cold water. On the other hand, it required the intense heat of fifty coffee's Crowe's battery in the electric light to fuse the metal tridium. The volatility of metals was illustrated by the fact that mercury boils at a low temperature between the values points of the electric light lamp.

Professor Tyndall's ninth lecture "On Experimental Optics" given on Tuesday last (Feb. 16), was devoted to the consideration of the nature of the present view of philosophers as to the physical constitution of the sun and its atmosphere. Various coloured flames were produced by placing in a large gas flame, intensified by the blowpipe—e.g., yellow from common salt (chloride of sodium), green from salt of copper, and red from strontium. Pieces of several of the metals themselves were then placed between the glowing carbon points of the electric lamp, whereupon most beautiful rays of colour—yellow, green, blue, &c.—were produced. After explaining the construction of Kirchhoff's spectroscope, Dr. Tyndall first exhibited the spectrum of the electric light and then the spectra of various metals, showing their characteristic bands: sodium, a bright yellow; copper, green; zinc, blue and red; lithium, crimson; and so on. Each of these spectra was formed of luminous rays, and, finally, a mixture of various metals gave a spectrum exhibiting distinctly all the characteristic bands. The lecturer then proceeded to explain how we obtain the spectra of the sun and the fixed stars. The spectrum of the electric light was then compared with that of the sun, and it was shown that the former lacked the blue and violet rays. In addition Dr. Tyndall referred to the fact that the solar spectrum, when closely examined, showed a great number of dark lines, which were at first noticed by Wollaston, but which had been named "Fraunhofer's lines," after their most profound investigator. The origin of these lines is now discovered to be the power which a colour possesses of eliminating its own colour from the spectrum. The sun as now considered to consist of a liquid nucleus surrounded by a flaming atmosphere. These coloured rays, which this atmosphere itself can absorb, are extinguished, and consequently appear as dark lines in the spectrum. In addition to the fact that the sun's nucleus is a bright metal would appear in place of every dark line of Fraunhofer. Hence, it is concerned that neither these characteristic bands are replaced by dark lines in the solar spectrum are proved by the following experiment, which was performed in the following order:—

Mr. J. Frankwitch, F.R.S., will give the Friday evening discourse on Feb. 26, when he will explain the Mode of Ascertaining the Presence of Absorbed Gases, Smoke, &c., their Geological Position and History."

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CHESSICUS.—We believe your computation to be erroneous, but have not sufficient data at present to form a decided opinion.

J. T.—The attack in your game should be conducted in the manner pointed out at page 147, Vol. XLIV. of this publication.

J. P. M.—Your solution of No. 308 is correct.

DERWENT.—Your solution of Problem No. 311 is correct.

J. B. R.—It shall be examined.

J. B. T.—It shall be examined.

W. H. W.—Your solution of No. 311 is correct.

A SCOTT.—See replies to "J. E. of Aberdeen," in our last number.

J. E. of Aberdeen.—The Chess Column of the Illustrated News is a forum open to everybody who may have a desire to communicate with the public, and we are not responsible for the views expressed by our correspondents. If Black had interposed his Queen at move 6c you could have replied.

J. E. of Aberdeen.—The Chess Column of the Illustrated News is a forum open to everybody who may have a desire to communicate with the public, and we are not responsible for the views expressed by our correspondents. If Black had interposed his Queen at move 6c you could have replied.

DERWENT.—Your solution of Problem No. 311 is correct.

J. B. T.—It shall be examined.

W. H. W.—Your solution of No. 311 is correct.

A SCOTT.—See replies to "J. E. of Aberdeen," in our last number.

J. E. of Aberdeen.—The Chess Column of the Illustrated News is a forum open to everybody who may have a desire to communicate with the public, and we are not responsible for the views expressed by our correspondents. If Black had interposed his Queen at move 6c you could have replied.

J. P. M.—Your solution of No. 308 is correct

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN. CHOIR. The celebrated Hymn, for the Piano-forte. Price 3s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S DANISH NATIONAL HYMN. Price 3s. "One of the most effective and best arranged pieces of this popular composer."—Musical Standard.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S LAST NEW PIECES. Rondo, Sicilian Pastoral. Price, 3s. each. "Merrily, merrily over the scene. Fine 3s. 3 closes to be a duet. Price 3s. each."
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN SOLO-PIECES. No. 1. Hesitation Waltz. Price 3s. each. No. 2. Last rose of Summer. No. 3. Bells of Scotland. No. 4. Life let us cherish. No. 5. Ye banks and braes bonnie Doon. No. 6. The harp that once through Tara's halls
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES. "This is decidedly one of the most tasteful and best Instruction Book for the Pianoforte we have seen."—Reader. J. WILLIAMS, Holborn-bars, and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S GEORGIANA VALSE, Illustrated by J. BLANDARD. Price 4s. Solo and Duet. Orchestral Parts, 2s. 6d. JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars, and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S CHRISTMAS QUADRILLE. Price, Solo, 3s.; Duet, 3s.; Septet, 2s. Orchestra, 2s. 6d. Illustrated by BLANDARD. Dance Music Books and instrumental Supplements.—London: WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S DIANA VALSE. Illustrated by BLANDARD. Price 4s. net. Duet, 4s. net. Orchestra, 2s. net.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S REAPER VALSE. Illustrated by J. BLANDARD. Price 4s. net. Duet, 4s. net. Orchestra, 2s. net.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S ABERDEEN GALOP. Illustrated by BLANDARD. Price 4s. net. Duet, 4s. net. Orchestra, 2s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S TOPSY-TURVY GALOP. Price 3s. Duet, 3s. Orchestra, 2s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

KUHE'S FANTAISIE DE CONCERT on "Auld Robin Gray." "Kuhe Ami." "Coming thro' the rye." Price 4s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

KUHE'S MY LODGING IS ON THE COLD GROUND. For the Piano. Price 4s. Brilliant yet effective.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S THE CAPTIVE GREEK GIRL. Transcribed for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE FRIEND'S GIFT.—A Collection of the most Popular Tunes arranged in a very easy and simple manner for the Pianoforte. Price 1s. 6d. Post-free, 18 stamps. Book One is now ready.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside; and Holborn-bars.

THE SPIRIT OF THE OCEAN, Waltz, by the Composer of "Ocean Pearls," "Ocean Spray," "Ocean Waves," &c. Very Easy; Music by JOHN BARNARD. Price 3s.—J. WILLIAMS, Holborn-bars, and 123, Cheapside.

HANDICAP GALOP by ERNEST LEGRAND, price 3s. Solo or Duet. This galop is now performed by all the military bands in the United Kingdom.
London: WILLIAMS, Holborn-bars, and Cheapside.

THE PICKET OF THE POTOMAC. The beautiful and touching words of the song were found in the pocket of one of the Confederate volunteers shot on the picket line on the Potomac from a rifle-sound which on "picket duty."
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

H. MONTGOMERY'S BEL DEMONIO VALSE. Price 3s. Orchestra, 2s. 6d. Played nightly at the Theatre Royal, Leicester.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE BOLD MARCO, Sung by M. Faliero in the popular Opera "Bel Demonio." Written by J. MONTGOMERY. Price 3s. London: WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S SABRA VALSE, Nightly played at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane. Price 3s. Orchestra, 2s. 6d.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

G. A. MACFARREN'S LITTLE CLARINA'S GALOP, Illustrated, in Four Parts, 2s. 6d. each; Septet, 2s.; Orchestra, 2s. 6d. Such a beautiful ground picturesque. The name of Clarina is the best compliment that could be paid to the Galop.
London: WILLIAMS, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.
MUSIC FOR HARVEST THANKSGIVING. THE HOLY MOUNT, THE MOUNT OF THE LORD. Sacred Song. By Samuel Reindel for Piano. By W. H. CALLCOTT. Both the Words and Music of this Song are by SAMUEL REINDEL. Price 3s. net.
COME UNTO ME. "They Shall Hunger No More." "The Lord is my Shepherd." "Sweet Hour of Prayer." By Miss Mary Mark. Each 3s. net.
HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP. Sacred Song. By F. Boscovitz. 3s. net.
I KNOW THAT MY REDEEMER LIVETH. Air and Chorus, by the Rev. F. CORNEY, Hon. Sec. &c.

SACRED PIANO MUSIC.
MOZART'S KYRIE (Twelfth Mass), arranged for "First Recital." "Now Sinketh the Sun" and "Ye Banks and Braes" (Auld Lang Syne). By C. WEST RIDGE.
"GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES." "GOD BLESS THE PRINCESS OF WALES," with Additional Verses. By Miss LILLIAN ADAMS. Each 3s. net.
Latest Pieces. 3s. Four-part Song, 12. Four-part waltzes, 2d.
LIST OF DESCRIPTIONS OF THE TUNES. Post-free. Lists gratis.
THE LIQUID GEM. New Song, by the Composer of "Her Bright Smile Haunts Me Still." Especially suitable for Encores.
KATHLEEN AROON. Song. By the Composer of "When the Heart is Young."
CHRIST AND HIS TIMES. Illustrated Historical Lectures on the Chronological Catalogue of Vocal Music, recently published, 1s. net.
ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S PIANOFORTES, Cottage Pianos, from £25 to £45. Drawings gratis and post-free.
ROBERT COCKS AND CO., New Publication-street, W. Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Emperor Napoleon III. Agents for India—Messrs. ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and Co., Calcutta.

CHEAPEST MUSIC REPOSITORY IN ENGLAND. All the New Music half-price and post-free. Subscription, one guinea per annum. Catalogues gratis and post-free.—CHAPPELL & Co., 50, New Bond-street.

WHEN I AM FAR AWAY FROM HOME. Sung by the Christy's Minstrels with enthusiastic applause at all their Concerts in London and the provinces. Price 3s. DALCOIS, 8, Baldwin-place, W.

ARTHUR LLOYD'S SONG OF SONGS. Just published. The most popular Drawing-room Comic Song ever published. Illustrated. 3s. net. 30th Thousand.
DALCOIS, 8, Baldwin-place, W.

IT'S JUST AS WELL TO TAKE THINGS IN A QUIET SORT OF WAY. HARRY STODDER'S Intensely comical Drawing-room Comic Song. Illustrated with twenty comic designs. 3s. net. 30th Thousand.
DALCOIS, 8, Baldwin-place, W.

THE KIDDLE-A-WINK GALOP. By the Composer of the "Heron-Square Quadrille." A Cooking Galop, liquid everywhere. Price 3s.
D. ALCOIS, 8, Baldwin-place, W.

NEW MUSIC.

THE PUNCH AND JUDY QUADRILLES, on Popular Comic Tunes. By H. S. ROBERTS. "Decidedly the merriest and most danceable set that has been published for many years." Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season." Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. net.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdlle. Rosse at the Crystal Palace and other Concerts, with enthusiastic applause. Price 3s.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

THE "TREBELLI" POLKA-MAZURKA. By ARTHUR LEMAIRE. Played at all the Concerts of the season with eminent success. Embellished with an exquisite Portrait of Mdme. Trebelli. Price 4s. net.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A beautiful and plaintive melody, treated with remarkable grace and originality. Price 4s. net. Illustrated in Colours.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. In a vigorous, dashing, and thoroughly effective style, in the style of the "Tarantella." Price 4s.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANDANGO. One of the most original and charming pieces by this successful and deservedly popular composer. Price 4s.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE COEUR. A very spirited and brilliant Waltz, the most popular since the celebrated Skaters' Waltz of Waldteufel. Price 4s. net.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA JOYEUSE. Played by the Composer at the Pianoforte recitals with enormous success. "A melody, a rich and harmonious accompaniment, a fine peroration." Price 4s.—ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ECLIENNE. "Sydney Smith's Harp Eolienne" is a most powerful and eminently pleasing piece ever written. Price 4s.
ARDOUIN and PARRY, 13, Hanover-square.

MUSICAL BOXES, by Nicole, of Genève. The attention of purchasers is directed to these superior Musical Instruments, which play the most popular airs of the day. Prices from 3 guineas. 12 pieces, Overture forms from 12 to 36 guineas. Packed free. Carriage paid to London. Nicole Frères, 21 to 24, Pall-mall, London. Manufactory, Genève. Nicole's fantaisie playing three tunes, beautifully-painted tops, £23 12s. 6d. or 24 guineas. Nicole's Musical Boxes, playing 8 tunes, 4 airs, 2 dances, 2 overtures, £15 15s. Nicole's Musical Boxes, playing 12 tunes, £21. Packed and sent carriage paid to London.—ADDISON and LUCAS, 2-3, Regent-street, W.

DRIZE-MEDAL MODEL FLUTES, cylinder head, 8 keys, in case, 3 guineas. Drize-medal 7 guinea flageolet, rosewood cylinder head, silver or wood, with old or new system of fingering, in case, 3 guineas. Drize-medal 7 guinea flageolet, rosewood cylinder head, silver or wood, with old or new system of fingering, in case, 3 guineas. Drize-medal 7 guinea flageolet, rosewood cylinder head, silver or wood, with old or new system of fingering, in case, 3 guineas. All examined and proved by Mr. Benjamin Wood, Professor of the Flageolet, and Mr. Richard Carte, Professor of the Flute. Illustrated Catalogues gratis and post-free.—CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street, W. 18, Orchard-street, Portman-square, W. 67 and 68, Cheapside, E.C. A strong, German silver keys, £4 4s. and £5 5s. 12 keys, £6 6s. Rosewood, 8 keys, £3 3s. 12 keys, £4 4s. 12 keys, £5 5s. Packed free.

ADDISON and LUCAS'S MUSICAL LIBRARY.—Subscription, One, Two, and Three Guineas.

BUTLER'S BRASS BAND INSTRUMENTS, 2nd-class, Cornopeans, Tenor-horns, Baritones, Trombones, &c., are all manufactured by the Artizans employed by Messrs. Butler, and are sold at Wholesale Prices. Lists free. Every instrument. Carriage paid to £5 5s. Manufactory, 4, Princes-street, Hanover-square, London, W.

THE PRETTIEST GIFT FOR A LADY is a Gold Bracelet Watch, jewelled in 18 holes, by a Swiss Gentleman, at £10 10s. Recorded at the Exhibition for cheapness of production. Sent free.—Address, WATCHMAKER, 3, Cranbourn-alley.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—O. HOOPER, Artist in Hair. Solid Gold Lockets for Hair, from 4s. each. Hair Bracelets, 10s. 6d. each. Brooches, Rings, and Ornaments in Hair. 19, New Bond-street.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST in HAIR, MR. DEWDNEY begs to inform Ladies or Gentlemen that he has REMOVED from Leicester-square to 25, Rupert-street, Haymarket, where he continues to execute Hair Jewellery in the same style as heretofore, at one half the usual charge. A beautiful variety of the newest designs in Bracelets, Lockets, Brooches, Rings, Studs, Crosses, &c., always on hand. Hair dressed for parties, &c.—25, Rupert-street, Haymarket.

THE PERFECTED PHOTOGRAPHED ON IVORINE.—The new discovery. By means of sodium, the Ivorine is rendered perfectly transparent, and the most delicate and minute expression the most perfect specimens of miniature photography. Ivorine is the only substance which is glass to give the effect of ivory. Sold by all Photographic Dealers, Brooches, Lockets, or any kind of jewellery, or for framing. Specimens may be seen at the Photographic Exhibition, 168, New Bond-street.—ADDISON and CO., 210, Regent-street, W.

MARION'S HERALDIC DECALCOMANIE, for Stamping Arms, Crests, Monograms, Addresses, Initials, &c., on Paper, Envelopes, Leather, Linen, &c., without the aid of a press, and wishing to be included in the next publication, which is nearly ready, should send their Arms, Crests, &c., without delay, as little delay as possible. A specimen and list of prices sent post-free.
MARION and CO., 22, Soho-square, London.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, 9s. 6d.; Pocket Telescope, in substantial shagreen case, with two draws, 5in. long, 9s. 6d. Opera's Mouse, &c., excellent toys at 1s. each. Sportsman's Telescope, 3 draws, 2ft. 6in. long, 21s. Pocket Telescope, 3 draws, 6in. long, 5s. 6d. Opera Glasses, 3 draws, 5s. 6d. Marine Glasses, 42s. Compasses, 1s. Pocket Microscope, 2s. 6d. Pocket Barometer, 5s. 6d. Thermometer, 1s. 6d. Pocket Lens, 1s. Drawing Instruments, 1s. 6d. Pocket Compass, 1s. 6d. Pocket Sextant, 5s. 6d. Opera Glasses, 3 draws, 5s. 6d. Field Glasses, 3 draws, 5s. 6d. Spectacles, 1s. 6d. Pocket Lens, 1s. Pocket Microscope, 2s. 6d. Pocket Barometer, 5s. 6d. Thermometer

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1247.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

DANISH SUFFERING AND ENGLISH SUCCOUR.

A SUBSCRIPTION has been set on foot, under the auspices of the Marquis of Clanricarde, for the purpose of providing relief for the sick and wounded of the Danish army. A few timely and earnest words in support of it will awaken, we are confident, an appropriate echo in the hearts of our readers.

The simplest plea of suffering always tells powerfully upon the British public. Reliable information that any portion of the human family is wearing away precious life in the endurance of pain or privation let loose upon it in the performance of duty, and a reasonable assurance that money will be of any avail to mitigate the evil, are, thank God! the only keys needed in this country to open, for purposes of kindly aid, the purses of all who either have, or who try to persuade themselves that they have, something to spare. The moan of distress never fails to evoke sympathy and help as soon as, and as far as, it can make itself audible; and there would seem to have grown up among the well-to-do classes of this kingdom a craving to dispense some part at least of their substance in alleviating the lot of those whose circumstances have been less fortunate than their own. A really urgent case, therefore, needs only to be stated to attract towards itself all the assistance which pecuniary liberality can furnish.

But the sick and wounded of the Danish army have a far stronger claim upon us than that of suffering, however severe it may be. The miseries and anguish they endure have been inflicted upon them in the faithful discharge of patriotic duty. There is no occasion to sift the right from the wrong in the political complications which have brought about the collision of arms in the Duchy of Schleswig before we can give our hearty sympathy to the Danish soldier. He, at all events, was in his right place when calamity overtook him, doing the work which he was pledged to do, resisting the progress of invasion upon the soil of his Fatherland. His cheerfulness, his courage, his unfaltering observance of discipline, his ready acceptance of whatever toils, dangers, and sacrifices military obligations might impose upon him, commend him in his hour of distress to our tenderest solicitude. The appeal comes to us from brave men who have heroically stood for the defence of their King and their country, and will therefore be sure to call forth a ready response.

But there are several other considerations besides the simpler ones to which we have above adverted, which will tend, so far as British feeling is concerned, to give cumulative force to the appeal. Be the political merits of the Dano-German quarrel what they may, it is clear enough that everything which the two great German Powers demanded of Denmark might have been obtained as certainly, probably as speedily, without bloodshed as with it. So far as the Danes had it in their power, they gave assurance that they would do all that had been formally required of them; and, last Austria and Prussia might hold Danish promises cheap, England, Russia, and Sweden offered themselves as sureties for the good faith of Denmark. All, therefore, that the Danish Government could constitutionally and honourably do to avert hostilities, it had done. But it was all to no purpose. The German Powers, for reasons which we will not stay to discuss, but which derived their force from the political state of Germany, and not from any insensibility of Denmark to the obligations laid upon her by her own engagements, resolved upon military intervention, and, with unseemliest haste, and in spite of the protests and remonstrances of other European Powers, rushed to the execution of it. It is no self-sought catastrophe, therefore, which now overwhelms the Danes—no

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: AUSTRIAN OUTPOST NEAR LOTTORF.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 216.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur publishes the full text of the commercial treaty between France and Italy concluded on the 11th of January, 1863, and ratified on the 19th of January, 1864. Imperial decrees follow, applying the treaty to Algeria and to the Italian Legation.

The Minister of the United States in Paris gave a ball on Monday to celebrate the anniversary of the birth of George Washington. Its attendance was numerous.

The Duke de Persigny, Grand Master of Public Ceremonies, in his sitting on Saturday last, decided Mr. Grote, of London, Foreign Associate, in the place of the late Lord Macaulay. M. Kervyn de Lettenhove, of Brussels, Correspondent in the section of General and Philosophical History, in the place of M. Mignet. M. Ernest Desjardins, of Dijon, Correspondent in the section of Politics, Administration, and Finance, in the place of M. Dunoyer.

M. Dumas has returned to Paris, and this week at Paris. At the first day's sale eighty-six sketches produced 85,000f. (£3400). The second day's sale was still more successful. The fifty-seven pictures which were originally exhibited in 1849, and afterwards at the Universal Exhibition of 1855, produced 200,000f. (£8000). The 100,000f., and 700tf., or in all, upwards of 25,000f. The total of the day's sale exceeded 30,000f. (£1200).

A bail for the benefit of the British Charitable Fund at Paris will be given at the Salle Herz, in the Champs Elysées, on the 29th instant. It will take place at the Grand Hotel, Boulevard des Capucines, and will be under the special patronage of the Empress Eugénie.

Enormous quantities of snow have fallen in the departments of Herault, Aude, Aveyron, Lozère, Gard, and Ardèche. The railway has been temporarily interrupted in consequence.

Upwards of 100 Mexican officers made prisoners by the French and residing at Havannah have given their pens in their adhesion to the Government of the Archduke Maximilian, and will probably return to Europe by the steamer which will leave on the 1st October. A telegram from New York states that Juarez had resigned his presidency in favour of Comonfort. It is evident that the letters of this and other leaders would give their allegiance to the French. "The empire," says the telegram, "was publicly solemnised at San Luis Potosi on Jan. 4."

SPAIN.

The Queen has distributed 120,000 reals (£1200) among different charitable institutions on the anniversary of her birth-day.

A bill for a new electoral law has been brought forward in the Cortes.

News from San Domingo has of late been contradictory. That the Spanish army is suffering frightfully from disease is admitted on all sides. We have this week received from the York reporting, on the authority of the Havannah correspondent of the Herald, that at a council of war Santana urged the Spanish General Commander to petition the Spanish Government to abandon the island. A despatch, however, from Madrid announces that Santana is appointed Commander-in-Chief of the army there, in place of General Vargas.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

A report that a conference for the settlement of the Dano-German dispute has been agreed to by Denmark, accepted by Austria and Prussia is confirmed by various telegraphic despatches. It is said to be proposed to hold the conference at Paris. The report is that the two German Powers have refused to suspend hostilities, but they are to be confined to Holstein.

The military movements by the Austrians and Prussians during the last week have been of a very important kind. The evacuation of actual operations has been looked for from Düppel, where the Danes are now entrenched. The Austrians have been anxious to see whether or not the invaders would march into Jutland, and so attempt to cut off Schleswig from Denmark. A telegram from Copenhagen, dated Friday, asserted that they had actually entered Jutland in considerable force, and that a battle was expected. Nothing of importance taking place. On Friday night the Prussian guards were at Kolding, a town just inside the Jutland frontier, a bridge over the Lesum having been cut to have come on the following day, as a telegram of Sunday says—

"The allied troops entered Jutland to-day. The Danes have in considerable force at Fredericia; but the value of this position is somewhat lessened by the fact that communication by railway is getting to Middlefort is interrupted by the Prussians, who have planted their batteries on the eastern bank of the Little Belt, and command the strait. The Danish transport-ships are thus compelled to go all round the island of Fünen to reach Copenhagen."

Before Düppel Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia takes supreme command, and has the Austrian troops under his orders. On the 18th instant the Prussian head-quarters are Gravenstein, where there is a palace (to which we give an Engraving on page 205, in which Baron Christian Scheel resides, and where he has their residence. About 30,000 Prussians are said to be in the neighbourhood. On Thursday week the Prussians crossed the Little Belt, upon which both German and Danish accounts agree that the Danes were at first repulsed, but were subsequently victorious. On Friday there was a similar affair occurred. Meanwhile, the invaders have successfully thrown a bridge over the Gudsaa, and have thrown across into the little peninsula called Broagerland, a movement which brings them into the rear of the Danish position at Düppel. The Danish ironclad, the Holt Kraake, attempted to destroy the bridge, but was replied to by the Prussian batteries, and was compelled to retire. All the line of the engagement, and the ironclad retiring, after four hours, with a shot through her funnel.

The Danish account of the engagement:—"The first gun from the battery proved that the vessel was only 1,000 yards off; and, as soon as the second gun was properly adjusted, their fire became exceedingly accurate; but the vessel replied with great precision. Several shells exploded on board the monitors from her after-deck. Her hails also flew over the battery, and caused great confusion. The guns, to the number of six, in fortifications, besides lodging in the roof of the magazine, demolishing the stairs leading to the upper gun-deck, and damaging the pieces several pontoons which were placed in the rear of the village. The firing lasted half an hour. The fort was struck by shells which passed towards the close by the battery, which, however, at length poured in a well-aimed volley from the starboard guns. The effect of this, and the steamer sank deeper in the water, her firing was inaccurate, and at last, after receiving, as was supposed, forty hails, she was observed to weigh her anchor and steam off. She was fired at by the other battery, and did not reply. It was thought that she had sustained much damage in the fore part; and that it was her intention to be at work at the pumps, it was clear that there was a considerable leak. As soon as the vessel was out of sight, the first battery also lay to, apparently to repair damages."

There was a slight engagement between the Prussians and the Danes in front of the position of Düppel on Monday. The German reports state that in the action on the 18th 200 men and five officers of Marshal Wrangel himself, made a reconnaissance, pushed in the Danish outposts, and captured a redoubt in front of the left wing of the Danish works. They subsequently retired, having lost only twenty-three men killed and wounded. They also took 120 Danish prisoners, with several colours. The Danish account says that, on Monday morning, a Prussian reconnoitring force, 200 strong, attacked the advanced line, drove in a regiment, and took possession of the village of Düppel. Another Danish regiment, supported by the artillery, then drove the Prussians out, and retook the redoubt. Later in the day the Prussians were dislodged from the village of Düppel by the fire of the Danish works, and that they "left many dead and wounded on the field." The telegram adds that the two Danish regiments which took part in the action had 200 men and many officers killed and wounded, and that the Danish army was in high spirits.

Interesting sketches of the Danish soldiery are contained in the recent letters of the Times correspondent with the Danish army. Of their excellency, so far as mere build and frame are concerned, no doubt, he says, need be entertained:—"Most of them are tall, stalwart youths, with white faces, ruddy cheeks, rich flaxen hair, the complexion of women combined with more than manly power of endurance. Many of the Danish regiments seem to make no impression upon them. We had encounters all the way from Schleswig; incessant manœuvres and marches about Schleswig and Eckernförde. Out in the country the snow lies on the roads in heavy drifts; but the men toiled through it, day and night; they stand on it, for aught I see, as if it were their own element. They are all cheerful, good humoured, fond of songs, and march to the tune of their favourite air. Den tapper Landsoldat. Their clothing is substantially good, and admirably suited to the climate. Their warm overcoats come up to their very ears, and fall down to their ankles. The infantry are armed with excellent rifles, the new gun of Reffye. Denmark has no rifle regiments. Prince Christian and his staff wear the uniform of the Prussian Jägers. Tall as all their foot soldiers are good shots with their rifles; still, they may not be a match for the Jäger and Prussian sharpshooters with whom they have to contend, whose swiftness of motion the Danes have had occasion to imitate, and whose dark shako has already had such terrible effect among their officers. The Danish cavalry are mounted on the greatest part of the horses brought by land from Schleswig to Jutland. The field artillery consists of thirty-two-pounder rifled guns, in light batteries, horses, both saddle and draught, are good, large sized, and somewhat heavy, but fit for the hardest work."

In a subsequent letter, dated 15th inst., from the Danish headquarters, he says:—"The extraordinary severity of the weather—to weather—such weather as seems, indeed, to have astonished all the southern encampments—continues unabated in these latitudes. After five or six days' incessant snowstorms, we had yesterday a raw, blighting, eastry wind. To-day we have a thaw and heavy rain. The streets in Sonderburg are in a sodden mush for the present; the town are cut up by deep ruts and holes; men and horses plunge knee deep, splashed and bespattered from head to foot and mire. I rode yesterday to the outposts, and saw a battalion of infantry crouching under each shelter or in the open air, wet and black, and after all them, cooking their dinners in a ditch with their kronaux fires, while about a hundred yards off the enemy were doing the same thing. Now, with the biting snow drifting right into their teeth, almost doubled up under the cruel wind, they are on duty in front.

Soaked, or nipped, or numbed as they may be, these Danes, he says, always evince the same cheerful, hearty, good humour. "Whatever they lie, they march as they are bidden, never, apparently, hasting any of the necessary halts, and when many pause to say to them, 'Their mutual good nature, their deference to their officers, their goodwill and courtesy to the men, never belie themselves on the road or in barracks, under canvas, or in the open air. They have, for instance, I believe, of a complaint against any of them. The fact is, they are all soldiers, and soldiers in arms, by nature, with the patience and dignity which stand them instead of the most efficient discipline in the army. Nothing can be more generous with a British Officer than which can only be safely shown to men who know their places. Their March is steady and silent, always in compact masses: I hardly have any variations in the pace even in the deepest snow, or heaviest rain, from the Danewerk. They seem to have a natural instinct for order; they keep their ranks as if by the eye alone. A shout, a whistle, or a word may be relied upon for stonewall firmness, I believe, for unshaken fortitude under the direst trials. Anything like dash and impetus, when the Prussian Jäger is at bay, I should think, to be unknown in them. There is, let me be understood, nothing like gloom or sullenness about the Danish soldiery. They laugh and sing. They indulge in a song at times, crack their jokes, and have their subdued talk to each other, as they march, or rest, or fall in. The Danish army, as a whole, they are a quiet, earnest, imperturbable set. To see one of their companies of skirmishers, or their horse artillery in the advance, or their saddles bolt upright, demure, mute, each with a china pipe hanging from his mouth, you would not take them to be the same part and parcel of their uniforms, is a remarkable sight—refreshing, odd-true.'

A very favourable opinion has been formed by the writer of the condition of the population. The well-being of the whole of the country, and still more of the two islands of Denmark, is everything, he affirms, that the most sanguine philanthropist need desire. In many districts there is no poor-rate and no poor.

Contrary to most other reports, the Times correspondent with the same affirms that the Danes like Schleswig as a part of Denmark. He says—"I had been so often and so generally assured by my German friends that the Danes detested the Duchy, that I thought it would be sure to pass over to the enemy, or even fire on their Danish officer, that I was rather surprised to find that not a few of the men from the Danewerk offered the best chances for mischief to the disaffected, and that not a single instance of desertion occurred, not one man missing, and as attentive to their duties, as ready to follow their officers when ordered to advance as the rest of the army of the 1st Regiment, who are enlisted among the Copenhagen citizens."

The Germans have begun the work of destroying the Danewerk. Hundreds of peasants and labourers are employed in the work of demolition.

The following letter, issued to Danish men-of-war to capture all German vessels. A blockade will be declared by Denmark of all ports on the coast of the Duchies, from the mouth of the Eyder upwards, from the 25th inst. The Danish cruisers have fallen in with some three or four vessels, and an embargo has been laid on the vessels of the one, a merchantman at Elsinore. The Danish frigate Jylland is now in the Baltic, and the Niels Juel is off Kiel. It is said that a Prussian corvette and two gun-boats are coming from the Mediterranean to join the Prussian squadron in the Baltic. The Austrian Government have ordered a squadron of twelve men-of-war to be equipped for service. The Austrian vessels are to consist of German merchantmen against the Danish cruisers. At the sitting of the Federal Diet on the 16th, it was resolved that an embargo should be placed on the ships of Denmark, and that the immediate issue of the embargo laid by the Danes on German shipping not belonging to the Duchies of Holstein and Lauenburg has been ordered by the schooner Venus, Captain Brache, which was lying at anchor in Yviesa.

A treaty has been signed between Prussia and Oldenburg granting to Prussia the right to form a naval station and other military establishments in the bay of Jahde. This treaty, which has long been opposed by the Liberal party in Oldenburg, appears to be a sign of combinations of great importance.

The following are the resolutions adopted by a majority of the commissioners on the affairs of Holstein and Lauenburg:—

1. That the High Federal Diet declares to the assembly upon the constitutional affairs of Holstein and Lauenburg to propose a further report with all speed concerning the execution in those duchies of the Saxon act that was arriving at a decision upon the claims that have been put forward. The committee, in pursuance of this request, will take as basis the Treaty of July 8, 1852.

2. The conference of Ministers held in Wurzburg last week agreed to the proposition of Saxony that the minor States should be united in a league for the purpose of forming a contingent of troops and maintaining to withdraw forcibly from the Federal Diet the right of disposing of Holstein. It was also resolved not to sanction any convention affecting the rights of the duchies, and that the Federal Diet alone has to decide on the succession question. The conference further resolved that federal troops should be sent to occupy Holstein, and that immediate preparations be made for the mobilisation of the army of the German States.

The Austrian Government has addressed a circular despatch, under date of the 16th inst., to all the members of the German Confederation. The following is a summary of that document:—"It is admitted that the London Treaty is not binding upon the Federal Diet. A vote to that treaty taken by the Diet in conformity with the propositions of

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams have been received through Mr. Reuter's office :—

RETURN OF THE CHANNEL FLEET TO ENGLAND.—Lisbon, Feb. 24, 6.35 p.m.—The Channel Fleet, having received sailing orders, leaves on Saturday next for Portland. The wind is south-westerly, blowing a fresh gale.

AUSTRALIA.—Plymouth, Feb. 25.—The Maid of Judah, from Melbourne, left the 14th of January, and Port Phillip in the Channel. She brings 8200 ounces of gold, valued at about £12,000 sterling.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The King of the Hellenes has been unanimously elected an honorary member of the Royal Horticultural Society.

Mr. Charles Dickens has consented to preside at the annual dinner of Unionists, to be held in Edinburgh in the month of May.

A new Conservative club, called the Junior Carlton Club, is about to be established. The names of the Duke of Beaufort, and Colville, Mr. Disraeli, and Colonel Taylor.

A cheap dinner for the poor at Bermondsey Borough was burnt down last Saturday morning. It had seven rooms and thirty-six occupants, of whom all escaped with their lives.

The General Theatrical Fund banquet is fixed for Thursday, March 10, and the chair (which was occupied last year by Mr. Charles Dickens) will on this occasion be taken by Mr. Alfred Bunn.

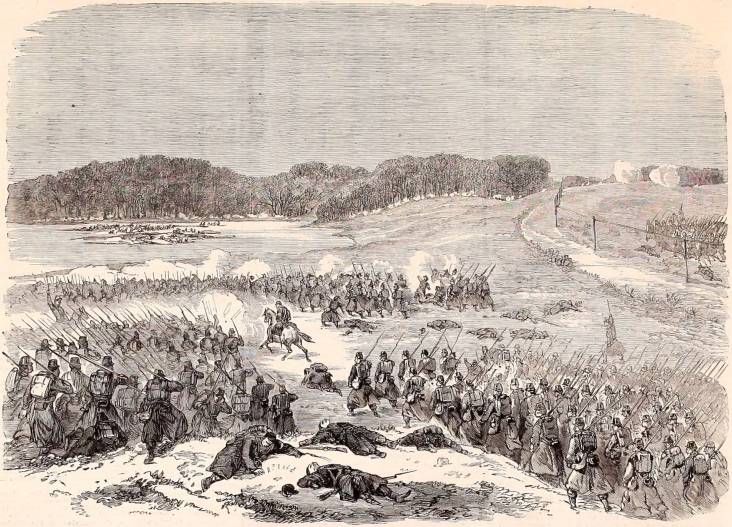
The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress entertained the members of the Court of Aldermen, the Sheriffs of London, and the high officers of the Corporation, at a banquet at the Mansion House on Wednesday evening, which was served in the Long Parlour.

The sale of the costly service of silver and silver-gilt plate, valuable furniture and effects, and carriages and horses, of the late Lord Lyndhurst has taken place this week at the great rooms of Messrs. Christie, Manson, and Woods, 8, King-street, St. James's-square.

Dr. Lankester held an inquest last week on an infant poisoned by a dose of laudanum administered by its nurse, to whose custody it had been given it for a cough. The coroner, as a warning, related the case of an infant's death having been caused by a dose of Godfrey's cordial.

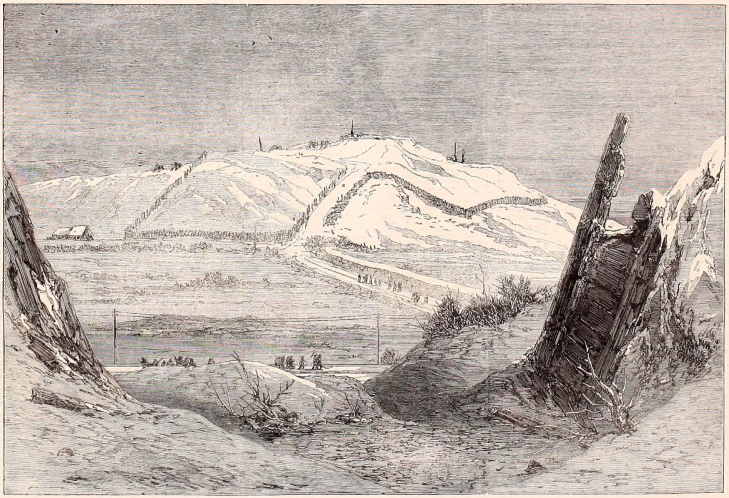
This year there were posted in London, for despatch to the provinces on the morning preceding Valentine's Day, upwards of 413,000 letters, or 1 in every 3 of the population. Of these, 1 in every 10 was referred to the Queen's Post Office from the receiving-houses on the morning of Monday, the 15th inst., for delivery in London or elsewhere on the 14th, the number being 134,000, or 10,000 above the average.

Arrangements have been made, under the patronage of the Princess of Wales, and substantially under that of the Whole English female aristocracy, to hold a Bazaar in the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, for the sale of articles of ladies' work, in aid of the funds for building a church in the Haymarket, now in the metropolis. Though these schools are of so origin as recent as 1859 they have 650 pupils on the registers, and have already obtained the aforesaid French in the streets near Leicester, Golden, and Soho squares. At present, however, the accommodation is limited to 200 children, and this is the next the outlay, so that there is occasion for this extraordinary effort on their behalf.



The Lord Mayor, Sir Francis Graham Moon, Bart., Alderman and the governor of St. Thomas's Hospital is now directly raised by the filing of a bill in Chancery by the governors against the treasurer, Mr. Hankey, jun., with Mr. Scott, the Chamberlain, to restrain the Corporation from using a certain portion of the City cash, amounting to £70,000, in addition to the ceiling the hospital out to any instruments without the previous consent of the governors. The governors, in their corporate capacity in the matter of the Corporation to interfere in their corporate capacity in the matter of the trust and to this measure the governors of the hospital object that the intervention of the donation governors is said to have been done at the request of the donor himself.

The Associated Chambers of Commerce, consisting of delegates from the chambers of commerce throughout the country, held a meeting in the metropolis this week. The business taken by the association is of the most important character. The question of the Channel Islands' commerce is examined by the association and an opinion pronounced on it. Among the other subjects discussed were the commercial treaty with France, the abolition of the interference of the Board of Trade with commercial matters as a work now neglected by our Government in the interest of foreign nations, the reform of the Bankruptcy Act, the Customs Consolidation Act, the Merchant Shipping Act, the British timber; and the often-debated question whether belligerent goods on an enemy's ship is subject to capture. The meeting was unanimous in favour of their exemption.

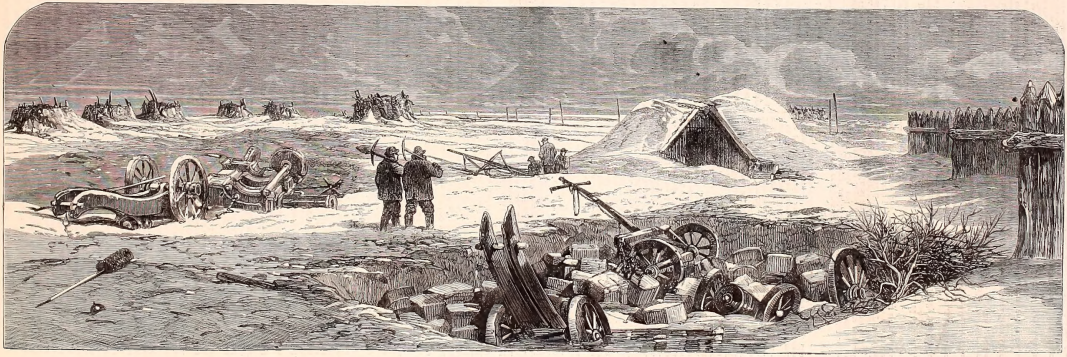


The Court of Common Council of governors of King's College Hospital was held on Thursday. From the report read by the secretary it appeared that 1,000 patients had been admitted into the house, and the out-patients to 24,962. The ordinary receipts for the year, including £420 from a fund raised by the late Mr. Hall, and £1,000 bequeathed by the governors of the hospital to the public, was £7,722, and the total expenses £8,531. The deficiency of £809 was to be met by the treasurer. The hospital on account of the new buildings and current expenses had resulted in the collection of £1,000. The new buildings, which were in the Tudor and Gothic style, were framed, referred to Mr. Webster's zeal on behalf of the poor player and the establishment of the Royal Dramatic College, and the benefit performance. It also referred to his career as a manager, and to his being the master of Drury-lane Theatre during the most brilliant period of its existence. It could be no slight recommendation to the commencement of his difficult career and to the subsequent success of his management that he was the companion of such men as Sheridan, Kemble, and great thinkers. Mr. Webster responded in feeling terms, and in the course of his reply said that he was the means by which the profession had been benefited. He referred to the commencement of their career, which he illustrated by incidents he had remembered in the course of his experience.

The births of 2122 children—1086 boys and 1036 girls—were registered in London last week. In the ten years 1851-60 the average was 1824·3 the average number (corrected) was 2141. The weekly return for the first quarter of 1864 will probably exceed 2200. The number of births any week since the commencement of the year. The deaths in London in the week were 1654, of which 1654 were registered in the week, and 1654 were corrected average number of deaths in the week ending 1854·3, with a correction for increase of population, is 1654. The deaths last week were 1654, which, if the healthy considered in a healthy state, as the deaths of last week were 1654, the corrected average for corresponding weeks being 1792. Fatal cases of small-pox were 10, of measles 29, of scarlatina 16, of diarrhœa 10, of fever (typhus) 28, of erysipelas 6, of bronchitis 120, of pneumonia 251, of pleurisy 11, of other diseases of the respiratory organs 1864-63

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE BATTLE OF OVERSEE.



THE DANNEWERK, REDOUBT NO. 10.—SEE PAGE 214.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

BATTERY ON THE SUMMIT OF THE DANNEWERK.

THE DANNEWERK, REDOUBT No. 11.—SEE PAGE 214.

FEB. 27, 1864

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 5.

SUNDAY, Feb. 28.—Third Sunday in Lent. The Romans totally defeat the Tarquins and their allies, but lose their great patriot, Junius Brutus, 509 B.C.

MONDAY, 29.—St. Oswald, Archbishop of York, died, 992. Death of Archbishop Wright, one of the reformers of the Church of England, 1641.

TUESDAY, March 1.—St. David, Archbishop and Martyr, about 642. The Royal Institution of Great Britain, founded, 1799. Sir H. Davy's last lecture by Dr. Thomas Garnett, in the Theatre, 1829. Sir Robert Peel, born, 1788.

WEDNESDAY, 2.—Chad, first Bishop of Lichfield, died, about 672. Blanchard's first ascent in England, at Paris, in a hydrogen balloon, 1784. The island of Cephalonia annexed by Great Britain, 1815.

THURSDAY, 3.—Parliament met by King Henry VI.* brought out at the Rose Theatre, Bankside, under the protection of Lord Strange, 1591.

FRIDAY, 4.—Death of the great Sobieski, in Poland, 1696. The establishment of the National Life-boat Institution, 1824. Abraham Lincoln assumes the office of President of the United States of North America, 1861.

SATURDAY, 5.—Death of Carregidio, 1651. General Thomas Graham defeats the French, under Victor, at Barossa, 1811. Death of the great mathematician Lagrace, 1837.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 5, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
1 30	2 0	2 30	3 0	3 30	4 0	4 30

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ADMIRALTY.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 1′ 45″ W.; Height above Sea, 24 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.			WIND.	RAIN in 24 hours.
	Barometer reduced to 32° and Sea Level.	Dew Point.	Humidity.	Ozone.	Highest.	Lowest.	General Direction.	Miles.	Inches.
	Inches.	°	%	0–10	°	°		Miles per Hour.	Inches of Rain.
19	29·727	32·8	79	6	39·3	29·7	NW. to NW.	271	·021
20	29·737	32·6	76	6	39·2	27·7	N. and NE.	276	·028
21	30·218	31·4	87	6	39·6	28·1	E. and SE.	281	·033
22	29·965	29·6	70·7	6·1	42·6	29·6	SE. to E.	261	·013
23	...	...	...	...	42·6	29·6	...	261	·033
24	29·648	29·2	85·8	6·2	39·7	32·7	NW.	29	·053
25	29·393	29·2	85·8	6·2	39·7	32·7	NW.	29	·053

* Rain and melted snow. † Melted snow.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, at noon, at half-past nine a.m. and 10 p.m.:—

	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
Barometer in inches reduced to 32°	29·7275	29·7371	30·2181	29·9715	29·9715	29·6484	29·3945
Temperature of Air	39·0	37·8	39·8	37·8	39·0	41·0	41·0
Temperature of Evaporation	36·0	35·6	36·0	35·6	36·0	36·0	36·0
Direction of Wind	NW.	NW.	E.	SE.	SE.	NW.	NW.

* Read at 10 a.m.

POSTAGE OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS FOR THIS WEEK.

(FEB. 27), CONSISTING OF NUMBER AND HALF-SHEET SUPPLEMENT.

AT HOME.

Copies bearing the impressed stamp (which must be exposed to view) circulate FREE BY POST within the United Kingdom, during the week in which they are dated, or the week following. Subscribers should give early notice of any change of residence, to ensure the delivery of the paper where they are passing, when they become liable to a postage of one penny each, which must be prepaid by affixing stamps to the amount. Single copies, 5d.; Monthly Parts, 5s. 6d.; or six copies for one remittance of 30s., to any address in the United Kingdom.

Unstamped copies should have a two penny postage-stamp affixed to each.

FOR FOREIGN PARTS.

The impressed stamp is of no service for parts which are to be sent abroad: those must have postage-stamps affixed to them according to the following rates:—

Africa, West Coast of—Penny Stamps.
Australia—Penny Stamp.
Austria—Penny Stamp.
Sweden—Penny Stamp.
California—Two Stamps.
Canada—Penny Stamp. Single Stamp
Cape of Good Hope—Penny Stamp
China—Two Stamps. Three Stamps. This paper
Constantinople—Penny Stamp. This paper
Denmark—Penny Stamp. This paper
Egypt—Penny Stamp.
France—Penny Stamp. This paper

An edition is printed on thin paper specially for foreign postage. The postage of this thin paper is Twopence. Thin paper is desirable to those persons who wish to receive an extra copy for distribution abroad.

In the above list, the thin paper stands—

Germany—Two Stamps. This paper
Holland—Penny Stamp. This paper
Hong Kong—Penny Stamp
Mexico—Two Stamps
New Zealand—Penny Stamp
Prussia—Penny Stamp. This paper
Spain—Penny Stamp. This paper
Switzerland—Penny Stamp. This paper
United States—Penny Stamp
Victoria—Penny Stamp

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 27, 1864.

It is with no very bold hand that the Government has touched the system of penal servitude, and the importance of the subject demands that the very best consideration be given to the measure which Sir George Grey has introduced. Theories of all kinds may fairly be said to have received ample discussion; and all humane and rational men are agreed upon the general principle that punishment must deal with the future as well as the past. We have by no means given up the instinctive and just abhorrence view which punishment is retributive; nor will society consent to forego the feeling that the castigation administered by the law avenges honest men upon bad men. But we have so unanimously abandoned the savage principle which in old days treated the criminal merely as a creature to be flogged, transported, or hanged; and we have resolved that, in so far as punishment can be rendered educational, it shall be made so. We maintain in all its sternness the doctrine that every man is responsible for his actions; but when he has given proof, by crime, that he has not felt or has neglected his responsibilities, we chastise, we say also not to the sufferer, but to society, that it is clear to all who are not wilfully blind that an overwhelming majority of our criminal classes have been brought up in an atmosphere of vice, and have been hardened by constant association with the worst. Society is bound by the highest law, as soon as we take the evildoer into our own hands, to give him, roughly it may be, but certainly in good faith, some kind of an education, which shall teach him, in the plainest way, the duty as well as the expediency of becoming an honest citizen. We no longer think only of the severity of punishments; we may indeed have gone too far the other way; but we assuredly value punishments most by their supposed efficacy.

Now, let us see what is the improved system by which Sir George Grey (a most upright and conscientious Minister, and one whose judgments on cases of pardon or remission received honourable recognition) hopes to combine the double purpose of penal servitude. He has evidently given much thought and pains to the subject; and it must not be forgotten that he has had to deal with it in the presence of an assembly nearly every one of whose members is a magistrate, and probably considers himself an authority upon the question. In many cases this belief is well founded, though, of course, in many others prejudice, old belief, or sentimentality has had much to do in forming the opinions which Sir George Grey has to confront and, if possible, to reconcile. Sir George proposes to increase the minimum term for which a criminal can be sentenced to penal servitude. This term is now three years. It is to be extended to five. The alteration is clearly a wise one. Five years is not thought too long a time for an honest person to devote to the learning any honest trade or calling, and it is certainly not too long a period to assign for a rogue, and probably a foolish rogue, to forget all trade but such learning since he began to crawl, in rags and dirt, about the most squalid streets, and to substitute a knowledge of his duties to his Maker and to his fellows. Five years will be found to be the term which will, in the one case, enable a man to be certain that he is to be able to do, by one fourth. For good conduct in prison the culprit is to be rewarded with "marks," and a certain number of these will reduce the imprisonment, while the largest number fixed will take off the very considerable portion we have mentioned. On this part of the scheme much discussion has arisen. It is fairly and truly said that you must not leave the question of the prisoner's release in his condition by his behaviour in prison; but, on the other hand, it is urged that the prospect offered by Sir George Grey will open the door of the gaol to let out, not the best men, but the most cunning. And it is suggested that the power of control, the Home Secretary was very desirous to impress upon the House of Commons the belief that all that we hear about the success of prisoners in deceiving Chaplains, who are naturally willing to think that their teaching have been efficacious, is nonsense. It may be an exaggeration, but there can be no reasonable doubt that the good or ill opinion of the Chaplain has much influence on the penalties in whose hands are the fates of prisoners; and it is absolutely necessary to give society an assurance that if the good-conduct-mark system is adopted the simplest precautions will be taken against its abuse. A man is not to be made a hypocrite in respect of religion, as Tartuffe was in comedy, a man, that is, to be especially false in that which is most sacred, and which alter the case. The culprit in Ireland is released, but he is under police surveillance, and may be taken back at any moment; and this is a system which may possess much merit in not; where the Fenian is concerned, is another consideration. We state it in no disrespect to the Irish character, or to the Roman Catholic character; on the contrary, if men believe in the Christianity which they profess, the existence of offences known to God, and it is creditable to any man that he can forget a crime for which the offender has suffered and of which he is ashamed. Therefore, when we say that the having been in prison is a bar to a man's career in Ireland which it is among Englishmen, we are perhaps only saying that the Irish are better Christians than we are. But, be this as it may, it was stated on all sides in the House of Commons—and the statement was received with a cheer—that English workmen will not work with a man whom they know to have been convicted. Then, what is the man to do when he comes out of prison, from which you have taken him to try to emerge as a better man? He does not return to crime; and in nine cases out of ten he does so, and the Chaplain's pet, the quickest of all. Why not keep him until you have thoroughly saturated him with honesty, and only help him to get away? If you have any doubt of his sending him back to be a criminal again, and the father of little criminals, and so on to the end of the chapter.

Among the other features of the Government bill is the increase of the term for which an offending ticket-of-leave man—that is, as Sir George prefers to say, a man with a license—can be again imprisoned. Local magistrates are also to have a power to order summary flogging in the case of a revolt in prison. Transportation is not to be entirely done away with, because West Australia is said to require an annual exportation of about 600 persons. But these are minor points: the chief point is that to which we have already referred, and on which we think the local magistrates and others should debate and make their own representations before the measure becomes law.

The King of Holland has completed his forty-seventh year. He Majesty's birthday has been on the 24th of February, 1817.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Samuel Otis Johnson as Consul in the Island of Fernando Po and its dependencies.

An influential deputation waited upon the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Saturday last, to urge the repeal of the tax on fire insurance. The right hon. gentleman listened to the representations made to him, and gave a favourable answer, but declined to say that the remission of the duty is likely to be taken.

The Board of Trade returns for December have been issued. We subjoin a statement of the total declared value of the exports of British and Irish produce and manufactures during the months of December in the last three years:—

For the Month.	For the Twelve Months.
1862 .. .. .. £ 4,957,910	£ 102,918,211
1863 5,317,000	110,919,191
1864 5,746,000	116,000,000

There is a prospect of abundance of sport in the River Thames on Tuesday next, for the first time for years. There has been a fresh-water fish-angling for roach and dace, and they have been seen feeding in various parts of the river. Upwards of 60,000 persons, the members of the Anglers' Angling Preservation Society's appearance, were turned into the water last year. Although trout-fishing commences by law after the 27th of January, the fish are seldom in condition in the Thames much earlier than the 1st of April, at which time the anglers generally commence operations.

The Times of India says, in its impression of Jan. 29:—"The Confederate privateer Alabama is on our coast. She captured and burnt the American ship Emma Jane off Trevandrum on the 14th inst., and landed the captain and crew at Anjengo on the 17th inst. The Emma Jane sailed from Bombay on the 5th inst., bound to Amherst. The Alabama is now reported to be cruising off Quilon. Nothing is said of the fate of the American ice-ship now due, and for several American ships in this port under the same circumstances within a few days. It is expected that she may come into port for the purpose of coaling."

THE COURT.

The Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Princess Beatrice, Prince Leopold, and the Princess of Hohenlohe, left Osborne at seven o'clock on Saturday last, en route for Windsor Castle. The suite in attendance consisted of the Countess of Caledon, the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, the Hon. Harriet Phipps, Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, Major-General Seymour, Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, Dr. Holmarsh, and Mr. Buff. The Queen, with the Royal family, embarked on board the Royal yacht Fairy, Commander Prince Leiningen, and crossed the Solent to Gosport, arriving at twelve o'clock. Her Majesty was received upon landing by Vice-Admiral Sir Edmund Seymour, Major-General Lord William Paulet, and Captain Harry E. Edgell. The Royal standard was hoisted at the Fairy as she anchored, and the gendarmes dressed in mustached colours, but no salutes were fired. Her Majesty entered the train, and proceeded at once to Windsor. Western Railway to Windsor, arriving at twenty-five minutes past two o'clock. Her Majesty was received by Prince Arthur, attended by Under Cutin from Greenwich Park. Sir George Grey also arrived at the castle, and had an audience of her Majesty.

On Sunday the Queen, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Princess Beatrice, Prince Arthur, Prince Leopold, and the Princess of Hohenlohe, attended Divine service in the private chapel of the castle. The Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked in the castle grounds. Prince Arthur, attended by Major Elphinstone, left the castle for Greenwich Park. Sir George Grey also left the castle for London.

On Tuesday the Queen, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce and Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, proceeded to London and honoured the Countess of Elgin with a visit, afterwards returning to Windsor Castle. Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar dined with her Majesty.

On Wednesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the castle grounds.

The Queen took an airing and drives in the grounds adjacent to the castle.

Previously to the Court leaving Osborne the Queen superintended the placing of a monument in the chancel of Whippingham Church to the memory of the late Princess Sophia. The upper portion of the design, executed in white marble, consists of a medallion of the Prince, encircled by a wreath of Elgin with a vine, arranged on a shield into three panels, inclosed in arches of alabaster, supported on small columns of red Portuguese marble, with capitals and carved bases of columns of red Portuguese marble. In the side panels are the arms of the Queen and the Prince, and in the centre an inscription commemorative of the late Princess.

Viscountess Jocelyn has succeeded the Countess of Caledon as Lady in Waiting, and the Hon. Harriet Phipps has succeeded the Hon. Emma Lascelles as Maid of Honour in Waiting; the Hon. Horatia Stopford has succeeded the Hon. Harriet Phipps as Lady in Waiting. Lord Cremorne and Lieut.-Col. Cavendish are the Lord and Groom in Waiting to the Queen.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Princess is now convalescent, and the infant Prince progresses most favourably under the circumstances.

On Thursday se'nnight the Prince drove the Princess to the meet of Mr. Brooke's harriers, at Sandringham. There was a large assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. The Prince had some excellent sport. The Princess returned to the Victoria Hotel to luncheon. Their Royal Highnesses returned to the meet in half-past four. Dr. Sieveking, Highness returned to the meet in half-past four. Dr. Sieveking, Physician-Accoucheur to the Princess of Wales, arrived on a visit to the Princess. Mr. Curtois, master of the household, arrived from Marlborough, in charge of dishes for their Royal Highnesses.

Yesterday se'nnight the Prince walked in the neighbourhood of St. Leonards. The Princess, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Coke, took a drive.

On Saturday last the Prince and Princess drove out.

On Sunday the Royal Highnesses attended Divine service at St. Leonards Church, under the Cliff. Their Royal Highnesses occupied the Rector's pew. The Rev. Mr. Anderson, Incumbent, read Prayers, Sir. Stewart, the Rev. C. M. Ramsa, and the Rev. George St. Quintin were the officiating clergymen. The Prince and Princess on Sunday afternoon drove to Hastings. Mr. Meade and attended by Major Teesdale, passed by Cuckmere House, where the Princess and Prince for an walked out. Later in the day the Prince and Princess drove for an hour and a half.

On Monday the Prince, attended by Major Teesdale, walked into Hastings. His Royal Highness visited Messrs. Ayles by sitting for his portrait. Subsequently the Prince drove the Princess to the Caves, and afterwards visited the remarkable natural caverns.

The Prince and Princess, with the infant Prince, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Coke, Major-General Bouverie, and Major Teesdale, left Starkey's Victoria Hotel, St. Leonards-on-Sea, at eleven o'clock yesterday morning, en route for Sandringham House. The Prince and Princess were conducted to their carriage by Mr. Starkey, who had the honour to receive from the Prince, on their Royal Highnesses's perfect satisfaction with the manner in which the accommodations of the Royal Hotel, Princes arrangements made for the accommodation of their Royal Highnesses during their sojourn at the Victoria Hotel. The Prince and Princess were received with acclamations throughout their progress from the hotel to the South-Eastern Railway station. The Mayor of St. Leonards met their Royal Highnesses at the station, and received the commendations of the Prince upon the admirable arrangements for the comfort of the parishes of St. Leonards and Hastings. The Prince and Princess left the railway station at Tunbridge Wells in a special train, under the conduct of Mr. Knight, superintendent of the railway, and arrived at the Charing-cross station at a quarter to two o'clock, when their Royal Highnesses were received by Mr. Teulon and other directors, and Mr. Hall, station-master, and by the South Royal Highnesses. The Prince and Princess were warmly greeted by a crowd of spectators upon their arrival. Their Royal Highnesses entered carriages upon their arrival. Their Royal Highnesses entered carriages and proceeded to Marlborough House.

On Wednesday the Prince, attended by Major Teesdale, rode out. The Princess drove out daily. On Thursday evening the Prince honoured the Princess' Theatre with his presence to see "Twelfth Night." The Duke of Cambridge visited the Prince at Marlborough House.

PRINCE ALFRED.

Prince Alfred continues at Holyrood Palace.

On Wednesday evening their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by the Hon. F. Charteris and attended by Major Cowell, visited the Exhibition of the Royal Scottish Academy. The Prince remained two hours, and evinced much interest in the various works of art.

Yesterday se'nnight the Prince, accompanied by the Hon. F. Charteris, and attended by Major Cowell, left Holyrood Palace in a carriage and four, and passed through Preston Grange, by way of George Street Bridge. His Royal Highness returned to Holyrood on Monday.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch have arrived at Bowhill, Selkirkshire, from Dalkeith House, Edinburgh.

The Duke of Montrose has arrived at the family mansion in Belgrave-square for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Tankerville have arrived at their residence in South Audley-street from Walton.

The Earl and Countess of Lisnowel have arrived in Great Stanhope-street, from a tour of visits.

The Earl and Countess of Dunraven have arrived at their new residence in Great Stanhope-street from Gerhambury Park, Herts, for the season.

Earl and Countess Amherst have arrived in town from their seat, Knole Park, near Sevenoaks, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Dartmouth have arrived in town from their seat, Patshall Hall, Staffordshire, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Kilmorel have arrived in town, from Torquay, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Bective have arrived at their residence in Grafton-street, from Ireland, for the season.

The Earl of Powis left Berkeley-square, on Saturday last, for Powis Castle, Welshpool.

The Earl of Harrowby has arrived in town from Sandon Hall, Staffordshire.

The Earl of Sefton and Viscount Uffington have arrived in town from Croxteth Park, Liverpool.

Viscount and Viscountess Holmesdale have arrived at their new residence in Upper Brook-street, from Linton Park, Staplehurst, Kent.

Viscount Canterbury has arrived in town from Paris.

The marriage of Miss Adelaide Gore, daughter of Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir Charles Gore, and niece to the Duchess of Inverness, with Colonel Rich, of the 1st Highlanders, at the lake place on March 3.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Duchess of Inverness gave her annual ball on Wednesday evening at the official residence of the First Lord of the Admiralty. The Countess of Clarendon held a brilliant assemblage of the aristocracy at her residence in Grosvenor-street, on Tuesday evening, to witness a series of tableaux vivants executed by amateurs. The same performances were repeated on Wednesday evening, which the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary honoured by lending their august presence. Lady Stanley of Alderley and Sir Augustus Mr. Chichester Fortescue entertained a distinguished party at dinner on Wednesday evening.

Lord Palmerston has given her usual dinner party on Saturday last at Cambridge House, which was numerously attended.

The Earl Russell, the Speaker (are Mr. Denison), and Mr. Gladstone on Wednesday. The Speaker will hold his parliamentary levée on Wednesday, March 2, and Wednesday, March 9, at ten o'clock p.m. Full dress.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Rev. Dr. Jeune, the new Dean of Lincoln, was installed yesterday week at that cathedral.

The Bishop of Oxford has recently consecrated a movable church and school, of wood, at Handy Cross, Marlow, the principal expense of which has been borne by Lady Dashwood, of Kirtlington Park.

In a congregation held at Oxford on Thursday week the question of conferring the degree of Doctor of Civil Law on Lord Derby was put to the vote, when there were in favour of the endowment, 161; against it, 91.

The Rev. J. M. Vaughan, of Mary's Hall, Brighton, and the Rev. Arthur Acting Chaplain at Marseilles, has been presented by the English residents there with a testimonial of respect, consisting of a silver tea and coffee service.

The Bishop-designate of Ely has nominated the Rev. Dr. Howson, Principal of the Liverpool Collegiate Institution, his Examining Chaplain. The Bishop-designate intends to preach his first sermon in the Cathedral congregation in Easter Cathedral on Sunday week.

Clifton College has had a narrow escape from destruction last week from a fire that broke out in the roof. It was, however, soon extinguished by the masters and boys, with the aid of the fire-engines of the place. The damage is covered by an insurance.

On the 25th inst. a new school-church was opened at Madeley Heath, in the parish of Madeley, Staffordshire. It has been built at the cost of the Lord Crewe, the owner of the property and the patron of the incumbency, the population of about 800, which has sprung up during the last thirty years, in consequence of a colliery having been built in the immediate vicinity.

A monument to the late Archbishop Musgrave has been erected in St. Mary's Church, Ripon. It is the work of Mr. Thomas Earp, and consists of a base of carved Caen stone, surmounted with a recumbent figure of the Archbishop, in alabaster, robed in his episcopal vestments. (Full details of this monument.)

The trustees of the Bounty of Queen Anne have issued their account of receipts and payments for the year ending Dec. 31, 1863. The balance from the previous year was £2,046 10s. 10d., and the grant was £246,051. The disbursements amount to £239,310, leaving a balance of £9,018 to be carried to the year 1864.

The Rev. Daniel Moore, M.A., has been elected Holsean Lecturer at Manchester. The subject of his course will be "The Life of the present year is "Capernaum." Candidates for this prize must be Masters of Arts, who have resided twelve months next term, and must write in the Latin or English. At a meeting of the Cambridge Anthropeian Society on Monday the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G., was elected President.

A wooden church was opened at Barrow Gournay, Bristol, last week, on the site of an old building which was destroyed by fire in 1861, and Rockwell. The building, which has been erected at the cost of the Rev. Dr. Hutchings, Rector of the parish, is in the Early English style of the 13th century. The work is covered with lath and plaster. The interior of the building is of stained wood; there is a small chancel separated from the congregation. It will afford for between 100 and 200 worshippers. There are some disputable windows, but which cannot be seen from the outside. The cost of the church is about £1400.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—Rectories: The Rev. H. E. Isodore to Gittisham, Wilts; Rev. W. H. Ryan to Tankersley; Rev. H. B. Hayward to Ingoldsthorpe; Rev. W. Hill to Ashby-de-la-Zouch, Leicestershire; Rev. W. P. Attenborough to Fitchfield, Sussex; Rev. H. C. Dymond to Ashbrittle, Somerset; Rev. Thomas Hill to Ash, Clifford St. Gerald, Pulford; Rev. J. Elton to Devynock, Hull; Rev. H. Hutchinson to Ashton-under-Hill, Evesham; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Ashton-under-Hill, Evesham; Rev. J. Davenport to Ingoldsthorpe; Rev. J. Bowden to Burbage with Lunsdell, Denbighshire; Rev. S. P. Hill to Wales, Rotherham; Rev. W. H. Moore to Chester; Rev. R. T. Owen to Northop, Flintshire; Rev. J. A. Shaw to Ancaster Malbis; Rev. T. J. Smith to Shortlaers and Kirk Fenton; Rev. W. Dent to Bulmer and Whenby; Rev. E. Wynne to St. Clement, Worcester.—Guardian.

The Chill Government has renewed their postal contract with the Panda Steam Navigation Company for another period of five years.

A British Association has been established at Buenos Ayres, in Argentina, for having military effects on board, and her detention being unknown.

The Jewish Chronicle states that Sir Moses Montefiore is the first Jewish member of the English Bar who has attained that rank.

The general Committee on railway bills have classified and formed into an 11 groups. Other railway bills will be taken as they stand on the 400 bills before Parliament. Two Committees on local bills have also been appointed.

According to the last report of the Victorian Acclimatisation Society, thirty-six varieties of birds have been introduced into the colony. The introduction of the Lyrgenus bee is likely to be a success. 43 cash is offered for the two twenty-fighter barrs landed at Melbourne. Several species of the cinnamomeal entomyze to introduce salmon. Ceylon elks have been liberated in order that they may propagate and rear calves in Victoria.

The Zoological Garden in the Bois de Boulogne has been lately visited by persons who have returned from Mexico, and among them are those birds and of various animals arrived from Mexico, and among them are those birds which resemble that of Virginia creeper in the fall of the year, when the leaves assume all shades of a rose peculiar to Mexico, which greatly resemble our Scotch heather. The Emperor has presented to the Garden a pair of the Mexican deer, and are easily tamed in the Mexico. They are highly esteemed as food, and are easily tamed.

During the heavy snowstorm of yesterday week the Golden Hind, of the Black Ball line of passenger packets, was approaching the port from Ireland to London with a cargo on board valued at £100,000, was driven ashore on the Kentish coast, and became a total wreck. The vessel is a total wreck. She was commanded by a very old and experienced navigator, Mr. Dongueri-lifeboat, belonging to the National life-boat Institution, immediately put off to the assistance of the vessel, and succeeded in saving the captain, nine passengers, and several of the crew. Previous to the life-boat reaching the vessel a pilot-cutter, the Queen of the Thames, had taken off from the ship and rescued some of the passengers and crew.—Mr. J. G. Allcroft, of Woodcutts, has presented to the National Life-boat Institution a new life-boat and its transporting-carriage, to be stationed at Greenacastle, near Easthourbourne. Captain Benjamin Heywood has contributed £50 to the fund for the establishing the life-boat station at Blackpool. Mrs. Browne, of Hampstead, has also given £50 towards the same object.

THE DANO-GERMAN CORRESPONDENCE.—The second part of the correspondence respecting the affairs of Schleswig-Holstein laid on the table was issued on Thursday. The correspondence begins on Jan. 31, 1863, and ends on Jan. 16, 1864. It consists of 200 papers, of which 131 are despatches which never left the ground. In the first, extending from Jan. 31 to March 30, 1863, we have the correspondence between Lord Russell and Mr. Copenhagen on the claims which certain foreign powers have upon the Duchies and the Holstein Estates, showing the motives and nature of the resolution of Denmark embodied in the new repealed Patent of March 30, 1861. With the publication of this Patent the correspondence becomes more voluminous. The German great Powers and the Diet express their opinion, and the long discussion begins relative to enforcing execution in Holstein. A great portion of the despatches during this period, including the views of the German great Powers, of the Diet, of Denmark and the Duke, have already been published, but the Blue-book contains a number of more complete and authentic. The last despatch in the series is from Earl Russell to Lord Bloomfield, dated Sept. 30, 1863, communicating the despatch of Count de Bray, Mr. Buol, in which his Lordship expresses the hope that the Diet will enforcing military execution in Holstein with any view of compelling a change in the Constitution of the Danish monarchy. The papers extend to 146 pages, including 138 documents.

FINE ARTS.

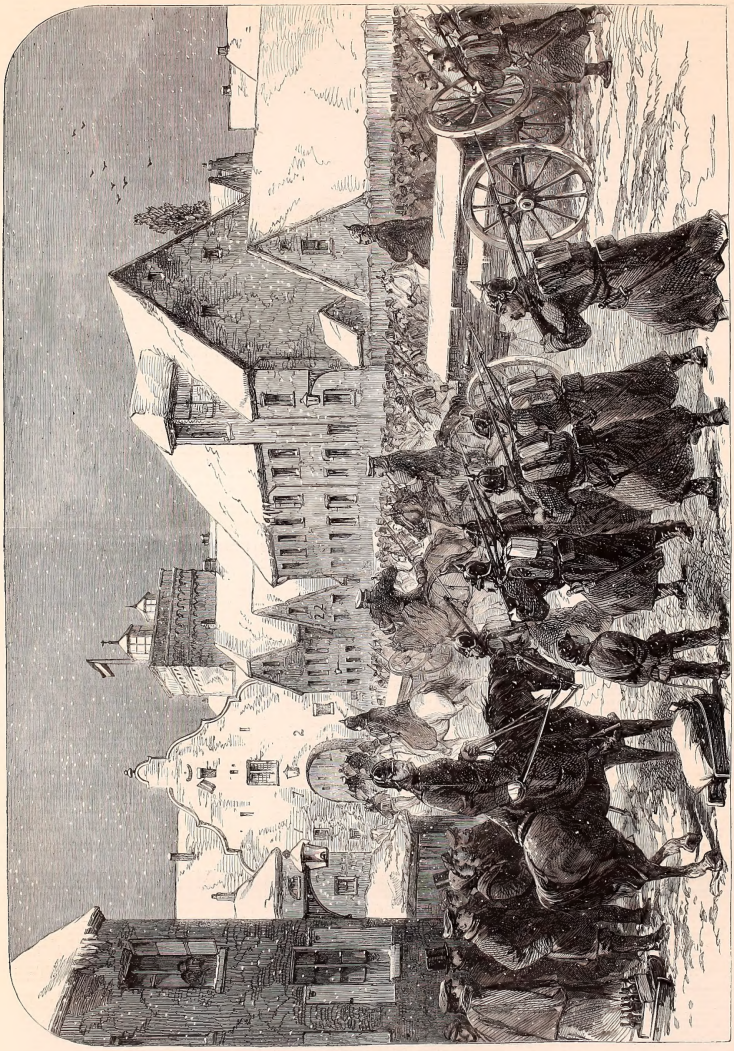
THE doings of the Art-Union of London have been the subject of adverse strictures in this Journal on more than one occasion. It is with the greater pleasure therefore that we find we can give almost unqualified praise to the publication of this society for the current year. The engraving from Sir Edwin Landseer's picture which have been published by the Art-Union, the twenty illustrations by Noel Paton of Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner" just issued to subscribers are, indeed, a vast step in advance. These twenty designs are in outline, with just sufficient indication of shade to suggest the complete forms. In conception—poetically elevated, phantasmal, complex as is the theme—they are not an unworthy art-translation of it. If not strikingly erudite, as are the wonderful works of Retzsch, they abundantly evince poetical appreciativeness, facility of conception, and freshness in the embodiment; though the materials are occasionally too conventional or familiar to those acquainted with similar fairy-tale subjects, and the artist seems to have failed in the endless forebearings few English artists could equal them. With much twenty-tale subjects, and the artist seems to have failed in the endless forebearings few English artists could equal them. With much knowledge of the human form, Mr. Paton has not understood why they have not been executed on wood—like, for instance, the drawings of Flaxman and Retzsch—instead of steel, which gives a comparatively feeble, woolly line. The charm of wood engraving, and the propriety of its employment for such designs, consists in the fact that it compels a frank expression of the artist's intention by the necessary continuity and clearness of every line. It can scarcely be out of place to remind the reader that, as well as being an illustration of more than one of the "Lyrical Ballads" is also the author of a volume of poems which have been admired by judges neither partial, captious, nor incompetent; and that he contributed, with an illustration from his own pencil, a paper on "Fine Art" to the Cornhill Magazine for January, the quality, therefore, of which cannot be unknown to those who have read the article themselves. Strange to say, the apparently inoffensive little piece just named has deeply offended a portion of the public, and a letter to a journal that had just expressed unqualified and rhapsodical admiration of a poem by a writer who had already established a reputation as a poet elicited even attempt thirty lines or so in verse. Such, however, is the fact. A fortnight ago we were informed that the popular artists (it had, indeed, with the deepest sense, the insubstantial tenuity of paramount fame) had, in the course of a single day, by-days, by-law, by-law had seen it before. Ostensibly the subject was art. Accordingly, a number of artists, poets, Princes, and other personages were ranged side by side in order of precedence to the number of 1,000 in the Grove of Barbary. And, if nothing else was intelligible, it was quite clear that the whole assemblage was in a state of excitement due to failed to fancied flaw in this unlucky little Cornhill poem. The mountain laboured, but brought forth a mouse. The poem was duly published, with a little attention to the internal evidence of the authorship, which made such a mountain of a molehill that the whole affair was while will at once completely disappear. The writer modestly implies that he is but a learner in the art of poetry, and that he has only of late years had the opportunity to classic fame and to the author of the supposed "Lines And Sonnets" in the Times, "Translations from Horace," and of the "Dumen and Phidias" of a certain letter in the Times.

On the 15th inst. the Royal Academy of Arts, William Hogarth, the first great painter in the history of British art, will have been dead exactly one hundred years. In these times of memorials and celebrations, why should not the artists of this day do honour to some kind of commemoration? Will any one now dispute that Hogarth was, or take him for a moment from the pedestal on which the noble moral works we can make acquaintance—as, as original in his sphere as Shakspeare himself? Is it not a shame that the man who is considered the real founder of the English school? It is true, he had a little direct influence on the art-practice of his day; but Allan Reynolds has therefore been assigned the honour of being at the head of British art. Is it not a shame that the man who, with extraordinarily will recognise in the indomitable genius William Hogarth the first great painter of the modern world, and the first who, as yet, in some regards, unequalled example of its most prevailing characteristics—its love of realism, of art-thefism, the substitution of modernism in all things, and the direct reference of the work of every painter for himself and in the way prompted by his own idiosyncrasy. Are while the influence of Hogarth has been so powerful that the high-art doctrines propounded in his "Discourses" have already completely died out, and the whole tendency and practical application of genre was originated by Hogarth, and may fairly be considered to have been developed by Wilkie, Mulready, Webster, Frith, and the many more, by the host of living painters of domestic incident. And, further, it is quite impossible to understand the English Pre-Raphaelite that even English landscape is what it is. The extraordinary originality of Hogarth's genius is shown in the wonderful variety and dilettante taste of the time—and the wonderful satiric and humorous vein running through it all. Even the mere technical skill of his pictures as dramatic records of life, manners, and costumes, have led many since that profound connoisseur and patron of pinchbeck, Sir Robert Walpole, to appreciate Hogarth as a painter, as well as a painter. Against this unjust estimate he has, however, been ably vindicated by the late Peter Cunningham, F.S.A., in the introduction to a recent critical opinion. Why should we not, then, have a commemoration of such a great painter? Why not, at least, have a subscription of his collected works during the year; and let us have—as in the case of Shakspeare—a festival on the 10th of November, in the church—a stained-glass window put up to his memory in the Church of St. Bartholomew the Great, where Hogarth the Serjeant was baptised, and where a record of his baptism is preserved in the parish register.

Among the thousand and one propositions of memorials to Shakspeare—some grotesque, some ridiculous, some sublime and one which has certainly the merits of originality and practicability, and is by no means so far-fetched or unsuitable as it may at first appear. The proposition is that a "Shakspeare Theatre" should be erected called the "Shakspeare Bridge." It is argued, and not without good show of common sense, that the Thames Bridge, the only remaining bridge with which Shakspeare himself was most familiar—Blackfriars and Waterloo. In the former, as we have already stated, he was known as Playhouse-yard, and which is within a stone's throw of the City and of the site of the Globe Theatre, where the immortal dramas were first performed, and where Burbage, the celebrated tragedian of the time, with Shakspeare himself, played the principal parts.—The Globe Theatre, subsequently built in consequence of the triumphs achieved at the Globe, was also in the same locality, and was well known, in Bankside, and within no great distance of the Surrey and Globe theatres. In the latter, Shakspeare lived in the days of the great dramatist performed, and upon its boards did he himself, as an actor, appear before Queen Elizabeth. It is certain that, had Blackfriars Bridge existed in Shakspeare's days, Shakspeare himself—probably in company with Burbage and Ben Jonson—would have crossed it many times a day, passing over it, instead of encountering, as he often did, the perils of Fisch Ferry." The commencement of the new bridge, and—anticipating the rapidity with which structures are now erected—probably an substantial, a memorial to the great dramatist, a memorial to Shakspeare's birth. Details might be worked out afterwards. A Shakspeare theatre might easily be built on the site of the new commemoration; the proposed bronze groups might be illustrative of the most remarkable scenes in the plays, and the expense would not be exceeded. We may add that such a local memorial need not at all be regarded as interfering with the erection of a more national monument.

We concluded last week that none of the glass-painters or—that none should grieve their possessing the required ability—none of our great monumental painters were called in to make the designs for the painted windows in St. Paul's Cathedral, and that the preparation of those designs should have been given to the Germans, Professor Schmerz, and that the glass should be manufactured out of the country. We now hear that ten cartoons for one of the great windows in the new church of St. Michael, London, have been commissioned of Morris von Schwind, the designer of a few of the glass paintings in the Munich Pinakothek, the cartoons of which have been found so much fault with by heraldic authorities. Now, one thing before there is a superabundance of the very particular talent required for those works to be found among English artists in this country. But, even were it otherwise, is the course pursued in the matter of these commissions reasonable in any patriotic sense? And if the chief commissions for painted glass are given to foreigners, how is glass-painting ever to be encouraged to a successful development in this country? While on this subject, we think it just to try to prevent an incorrect inference as a remark we made last week might occasion, although to arouse attention our strictly artistic criticism. We said that both the foreign artists engaged at St. Paul's were "presumably Roman Catholics." We now learn, however, that Baron de Triqueti is a member of the French Protestant Church.

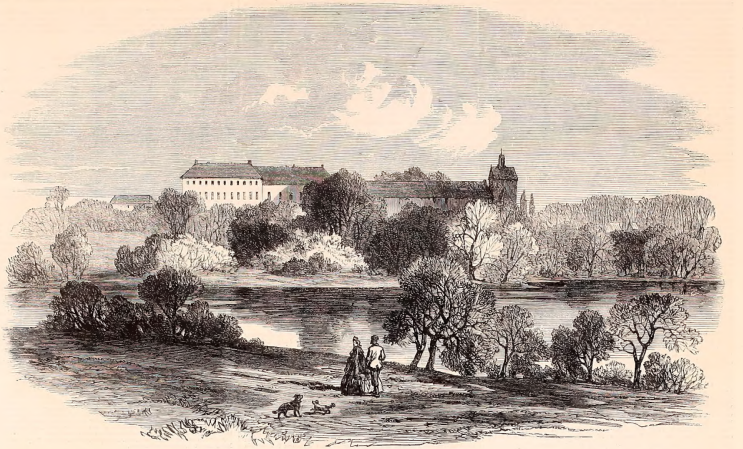
Since writing the memoir in our last of William Hunt, we have seen an interesting collection of his water-colour "sets" for the day's work, but scarcely touched. Little else is afforded to the practice of the artist by the materials employed; but Hunt was so great a master of water colours that it may interest many of our amateur readers to know that he used only a rather coarse kind of drawing-paper, especially the old-fashioned cake colours; that a large number of these, including all the most brilliant, were ground up on the same, and that there was a considerable quantity of Chinese white—bearing out our notion that he used body colour for body colour.



Mr. Ballantyne is painting a series of pictures of the studios of our leading artists.

The sale of the principal works by the eminent landscape-painter Mr. Lee Bridell takes place to-day (Saturday), at Messrs. Christie and Manson's.

NATIONAL SPORTS.



THE third tier for the Waterloo Cup found Robe, the cream-up to Chloe, Glendower, the Purse winner of 1863, King Death (for whom no nomination could be procured until the previous Saturday), and Sea Fish, the winner of the Purse in 1862, the latter becoming favourites out of sixty-four. King Death was too fast for Glendower, and Robe, whose running was very fine, beat Sea Fish cleverly. Each after two undecided courses. She was therefore placed at a disadvantage for the run up, in which Robe showed her clever style to the best effect. The winner is perhaps hardly a fyer, but still considerably above the average; and Mr. Lynn, who has now won the Cup with his own Cascarabo (who won the Cup in 1860), told us after the first ties that, judging from his style, he was almost certain that he must win. Then there were eight better favourites, and 20 to 1 was offered against him. His gentleness was shown in the running up to the Purse, which was won by his Calabrese, beating Bright Morning, after two courses. Thomas Brown was second in succession. The Earl of Eglinton also achieved his maiden victory over Prince Meadows with Lucy, dam to another of Cardinal York's sons, in the Plate. Thus, if Scotland could not secure the Cup, she secured the last right to it. Cups, its Ayrshire won one stake, and the winners of the two others were by Ayrshire-bred dogs. The Waterloo Cup was run for in the old style by Lord Sefton for having offered a brike of £500 to the judge to carry Ash-tree Cup, which was run for meeting went off pleasantly. Mr. A. Graham was a splendid field marshal, Mr. Warner was in excellent form, and Mr. Lake was in his place at the end of the line.

Chelmsford fairly launched on into the racing season of '61 which was commenced by Mr. Chatham upon Leal at Lewes, the five flat races on the first day were credited to Mr. Ten Broek and Mr. Bowes, the latter of whom by another the races would come off or not proved a great drawback to the Easter meeting at that point of attendance. None of the maiden sires gave us a taste of their quality at the Spring meeting, which however was not without a rarity let. Miss Julia, who is said to have been sold to Mr. Cookson, was in clever form at the Spring, and Tolerton made her an object on a hurdle race, for which he was heavily backed, and ran third. Mr. Phillips, of Ashton, who is the owner of Lord Clifden's dam, who was third to Neville and Carendish at the Worcester Royal last summer. Lord Clifden's dam

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: PRUSSIAN AMMUNITION-TRAIN ENTERING FLENSBURG.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 214.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

THE CHATEAU OF AUGUSTENBURG, ISLAND OF ALSEN.

AUGUSTENBURG.

THE mansion of Augustenburg, which shows its white walls and blue-slate roof amidst the trees upon a low hill, overlooking a small bay of the Isle of Alsen, has an attractive aspect when viewed from the sea. It is entered by a gatehouse and square courtyard, three sides of the court being formed by the main building and a wing on each side, at right angles to the central pile. The gardens on the west side are tastefully laid out with covered alleys and a piece of ornamental water. It was the Duke Frederick Christian of Augustenburg who, in 1776, erected the present mansion; but a house had stood there since 1651, built by a Duke of Sonderburg, who named the place after his Duchess, Augusta. The title of the Dukes of Augustenburg is, however, derived from this place. Prince Frederick, who now pretends to be the Duke of Schleswig and Holstein, was born there. His father, the present titular Duke of Augustenburg, forfeited the estates both of Augustenburg and Gravenstein by taking part in the rebellion of 1848-50 against the Danish Crown. He afterwards received compensation to the amount of more than £400,000—not for the loss of this private property, which was a consequence of his judicial attainder, but for renouncing, in agreement with the Treaty of 1852, the claim of his family to a reversion of the Schleswig and Holstein duchies.

THE CHATEAU OF GRAVENSTEIN, SUNDEWITT, THE PRUSSIAN HEAD-QUARTERS.—SEE PAGE 214.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

NOTHING is more significant of liveliness in Parliament than when the Opposition takes up the hasting of Ministers as a pastime from five to seven on most evenings. Just at present the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs is invested with the character of the "butt" in the game; and being, as he is, peculiarly susceptible of irritating influences, he encourages attack. In truth, Mr. Layard, owing to what appears to be an overloading of his mind with a variety of topics, has always been somewhat loose in his oratorical displays, and utterly seriously, perhaps, is often rash and incorrect in assertion, while he sometimes answers questions in a way which suggests that he supposes his subsequently to explain and amend what he has said. We have had a taste of his quality in both respects lately. Some of the matters which to peculiar to him, he slipped out, with an air of perfect belief, that the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS was the property of Mr. Lloyd, and of something like a libel on the public, by palming off pictures of scenes in distant countries as the productions of its own artists which were, in many instances, manufactured in Wardour Street. So has been committed to rise in his place in the house and declare himself only in the wrong as regards the fact of the irresponsible Minister in the House of Commons, when it became normal in every country for the Minister in the House to do the Danish question poor Mr. Layard is terribly bothered. He knows, of course, the case of the delay in the publication, and knows that whenever Mr. Bentinck or Lord Robert Cecil, with a marked smile indicating a large connection in their minds, asks when they are to be forthcoming, they are insinuating that they are undergoing the process of judicious "cooking," and in Under-Secretary Layard's self-contentment, replies in a conscious blustering manner which tells the tale only too plainly. Mr. Layard's position is one of very great difficulty on all diplomatic crisis last Monday night.

It was a symptom of that organisation of the Opposition which we have remarked upon on evidently occurring on the occasion that whenever there was nothing to lead to the supposition of a scene, the benches on the Speaker's left were crowded, and on the occasion of the Ministerialists, seeing this gathering, took the hint and mustered strong also. Everybody on both sides of the House, indeed, was inside the suit of sables which he was worn all this year, and equipped in a peculiarly sober way enough; so that, when the debate wards occurred, it may be taken that he had prepared himself, like an athlete, for a display of pugilistic science on the critical moment; when Ministers hoped that the House was about to slide into the sedate of the day, he sprang up, and in a sonorous voice and delivered one of the smartest and most telling speeches which have come from him for many a long session—a speech on the whole policy of the Government, which might have been drawn by the author of "Junius." Confusion and something like alarm on the Treasury bench, and Parliamentary tactics were at once with a little notice, leaving his recalcitrant colleagues. Mr. Gladstone and Sir George Grey, for a difficulty in answering the attack made at the meeting. In a white heat, and therefore, outwardly, deadly calm, and unmoved in speech, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, perhaps with a latent idea of showing that, after all, he has some combativeness in his nature but, somehow, he did not hit off the main body of the house, and hence his answer was almost a fiasco. Then Lord Palmerston intervened that packistor-general, Mr. Bernal Osborne. The matter which stood for discussion was the Navy Estimates, and Mr. Ward Hunt, ex-Secretary to the Admiralty any other Liberal member dealing with this subject may be supposed to exercise an irritating influence; at any rate, this time it was not so. The debate centred hardness and bitterness of style, and made a motion which the rest of the evening and charitable to say, it terminated into a vote of want of confidence in the Government, and, being mainly and hotly argued in that form, it lasted through the evening. His presence was not unneeded, for there was a struggle about getting on the Estimates, to which the Opposition took very positive exception; and in the end a great part of the sitting was occupied by a tremendous Fernandez—that is, Mr. Ferrand was allowed to tell his three-fold tale of the sinking of the Royal George at Plymouth, with an effect which was humorous, though not, perhaps, in the sense he could have desired it to be taken. Some practical and critical observation of Mr. Stansfeld were unable to give him material to work on, as demonstrating that the Navy Estimates, because it was noisy and long, and, above all, a special display of egoism.

Mr. Leatham, the young and aspiring member for Huddersfield, whom we have before now designated as the Member for Somerset, small sweat, in a speech which was as pointed as it was amusing—in the subject, he regret the relative merits of the Navy and the Army—as Junior town for Yorkshire—and in which he humorously roasted Mr. Baines to a turn, spoke of that gentleman as going about with "a single-minded Bedford Row" in his hand, and declared that he ought to equally applicable to Mr. Locke King, who on Tuesday last let off his annual firework, which, however, was rather a failure, missing fire at the second discharge. For the first time these two years, when we have been present at the display of the pet of asserting reformers, which sounded very much like a cackle, but which seemed to Mr. Locke King to be the cackle of triumphant hens, we do not remember him ever to have been so firm and decided in manner, and to have got rid of all his usual apologetic tone. It was all fair to him, as he was on this occasion. He seemed as if he expected instant and decisive opposition, and was prepared to encounter it and thrown away such unusual energy as he displayed when the Home Secretary, with suave reconciled pooh-poohing of the matter, said, in the most offhand way, that he was not prepared to say that he did not whole House, and that was that the discussion of a measure which proposed to reduce the qualification of voters for counties from £50 to £10 should be postponed, while they really did not care if it ever came to be discussed at all. Mr. Bernal Osborne, however, with his usual unfortunate, uninflienced by pressure or a certain penal squeezing, are not close to respectabilities; and he, therefore, rose to the task with such a self-belief as that which characterises the present is not likely to listen to the reforming spirit of the age, and that the only seductive charmer than Mr. Locke King.

It would seem that the Government were again unprepared for an Opposition assault on Tuesday. It seems evident that they did not suppose that Lord Robert Cecil had the slightest intention of calling for papers relating to the case of the Birkenhead steam-rams, one of the most damaging of the blunders which Ministers have made on any occasion to office. Mr. Disraeli's reply to accustomed to infuse an amount of vocal and gesticulative energy into every speech he makes, that it was not surprising that the Attorney-General did not take the matter to be so serious as it afterwards proved; and he contented himself with one of his calm judicial expositions of the case, without imparting into it any of those flashes of eloquence, and brilliant and scathing illustrations of his argumentation which are scantily described by the familiar words points and hits. If he had believed that this was an occasion when the Opposition could put out a show of strength which, on the face of it, might will have been believed not to belong to them, he would have thrown into it all for Sir Hugh Cairns, instead of taking the initiative in the debate on the part of the Government, and he would have done it as well as he can do in a reply. It was hardly an exaggeration of phrase on the part of Mr. Walpole when he said, that, since the days of Sir William Grant and Sir James Mackintosh, there had not been delivered such a masterly exposition of international and constitutional law as that delivered by Sir Hugh Cairns on this occasion. Indeed, he seemed to have been inspired out of his usual calm but forcible ratiocinative style, and to kindle into a higher and more aggressive eloquence. In fact, he was under the influence of a personal feeling, which Mr. Disraeli, with his usual tact, felt to be right. Some time past, and especially on the question involved in the seizure of vessels alleged to be for the service of the Confederate States, come to directly into contest with Sir Roundell Palmer, and their positions in the House of Commons, as regards legal knowledge and ability, that it is no wonder Sir Hugh is put upon his mettle. On this occasion every one could see that Sir Roundell Palmer—for, as he did not, of course, lose any force by the recollection that Sir R. Palmer could not retort in the same way—was put on the defensive. A brief discussion ensued, when the subject dropped.

THE DANO-GERMAN PAPERS.

A smart debate sprang up quite unexpectedly. After a preliminary skirmish between Mr. Disraeli and Mr. Gladstone, the latter moved the appointment of a Lord Robert Cecil of the foreign policy of the Government.

Mr. Disraeli, in opposing the motion for a Select Committee on the Naval Estimates, moved an amendment to the effect that the going into Committee of Supply be postponed to Thursday, the day after the papers on the Danish question were produced.

Mr. Gladstone, in a thoroughly animated discussion, the Opposition minister, and the Government were defeated by a majority produced before any, while Mr. LAYARD and Mr. GLADSTONE asserted that, owing to the voluminous nature of the papers, they had not been able to get them ready for being put into the hands of members.

On a division, Mr. Osborne's amendment was rejected by 220 to 67.

OUR NAVAL YARDS.

Mr. LINDSAY called attention to the report of the Commissioners in 1860 to inquire into the control and management of her Majesty's naval yards.

Mr. CORRY replied that no decision had been arrived at, and none made on the present state of the management of Government dockyards.

Mr. H. BERKELEY moved for a return of the number of vessels in years past and now constructed at Woolwich, Chatham, Portsmouth, Devonport, and Pembroke, and of the existing Devonport as a prominent instance.

Mr. Corry then moved the appointment of Supply, pro forma, and immediately resumed.

The other orders were disposed of.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

PENAL SERVITUDE.

The Marquis of SALISBURY moved for returns of the number of convicts under sentence of penal servitude confined in gaols other than Government prisons in the years 1862 and 1863; and asked the Government whether any and what steps had been taken to carry out the recommendations of the Commission on Penal Servitude.

Earl GRANVILLE intimated that so far as the Government was concerned they had no intention of acting upon the Report, which had not produced into the House. The Report of the Commission was, however, under the consideration of the Government.

The Earl of CARNARVON spoke at length in favour of penal servitude was based on erroneous principles, and the consequence was that at a punishment of heavy crimes it was a failure. In many of its provisions he did not disapprove of the measure of the Government.

Lord WODEHOUSE contended that the want of certainty in the infliction of penal servitude caused it to fail in a deterring effect on crime. He thought that it would be better to shorten the sentence of heinous criminals and carry them rigidly out.

Earl GREY thought it not possible to resort to the system of punishment without modifications, that at the same time, objected to a system of granting tickets of leave as wholly incompatible with punishment for crime. He was of opinion that it was desirable to carry out satisfactorily a plan of tickets of leave in this country.

The motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

Mr. B. Osborne gave notice that on Friday he should move a resolution condemning the system of Government prosecutions.

Mr. Lowe, in reply to Sir J. C. Dervise, said the expressions in the vocabularies of slang that he had used were not official.

Mr. Layard, in reply to Sir S. Clifton, said the Government had given its consent to the publication of the correspondence of tobacco growers in Nova Scotia, provided such a course was not taken as a precedent. Cotton was in another category, and the correspondence of individuals, which formed was the property of the two Governments he had named.

Mr. Layard, in reply to Mr. Ferrand, said, on a second time, and ordered to be received and printed.

Mr. Black obtained leave to introduce a bill for the consolidation of the Acts relating to the Customs and Inland Revenue and the fine arts.

The Income Property Act Amendment Bill, as amended, was considered.

CONVICT'S TICKETS.

Mr. E. King moved for leave to introduce a bill to extend the franchise to convicts who had received the Queen's pardon and had undergone the full punishment awarded by the sentence of the Court.

Sir G. Grey assented, on the part of the Government, to the introduction of a bill on the understanding that the discussion should take place upon it on the second reading.

Leave was then given to bring in the bill.

PUBLIC EXECUTIONS.

Mr. Hibbert called attention to the demoralising effects of public executions, and moved for papers relating to the subject. He had, he said, put a question to the Home Secretary on the subject, and had received a number of public communications in favour of the abolition of Lord Ferrers' capital punishment, and the experience they had had on the previous day in London, when 100,000 persons had assembled to witness the removal of a murderer. He utterly denied that executions had any deterring effect on the classes who witnessed them, and contended that the moral condition of the crowd assembled carried out in private.

Mr. Hay did not pronounced strongly against capital punishment. The only thing to be compared with our executions was a prize fight, and he believed it a pity that the Legislature had not taken the course of the ancient Romans, and carried out directly. He objected to executions taking place privately, because, in that case, the public would not believe in them.

Sir G. Grey said that he had received many petitions on the subject of capital punishment. He advocated public executions. Horrible as the scene of Monday was, he thought the consequences were not so injurious as at first sight appeared. First, it was a vindication of British law and justice; and, secondly, it was impossible to say that the punishment of death had not been extremely effective, if some of the crowd who had witnessed it. Public opinion, he believed, demanded greater publicity than at present. The motion for papers would be objected to for the present.

Alderman STOTT declared that the citizens of London were disgusted with the spectacle of the previous day. He also condemned the burial of the bodies of executed criminals within the walls of the prisons.

Lord H. LENNOX strongly condemned the conduct of railway directors in running excursion trains to the scene of executions, and thought that some steps should be taken to prevent the recurrence on Monday, as on the previous night he never witnessed. It was one mad orgie of blasphemy and indecency. He called upon the Government to do away with the scenes which public executions taking place on a Monday, in order that the rascality of the Sunday might be more effectually put down under the Sunday Observance Act. He suggested further that the authorities of the gaols should not give notice beforehand of the day on which executions would be effected.

After some observations from Mr. Bonham-Carter and Lord Grey de Wilton, the motion was withdrawn.

THE STEAM-RAMS IN THE MERSEY.

Mr. S. FITZGERALD moved for papers relating to the seizure of the steam rams at Liverpool. He did not want those relating to the judicial proceedings, but he did want to know what was before the advisers of the Government which had been laid before Congress on the subject, he said it seemed to him that the Government had not done their duty. He moved for papers, and he asked for papers in order that the House might be enabled to form a judgment on the conduct of the Government.

Mr. LAYARD said that the papers asked for were those of a purely documentary part of the case, and would not give to the House the means of forming a satisfactory opinion on the subject. He denied the charge made against the Government, and said they had made inquiries which proved that the vessels were not for the service of Egypt or Denmark, but that they were intended for the Confederates was shown by a paragraph which he quoted from the report of the agent of the Confederate States. He thought it right to state the steps which had been taken by the Government to prevent the expedition of public money.

Lord E. CECIL supported the Government for its conduct in the matter.

Mr. W. E. FORSTER supported them, and argued that English interests were undoubtedly involved in the question, and that the papers ought to be produced.

Mr. J. CAIRNS at great length criticised the proceedings in respect to the steam-rams, and strongly condemned them.

The Solicitor-General for Ireland spoke at length in defence of the conduct of the Government, and contended that the delay complained of was unavoidable.

Mr. Fitzgerald withdrew his motion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Income Property Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Attorney-General moved the second reading of the Bankruptcy Bill.

Mr. Knight Bruce moved that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

Several amendments were introduced in the Bill, but the House ultimately adjourned the debate.

The Irish Church Act Amendment Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Attorney-General moved the second reading of the Bankruptcy Bill.

Mr. Knight Bruce moved that the bill be read a second time that day six months, and he introduced in the House of Lords. The hon. and learned gentleman spoke at length in opposition to the bill.

The Solicitor-General for Ireland supported the bill.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, with reference to the latter suggestion, observed that the Government had not the time at their disposal for the revenue of these millions, whilst already claims had been made upon him for the remission of the duty on hops, and for the increase duty on the malt, that involved a total loss of nineteen millions and a half. How he was to deal with such questions he could not undertake to say, and he could not accept as a subject for ingenious speculation rather than anything else. The right hon. gentleman spoke at length in opposition to the motion for the appointment of the measure, and observed that, speaking from the Ministerial bench, he could not undertake to say that the Report of the Revenue Department would be realised to the extent of the estimate which had been made by the Commissioners.

The House then went into Committee, pro forma, and further proceedings were adjourned until Thursday.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

Metropolitan Railways.—The Earl of DERBY presented a petition from the Corporation of London against the extension of their railways into the interests of nine proposed railways, which threatened to displace 4000 people from their dwellings. The noble Earl presented a petition to the same effect, which had already taken four acres of the ward.

The Duke of NEWCASTLE and the Earl of DERBY again referred to the question he had asked Earl Russell on the previous evening, and which the noble Earl had promised to answer. The answer of Earl Russell was to the effect that he had not received copies of the correspondence of the Danish Minister at Berlin relative to the seizure of the rams in the Mersey; in doing so the noble Earl referred to the reply he last received and to the statement he made on the subject. He had given the matter in the Government. Earl Russell said the noble Earl had somewhat misrepresented his reply. The answer of Earl Russell was to the effect that he had not received the production of these papers would result in an incomplete discussion of the question. He had not received the papers complained, and he could not say that the case now being discussed in the courts of law. With regard to the other papers, he understood that Lord Cowley had received them, and would probably be produced. He thought that the production of these papers on the production of which there could be no objection. The noble Earl then laid such papers before the House.—After further discussion, which was joined in by Earl Russell, the Earl of Derby, Lord Granville, Lord Clarendon, and the Earl of Carnarvon, the subject dropped.

The Affairs of Denmark.—The Earl of Malmesbury asked that further and more recent correspondence with reference to the affairs of Denmark should be published. The noble Earl said that erroneous statements were daily appearing in the public press which were doubtless, in many respects unavoidable. He did not blame the press. The editors were obliged to call upon their correspondents for information, and they were supplied with it by newspapers and pamphlets, or they were not provided with reliable information.—Earl Russell replied that a great deal of the correspondence asked for had been already presented to Parliament.

The Case of Captain Melville White.—The Marquis of Clanricarde put a question to the noble Earl at the head of the Government as to whether the Government of Port have given, or are likely soon to give, a decision in that matter.—Earl RUSSELL said that one of the senators of Hamburg had the papers before him with the view of making a report to the Senate of Hamburg, on which the matter had been decided. The noble Earl added that he would see if he could not hasten the decision.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

On the motion of Mr. Bruce a new writ was ordered for the county of Hertford, in the room of Mr. Pulley, deceased.

THE TRENT CLAIMS.—Lord STANLEY said, in reply to Mr. Peacocke, that the Treasury minutes relied by counsel would be in the Case. The Government were not aware of any circumstance that there was no sufficient reason for the seizure, and had ordered the release.

RECEIPTS OF DANISH DUES.—Mr. W. FORSTER asked whether the Danish Government had given any notice of any change in the dues on the German ports.—Mr. LAYARD said her Majesty's Government had received no information that any change was going to be made in the dues. If they inquired whether the Danish Government had officially claimed the assistance of England on the ground of the Treaty of 1857, they would be told that it had no ground for asking for assistance under the treaty.—Mr. DISRAELI said that he had laid on the table the correspondence on the Danish papers on the table. In answer to Mr. Crawford, Mr. DISRAELI added whether it was true that Prussia and Austria had agreed to a conference; and, if so, whether that arrangement would be considered satisfactory?—Lord PALMERSTON said that one of the great objects of her Majesty's Government had been to arrive at the differences between Austria and Prussia on the one hand and Denmark on the other, and a conference had been proposed with an armistice. Her Majesty's Government had thought that such a course proposed without a conference. Austria and Prussia had agreed to a conference without an armistice, and had invited this country to join in it. Her Majesty's Government had thought it right to accept the invitation, and a conference was to meet in London.—Lord PALMERSTON added that the German Diet had been invited to join the conference.—Lord PALMERSTON, in answer to the inquiries, said that the conference would be held in London.

THE EFFICIENCY OF OUR NAVY.

Sir J. WARD called the attention of the House to the inadequacy of our state of naval preparation to the present exigencies of political affairs; and moved that, in the opinion of this House, the great changes in naval warfare and material made of late foreign shipbuilding necessary the immediate and immediate national efforts, on a scale calculated to maintain the maritime supremacy of England. The hon. gentleman said that the navy was in a totally different condition now to what we were heretofore. We must look for our security in the fact that we possessed a greater number of iron-clads in Europe, and war was imminent, it would require as powerful as if we were actually at war. Looking at the state of the case, he thought that the navy was in a condition nearly approaching to discreditable. Certainly we were not well prepared for action at a day's notice, as we ought to be. The progress of science had materially lessened the efficiency of our fleet, and the country was entirely unprepared for a conflict. We had not an abundance of able artificers, and still to construct an iron fleet; and no time ought to be lost in making up for the deficiency. Our position as a great maritime power in the Indian Seas, the West Indies, the Mediterranean, the Pacific, and the Channel, made it one of the first considerations that our fleet should be made sufficient for the protection of the commerce and the maintenance of the honour of the country in those places. He knew, after all, it was a question of money; but he was satisfied that it was the wish of the country that no proper expense in placing the country in a condition of perfect security.

Colonel SIBTHORP said it had been said that the navy was in a certain parly to speak of the French navy as being superior to ours. But on comparing the two it was found that we had 20 iron-clads more than the French. The rest of the French navy was something like 50,000,000, whereas the rest of the British Navy was 54,000,000. He was glad to hear that the Navy, with our resources and our means of manning, was able to meet the combined navies of the world.

The motion was ultimately withdrawn.

THE NAVAL ESTIMATES.

The House then went into Committee upon the Naval Estimates.

Lord C. PAGET moved the Navy Estimates. They were in the following ridiculous words he made—viz., 4500 seamen, 1000 marines, and 2000 boys. The total number of men this year would be 71,000, against 70,000 last year. The estimated cost of our Navy this year was £10,349,922, against £10,402,000 of last year, showing a reduction of £52,078. Last year Lord Clarence Paget had a heightened estimate, and this year he had a reduced one. The Admiralty had been economical, and equal to any emergency the freight-rate. They had given great attention to the subject of the system of manufacturing on iron-clad fleet; the Admiralty were therefore gradually converting our wooden ships into armour-plated ships, and would not force vessels to run that the former. This fact was sufficient to justify the reductions which he announced.

The remainder of the night was occupied in a discussion upon the Estimates.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Lieutenant-Colonel Wm. Baban died at 7, Old Burlington-street, on Saturday last, aged seventy-four.

Her Majesty has conferred the Knight Companionship of the Bath on General Cameron, in acknowledgment of his services in the late Zealand war.

The squadron under the command of Rear-Admiral Dacres, in the Pique, has been ordered to proceed to the Cape of Good Hope, Portland Roads, where it will await further orders.

Admiral Sir Baldwin Walker, Commander-in-Chief on the North American and West Indian station, has given a naval eulogy for competition among the youths of the Anglo-Nova Scotia population in the use of the naval and marine officers.

A voluminous report and appendix were on Wednesday issued by the Commission appointed on the 2nd of May last year to inquire into the circumstances by officers of the late Indian army, and the claims of officers holding commissions in their favour, when that army was amalgamated with the home Army, had not been given effect to. The Commissioners have investigated into these complaints, and the commissioners, agreeing generally with the observations made in the report, all sign it, with the exception of Lieutenant-Colonel Wilkinson.

Captain H. Schaw, Royal Engineers who is at the head of the Electric Telegraph and Photographic Schools at Chatham, has proceeded to Corfu, by order of the Commissioners for the Defence of Gibraltar, to make certain observations in that and the neighbouring islands previously to their being finally evacuated by the British forces. A party of sappers and miners, Royal Engineers, together with a number of non-commissioned officers, have left Chatham with Captain Schaw, under the command of Major Scott, and after a short and thirtieth companies, stationed at Corfu, in destroying the fortifications. A telegram from Corfu states that the demolition of the forts has now commenced.

From a Parliamentary return just issued it appears that the number of special commissioners appointed to make assessments and hear appeals against the property and assessed taxes, and the number of assistant ministers in the late chairman of the Board of Inland Revenue, who receives other emoluments in addition to his commissionership, and the salaries of the other commissioners for the year ended April 5, 1863, was 28,789; the number who paid duty upon such assessments without appeal was 28,212; the number of appeals against assessments, 9432; the number of appeals confirmed, 1291; of appeals abated, 1008; and of appeals discharged, 1159. The number of places at which the special commissioners attended to hear appeals was 81.

An Admiralty minute allows Her Majesty's Naval Navy comprises 892 ships and vessels afloat, 95 of them effective sailing-vessels (chiefly mortar vessels and tenders) and 800 steamers. The effective steamers consist of 39 armour-plated ships and floating batteries, 56 ships of the line, 37 frigates, nine blockships, 24 screw-sloops, 19 vessels, 27 gun-vessels, 27 gun-boats, 12 despatch and mortar-ships, and 15 troop and store ships. The 20 armour-plated vessels afloat are the iron-clad ships of the line and five frigates, the iron-clad screw-sloop, three iron floating batteries, and four of wood. Of armour-plated screw steam-vessels building there are nine iron-clad ships, and three frigates, one of wooden fourth-rate, a cupola-ship, fourth-rate, and another converting, two wooden screw-sloops, sixth-rate, and one sloop.

A statement has been issued comparing the sums expended with the sums voted for the several services of the Army and Ordnance for March 31, 1863. The amount granted was £16,060,150, which, added to £1,000,000 of Exchequer Bonds, £1,000,000 of Treasury Bills, and £1,000,000 of the Consolidated Fund, made the total £19,160,150. Of this sum £17,782,248 was expended, leaving a balance of £1,377,902. Of the surplus, £647,149 was on account of warlike stores; £1,000 on account of the Militia; £1,000 on account of victims, food, furniture, &c.; and £421,792 for volunteer corps. Amongst the deficiencies of these sums are £1,000 for miscellaneous services, £1,716 Royal Parks, £74,158; land forces (pay and allowances), £87,891; manufacturing establishments, £36,351; disembodied militia, £75,305; and balance of two ordnance persons, considered irrecoverable, £67991.

By accounts received from Madagascar up to the 16th of December it appears that great agitation prevailed at Antananarivo, similar to that which had taken possession of the minds of the lower classes some weeks before the last revolution. Parties mutually denounce each other. Queen Ranohorisoa is quite a victim to her new husband, the Minister Rainivoninahitriniony, who continues to indulge in his love of drink, and who is described as a man of violent passions and of a cruel disposition. Letters which prohibit the Queen from attending Protestant worship, and the Roman Catholic Missionary, having been accused by Mr. Ellis of anti-missionary feelings, has left Tamatave, and returned to the Mauritius.

MUSIC.

The English Opera season at Her Majesty's Theatre is about to close. The concluding performances will take place next week. A second great morning performance of "Faust" is announced to take place on Monday next, in aid of the funds of the Middlesex Hospital. It appears from the annual accounts of the charity, that the number of indoor patients relieved during the past year was 2341, and of outdoor patients 21,186; and that the income of the charity has been £4511 short of the necessary disbursement. We trust the performance of Gounod's popular opera will be a substantial contribution towards the liquidation of the hospital expenses.

The Royal English Opera has yet three weeks of its season to run. From the unabated success of Macfarren's new opera, "The Lily of Killarney," we hope that it will keep the management of the stage, without interruption, to the end of the season.

The rival managers of the Italian Theatres, Mr. Gye and Mr. Mapleson, are both on the Continent, beating up for recruits for their respective companies. We have not yet heard the names of remarkable novelty, whether piece or performer, as being forthcoming at either theatre.

Mr. Lucas's "Israel in Egypt" was performed by the Sacred Harmonic Society, at Exeter Hall, on Friday, last week, for the first time this season, to an audience which completely filled the hall almost to suffocation. The principal singers were Miss. Rudersdorff, Mrs. Alaiza, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, Mr. Cummings, and Mr. Patey. As a choral work, "Israel in Egypt" is the "masterly" one of Handel's works, and is "full of learning" and the great choruses, "He gave them hailstones," "But as for his people," and "The horse and his rider," were given with stupendous power and effect. The solo singers acquitted themselves with ability, though it is not in its solo vocal pieces that the treasury of Handel's genius is displayed. In this respect "Israel in Egypt" is surpassed not only by "The Messiah," but by more than one of Handel's other oratorios.

The Musical Society of London gave their first concert, for the season, on Wednesday evening, at Willis's Rooms. This was not a regular musical entertainment, but rather a social reunion, in which amateurs and professors took part for the pleasure of performing. The music was entirely of the "chamber" class, consisting of songs, concerted vocal pieces, with solo, quartet, and trio accompaniments, and instrumental pieces. The scene of the evening refreshments were served in the lower rooms, and it was near midnight before the company separated.—Morning Post.

The Madrigal Society held their one hundred and twenty-third anniversary dinner at Freemasons' Tavern, on Monday last, 15th inst. The chair was occupied by the Right Hon. Sir George Clerk, Bart., as president of the society, supported on his right and left hand by a large company. A fine selection of the madrigals of the great masters of the sixteenth and seventeen centuries were admirably sung, almost the whole of them encored, and repeated on motion, in the harmony of the evening.

Dr. Gordon Bennett, the distinguished Cambridge Professor of Music, is giving a course of lectures, at the London Institution, "On the Music of the Principal Nations of Europe—of Belgium, Italy, France, and Germany." Two of these lectures have been delivered—one on Belgium, and the second on the Music and Poetry of Italy. They excited great interest, being full of sound and elegant criticism, and illustrated by fine specimens, selected from the works of the composers mentioned, executed beautifully sung and played by Mdme. Vinning, Mr. Redfearn, and Mr. O'Leary. The two remaining lectures will be given in the same manner, in the harmony of the evening.

Dr. Gordon Bennett, the distinguished Cambridge Professor of Music, is giving a course of lectures, at the London Institution, "On the Music of the Principal Nations of Europe—of Belgium, Italy, France, and Germany." Two of these lectures have been delivered—one on Belgium, and the second on the Music and Poetry of Italy. They excited great interest, being full of sound and elegant criticism, and illustrated by fine specimens, selected from the works of the composers mentioned, executed beautifully sung and played by Mdme. Vinning, Mr. Redfearn, and Mr. O'Leary. The two remaining lectures will be given in the same manner, in the harmony of the evening.

Mdlle. Artôt, whose brilliant appearance at the Philharmonic and other public concerts, during the last few months of our musical readers, is performing with great éclat at the Royal Opera in Berlin. She does not, however, sing in Italian, but in the French edition, which says that she is more anxious about making great vocal display than about sustaining with propriety the characters which she performs. Mdlle. Artôt's voice is, we are told, also sung in Italian and spoke the dialogue in German; a practice which reminds us that the same lady once sang and spoke in Italiany and when she celebrated Mrs. Toffs and other English prima donnas sang and spoke in English.

Herr Theodore Formes, the tenor (brother of our well-known and favourite basso), is engaged at the Royal Opera of Berlin with a pension of a thousand pounds sterling.

On Sunday, as every one knows who knows Paris, is the favourite day for concerts and promenades. But on the Sunday before last there was, first, a "Concert Populaire," under the direction of M. Pasdeloup, at the Cirque Napoléon, where 6000 thousand persons were present. Then there was a musical matinée at the house of Mdme. Stoffel, where the most select and exclusive performed to a brilliant assemblage of dilettanti; and in the evening the sisters Marchesini appeared before a crowded audience at the Salle Herz.

Mr. Mendelssohn's chef-d'œuvre, "Elijah," is only now about to be performed for the first time at Paris, Mdme. Rudersdorff has been engaged to sing the principal part.

The Brussels journals announce the death of Count Rossi, the husband of the celebrated Sontag. Since his return from America, in consequence of the failure of his bank, he lived in retirement at Brussels, occupying himself with the education of his children.

THE THEATRES.

SADLER'S WELLS.—The management of this theatre are evidently determined to leave no stone unturned for the effective performance of the legitimate drama; and to make this matter more apparent than ever, the benefit of the directress, Miss Glyn, in the tragedy of "Hamlet," and produced it on Monday with new scenery and dresses, and with the whole strength of the company. Perhaps to prove attentive to a large class of playgoers. The promises of the bill were fulfilled, and the house was in consequence performed to suit. The spiritual apparatus was not that of Messrs. Dircks and Pepper, who, we believe, have a crowded audience at the Polytechnic, but the elements required by the dramatic action, but consisted of mechanical appliances and such a disposition of lights as enabled the ghost to appear and disappear in a manner in which the play was acted may also be commended. It would be idle, now, to praise Miss Glyn's personation of the character of the Prince, which, both in town and country, has already received its meed of praise; but we may say that we never saw the character better played in every respect. Mr. D. Jones, in representing the Ghost, spoke the text with a care as to pronunciation and emphasis which was rare. Mr. Ryder, as Mrs. Buckingham White, in Queen Gertrude, though not altogether, in appearance, the character we had pictured to ourselves, was, as Mrs. Gresham, in the guilty King, introduced the closet prayer and produced a powerful effect. Mr. Cathcart played the part of Laertes of Mr. Edmund Phelps; and Miss Mandleber, in Ophelia, deserved the applause she received. Mr. Phelps's scenic arrangements, which, particularly the ramparts, in the first act; the chamber scene, wherein the ghost appears, in the third; and the churchyard, in the fifth act, were perfect, by the getting up of this Shakspearean revival, the management have justified the encouragement that they deserve.

SURREY.—The sensational drama still survives at this transpontine theatre, and the "Bride of the Battle," or the Fate of the Shepherd has provided for his patrons a melodramatic piece which will probably live long in their remembrance. Anything more romantic or more exciting was never contrived. The motive spring of it is a criminal proclivity which can find no satisfaction except in criminal acts, and which drives on the action to exigences that excite an almost frenzied interest in the audience. We must condense the story. To begin—we have first the lover of Ruth Ringrose (Miss Pairceffet) and Newton Barnard (Mr. Bernandet), which are interrupted by Ruth's father, Ringrose (Mr. E. Green), who, though of a miserly disposition, kids high for her charms. This old fellow has a rake of a son, Hal Oakford (Mr. Shepherd). In due course, poor Abel Ringrose's fruth, father, is murdered in a copse by Joshua Boynton (Mr. J. W. Ray), who possesses himself of the miser's pocketbook and bank-notes, and places near the dead body the pocketbook of Newton Barnard, which he has found in the wood. Hal Oakford, however, protects Barnard, but is himself in peril, having accidentally killed (as it is supposed) a parish constable in defending an Arab ringleader—a scene in the predjudice of the Gloucestershire villagers. Both become fugitives, and in the second act are seen together on board a transport ship, commissioned to bombard Algiers. They capture a slave-vessel, the captain of which is Joshua Boynton, whom he makes a secret passage to Algiers. The two friends, who are engaged on this expedition, are taken by the Arabs, and in the first act, although they are ordered for execution, but are saved by the Arab ringleader, who takes a fancy to Hal Oakford, promises his protection to Hal for his own rescue from the Gloucestershire roughs. Soon afterwards the lovers of Ruth and Barnard, under circumstances of more glorious termination for the second act. In the third act are brought again into contact with Joshua Boynton, the real murderer, who is about to marry Newton Barnard unconscious of the wretch, and in his attempt to bring about that (to him) desirable result, commits a fresh crime, and is at last, in the presence of Barnard, Ruth, and betrays at once a desirable coal-mine, which is being fast flooded by the waters of a river. Newton, to avoid in his arm, is unable to aid the poor girl in this imminent danger. Hal, however, comes to the assistance of the lady, and in the second reaches the fainting maiden, helps her in, and prepares to second; but is beset by the hostile Arabs, and after a most splendid fight escapes. Nothing remains but to cut the basket from the rope, and by the latter to let the lovers down to the precipice below on his arm, and to mouth of the mine. This he does, amidst the acclamation of the audience. The piece was received with great favour.

POLYGRAPHIC HALL.—This place of effectainment has been taken for a month by Mrs. George Cass (late Miss Grace Egerton), who, with her company, will nightly supply us a musical and dramatic entertainment. The latter assisted the illustrations with his peculiar and versatile talent. The first night's performance was received in the overwatched; and the lady herself commands admiration by the remarkable elevation of her musical powers. The scene of the piece is a drawing-room. As the landlady of the house and an Irish girl, Kate Mooney, Miss Cass displayed much humour. Mr. Cass's singing we also showed that various ability on which her early celebrity was grounded. The second part has a scene representing an apartment in the Pavilion Hotel at Folkestone, in which the entertainers appear as the Parisian married couple, and encounter a number of new characters. Mrs. Cass appears as the Hon. Mrs. Fitz-Fussie Mrs. Ferrer, as Mrs. Amelia Tremlet; and Mr. Cass amused the audience by an exhibition of his skill on the violin and concertina. This exhibition ought to become popular.

Joseph William Trutch, Esq., has been appointed Chief Commissioner of Lands and Works, and Surveyor-general for the colony of British Columbia.

The South Australian papers record the death of Mrs. Williams the wife of Captain Williams, of Pahquarri, in Wales, and emigrated from England at eighty-five years of age.

The New Zealand Government opened the opening of the first railway in that colony, between Christchurch and Heathcote, in the settlement of Canterbury. The rail give an Engraving of the ceremony in our next Number.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19.

BANKRUPTS.

A. CURTIS, Old Kent-road.—J. ROE, Wych-street, Strand, bricklayer.—J. BRITTON, Kingstreet, Cheapside-cross, grocer.—M. DE G. ET HORTIGUES, Clarement-square, Pentonville.—J. HOLLOWAY, Bishopsgate-street Without, tailor.—J. HOLLOWAY, Bishopsgate-street Without, tailor.—J. HOLLOWAY, Bishopsgate-street Without, tailor

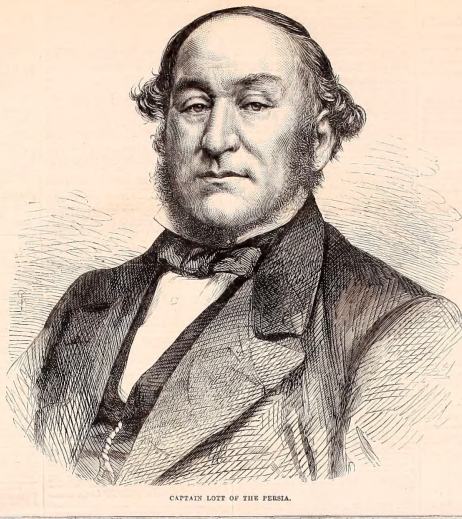
COLONEL NEALE.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL EDWARD ST. JOHN NEALE, C.B., the British Chargé-d'Affaires in Japan, who has just brought our differences with the Japanese authorities to a satisfactory close, is a gentleman of long and tried experience in the consular and diplomatic service of his country. His career has been one of continued activity. Lieutenant-Colonel Neale is a scion of an old Hertfordshire family, to which belonged Dr. Neale, Archbishop of York, temp. Charles I. Colonel Neale's great-grandfather, the Rev. William Neale, M.A., was Rector of Chesham and Cholsall, Herts; and his grandfather, the Rev. William Neale, M.A., was Rector of Essendon and Bayford, in the same county. He himself is the son of the late Daniel Neale, Esq., of the Supreme Court of Madras, by his wife, Eliza, daughter of John Buchanan, Esq., of the family of Buchanan of that ilk. Early in life Colonel Neale entered the military service of Portugal and Spain, and distinguished himself in both countries. He has the Spanish Royal Military Order of St. Ferdinand of the first class, and a medal conferred upon him by the Queen of Spain for his "gallantry in the attack on the enemy's line in front of St. Sebastian on the 9th of May 1836." He retired from the Spanish service to accompany Sir George Lloyd Hodges, C.B., to Servia, in May, 1837, and he was attached to the Consulate-General at Belgrade for nearly two years, being in charge of it for eight months. He was appointed British Vice-Consul at Alexandretta in 1841, and from that he was promoted to the consulate of Varna, in Bulgaria, in 1847. He was in Bulgaria throughout the whole of a memorable period, that of the late Russian War. He received and hospitably entertained at Varna most of the Generals and leading officers of the allied armies; and his courteous and conciliatory conduct tended not a little to keep up a cordial understanding between the military of each nation. While holding this commission he was detached on duty to Omar Pacha's head-quarters, at Shumla, for two months, in 1853; and, in 1855, he accompanied General Charles Frederick Havelock (brother of the famous Sir Henry Havelock) to Shumla and Roustan, for the purpose of recruiting and raising the 3rd Regiment of Osmanli Irregular Cavalry. He was appointed, in 1858, Consul for the Morea of Greece, and thence he was transferred in the same year (at the moment of an expected political crisis between the Turks and Montenegrins) to the British Consulate of Bosnia, including Herzegovina and Montenegro. In 1860 he was promoted from the consulate to the ship consular service, on being appointed her Majesty's Secretary of Legation to the Embassy at Yedo; and in 1862 he was named Secretary of Legation in Japan. The absence of the Envoy, Sir Rutherford Alcock, K.C.B., made Colonel Neale Chargé-d'Affaires there, and afforded him a fine opportunity for the display of that cool courage and sound good sense which he is known to possess in a remarkable degree. Step by step, with much diplomatic art, he brought the Japanese rulers and people to a better conception of, and respect for, the British power. He obtained submissive apologies and heavy compensation for past injuries from the Tycoon and his potent vassal, the feudal Prince Satsuma; and he has created a feeling of security in the merchants trading with Japan that is likely to lead to a more peaceful state of things for the future, and to very great mercantile prosperity. Colonel Neale, who has just been made a C.B., married, in 1846, Adelaide, younger daughter of Henry Sewell, Esq., Madras Civil Service.

The accompanying portrait of Colonel Neale is from a photograph recently taken at Yokohama, by M. Beato, and forwarded to us by our Special Artist in Japan.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL EDWARD ST JOHN NEALE, C.B., THE BRITISH CHARGÉ-D'AFFAIRES IN JAPAN.

BARRACKS AT YOKOHAMA, IN JAPAN.

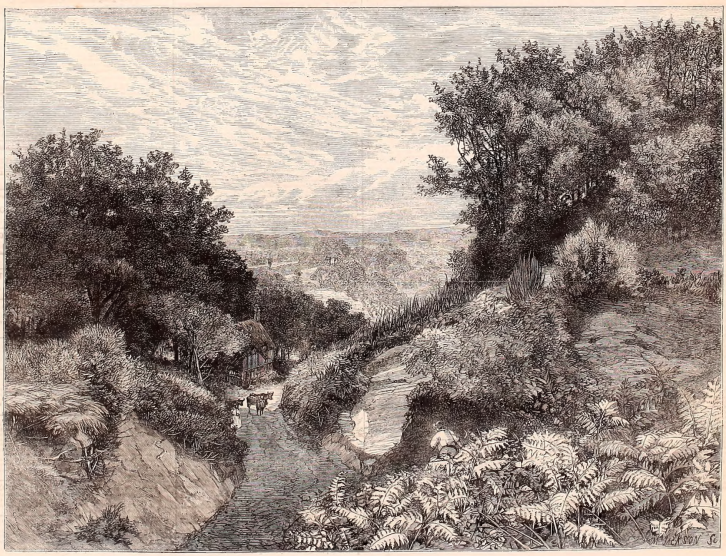


We engrave this week another sketch taken by Mr. Wirgman, our Special Artist in Japan, to whom we are indebted for the Illustration of the "Payment of the Prince of Satsuma's Indemnity," which appeared last week, as well as for that of the "Bombardment of Kagosima," to which Mr. Buxton and Mr. Layard referred in the House of Commons' debate a fortnight ago. The Illustration in this week's Number represents the barracks in the course of construction for the detachment of the 20th, expected daily at Yokohama. These barracks were planned and constructed by Captain Fred. Brine, Royal Engineers, an officer of great engineering ability, who has seen a good deal of Japan since he has been there, and who is at present studying the manners and customs of the Ainos, a tribe of Yeso distinguished by some curious features.

BARRACKS FOR BRITISH TROOPS IN COURSE OF ERECTION AT YOKOHAMA.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST IN JAPAN.

CAPTAIN LOTT OF THE PERSIA.

THE Portrait which we give this week of the well-known commander of the Cunard mail steamship Persia will be acceptable to all those who, as passengers across the Atlantic, have been placed under his care. At New York, as well as at this end of the line, his merits are justly acknowledged. We observe that an entertainment took place the other day at Delmonico's, the fashionable refreshment-rooms in that city, upon the occasion of presenting Captain Lott with an elegant set of silver plate, subscribed for by many ladies and gentlemen who had made the voyage in the Persia, and who wished thus to bear testimony to their confidence in his skill as a seaman, and their gratitude for his civility and attention. He has made the trip three hundred times.



CAPTAIN LOTT OF THE PERSIA.

THE TURNER GOLD-MEDAL PRIZE LANDSCAPE.

WE have engraved and described elsewhere the medal awarded for the best landscape by a student of the Royal Academy. The landscape for which this prize was last conferred is engraved below, and is remarkable when considered as the work of a young artist—Mr. Frank Walton—who is, we understand, only now in his twenty-second year, and who, before he proved the successful competitor for the Turner gold medal, had been a student only some three years. This "prize-medal picture" has freshness of feeling and brilliancy of colour, and evinces close and painstaking fidelity to nature. It belongs to the realistic class of landscape-painting, being copied directly from nature, without any premature attempt at the poetical in more treatment, and with no affected mannerism caught from any master or from the old academic traditions of "classical" landscape. All these negative and positive qualities are of happy augury when seen in a young painter's work. We say this much in simple justice, and we say it frankly, relying on the artist's good sense. Mr. Walton will not imagine his painting is faultless; he will not relax in his efforts at improvement because he has won praise very early and easily. The great painter to whose liberality he owes the honourable distinction he has received was himself a life-long student.

The scene represented in this picture is one of those among the Surrey hills so well known to the landscape-painters of the metropolis. The view is taken from one of the hollows in the side of Leith Hill, looking towards Aldershott, Guildford is just discernible in the distance, and on the horizon is faintly traceable the peculiar contour of the hill and landmark known as the Hog's Back. The road descending the declivity of the hill from the immediate foreground is deeply cut into the marl of the district, the warm, dusky, golden hues of which afford so fine a contrast to the luxuriant greens of the foliage. To the right is a breast-high fern-brake which the ledger trims by the footpath. High on each side, with their roots exposed by the crumbling banks, are young chestnut, ash, and other trees, and through and beyond their lower leaves and boughs in shadow the sunlight glints and quivers magically. Down the road a farmer's daughter or dairymaid drives cows to the farmyard, to new grazing, or their nightly inclosure; and at the very bottom of the hill nestles a most picturesque farmstead.

The middle distance is occupied by a comparatively level tract, divided into irregular chequers by hedgerows, strewn with woods or dotted with trees, and parti-coloured with alternate fields of pasturage and wheat, half reaped and stacked. Beyond, the blue distance rolls away to the ranges of pale, far-off hills. This third plane of the picture seems to us too suddenly and uniformly bluish, even allowing for the cast shadows of the more opaque cumulus clouds in the distance. We would recommend every young artist to have some, though not a slavish, respect for that maxim among painters that "whatever looks wrong is wrong." Besides the clouds we have alluded to, there is an upper stratum of fleecy cirrus, beautiful in arrangement and delicately painted. This picture is now on view at Messrs. Betjemann's Gallery, Oxford-street; where also may be seen two water-colour drawings by the same artist—one of them being especially meritorious.

THE TURNER GOLD MEDAL PRIZE LANDSCAPE, BY F. WALTON.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

BIRTHS.

On the 15th ult., at Neemuch, Central India, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Carmichael, C.B., 54th Regiment, of a son, prematurely born.

On the 16th inst., the wife of Henry Fred Barclay, Esq., Walthamstow, Essex, of a son.

On the 24th inst., the wife of the Rev. James Rathbone, Knowsley Villa, Teignmouth, Devon, of a son.

On the 24th inst., at 6, Upper Belgrave-place, Mrs. Alexander Morton, of a son.

On the 22nd inst., at Hinxlip, near Worcester, the wife of Henry Alsop, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 18th inst., at Kirkland, near Penrith, by the Rev. T. Alderson, M.A., Curate of Greystoke, Rev. C. M. Stanley-Bourdon, Rector of Ashwell, Cambridgeshire, to Mary Susanna, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Richardson, Esq., of Kirkland, Cumberland.

On the 18th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Rev. John Dale, M.A., Mons. Eugène Delaunay, to Miss Louisa, third surviving daughter of the late James M'Lachlan, Esq., of Hanover-street.

DEATHS.

On the 17th ult., at Neemuch, Central India, the infant daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Carmichael, C.B., 54th Regiment.

On the 22nd inst., at 15, Park-terrace, North Brixton, Mrs. Mary Rose, of Highland Cottage, near Crewe, Ireland, relict of Captain John Rose, aged 68 years.

On the 24th inst., at Walmer, Kent, Mrs. Elizabeth Reader, widow of Lieutenant-Colonel Reader, late of Bengal, in the 86th year of her age.

On the 14th inst., at Lisbon, D. Genevieve Van Zeller, widow of the late Joseph Van Zeller, aged seventy-nine. R.I.P.

On the 19th inst., at 49, Dartmouth-road, Blackheath-hill, Mary Ann, the wife of Mr. Richard Gilbert, Elder Middle, native of Bury St. Edmunds, and third daughter of Mr. Thomas Ellis, of the same place.

On the 20th inst., at Hampton Court Palace, the Dowager Viscountess Hereford, in her 81st year.

In Ashwell-street, Marylebone, Captain Edmund Percival Morphy, in his 52nd year.

At Mayfield, Ashford, William R. Paterson, Esq., late of Manilla and Singapore, and son of the late Lieutenant-General Sir William Paterson, K.C.H., of Castle Huntly.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

From our Correspondent.

It having been announced that both America and Prussia have agreed to submit a settlement of their dispute to the arbitrament of the following-Holstein difficulty there has been a decided improvement in the tone of the Stock Exchange, and there is an apparent somewhat increased demand for most kinds of securities; consequently, the enquiry of stock-at-last has increased.

There has been but only a moderate flow of money for commercial purposes. In the open market the supply of capital is on the increase, and the best paper is now readily negotiated at the following rates:—

	Per cent.		Per cent.
Thirty days' bills ...	3 to 3½	Four months' bills ...	3½ to 4
Sixty days' bills ...	3½ to 3¾	Six months' bills ...	4 to 4½
Three months' bills ...	3¾ to 4

On Thursday the Governor and the Bank of England reduced their minimum rate of discount to 7 per cent.

On Friday the Government loan was offered for short periods at 2 per cent.

Throughout the Continent the inquiry for capital has not increased, and the rates of discount, however, have been supported at the rates in the leading cities:—

	Bank rate, per cent.	Open market, per cent.
Paris	3	2½
Hamburg	4	3½
Berlin	4	3½
Frankfort	4	3½
Amsterdam	3	2½
Vienna	5	4½
Brussels	3	2½
Madrid	5	4½
St. Petersburg	6	5½

Over £200,000 in gold has been sent into the Bank of England; but £277,000 has been withdrawn for the Havre steamer. The exports for silver for abroad is very limited, and the last manner for Bombay was £20,000.

A notice has been given by the Imperial Government that the subscriptions for a Turkish loan of £12,000,000, being the remainder of the loan, will be received on the 29th inst.

The stock of wheat in the United Kingdom is 1,600,000 quarters.

On Monday National Securities rose full one, as advanced quotations. Turkish, for Consols, were done at 90½; Spanish Passives, 46½; Portuguese, 46½; Redmond and New Three per Cents, 94½; India Five per Cents, 103½; Ditto Four per Cents, 101½; Ditto Three per Cents, 94½; Ditto Enfaced Paper, 93½; Ditto Five per Cent. Loan, 103½; Ditto Four per Cent. Five and-a-Half per Cent Bay'e Paying, 101. There was less doing in Foreign Railways, but prices were firm. Caceres, 8½; Great Indian Peninsula, 103½; Great Northern, 103½; Great Western, 84½; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 84½; Midland, 107½; Ditto Birmingham and Gloucester, 112½; Ditto Bristol and Exeter, 99½; Ditto Shrewsbury and Hereford, 34½; Ditto Worcester and Wolverhampton, 16½; Ditto West Midland, 97½; North British, 72½; North Eastern, Berwick, 92½; Ditto Leeds, 92½; Ditto York, 92½; South Devon, 6½; South Eastern, Dover, 72½; South Wales, 91½; Vale of Neath, 96½; Ditto Extension, 96½; Ditto Eastern Counties, 46½; Ditto Northern and Eastern, 103½; Ditto Shareholders' Certificates, 103½; Ditto Preferential Certificates, 103½; Ditto Deferred Certificates, 103½; Ditto Debentures, 103½; Ditto Debenture Stock, 103½; Ditto Annuities, 103½; Ditto Perpetual Annuities, 103½; Ditto Preferential Annuities, 103½; Ditto Deferred Annuities, 103½; Ditto Debenture Stock, 103½; Ditto Debenture Stock, 103½; Ditto Debenture Stock

NEW MUSIC.

THE PUNCH AND JUDY QUADRILLES, on Popular Comic Themes. By H. S. ROBERTS. "Decidedly the merriest and most facetious set that has been published for many years." Splendidly Illustrated in Colours. Price 4s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season. Illustrated London News. "4th edition. Price 4s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by MISS. Dawes at the Crystal Palace and other Concerts. Price 3s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

THE "TERBELLI" POLKA-MAZURKA. By HENRI ROUBIER. Played at all the balls of the season with great success. Embellished with an exquisite Portrait of Mdlle. Terbelli. 3s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A lovely Song, of genuine melody, touched with wonderful grace and musicianship. Sung with great success by MISS. Dawes at the Crystal Palace. 3s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. A vigorous, dashing, and thoroughly effective piece, in the style of Gottschalk's "Bamboula." 4s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANDANGO. One of the most recent and successful pieces by this unrivalled and universally popular composer. Price 4s. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DU CŒUR. A very spirited and brilliant Waltz, the most popular since the celebrated "Bonbons" were published. Price 4s. net. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU, Played by the composer at the Hanover-square Rooms with immense applause. "A melodious, elegant, and charming composition." Post-free for thirty stamps. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. Extended Edition. One of the most popular and permanently successful pieces ever written by the composer. ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.—
THE PRINCE NATIONAL ANTHEM—GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. Newly composed it by the Composer for Four Male Voices. Sheet, 1s. 6d.; Orchestral Parts, 2s. 6d.; Septet, 2s. 6d.; Full Score and Parts, 5s.
DAUGHTER, OF DENMARK. Song. By Brinley Richards. Sung by Madame Sainton-Dolby. Price 3s.
O THOSE BRIGHT AND GOLDEN DAYS. Song. By F. Abt. Composed for Miss Dolby. The Festrels. 3s.
THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER. Song. The composer of "Her bright smile haunts me still." Eleventh edition. 3s.
NEW SONGS by MISS M. LINDSAY (Mrs. J. W. Hyde).—"Come love to me." 3s. But if "Good night" be not for me," 3s. "Thou art so near and yet so far." 3s. "Recitative," 3s. 6d. Hours they haunt her more than ever." 3s. "Thou art gone from me." 3s.
RICH AND RARE WERE THE GEMS SHE WORE. Song. By WARWICK AS SUNG AT HOME AT DAWN, AND AT EVE. Three editions in the press. Price 3s. Post-free, 18 stamps.
WHEN I SPREAD OUT MY TETHERED WINGS. Song. By Arthur Edlin. Illustrated. Twelfth edition. 3s.
ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S CHURCH MUSIC.—Cocks and Co.'s CHANTS CATALOGUE of recently-published Chants, Single, Double and Four-fold.
ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S PIANOFORTES, in Walnut and Rosewood, 6 octaves, 22½, 25½, 28½, and 34½ Drawing-guineas each instrument.
London: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street, Music Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. And Agents for the Sole Publications of Mr. Balfe and Sir. Caldicott.

CHEAPEST MUSIC REPOSITORY IN ENGLAND. All the New Music half-price and post-free. Sample-sheet for stamp. All orders executed by return of post. Catalogues, Two stamps.—PAUCHON, 8, Rathbone-place, W.

WHEN I AM FAR AWAY FROM HOME. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves's Nightly with immense applause at all their Concerts. Post-free for 18 stamps. PAUCHON, 8, Rathbone-place, W.

ARTHUR LLOYD'S SONG OF SONGS. "An Old Thought." The most popular Song at the Canterbury Music Hall. Illustrated. 3s. 6d. Post Unsolicited. PAUCHON, 8, Rathbone-place, W.

IT'S JUST AS WELL TO TAKE THINGS IN A QUIET SORT OF WAY. HARRY STONEHOUSE'S New Song. Illustrated. 3s. 6d. Post Unsolicited. PAUCHON, 8, Rathbone-place, W.

THE KIDDLE-A-WINK GALOP. By the Composer of the "Rouge-et-Noir Galop Quadrille." A charming Galop, played everywhere. Price 4s. H. PAUCHON, 8, Rathbone-place, W.

FROST FAIRY MAZURKA. Splendidly illustrated in Colours. Post-free for 18 stamps. Just Published. Musical Monthly," containing also "Hunting Song" and "Fairy Dance," by Brinley Richards. Price 1s. London: 55, Fetter-lane, and all Music-sellers.

SPRING TIME IS COMING. This Season's Song of the Season (Beautifully Illustrated) can only be obtained with the "Musical World" (March 5th), containing also Post-free.—London: 83, Fetter-lane, Strand, and all Music and Book-sellers.

NEW SONGS.—"The Ruler of the Sea," "Sister's Love," and "The Northern Tree." Words by D. G. RUSSELL. Music by BRINLEY RICHARDS. London: 55, Fetter-lane, Strand, and all Music-sellers.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE; and JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN—the two admired Hymns sung before the Princess of WALES at Exeter. Price 3s. each. ASHDOWN and CO. (late Jullien), 91, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTE DUETS.
JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN; and NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE. Arranged by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 4s. each. ASHDOWN and CO. (late Jullien), 91, Regent-street.

HARRIS'S CHEAP MUSIC LIBRARY. One Guinea per Year; Six Months, 12s.; Three Months, 6s. Prospectuses and Lists of Terms for Country Subscribers sent Post-free. 34, Soho-square, Music-publishers.

THE ROYAL SCHOOL-ROOM PIANOFORTE, 25 Guineas; with the celebrated Check Action, full compass, rosewood wrest-plank, all the latest improvements in sound-fastened unity by OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square. Drawings free.

ADDISON and LUCAS'S MUSICAL LIBRARY. Subscription—One, Two, or Three Guineas. Prospectuses on application.

MUSICAL BOXES, by Nicole, of Geneva, 104. The selection of purchasers is invited to these superior boxes. For table—best tunes, 4 airs, 4s. tune, 6 airs, 6s. tune, 8 airs, 8s. tune, 12 airs, 12s. tune. Overture boxes from 16 to 32 guineas. Pocket boxes—ten tunes, 2 guineas; three tunes, 30s. Nicole's Musical Boxes are the best in the world, and the only perfect tone boxes; beautifully-painted cases, with the best tunes, and warranted, 24 to each. Boxes exchanged and repaired. List of tunes and prices sent free. Nicole's Musical Boxes sold, and for repairs.—ADDISON and LUCAS, 167, Regent-street, W.

ADDISON and LUCAS'S Price Held A MODEL PIANOS, German-colour legs, 25 in. and 41 in. high, 6 octaves, 18 guineas; 6½ oct., 20 gns.; 6¾ oct., 21 gns.; 7 oct. grand, 41 in. high, 40 gns. Every Piano is tuned and proved before being leased by the undersigned. Mr. Beethoven Walls, with accurate daily to your instructions.
Address and Lease, 210, Regent-street, W.

ADDISON and LUCAS'S Price Held A PIANOS, eight or nine octaves, trichord throughout, 41 in. high, 6 guineas each, forward pianoforte 10 guineas, for unlimited period, by instalments and others.
Address and Lease, 210, Regent-street, W.

CHISHOLME and SON'S (from Broadwood's Portland Cottage Pianettes, in Rosewood or Walnut, 6 octaves, 20 guineas; 6½ octaves, 22 guineas; 7 octaves, 25 guineas.—11, Bentinck-street, Oxford-street, W.

MUSICAL-BOX DÉPÔTS, 32, Leicester-square, and 56, Cheapside.—NICOLE'S Latest Musical Boxes, £1 per Air; Overtures, 16s. to 30s. Compositions of the most recent publication, from 2s. 6d. to 5s. Prospectuses free. Nicole's Musical Boxes are kept in Leicester-square, with the largest assortment in London.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPÔT for the Sale of NICOLE FRÈRES' Celebrated Musical Boxes, manufactured from 3s. 6d. to £1 each, at Cornhill, London. A large assortment of all sizes from three tunes to twenty-four airs. Also a choice selection of fancy boxes and perfume-fans.

MUSICAL BOXES.—NICOLE FRÈRES' Latest Make, £1 per Air; Overtures, 16s. to 30s. Compositions of the most recent publication, from 2s. 6d. to 5s. Prospectuses free. Nicole's Musical Boxes are kept in Leicester-square, with the largest assortment in London.

FRAMES FOR "LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD," Size 30 by 24, Price 21s. Frames for Engravings, Size 30 by 24, with this Paper, 4s. 6d.; Size 24 by 20, 3s. 6d.; Size 20 by 16, 2s. 6d. Frames for Photographs, Size 12 by 10, 1s. 6d. Frames for Cartes-de-Visite, 1s. 6d. per dozen. Frames for Stereoscopic Views, 1s. 6d. per dozen. Frames for Miniatures, 1s. 6d. per dozen. Frames for Engravings, Size 40 by 30, 30s. Frames for Engravings, Size 50 by 40, 40s. Frames for Engravings, Size 60 by 50, 50s. Frames for Engravings, Size 70 by 60, 60s. Frames for Engravings, Size 80 by 70, 70s. Frames for Engravings, Size

NEW MUSIC.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of the celebrated Opera as a Concert Duet, for Pianoforte, by W. H. CALLCOTT, Mus. Doc. Oxon. Price 4s., net; and other admired extracts — viz., "Flower Song," "Chorus," "Faust's Cavatina," &c., not before published or duets. In two books, 3s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST with ENGLISH WORDS. The Splendid Opera in new ready, complete, with Italian, French, and English Text.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ, By G. DODSWORTH. Played with great effect by the Bands and Pianoforte of Weippert, and at Collinet's Concerts, with immense success. Just published, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CAMILLO (Drummer of the Scots Fusilier Guards). Played with great success at Collinet's Promenade. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP. Just out, a New Galop by Mr. Thousands of the Harum-Scarum Galop. Galopes always fashionable. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed on all the favourite and popular airs of the day. By JAMES CAMILLO. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' FAIRY'S DREAM. A Romance for the Pianoforte. A new edition of this charming Romance is now ready. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR ENGLISH AIRS.
No. 1. Rose, sweet rose. 3s. Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Bonny Dundee. 3s. Duet, 4s.
No. 3. My lodging is on the cold ground. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR IRISH AIRS.
No. 1. St. Patrick's Day. 3s. Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Kate Kearney. 3s. Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Fly not yet. 3s. 6d. Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR SCOTCH AIRS.
No. 1. The blue bells of Scotland. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Oh! dear what can the matter be? Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Auld lang syne. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

ALBERT LINDAHL'S POPULAR DANCING-ROOM FIGURE.
Mazurka. Lancers. Quadrilles. Waltzes. Galopes. Polkas. Schottisches. Redowas. Polka-Mazurka. La Tarn des Roses—Innovation. 3s.
Chappell's Lancers—Innovation. 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Sidney Nelson, and sung with immense success by Mr. Santley.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PANTOMIME TUNES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. Beautiful Airs on the most favourite melodies from Gounod's "Faust." Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PFEIFFER'S HOMMAGE A GOUNOD. Grande Transcription et Concert of the entire Romance Scene in "Faust." Price 4s., net.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE QUEEN'S POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just Published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s., net. Orchestra, 3s. Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE POPULAR CAVATINA, in the Garden Scene of "Faust," Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves at Her Majesty's Theatre. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MR. SAPTLEY'S NEW SONG IN "FAUST."
LOVING SMILE OF SISTER KIND. Composed by Gounod. Price 3s. Sung in Gounod's "Faust," at Her Majesty's Theatre.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just Published, Gratis and Postage Free, by Miller, Tortoiseshell Vaqual with great success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Another new and charming Scherzo, arranged as a brilliant Pianoforte Piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASONS. No. 45 of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE contains a subscription of Hymns for the Christian Seasons, adapted for the Sicilian Mode. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BIDDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 46, contains Twenty Sea Songs, including "Tom Bowling," "Black-eyed Susan," All's well," Poor Jack," "Rule Britannia," "Heart of Oak," &c. Price 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LEARN SONG.
IT IS THOU. "Has become an established favourite from its simplicity and beauty of melody, and is one of the most charming songs of the season."—Vide Critiques. Sung with great success at the Concerts of the Nobility and Gentry.—Published, Price 2s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW SONG.
THE SPRINGTIME OF THE HEART. Sung with great success by Lascelles Orridge, at the Concerts of the Nobility and Gentry. Price 2s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

VALSE OF THE SEASON.
I P. CLARKE.—SWEET DREAMS, as played by Madame Arabella Goddard. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

I P. CLARKE.—TADEM GALOP. just issued in equisitely the "Eglatine" by the same Composer. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BY THE COMPOSER OF THE SUNLEMON GALOP.
CHERRY RIPE GALOP, by J. CASSIDY, is the most added for this season. Price 3s.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BREAKDOWN POLKA. By MUSGRAVE. Just Issued at the Broad Theatre. In the Press. Price 3s. Illustrated.
METTLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

HALF PRICE.—Music sent post-free at half the published price.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Opera. By Dr. ARNE. Price 4s.
"I never sipped, by Dr. Arne ... ... 2s. 0d.
"What is this love?" Cavatina. ... ... 2s. 0d.
"The coming old fog." Song, with Chorus ... ... 2s. 0d.
"The good old days of the country squire." Song ... 2s. 0d.
"Let me like a soldier fall." Song ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Why sadly sighs?" Song ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Am I not a pretty damsel?" Song ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Hark! the horn." Song, with Chorus and unaccompanied soldiers' ... 2s. 0d.
"Thus the flowers." Song ... ... 2s. 0d.
"The cuckoo dines in the poplar-tree." Four-part Song ... 2s. 0d.
"Hail, smiling morn." Glee ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Rise, gentle moon." Glee ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Come, neighbours, come." Catch in 4 Set of Six ... 2s. 0d.
"Sir Loin." Catch ... ... 2s. 0d.
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
"He'll raise no more." Song ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Thus the flowers." Song ... ... 3s. 0d.
"I met her first." Transcribed by Natalia Macfarren ... 3s. 0d.
"Hail, smiling morn." Glee ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Rise, gentle moon." Glee ... ... 3s. 0d.
Other arrangements, by Brinley Richards, Francesco Berger, Coote, &c., in the press.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE VILLAGE BEAUTIES WALTZES, By CHARLES COOTE.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

COOTE'S JESSY LEA WALTZES, 4s. (Illustrated.) Founded on G. A. Macfarren's popular operetta, "Jessy Lea." CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

TINNEY'S NEW GALOP, THE FURIES, with Great Accuracy, 4d. (ib.). Illustrated.
TINNEY'S DEL DEMONIO VALSES, with Correct Accuracy, 4d. (ib.). Illustrated.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

TINNEY'S LAGO DI GARDA VALSES 4d. (ib.). Illustrated. Founded on Airs connected with view of lake.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

TINNEY'S CHILLON QUADRILLES 4d. (ib.). Illustrated. Founded on Airs connected with Scenes of the romantic castle.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"A LA," Valse. By GABRIEL. Illustrated by two Ballets. 3s. A dreamy and poetical grandeur sung. CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL'S IN THE HOUSE. Sung by GEORGE LINLEY. 3s. 6d. This Song will steal into every heart. Illustrated with three Views of the Isle of Wight.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE SONG GUIDE. By RÉNÉ FAVARGER. 2s. 6d. (A charming Song.)
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BREEZE AND THE HARP. By Miss GABRIEL. 3s. A beautiful song, and one of the best Miss Rachel Gabriel has ever written.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

LEAH'S SONG. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s. Illustrated with a Portrait of Miss Rosenthal as Leah, composer of Balfe's "Bohemian Girl." This song has been eminently successful in the setting of this pathetic ballad.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

PET MARJORIE. Ballad. By F. LABLACHE. 3s. (Illustrated.) Founded on Mr. S. H. Jacob's popular song. "Pet Marjorie" is a charming ballad, tenderly and pathetically written.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C GOUNOD, FAIRER THAN THE MORNING. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Lewis, "La Petite Suisse," &c. 3s. CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and all the best Works, at half the published prices, sent post-free. Country orders per Post Office order (heard weeks required).
BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

THE FIRM FIGG FOR 1864.
KUHE'S THE CONFIRMED HERO COMES. Price 4s. (Brilliant but not difficult.)
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

The prettiest drawing-room piece is GANZ'S SOUVIENS TOI. Price 3s. Illustrated.
"A most pleasing morceau, equally simple and elegant."—Illustrated News of the World. HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEW NOVITUNE.
SENTIMENT POETIQUE. By IUCMO. Price 4s. A charming piece for the Piano.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW GERMAN VALSE.
STRAUSS' LILY BELLS. Price 4s. With Illustrations.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE'S CHARACTERS. Price 4s. Illustrated. A most elementary Exercise (not to be confounded with a Study) for the Pianoforte, by Coote (Op. 3rd), containing "Where lies she sleeps," "Come unto these yellow sands," "O! full sweet," "Full fathom five," "Where the bee sucks," "How then shall we," "What shall he have that killed the deer," "Over hill, over dale," "Where the bee sucks."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S ULTRA-MARINA GALOP. Price 3s. Second Edition. Now ready.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Second Edition, now ready,
C OOTE'S LA BELLE BLUM
Or Queen of the Beautiful Isles. Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S CHARMING KEARNEY WALTZES, 4s. (Illustrated.) Founded on Miss Kearney's "Irish Melodies." "Tormore's Farewell to Tormore," "Our Country," "Kate Kearney," "Erin's Shore," "Bold Dermot," &c.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 3s. Illustrated. Founded on Airs from Mr. Brinley Richards' popular song. "The Village Bells." Dedicated to the Composer.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

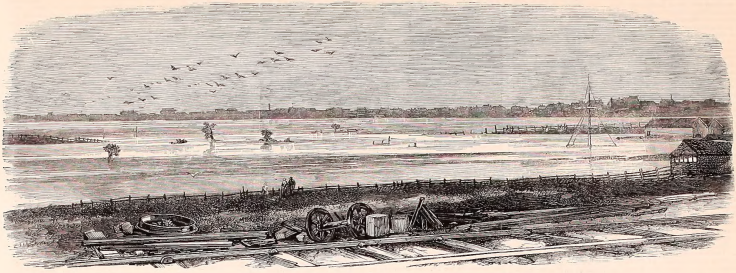
THE SONG OF THE DAY.
POLLY PERKINS. By the BAILY CLIFTON. Price 2s. 6d. Sung in all the Burlesques and Pantomimes.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

MERRY SONGS.
Each 2s. 6d., post-free 1s. stamps extra.
Ballads with her Eighteen Umbrella ... ... 2s. 6d.
Bonnets and Boots ... ... 2s. 6d.
Groovy Sonnet ... ... 2s. 6d.
Mrs. Brown Gathers-All ... ... 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHRISTY SONG. 2s. 6d.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, Sung by Mr. Christy.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CHRISTY'S SONG WITH CHORUS.
HERE, UPON MY VESSEL'S DECK! By HOOD. Price 2s. A most spirited composition.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SUNG NIGHTLY BY THE CHRISTYS.
BENEATH THE WEEPING WILLOW. Price 2s. 6d. Plaintive and original.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

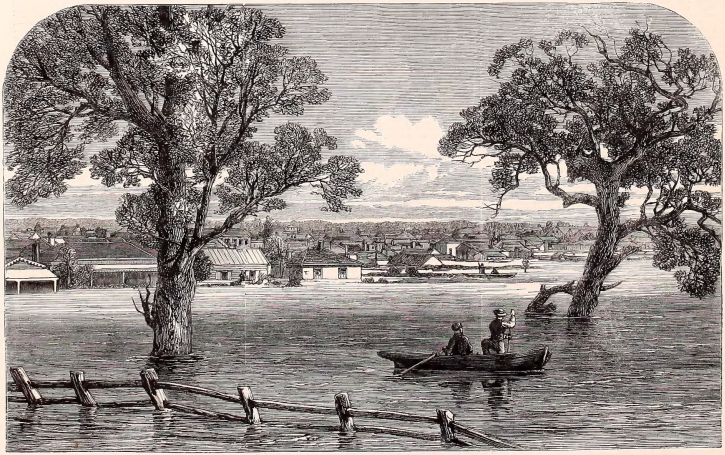


MUSIC, HALF PRICE and Post-free. For High Price or Cash Allowance. Book of every Publication, Musical Instruments, or Furniture in any part of the Kingdom, Carriage Paid. Catalogues 1d. Pa. The Profession and Trade supplied to sell at half price.
DUTHAM and CO., 76, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW. A New Weekly Journal of Music and the Drama, 16 pages, price One Penny. Contains Music, Reviews, Criticisms, List of all Entertainments and Musicsellers in town and country, of Every and Co., Paternoster-row; and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

SUSAN'S STORY, by CLARIBEL, new Ballad, published this day, will equal in popularity any of the favourite Author's songs. The words are charming. Price 2s. Also, published this day, "Sweet Spring," by the same Author. It may be as near as Claribel's "Spring Flowers," "Lonely Nest," "Lily of the wilders, &c., My Own Love Love, &c., Dark Eyes of Hagarty Bride," "Lily of the Valley," "Sweet Spring," "Sweet Spring," "Sweet Spring



FLOODS AT MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.

EMERALD HILL, FROM THE SUBURBAN RAILWAY.

ST. KILDA ROAD, SOUTH SIDE OF PRINCE'S BRIDGE.

PUNT ROAD, RICHMOND.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE FLOODS AT MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA.

It was mentioned last week, in a letter from our Correspondent at Melbourne, Victoria, dated June 26, that the neighborhood of that city had been visited by destructive floods. We give on the preceding page three Engravings (from photographs by Messrs. Davies, of Bourke-street, Melbourne) showing the appearance of the inundation at Emerald Hill, on the Punt Road, and on the St. Kilda Road.

The following is our Correspondent's account :—On Dec. 19 heavy squalls of wind, accompanied by rain, swept across the city, and continued to increase in intensity during the three following days. The wind being from the S.W. and S.S.W., a high tide arose. This, coupled with the heavy rain, had the effect of flooding the Yarra. Yarra rise to a greater height than it had ever done before. The Yarra is a narrow stream running from east to west, and divides the two or three miles of the bay. On its sloping sides have been planted the picturesque villas and pleasure-grounds of the city. A few well-to-do citizens as well as the more loosely cottage and kitchen garden of some of our land-working people, stretch down to the low-lying ground on each side of the river, at and below Melbourne, have been erected numerous dwelling-houses, stores, and factories, occupied by the many new trades and manufactures that are so rapidly springing up at Melbourne. When it is considered that the rise at Melbourne Bridge from the ordinary height of the river is 12 feet, the damage to property that has been caused by the flood will be seen. Hundreds of houses have been swept away. In all these houses the furniture and other valuables were either totally destroyed or greatly damaged. In many instances the inmates had great difficulty in escaping with their lives. In the neighborhood of Emerald-hill, which is close to the river, and, coming in contact with either of the bridges, were chained in pieces, the houses and outbuildings were piled in huge fortuitous and vines, and large quantities of hay and other crops were carried away. The Melbourne and Hobson's Bay railway, where the water having risen four feet above the works of the Melbourne Gas Company. Business was suspended for a week in two of our principal townships, the river covering the greater part. Many persons were injured, and hundreds of cases of oil carried seawards. Large quantities of salt and of the necessaries of life were lost, as well as other perishable articles. As the flood has not yet entirely subsided, it is impossible to form an estimate of the property destroyed. As a visitation, but it is roughly estimated that it will take a quarter of a million sterling to repair the damage. The poor of the city would have lost their lives through the flood; but it is anticipated that other fatal accidents, unreported, have occurred. The damage resulting from this disaster—many having lost their all—are widespread and acute. Steps have already been taken to collect subscriptions for the relief of the distressed, and a large sum has already been issued by the Government.

To Peter Paterson, one of their Honors by the present Floods.—Accommodation for a few days will be afforded to such families not persons on their applying at the Auxiliary Workhouse Depôt, Kensington-gardens, where the demand be in excess of the spare room, tents and bedding, under proper care, will be loaned, and every assistance given to the sufferers. Those who obtain from a clergyman or a magistrate of the locality must be produced at the depôt.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

AUSTRIAN OUTPOST NEAR LOTTORP.

THE sketch engraved upon our first page this week is one that was designed by our Special Artist to accompany the letter from Lottorp of Over-Selk, which appeared on the first page of our Journal last week. Lottorp, upon the line of railway from Flensburg to Tondern in Schleswig, is the place where the Austrian Commander-General von Gablenz had his head-quarters when he was driving the Danes from the Sol of February, which we have already described. This position commanded a view of the Danish lines, which lay on the right hand and the waters of the Selk-Noer, one of those lagoons of the head of the long estuary, or Firth of the Schlei, which form the southward and westward extension of the gulf. At a very short distance to the north of Lottorp is the Hadeby-Noer, another lagoon, which is the head of the Schleswig, and here is the eastern end of the Dannewerk line of earthworks. The Austrian outpost, therefore, was established entirely in the villages of Lottorf, Jagel, Over-Selk, and Wesdelugau, on the roads and the railway to Schleswig and Flensburg, the enemy's line while feigning to attack the extremity of the Dannewerk, which was directly in front of the Austrians, was really extended from both the Selk and Hadeby lagoons being on their right flank, cover the movements of the troops from Flensburg. On Thursday, the 4th, and Friday, the 5th, of February, Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia was thus enabled to bring the remainder of his army round the head of the Selk of Schleswig, and on the night of the 5th to establish occupying the peninsula between that Gulf and the Firth of the Schlei. But the Austrians were ready to force their way out, and at Missunde had been repulsed; but he succeeded in getting over, on Friday night, in a small mush boat, and reached the station at Jagel-Cappeln, not far from the opening of the Schlei into the Baltic Sea. It thus appears that Jagel was at the outset of the war considered as a pivot for the operations of the allied German armies. The Austrians had come by the same route from Rendsburg and Schleswig, while the bulk of the Prussians came from Kiel to Eckernforde—the latter position of the Prussians were placed in support of each other; so that, while the Austrians, on the Friday, were engaged in the severe work and fortifications of Schleswig, the Prussians were stretching out far to the left, and had reached the Flensburg road. The sketch in the Engraving on our front page was the interior of a public-house at Lottorf occupied by a party of Austrian officers, on the night of Friday the 5th, a few hours before they moved on to Schleswig. The three persons seated at the table are in the uniform of the Austrian contractor (with his head sunk between his arms), and our Special Artist himself. The landlord and his wife are reposing in one corner of the room.

THE DANNEWERK.

In our Journal of Jan. 30 we gave a minute description, with two Engravings, of this famous rampart. The Danes were obliged, as everybody knows, to abandon it and retire upon Duppel on the night of Feb. 5, as soon as the Prussians had secured their passage of the Schlei. It is hitherto not at all certain whether they will attempt to take the Dannewerk by assault or bombardment, yet there could have been no doubt that the strength of the Danish position in every portion of the same line of defence. There is no use in a high wall with a wide ruin-de-fosse at the top of it unless it be defended by the most exposed side of your garden, if the other half along that side is only bordered with a narrower ditch, and can be leaped over with the slightest effort. Not, indeed, that the Schlei would have been the easily passable if the Danes had been numerous enough to guard it all the way from Schleswig to the sea. But the line of the Dannewerk was to be inglorious lost. It is, however, still possible that the Dannewerk may again become an object of great interest at some future stage of the war. The Austrian and Prussian commanders, it seems, have taken counsel together for the final demolition of the huge double line of fortified earthworks, which extends from near the town of Schleswig, on the eastern side of the dodge, to the river Treen, some miles above its confluence with the Eider, on the western coast. We have seen that when the western districts of South Schleswig are flooded the only road from that country to Middle Schleswig is that passing under the Dannewerk. Whatever be the mark, by her own strength, he has not been able to hold fast this door against the German invaders. But if Denmark were hereafter to be assisted by some friendly Power, the Austrian and Prussian armies, having advanced beyond the North Schleswig line, might easily be caught as a trap. Suppose that the Fleet of the Selkes were to be entered by a naval force and the town of Schleswig recaptured, the Dannewerk, reoccupied by a sufficient number of troops, might then shut the door behind the backs of the Germans and forbid all approach from the South. It is not unlikely that this consideration may have determined the hasty demolition of the Dannewerk which is already put in execution. The Dannewerk batteries are being dismantled, and twenty or eighty pieces of heavy artillery divided between the Austrians and Prussians. The latest telegrams inform us that a hundred of the Austrian Sappers are employed in the demolition of the ramparts on Monday last (Feb. 22). Of the three sketches by our Artist which we engrave this week, the first is taken from the road to Selkebolt, No. 10, commanding the road and line of railway, from which a sentry at the end of the bridge is seen challenging. The sketch on page 201 shows the summit with a battery of guns, and a view of the surrounding country. The sketch in the Engraving we see Selkebolt No. 11, with some guns dismounted.

THE OUTLOOK.

The allies having crossed the Schlei and entered the town of Schleswig at an early hour on Saturday morning, Feb. 6, they lost no time in pressing on in pursuit of the Danes, who had retreated to Flensburg. This task more immediately devolved upon the Austrians, who had led the way into Schleswig. The Danes had brought open before them, when they had left the Dannewerk fortifications in the night. The Austrians, in like manner, pushed on from Selkebolt at Cappeln, which is more than twenty miles from the town of Schleswig, were to push on to Flensburg in different columns. The road from Cappeln to Flensburg parallel with the sea, the road from Schleswig to Flensburg, and the road from Schleswig to Cappeln along the north bank of the Schlei, a distance of 30 miles in an equilateral triangle; so that the Prussians from Cappeln and the Austrians from Schleswig would converge upon the Danes retreating to Flensburg, something less than twenty-five miles. But it was the Austrians who had the hardest fighting. They continued to be in fight with the rearguard of the Danish army as it turned and stood at bay whenever the ground favored it. On Feb. 7 the Austrians began at Jubeck, and on the old battle-ground of Idstedt, about four miles from the town of Flensburg, to the south, on the second day of that Saturday afternoon—all along the road as far as Oversee, which is twelve miles from Schleswig. The most obstinate fighting, however, was at Oversee, where the Austrians had to storm a difficult pass. "At half-past three o'clock, when Prince Liechtenstein's squadron of Hungarian Hussars had just passed the village of Oversee, and was clearing it of the trees and other obstructions, which the Danes had placed there, they were fired upon from the wood on the right, steep hill, with a small wood close to it on each side. The Danes had posted several guns on the top of the wood, and a body of their battalions of their infantry were stationed there, partly sheltered by the wood; a few more battalions were in the valley. The position was attacked by the Nesbitz Brigade of the Austrian army; the Liechtenstein Hussars first charging at a gallop, not at the road, which was swept by the enemy's guns, but at the open field to the right and left of the road, and crouching to their horses' heads that they might avoid the fire. The charge was successful, but the Danes could not see the Danes at all, because of the wood and the rising ground which concealed them. The Austrians had to attack in what quarter the Danes were posted. Having in a few moments lost twenty-five men and two officers killed and wounded, the Austrian Rifle Jagers, or riflemen, were then thrown out, as light skirmishers, on both sides of the road, while the Austrian artillery and the 'Deutschmeister,' commanded by Duke William of Wirtemberg, advanced at the double, with loud hurrahs, and in close column, position in the bayonet's point. They were supported by two battalions of the Hesse regiment, but were received with a murderous fire, and for more than an hour every foot of ground was disputed with the utmost fury. Many fell altogether about 600 killed and wounded, a third of these being officers; Duke William of Wirtemberg had a portion of his foot shot away, and has since undergone amputation. General von Gablenz was present during the fight. The Danes, as they contested and desperate struggle, the Austrians managed to storm the position with the bayonet, and the Danes at length removed their guns. On the left hand was a small lake or mere, which borders the road between Oversee and Flensburg (the position is shown in our Engraving), but the ice broke when they were in the middle, and many of the Danes fell into it. Those who could found their retreat along the road to Flensburg, as darkness had come on, and the Austrians, who had suffered severely, bivouacked in the open air for three nights before, were by this time steadily following them. The Danes, however, had never been slippery with ice, was here covered with snow, amidst which, in dark pools of blood, lay the bodies of the dead and wounded, and it was not a few who had sunk from mere exhaustion, without a wound. The Correspondent of the Augsburg Gazette, writing from on Sunday, the 14th, a week after the battle. The Austrians made an attempt to follow up the pursuit, but stopped at Rödschau and Sierenstadt, two or three miles from the town of Flensburg, where the Danes intended being sent back to a temporary hospital at Oversee. About 600 Danish prisoners were taken, and a number of guns and waggons, but could not speak German. They declare that their strength at Oversee was only 5000. The Austrians remained at Oversee for the night, giving time for the safe transference of the Danish head-quarters from Flensburg to Apenrade. On the following morning, Monday, the Austrians and Prussians entered Flensburg, but the Danish army had already got well on its way to Apenrade.

PRUSSIAN AMMUNITION-TRAIN ENTERING FLENSBURG.

It has been observed that the Prussian forces, except some detachments which were left to watch the Danish army, advanced upon Flensburg by the easterly or seaward road from Cappeln, the place where the Prussian head-quarters were. The Marshal von Wrangel, Prussian Commander-in-Chief of the allied armies, had his head-quarters at Flensburg on the 7th, and the division of Prince Frederick Charles moved to Gelting, which is on the road to Apenrade. The Prussian commander, General Letichau, had got into the stronghold of Düppel, at the extremity of the peninsula of Sundewitt and the adjoining island of Alsen, the north-east of Flensburg Fiord. The formidable character of the intrenchments at Düppel, which we have already described, is not to be expected that the Prussians would make deliberate preparations for bombarding them, instead of taking them by storm. With this view they have brought up heavy siege-guns and trains of ammunition, which are to be seen passing through the street of Flensburg, or stand, waiting for the means of transport, in the open space, or market-place, close to the railway beyond Flensburg, while the Schleswig-Railway, as for that terminus, is also crowded with waggons. It may be imagined that the result is a great accumulation or congestion of military stores both American and European, so that the town is quite choked up. In our Artist's Sketch we see an ammunition-waggon, with a Prussian sentry, passing one of the Prussian head-quarters are now at Gravenstein, to which place, from Flensburg, the Correspondent of the Augsburg Gazette has just been sent; but the Danes are masters at sea. The harbour of Flensburg is the best in Schleswig or Holstein, having deep water enough for large ships of the line. Flensburg is a busy and thriving commercial town of some 20,000 inhabitants. Instead of taking the line of the town of Schwing; and, for some time after the revolutionary war of 1848 to 1851, Flensburg was the seat of the Government of the duchy of Schleswig: the chief court of appeal and the chief administration of the customs and post offices are still established there.

GRAVENSTEIN.

The Château of Gravenstein, which is Field Marshal von Wrangel's present head-quarters, and the Château of Augustenburg, on the Isle of Alsen, both formerly belonged to the Duke of Augustenburg, the heir of the Prince whose claim to be Duke of Schleswig-Holstein is a contingency of this war. Gravenstein is on the mainland, and on that arm of the sea which is called the Flensburg Fiord. Along the north shore of this fiord, on the west of Gravenstein, passes the great peninsula of Sundewitt, which terminates in the fortified heights of Düppel, just opposite Sonderburg in the Isle of Alsen. The situation of Gravenstein is about half way between Flensburg and Sonderburg, an equal distance from Düppel and the town of Flensburg. The castle, which stands on the edge of a landlocked gulf, named Eckernsund, encompassed with thick woods, is said to have been founded in the thirteenth century by a famous pirate named Alf, who made it a convenient hiding-place for the rich booty that he gained by his frequent predatory excursions on the Baltic Sea. It is asserted by many that, in 1298, this robber was hunted down and put to death. The ruins of his building were still visible at the beginning of the seventeenth century; but the present edifice was reared, in 1709, by Christian the Counts Ahlefeldt of Sagaunder, its former proprietors, who rose in a village of some fifty houses at Gravenstein, with a street from the front of the castle down to the water's edge, and a church with two towers. The Chateau of Gravenstein itself has no pretensions to architectural beauty. It is a square, a central pile, with two wings at right angles to it, built in a plain and unadorned style.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

WHEN King Charles II. attended—as he did many times during the progress of a celebrated private ball—the House of Lords, he made use of an expression which has been frequently quoted since. Whether His Majesty was pleased to say that the discussions in the Upper House were "as good as a play," or that the plays were as good as anything to be forgotten the occasion : but "as good as a play," and a great deal better than many of the plays of the day, was the debate in the Lords on Monday on the Royal Arcade Bill. It may not be true, as has been said that for some months past a great endeavour has been made to maintain a certain "tone" in the House of Lords; but it has made its interest the inhabitants of the West End in a new arcade, which was to have run through Burlington House, and have had a first outlet south of Conduit-street. This new covered way was to have been of fine architectural proportions, and to be of considerable certain advantage to take its construction had passed its first reading. On the motion for the second reading, Lord Derby, in the name of the Government, and to the best debater in the House of Lords, and slew it. He showed that one in connection with the Burlington builder, a large proprietor, an enormous timber merchant—three disinterested gentlemen, no doubt—but that against it were all the most respectable inhabitants of the locality and the vicinity and the whole body of the clergy in the return of Arcades; and, indeed, the present representatives of modern Arcadian existence are in the neighborhood of Bond-street. Opposite Sackville Arcade, which is about as lively as a cleared-house ; Burlington Arcade, which has had its drawbacks, is a perfect success; and in the debate the Lord Arcade, the purgatory of fashionable bootmakers, no other trade seeming therein to thrive; and the Royal Arcade will be the same. A new street is a new road to a shop, will run the owner. Amongst our Conservative failings, that amiable one of veneration notices that when there is the old date of firms. "An hereditary tenure is natural to them. Offices, from generation to generation." They put up over their shop doors 'Established a century and a half ago.' Dynasties of business partnership are inherited. The English power resides also in their dislike of change. Everything is individual—everything is local—these feelings should be consulted by those who wish to pull London to pieces. To rebuild London, or the whole capital in a town may be practicable in Paris ; to do so here would be simply to ruin the neighbourhood.

Whilst we are, as Tennyson has it, "tender over drowning flies," or, not to put too fine a point upon it, hanging five murderers, Prussia and Austria slay their hundreds and thousands. In the bitter cold weather we are sympathising with the sufferings of the unfortunate invaders have, for a time at least, got the worst of it. In the mean time the plot thickens ; the English Channel Fleet holds itself in readiness to be ordered to any quarter, while the two great German Powers march with wide strides towards their object. Does it not strike them that they are reckoning without their host? Germany is still dissatisfied. Why so? The material guarantee is in its hands, and the Federal Government, in the face of the great German political whisperers, Germany wants more than Schleswig and Holstein, and Austria, Prussia, Bismarck and King get nothing. The hopes of young Germany are fixed upon a great Teuton nation—a German Empire—with individual—not Federal—head in the Coburg as Emperor. Perhaps the King of Prussia and the Emperor of Austria are willing to hand over the lands of the party. We know that the beginning of strife is like the letting out of waters. Who now shall stop their course? What Imperial Canute can stay the slow rising of the German flood? Happily for the cause of Peace, we hear now that their advance has ceased, and that they have agreed for a reconsideration of the whole question.

The National Shakespeare Committee, by a self-denying ordinance, seems to have placed the matter in the power in the hands of nine noblemen and gentlemen, and, of course, its two chief secretaries. Perhaps this is the best arrangement. It is free from the control of more retirements, and of the secession of two of the earliest and most hard-working members of the scheme, who, it is said, are about to appeal to the working classes, almost exclusively, to raise a statue and a memorial of him who was of no party or class, and who, by-the-way, was in more than one sense of the phrase a working classes as sounding as any man who ever held a pen could do. There can be no doubt that the Rev. Mr. Dyce, Mr. Collier, and Mr. Knight "working man" feel gratified to his rough and pain-inflicting physician Dr. Will Shakespeare, Mr. Thomas Watts, Mr. Fitzgerald Kelly, Bull-call of the Green, and Prince's Feeble, the woman's tailor, subscribe for a statue to the "gentle Shakespeare." There is no more public-spirited than we take them to be if they do.

The British Association for the Advancement of Science has taken the wise step of making their memorial a hall and Shakspearean library. The hall will be of Portland stone, and Shakspearean in character. The library will consist of books and pamphlets connected with the poet, as well as the various editions of his works. Should this scheme take anything like a practical shape, it will be the most useful one of the most interesting in Europe.

As the Fenian Brotherhood has won their first victory on British soil : A starting announcement ; but, as we have been used to such like announcements of late, we can afford to wait quietly for the next of the "wild mysteries of the Celt," or least, as most pronounce and many spell it. The Irish are not remarkable for open speaking. Still, Mr Crotty, a Mr. Sullivan, and The O'Donoghue, differ, it appears, from the Dublin authorities, and openly advocate the Saxon and the College-green would be out of place. They prefer Henry Grattan, and their speeches are full of historical debate, and one with which many Irishmen would agree. But is that any reason why other Irishmen, thinking as they do, openly advocate the Saxon and the College-green would be out of place. They prefer Henry Grattan, and their speeches are full of historical debate, and one with which many Irishmen would agree. But is that any reason why other Irishmen, thinking as they do, openly advocate the Saxon and the College-green would be out of place. They prefer Henry Grattan, and their speeches are full of historical debate, and one with which many Irishmen would agree. But is that any reason why other countrymen, based on the principle of "wishes, regardless of their enemies," spill the ink and banish the reporters? To an English intellect, no : but to an Irish one, perhaps, yes. We do not understand these things ; but we do understand that drilled conspirators, a naked sword, and American uniforms on English ground are ugly sights. Perhaps it was also right to dissemble their love for the brave O'Donoghue ; but why kick him down stairs ? The green baize tablecloth flag was picturesque, and recalled that piquant song by Tom Davis :—

Full often when our fathers saw the red above the green,
They rose in rude but fierce array, with voice, pike, and skean ;
And ever many a noble town, and many a field of dead,
Bore witness to the sacrifice the Irish heart can shed.

Sung to the tune of "Irish Molly, oh!" the verses are stirring. By-the-way this Fenian question bears much upon English newtrality. The drilled men and the Northern United States uniforms are in the same way said to be prepared for Mr. Lincoln's armies; some even say, more boldly, to co-operate with an American army of invasion in Ireland. Let us, however, take the former supposition; and will not the Government, so eager to detain Southern rams and war implements, stop these implements of war? Or are a few regiments of Irish infantry, ready drilled, mere agents of peace? By what evasion of strict justice can Government prevent a steam-ram, and yet permit the exportation of a regiment. Lord Robert Cecil, or some other member, should press this question on the Attorney-General.

Mr. Thackeray's posthumous story, "Denis Duval," will be before the public in a few days. The title is not new, but the tale is new, and the author would have altered it had he lived; but titles are such difficult things, and, as one celebrated author has said, a book he could look with the least satisfaction. Dr. Johnson boggled about his "Rasselas" for a long time, and Goldsmith, with "The Vicar," did well he might be. A French journalist translated it "Le Chevalier Wakefield" in an out-of-the-way fashion; and Sir Cornelius Bingo, a foreigner, as he drank the great Sam's health, complimented him by the title of "the great Mr. Vagabond." Pretty well that for a moralist!

CURRENT LITERATURE.

The Trials of the Tredgolds. By Dutton Cook. (3 vols. Sampson Low, Son, and Marston.) The trials of the Tredgolds, so far as these three volumes reveal them, are very severe. George Tredgold, Lieutenant R.N., finding his services not sufficiently appreciated by a grateful bet, when influence is wanting to get promotion in the Admiralty, to promote him higher rank within the usual terms of natural life, retired upon a day from the British Navy, took up his residence (for economy's sake) in an out-of-the-way locality, Cornish Ridge, and devoted himself and all the money he could save to the education of his only son—and only child—by a Miss Bryan, whom he had married late in life, and whom he had lost after a few years of matrimony. The boy was called Bryan Tredgold, and for him and his future prospects the trustful Lieutenant was induced to embark in a bubble speculation. The result was that the speculator was ruined, and died by his own hand. Young Bryan, after having been kept at school by some persons on pretence unknown, was placed by the same agency in the mercantile office of Messrs. Fordyce and Fordyce, in the city of London, where he grew in stature and in wisdom, and in favour with Mr. Fordyce junior, the fellow-clerk, Richard Gifford. For Richard Gifford loved—not in the most honourable manner, we are given to understand—a lady who nearly perished Bryan Tredgold. Hence it came to pass that, when embezzlements and other dangerous modes of procuring capital for the settlement of bets upon horseraces were freely engaged in by some one in the employment of Messrs. Fordyce and were discovered, the fault was fastened upon Bryan Tredgold in a manner wholly unjustifiable, but sufficient to coerce a British jury and to procure for him a sentence of transportation beyond the seas. Bryan, meanwhile, had been secretly married to the lady of his love, and soon after the departure upon his forced exile Mrs. Bryan Tredgold was delivered of a son. But her husband's fate had been too great a shock for her; her reason gave way; she was blessed in a lunatic asylum; and so her poor son Noel entered upon life without any recollection of father or mother. Bryan ultimately, when his sentence has expired, returns to England, works upon a railway, and is killed by the fall of a bridge, but not before he had discovered Noel, become his friend, and taken him to work with him, keeping, however, their relationship a secret. The secret, after Bryan's death, is disclosed to Noel by a certain sculptor who receives the orphan as both son and pupil. And so it happens that Noel Tredgold has no model but a bust of Miss Clara Gray, the stepdaughter of Richard Gifford. The modeller and the modelled of course fall in love, which adds to the trials of Noel Tredgold, for Richard Gifford disdains his suit. Add to this that Noel at last finds out the place where his father was buried, but only in time to see his death, and you have the sum of the Tredgolds' trials. Fortune soon after shifts her favours and makes a transference of the trials and troubles; and Noel is happily married, and the trials of the Tredgolds come to an end. The chief impression left on the mind at the close of the story is, that the trials of the Tredgolds form a very small portion of it, and that what should be the subordinate characters occupy the stage too frequently and too long. The next idea which occurs to one is that the opening chapters—the description of the sailing of the school, the application of dainty little Clare, the sympathising domestics (absent and present), and all the concomitants, anticipate the real business upon the scene of Bryan Tredgold, are charming. One then admires the graphic power with which the persons are drawn, and regrets that the same William Wales Railway are portrayed, and regrets that the same vigour was not discernible in the later portions of the book, which either practically ignore the author's powers or honour which we have, at one time, moved to that > Setting of sadness and longing,

> Which is not akin to pain,
> And resembles sorrow only
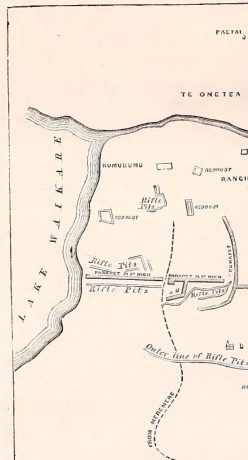
> As the mist resembles rain, at another to silent laughter; but one carries away, at the same time, the notion that there has been unnecessary garrulity on many points, especially in reference to the liquor consumed by the characters and the host (in Mr. Zachary Morgan's mouth term it) or other unguent by others. Cleu Buckhurst and Liz Moyle might surely have played their parts without so much drinking, and Richard Gifford should like to ask, too, whether it adds point to some vulgarity to write "gone" for "gin," &c. for "gone," &c. Then, as a matter of fact, we think the former spelling represents phonetically the pronunciation of the latter. Whatever private persons may do, the Press should take care what we say, for Mr. Cook, by means of John Moyle, thus hits the critic hard:—"Criticism never does any good, or very rarely any good except the critics, and they get paid for it."



Wagstaffiana. By A. K. H. B. (2 vols. T. Nelson and Sons.) Tastes differ in religion as in other matters. Some like it hot and strong, some lukewarm and diluted, some incline to plainness, some to ornamentation, some to roughness, some to smoothness. Suit the title and the nom de plume (we assume, at least, that it is a nom de plume) allotted to this little volume and you have a curious mix of morals and sentimental style; nor is that presumption altogether belied by the contents. These consist of a series of imaginary letters and conversations, each concluding with a prayer or a hymn, in which an attempt is made to familiarise religious sentiment (a very high-priestly Protestant principle) to imaginary persons in imaginary positions of difficulty. The language is good, and the spirit is such, which the work was written so unexceptionable that one cannot but hope for its cordial acceptance by those for whom it is intended. The volume is Water Supply and Sewerage for Jerusalem. By John Irvine Whitty. (8vo. W. J. Whitty.) The water supply question in every city is the Holy City invested that it seems almost sacrilege to talk of Jerusalem and sewerage in the same breath. We have been told, however, on high authority, that cleanliness is next to godliness when connected; and water supply and sewerage are necessary to cleanliness. And therefore, all to whom the Holy City is dear, will pray for its prosperity, who look for its renovation, and who shudder at the thought of unwholesome prevailing.

Jerusalem, Jerusalem, the burial-place of God, give heed to Dr. Whitty's plan for providing the city with pure water and unfailing drainage and sufficient baths, "public and private alike-tants." It seems remarkable that the city, which suffered during its siege by Titus from a scarcity of water, should be found now to be so deficient in that respect. But Dr. Whitty's book will give the reader minute details concerning the topographical and hydrographical features of Jerusalem and its neighbourhood, which will show how, by means of the engineering skill of the present day, the deficiency may be, at no very great cost, supplied.

The English Constitution. By Dr. Edward Fischel. Translated from the Second German Edition by Richard Jenery Shee. (1 vol. Bosworth and Harrison.) The first edition of Dr. Fischel's "Verfassung Englands" was so popular in Germany that the first edition, published in 1862, was speedily exhausted and followed by a second, of which this is for the most part a translation. The necessary alterations and certain necessary modifications have been made, prolixity has been remedied, repetitions have been avoided, and the volume has been compressed into a smaller and more handy volume than was for the general reader. Dr. Fischel's opinions, however, remain intact; and the reader has, therefore, the opportunity of making himself acquainted not only with the constitutional laws of his country but at the same time with the comments upon them of an enlightened and learned foreigner.

Sport in Norway. By the Rev. M. R. Barnard. (1 vol. Chapman and Hall.) Uncharitable persons may think that the only sport which a clergyman should enjoy is that which consists in being a father of men; but, fortunately, the late Chaplain to the Consulate at Christiania was of a different opinion. He has fished for salmon and other fish, as we gather from his book, and we have reason to believe that he has shot bears, elk, and all manner of game. For, though there is a great deal of "I believe," and "I am informed," and "I am told," and "my informant says," he nevertheless sometimes speaks as one having the authority of personal experience; and he has, at any rate, a vast amount of information, acquired either at first or second hand, to impart respecting the sport, the flora, and the fauna of Norway, interesting to both sportsman and tourist. Much attention is just now being paid to the artificial breeding of salmon, and Mr. Barnard's fifth chapter, having reference to that subject, deserves particular notice. Let us conclude with a word of warning! Mr. Barnard's own language: "no 'pot-hunter' should go to Norway."

PLAN OF THE RANGARIRI DISTRICT, NEW ZEALAND.

REPORTS OF COMMISSIONS.

The nineteenth annual report of the Inclosure Commissioners has been issued. Since the passing of the Act, which extends their powers, they have received 4117 applications, 840 since the issue of the last annual report. 2250 applications, representing the inclosure of 412,276 acres, have been confirmed; 486 applications have been otherwise disposed of; and 886 cases, representing the inclosure of 215,516 acres, were pending at the close of the year. The lands proposed to be inclosed are within fifteen miles of London.

The twenty-second annual report of the Copyhold Commissioners, issued this morning, states that they have now completed 1604 enfranchisements of copyholds, and 1 of customary freeholds, comprising 1 effected during the present year. They amount to 70 enfranchisements in criminal manors, 47 in collegiate manors, and 383 in lay manors. Besides these, they have received 386 applications, of which 32 are under the voluntary and 354 under the compulsory powers of the Acts. The further report that, in pursuance of the powers vested in them, they have authorised 1 sale, 12 purchases, 39 enfranchisements, 10 exchanges, and 17 applications from colleges, for raising money for purposes of improvement. Of sales, 12 petitions, 8 enfranchisements, 1 exchange, and 8 applications for raising money for purposes of improvement, have been authorised during the present year.

The Tithe Commissioners, in their report for the year 1863, state that they have received 6647 applications for apportionments, and that 5697 have been the subject of compulsory awards, and confirmed Acts. In 1,237 districts, as will be seen from the above statement, the tithes have been commuted by confirmed agreements or confirmed awards. In 414 of those districts the rentcharges have been disposed of by redemption or merger. They have received 11,796 apportionments, and confirmed 11,796. They have made 2910 altered apportionments, and confirmed 2552; and of these 171 have been received and 171 confirmed during the year. They have received 1,237 applications for the exchange of glebe lands, and confirmed 870 of such exchanges; and of these 42 applications and 42 exchanges have been received and confirmed in the past year. They have received 502 applications for the apportionment of rentcharges in lieu of tithes, and 502 applications; and of these 82 were received and 82 confirmed in the year 1863. They have received 4 applications to convert variable corn rents payable under local Acts of Parliament into rent charges to be henceforth payable in like manner as ordinary tithe rent charges, and have completed awards in 3 of those cases. At the close of 1863 they had confirmed 14,640 distinct mergers of tithes or rentcharges.

The numerous submarine telegraph cables at work in Europe are in the aggregate upwards of 6000 miles long, the longest stretch from four miles to 1800 miles each in length, and they are sunk in water varying from two to three hundred fathoms.

The annual competitive trial of rifles began on Tuesday, at the rifle-practice ground at Woolwich, under the superintendence of Lord Elcho, Lord Bury, Major-General Hay, and the secretary of the society (Captain E. St. John Mildmay), and in presence of several other members of the council. The five competitors are Messrs. Baker, Henry, Pindar (for Mortimer's breech-action), Rigby, and Whitworth.

An annual return just issued states the debt of India at £116,721,127; but this includes £2,501,270 capital of railway companies remaining in the Home Treasury. On the other hand, it does not include the charge for the debt created on the 31st of December last by the Indian Loan Company, which is subject to redemption by Parliament under the Act of 1853, and which is limited to up to the last day of 1863 for England, and to the 30th of April, 1863, for India.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

We give below a large-scale map, or plan, of the district of Rangariri, at the head of the Waikato River, the scene of General Cameron's victory on the 20th of November. A View of the "Keep," or stronghold of the Maoris, which they surrendered on the morning after their defeat, is engraved on page 216. This fortress is described by General Cameron as a square redoubt, of very formidable construction, in the centre and highest part of the Maori line of defence, which consisted, for the rest, of a double ditch and high parapet extending across the narrow isthmus that divides the Waikato River from Lake Waikare, as shown in our plan. The British troops (6th Regiment leading, with detachments of the 12th and 14th) first stormed the rifle-pits facing the Waikato River, and drove the enemy from those pits into the central redoubt. By this time 200 men of the 40th had landed from the Pioneer and the Avon, and, with their assistance, the line of intrenchments was carried, and those of the defenders who could get into their "Keep" were compelled to fly across the swamp by the Waikare Lake. Still, the garrison of the "Keep" maintaining a heavy fire upon our troops prevented their further advance. General Cameron, therefore, ordered an attempt to take this stronghold by assault. Thirty-six of the Royal Artillery, armed with revolvers, under Captain Hay, first attacked it and failed. The second attack was made largely by seamen of the Curaçoa and other ships led by Commander Mayne, under Sir William Wiseman's personal direction; while another party of sailors, under Commander Hammond, threw hand-grenades into the redoubt. All these attacks, however, were baffled by the overwhelming fire of the Maoris, and by the difficulty of approaching their position—the only access being through a narrow opening, which but one person could ascend at a time. Every officer who led the last brave was either killed or dangerously wounded; Captain Mercer, Commander Mayne, Lieutenant Dowse of the Miranda; Lieutenants Alexander and Hesham, of the Curaçoa, being wounded, one after another; while Mr. Watkins, midshipman, was killed. When the darkness of evening came on General Cameron desisted from the attack, and our troops remained in the position they had won. The early light next morning the Maoris had hoisted the white flag of surrender, having removed their wounded during the night through Lake Waikare, in which direction the British force had also made his escape. Our loss in the fighting was two officers, Colonel Austin (14th Regt.) and Lieut. Murphy (17th Regt.), Mr. Watkins (R.N.), and forty-five men killed and thirteen officers and eighty men wounded of both services. The fortress, of which a view is here given, thus cost a large expenditure of British blood.

In another Engraving, on page 216, we show the aspect of Rangariri when viewed from the river. The new redoubt which General Cameron has begun to construct, is in the centre, marked by a flag; with the British encampment on the rising ground, and the Maori position beyond the river. Close to the water's side, on our right, we observe the old Maori Church, and the graveyard where those killed in the fight are buried. On our left are the entrenchments gun-boats and canoes are moored. The British head-quarters are in the large square tent on the hill immediately over the Church. The Engraving is from a drawing, and that of the redoubt from a photograph, both taken on the spot, and forwarded by the New Zealand mail. The plan, or map, is from a Government survey communicated to us by Mr. Andrew Sinclair, of Auckland.

The middle one of the Illustrations, on page 216, is an Engraving showing the marching down of the regiments, from Auckland, to be placed on board her Majesty's ship Pioneer, which lay in the river close by. They were afterwards conveyed to Queen's Redoubt, near Mercer, some miles lower down the river, and there shovel aboard her Majesty's ship Curaçoa till a hulk can be made ready to receive them.

THE DISTRESS IN THE NORTH.

The weekly meeting of the Central Executive Committee was held at Manchester on Monday. Lord Edward Cavendish presided. The secretary reported that £1109 had been received during the week, including £748 from the Canterbury Relief Fund, and that the total fund has now reached £164,178. Five packages of clothing had been received, and three sent off. Mr. Parsall presented his weekly report, which showed a fall in the number of persons on the 13th inst. there was a decrease in the number receiving relief of 3928 persons, as compared with the previous week. The number of persons receiving relief was 160,764, against 49,944 in the corresponding week of 1861. The next quarterly meeting of the general committee was fixed for the 23rd of March. The committee made grants to the amount of £1600.

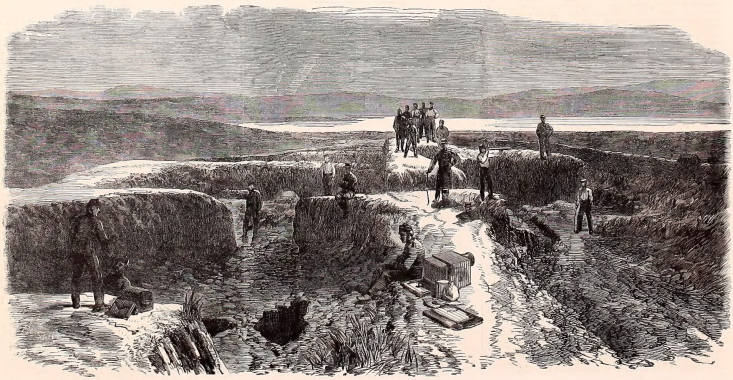
The Manchester Guardian Society relief fund for the week ending Saturday last amounted to £1391, of which Ashton-under-Lyne received, in money and clothing, £1150; Clitheroe, £110; Stockport, £400; Glossop, £100; Bacup, £100; Rochdale, £400; Dukinfield, £400; Hyde, £200; Leigh, £200; Oldham, £200. The total amount received up to Thursday week was reported to be £223,146, of which £49,467 had been remitted to the distressed districts.

Mr. William Forsyth, C.B., of the Board of Public Works, has arrived at Corfu from Athens, and has commenced operations for the erection of a pier on the south harbour of that island.

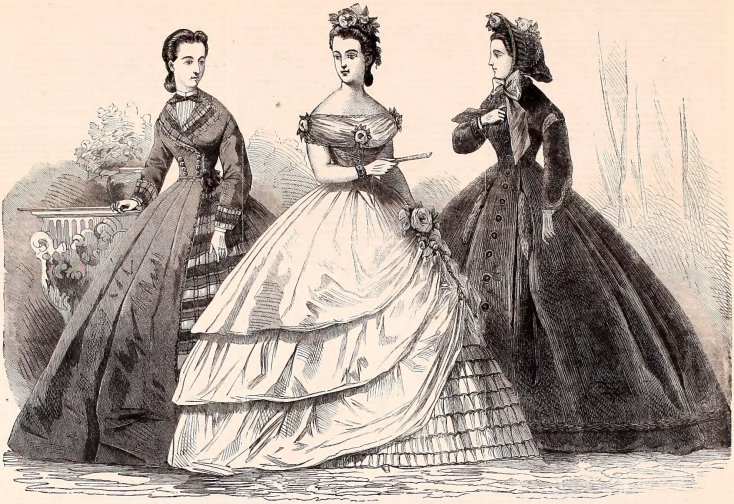
The Lord-Lieutenant of the County Council for Trade have received from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a notification from the Prussian Ambassador that the hostilities at Schleswig-Holstein were extinguished on the 11th inst.

A letter in the Shipping Gazette from the mate of the Flowery Land says the ship was provisioned for six months. There was no short allowance of either beef or water, and the ship was only thirty-two days when the murders were committed.

A deputation from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce waited upon Lord Palmerston, on Monday, to present him with the memorial which was adopted by the Chamber a few days since. Its prayer is to give which was adopted by the Chamber a few days since. Its prayer is to give effect to the resolutions of the Board of Trade or the Foreign Office as will facilitate commercial negotiations with other countries.



THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

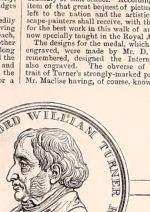


RANGARIRI, FROM THE WAIKATO.

MAORI PRISONERS FROM RANGARIRI WAITING TO BE PLACED ON BOARD H.M.S. PIONEER.

STRONGHOLD OF THE MAORIS AT RANGARIRI.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR MARCH.—SEE NEXT PAGE.



TEMPORARY BRIDGE OVER THE THAMES AT BLACKFRIARS.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE TEMPORARY BRIDGE AT BLACKFRIARS.

OLD BLACKFRIARS BRIDGE, which has been for some time in a very crazy condition, must speedily be rebuilt; and, as the closing of such an important thoroughfare would be attended with most serious inconvenience if no other communication were opened up to supply its place, the Corporation of the city of London very properly determined upon having a temporary structure erected for the purpose. Accordingly, they entered into arrangements with a well-known contractor to build a bridge alongside of the old one, having approximately the same dimensions. Blackfriars Bridge on the one side of the Thames and from Bridge-street on the other. The new temporary erection, which will only cost about £20,000, is now nearly completed. It is composed of timber in the same manner as that made for the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, extending for a few yards east of it, to the old Blackfriars Bridge, which is just now, more than ever, a scene of the greatest bustle and confusion in consequence of the large amount of traffic which has to its immediate neighbourhood. The stream below is even yet more choked up by engineering operations. What with the large bridges proposed to sustain the old tumble-down bridge, and the numerous piles, pontoons, and scaffolding, steam-engines, iron columns, stone piers, and other erections and appliances required for the various new undertakings, the boatmen and the heavily laden barges which navigate this high have their hands full in the endeavour to steer in certain periods of the tide with amazing velocity through the narrow space left for navigation, and it requires an extraordinary amount of skill upon the part of steersmen to avoid injury. To an inexperienced eye the piers, abutments, and piles of the new bridge must appear an almost impenetrable maze; and there is, unfortunately, little hope of any improvement until the new structure and the new bridges shall be completed.

The temporary Blackfriars Bridge, which will no doubt be speedily opened to the public, consists principally of a timber viaduct, having the footpaths and the centre carriageway on a somewhat clear span each, supported by iron girders. The roadway for vehicles is constructed with a view to keep foot-passengers, which are carried along the top part of the bridge. The footpaths will be laid with tar and Portland cement, and the joints of the footpath floor being caulked and made watertight, so as to prevent the water from falling on the carriages which run below. The footpaths are divided for a safety-guard of passengers, with three feet railings.

Gutta percha will very probably also pass from the one to the other. The main lights and those which are being provided for both the rows, and the footpaths and twelve coloured sidelights will be placed two on each side of each of the three openings for the carriage navigation. The precaution seems therefore to have been taken to make the temporary structure both secure and convenient. Some delay appears to have arisen in the decision to the contract for the new permanent Blackfriars Bridge, which is to be kept, it will be seen, entirely out as end to, now that arrangements in regard to the Thames Embankment are being carried forward to leave little room for procrastination upon that score. It is calculated that the temporary bridge at Blackfriars may not be exchanged for the new permanent one for, perhaps, three years to come; but the contract expressly stipulates that in the event of its being requisite to carry the traffic over the temporary structure for a longer period than three years, the contractor will be bound to maintain it and keep it in further period as they may be required. It will therefore be observed that, although the bridge is not for use during a short interval of time, the pains which have been spent upon the structure, together yet very strong bridge, have not been altogether misplaced; and, considering the labour involved in the work, it is something for the engineering activity of the present day to point to such a large and solid piece of work as having occupied only about seven months in its construction.

THE TURNER GOLD MEDAL.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR MARCH.

THE Siberian state of the temperature in Paris during the latter part of February has not been such a check upon the out-door exhibition of the novelties usually brought forth on the more genial approach of spring, and has even caused the appearance of a few premature fashionables, to which the termination of the Carnival ordinarily puts a stop. These premature fashionables have been guilty chiefly therefore of exaggeration in the coiffures to which we alluded in a recent article, and the headdress of several ladies who pride themselves upon their taste have become so many amphitheatres, composed of a pile of flowers, feathers, ribbons, velvets, and precious stones. On considering these ornamental piles, we are led to ask how the wearers can contrive to enter the low and narrow blue or white lined brougham-cabs which is usually to be met with, and small in size on account of the headdress, as sometimes of the crinoline, polite husbands must also be on the look-out for the safety of their hats during the days and nights of low thermometers just experienced such a sacrifice has not often been possible, and we believe some married households really deserve some indemnity for the display of so much sensibility, and we think they will find it in the wholesale ornamentation of the headdress we have guilded in dimensions the most permanent bonnet is to lose in the estimation of the public. The present bonnet is no longer the high floral exposition but almost flat over the forehead, close-fitting to the cheeks at the sides, and small in proportion every way; thus returning to the style so long adopted in Brighton, which has been indicated in the Paris fashions for the use of British tourist contrasted with the Parisian belles, who now affect the black silk veil over the bonnet, which, however, is not to be universal. Other colours, mostly in velvet, are admissible, but neutral shades are the most elegant.

We shall enter fully upon the subject of the materials for ladies' dresses for the spring of 1864 in our next article. The latest proceedings with the explanation of our Illustrations, we may just note here, that the last light flowered bottines, now introduced to a degree of great importance, are usually worn of the tone colour of the dress, so as to harmonise completely with the toilet.

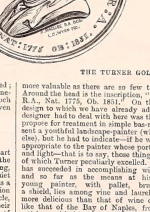
THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Evening Dress.—Lilac and taffety robe, with open corsage. The lapels are in red, blue, and green plaid velvet, buttoning over the vest by a double row of buttons. The sleeves are in plaid velvet, like those in velvet plaid; but from the former depends a long and wide silk tubular ornament. The chemisette is composed of white muslin with a small upright collar, fastened with a narrow light blue cravat.

Fig. 2. Ball Dress.—Robe white tarlatane, with two flounces of hollow plaits. Over the robe are placed three jupes of plain tulle, forming a tunic, and drawn up at the side by a bouquet of flowers to which they are attached. Pointed corsage, with a berthe of tulle festooned at the shoulders and in the centre with small roses. The coiffure is of the latest mode, the hair dressed high at the back and ornamented with an abundance of flowers.

Fig. 3. Evening Dress.—Light green velvet robe of the style known as the style Princesse, trimmed above the seam, round the pockets, and at the extremity of the skirt, with a fluting of the same velvet. The corsage is closed with black velvet buttons. Brown velvet bonnet of the modified Brighton shape, decorated with a tuft fastened by the top of the crown by a large rose, similar to that ornamenting the front of the chignon.

On the evening of Shrove Tuesday a grand costume ball took place at the Hôtel de Ville, when the members of the Royal family and the chief members of the Bavarian aristocracy appeared in dresses such as were worn at the Palatine Court in 1701. Prince Luitpold represented the Prince Palatine Christian Caspar, and the Queen was attired as his wife, the Princess Anna Maria Augusta of Sulzbach. The Princess Adelgunde of Modena and her suite were received by their future bridegroom, and he did so in the more effectively rich dress of Prussia, decorated with a large pearl in the boutfle worn and under constellation.



THE TURNER GOLD MEDAL.

THIS medal is in every way interesting. It is interesting as part of the munificent public bequest of the great painter whose name and pictorial fame engraved thereon; interesting because it bears a very peculiar and engraved thereon; interesting because it bears a very peculiar and refined interesting by the circumstances under which it is bestowed.

Before Turner's bequest founded the Royal Academy possessed only the branch of art in which, it is generally thought, English painters have distinguished themselves more remarkably than in any other—more, we might say, than any Continental school—had received scarcely any recognition in the Royal Academy. Landscape was only taught as a kind of accessory to figure subjects, and no prize was given for excellence in landscape. Turner was awarded in consecutive years gold and silver medals for paintings of a purely classical and ideal character, drawn entirely from the antique; for architectural and for a specimen of ordinary topography, or a mathematical representation of the incidence of shadows, by Mr. Thomas Malton, the father of the brothers Thomas, Wilson, Stanfield, or David Roberts. To this day there is another branch of art which has received much less than its due, and is famous abroad (owing, as the French declare, to the "jockey" element in our character) but which at present is not encouraged by Englishmen by prizes, although the Academicians afterwards admit into their rooms, despite all challenge, the works of Messrs. Thomas Ward, the Sir Edwin Landseers, and the Ansdells.

It was very natural, then, that the painter of landscapists should wish to see the art by which he threw so much lustre over the whole English school fairly and encouraged by the chief academy of that school. Accordingly, he has provided, as one must left to the discretion of the artistic professor, that any large landscape-painters shall receive, with their fellow-students, a gold medal of the best work in this walk of art, which, though it is different, is now specially taught in the Royal Academy.

The design, for the medal, which we have now for the first time engraved, were made by Mr. D. Maclise, R.A., who, it will be remembered, was a friend of the great landscapist, and by whom he also engraved. The obverse of the present medal bears a portrait of Turner, copied from a painting by Mr. Jones, a clergyman. Mr. Maclise having, of course, known the original well, and it is the more valuable as there are so few trustworthy portraits of Turner. Around the head is the inscription, "Joseph Mallord William Turner, R.A., Born, 1775, Died, 1851." On the reverse we have the poetical design to which we have already adverted. The theme which the designer has chosen is here was the most difficult it is possible to propose for treatment in simple bas-relief. He had not only to represent a youthful landscape-painter (who might be Turner or any one else), but he had to indicate—if he would make his design specially appropriate—that the painter was not to be one of the ordinary school and light—that is to say, those things in nature in the representation of which Turner particularly excelled. This difficult task Mr. Maclise has succeeded in accomplishing with the most perfect success. And the fact as the means at his command would permit. A young painter is sketching. Behind him, on a rising ground, are a shield, lies among vine and laurel leaves, lost in an intoxication of beauty and delight. Above, in the sky, are companions, a nose like that of the Bay of Naples, from which Phœbus Apollo is just ascending his glorious car, and a flock of birds migrating southwards. An Italian character is given by the vine leaves, the lizard on the shield, and a fragment of classical ground in the foreground. We need not say that several of Turner's finest landscapes are of Italian scenes. As then, in the scene we have the source of light, or in the rainbow (a double one) overhead we have the source of colour. And the latter is the more legitimately treated from the designer's as the sculptor's point of view. The rainbow is introduced, as we said anything short of a section of an object is presented thereon, that ancient form of the rainbow which was used by the children of the painter. At all events, Mr. Maclise is kept in countenance by the Elgin Commissioners, who have adopted the same form.

THE TURNER GOLD MEDAL.

This beautiful and intrinsically valuable medal has been twice struck in bronze, and presented to Mr. Ruskin (as the executor of the institution of the Royal Academy), first to Mr. Lepton, and next to Dr. Frank Wilkes. The prize landscape by the latter artist is engraved and described in our present Number. Until Mr. Wilkes received the gold medal, which was awarded to six years, the Royal Academicians having the power to withhold prizes when the competitive works are considered not sufficiently good.

Mr. Hargraves has commenced his exploration of South Australia, and on the 3rd of December last he found signs of gold in Balingerburn.

The New South Wales Herald states that the estimated cost of the ship-of-the-line Royal Sovereign, now being fitted up at Sydney, for the conveyance of Prince Alfred to Lewisham, with forts 500 ft. long, 80 ft. wide, and 10 ft. deep. In addition to the above, there will be a dock 500 ft. long, 80 ft. wide, and 30 ft. deep. The Royal Sovereign, which was launched from the canal from the St. Lawrence over to Albany, via Lake Champlain and Lake Ontario, to Kingston, on the northern shore of Lake Ontario, to Kingston, on the western side of Lake Ontario, to Kingston, on the western side of Lake Ontario, to Kingston, on the western side tarantula spider; but the large swan of chased silver, with sundry temples, bridges, clocks, musical bird-boxes, and automaton figures, reserved by Mr. Weekes, recently deceased, are to be dispersed next month. There is also in the market "the celebrated historic site, Esher-place"—the "Asher Palace" of the Sea of Winchester, of which romance Walinfleet's picturesque tower, where Cardinal Wolsey resided for a time. Within are, in fine brickwork, a newel (or geometrical staircase), and in the roof an oblique arch—supposed invention of modern times. At the bursting of the South Sea bubble, Esher Place was seized and sold as one of the estates of the delinquent directors. In 1729-30 it became the property of Sir Hildebrand Hoe. Henry Pelham, the statesman, brother to the Duke of Newcastle, and for whom Kent added wings to Esher Tower, for which the architect became unworthily embalmed in Thomson's verse—

Kent's indolence, and Nature vie for Pelham's love.

Kent's addition was pulled down on the accession of the mansion by the Spicer family, early in the present century, at a short distance from the gateway, which stands in dull relief,—its pleasure-ground mere deserved by luxuriant ivy, which so often lends a graceful charm to scenes of decaying art.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

BARONESS RUTHVEN.

Mary Elizabeth, Baroness Ruthven, in the Peerage of Scotland, died at her house in the county of Forfar, on the 18th inst. Her ladyship, daughter of Thomas, fourth Lord Ruthven, by Lady Mary Leslie, his wife, daughter of David, sixth Earl of Leven, succeeded, on the decease of her brother, Major-General Ruthven, to the barony of Ruthven, of Freeland, created in 1651, and to the representation of the ancient house of Ruthven, Earls of Gowrie, of the Earls of Gowrie. Lady Ruthven was married (Oct. 13, 1836) to Walter Rose, Esq., of Montgreenan, in the county of Ayr, a gentleman of considerable worth and literary attainments, and had twelve children, of whom the eldest, William, died before his mother, leaving a widow and one son and heir, Walter James, Captain in the Rifle Brigade, who succeeds his grandmother in the title. Her ladyship's second son, the Rev. Thomas Rose, of Lincombe, near Exeter, married Miss Ruthven, and died in 1854, 4 wounds received before Sebastopol. This house of Ruthven is of Danish origin, and has been of note in Scotland from the earliest period of its history, having held high offices and dignities, and having constantly formed high matrimonial alliances, even with the Bathsers, the Nisbets of Dirleton, and the Earls of Bute and of Leven.

REAR-ADMIRAL NICHOLAS CORY.

Rear-Admiral Nicholas Cory, C.B., who died recently from an accident Cornish family, and was the eldest son of Nicholas Cory, Esq., surgeon, of St. Mawes, by his wife, a sister of the late Captain Edward Hughes, R.N., C.B. Rear-Admiral Cory was born at St. Mawes in July, 1776, and he entered the Navy when he was only nine years of age. He was first lieutenant of the Agincourt, 64, Captain Bligh, on board the Hermione sloop, on the Rio de la Plata station. He was appointed lieutenant in 1800, and served on board the Canopus 80, and the Centaur (74), the flag-ship of the late Sir Samuel Hood. After being appointed to the command of the Ariadne, 20, he was employed in the Channel, where he was employed, with Captain Joseph Brown, on board the Nereus, on the coast of France, during the war of Napoleon's home hundred days, and on March 4, 1815, he became Lieutenant. He subsequently served in the North Star, on the coast of Africa; in the Briton, off Lisbon; and in the Asia, 81, flag-ship of Rear-Admiral Otway, also in the Royal George yacht, flag-ship of the late Earl Cadogan, Admiral Fellowes. He was appointed Commander in 1836, and was agent on board the North Star, on the coast of Portugal. Commodore Lord John Hay. He became a Post-Captain in 1840. His last appointment was in August, 1848, to the Scorpion, as flag-captain to the late Sir Thomas Hastings Baynton Bernard, on the Cape of Good Hope and south-east coast of America stations. He was made a C.B. on the 5th July, 1850, and retired 1858. Admiral Cory married, on the 9th of June, 1807, Mary, youngest daughter of the late Joseph Rilwards, Esq., of Truro, Cornwall, who died on Christmas Day last. Admiral Cory died on No. 4, Esplanade, Plymouth, on the 15th inst.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Lady Rodd, of Wimpole-street, was proved under £25,000. She bequeaths the relics of her husband to Sir J. T. Rodd, K.C.B., and only daughter of the late Major J. Bennell, F.R.S.

The will of the Right Hon. Lady Caroline Bathurst, late of Southwick-crescent, Hyde Park, and of Lydiard Tregoze, was proved in the London Court, on the 4th inst., by Lieut.-Colonel Henry Bathurst and Henry Allen Bathurst, Esqs., the Executors. The personalty exceeds £18,000. Lady Caroline was the eldest daughter of the first Earl of Castle-Stuart, and married, in 1815, General Sir James Bathurst, K.C.B., who died in 1850. Her Ladyship attained the age of seventy-four years, and executed her will in February, 1863, making bequests to her eight children and leaving the residue to her son, the Rev. Charles Bathurst, Rector of Lydiard Tregoze, Wiltshire, who she named chief Executor.

The will of Henry Farnell, Esq., of Isleworth, was proved in London on the 15th inst. by his brother, William Thomas Farnell, and his nephew, William Farnell Stevens, the executors, under which the personalty was sworn under £250,000. The will was executed on the 9th of November, 1861, and he died on the 13th of January, 1864. Legacies and annuities, amounting from £20,000 to £30,000, are bequeathed to his two brothers, a sister, nephews and nieces, and smaller legacies to other relatives and to domestic servants; his brother and his nephew, who are the executors, also residuary legatees for their own benefit. The charitable bequests amount to £2,000, and are stated in this Journal last week.

The will of Henry Walker, Esq., of Llwyngerin Hall, Mold-Flintshire, and of the city of Chester, "as proved in London under £100,000 personalty, the acting executors are Lieutenant-Colonel Henry Cecil Raikes, Esq., and Hewlett Skinner, Esq. Power is reserved to Mrs. Raikes, the testator's sister, to leave household furniture, plate, and personal effects. The Testator has left his property to his wife and children. To his wife, Mrs. Walker, he bequeaths £1,000 and an annuity of £1,000, which annuity will be divided among his three daughters. To his son Henry he leaves certain estates in Gloucestershire, Herefordshire, and Wales, for either entire sale and investment, or for mortgage, at his discretion, and the proceeds of his property amongst his three younger sons.

The Queen has appointed George Brackenbury, Esq., her Majesty's Consul at Madrid, to be her Majesty's Consul at Chacabuco.

RETURNS OF EDUCATIONAL STATISTICS.—The last Census of Ireland, full tables of which were issued on Thursday week, includes religious denominations, and gives the number of Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Independents, Baptists, Quakers, "all other denominations," and "persons declining any answer." The number of professors of persons as described by themselves, included under the head of "all other persons," we find some curious entries. Thus, 1 person has written themselves down simply as "Christians," and 68 as "High Church." There are 5 "Christ Almighties," 1 "Christ Jesus," 1 "Christ," "our Plymouth Brethren, 28 rank themselves as "Disciples of Christ;" 1 as "Christopher," 1 as "Christ's Own," 1 as "Christ's Own Church," and 1 "Conformist," 3 simply declare themselves "Believers in Jesus," 5 as "Methodist Christians," 1 as "Methodist Jesus," 1 as "Methodist Lord," 1 as "Methodist Saint," 1 as "Methodist Christ," 1 as "Christ's Own Church," "Protestants in Christ" (2), "The Word of God alone" (1), "Christ and Church of Christ" (1), "Christ and Church of God" (1), "Christ and Church of Jesus" (1). One man writes himself down as "a saint of the most high God," and he says they are "of no particular persuasion." Two go a little further than the last, and say they are "of no party" or "undecided." Two others write themselves 44 males and 35 females say they are of "no religion." One is a "Philanthropist," another is a "Positivist," and another a "Communist." One is a Socialist, 21 Freethinkers, 59 Secularists, 19 Deists, 1 Materialist, and 1 Atheist. Two are "Rationalists," and "Pusseyite." The Unitarians call themselves "Socinians." One is a simply, of whom there are 1860. "Unitarian Presbyterians," 201; "Non-subscribing Presbyterians," 107; and "Arians," 1. The Quakers, in addition, however, are ranked under the general head of "Presbyterians." The figures of the general return are as follows:—Established Church—males, 597,514; females, 643,161; Roman Catholics—males, 1,048,000; females, 1,200,212; Presbyterians—males, 253,374; females, 269,857; Methodists—males, 21,291; females, 24,126; Independents—males, 11,977; females, 13,107; Baptists—males, 2341; females, 2036; Society of Friends, or Quakers—males, 1693; females, 1,693; all other persuasions—males, 10,561; females, 1992; Jews—males, 236; females, 185.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

LOTHARIO.—Were not owners of fair Chess-Clubs in England where ladies are admissible as members, and would not be sorry to hear that they have resolved to make their sense of the cognizance ridiculous, as the ladies of America do, by organizing Chess Clubs of their own. The Brady Chess-Club Bulletin, of Philadelphia, gives the following pleasant account of the Chess-Club of the Young Ladies' Seminary, Mount Holyoke, Massachusetts:—"The Chess Club is composed of twenty-five members, and meets every Saturday evening for interesting and spirited play. Chess Clubs, White Clubs, Maple Clubs, Union Clubs, Washington Clubs, and Clubs of all other names and colors, have had their day, and have passed away, and still the ladies of themselves keep up the harmony of assembling, as far as our knowledge goes, the first Chess Club for ladies in America. If not, let them speak. The Chess Club of Mount Holyoke Seminary has made such a name somewhere, who are to meet them and to measure lances of the members. No gentlemen are admitted until the hour when the contests are over, and then only as visitors. The Club has a President, Secretary, and Treasurer, and a Librarian, who has charge of the books. Its officers are honored as Knight, and at the conclusion of every game there must be, left a Queen on each side of the board. The Club has a Chess-Room, and a Chess-Table, and a Chess-Clock, and a Chess-Basket. We suppose the Chess-Basket is necessary, that pieces may not slip again in during their social redemption, and maintain a great feal of pleasure and success in it.

J. LEWIS.—Your solution of Problem No. 1062 is correct. Your solution of above books and other Chess publications, and will be glad to receive any Chess-Problems suitable for insertion in the Illustrated London News. If you will, perhaps, find one of these copies serviceable for the purpose.

ALPHA.—Your solution of Problem No. 1062 is correct. We are glad to find that the leaflet's free and welcome.

MARVADEL.—Not so. The player first named was on move—an almost incredible oversight, we admit, but still the fact remains that he was on move. Your solution of Problem No. 1062 is correct.

J. L. S.—Your solution of No. 1062 is correct. Many thanks for your kind letter. We are glad that the leaflet has given you pleasure.

MARVADEL.—Not so. The player first named was on move—an almost incredible oversight, we admit, but still the fact remains that he was on move. Your solution of Problem No. 1062 is correct.

J. L. S.—Your solution of No. 1062 is correct. Many thanks for your kind letter. We are glad that the leaflet has given you pleasure.

R. A. W. Brown.—Your solution of Problem No. 1062 is correct. We are glad that the leaflet's free and welcome.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1062.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. K to Q 5th	Any move	1. Kt to Q 5th (ch)	K moves
2. Q mates		2. Q mates

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1063.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 8th	K to Kt 4th, or (ch)	1. Q to Q 8th (ch)	K to Kt 4th
2. Q to Kt 3rd	K to Kt 5th	2. Q to Q 8th (ch)	Any move
	K takes R	and checkmate next.

If Black play 1. Kt to Kt 4th, then follow 2. Q to Q 8th (ch), and mate next move.

SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NO. 1063.

WHITE.	BLACK.
1. R to Q 8th	K to Q 5th (ch)
2. Q to K 2nd	K to Q B 4th
	K to Q 6th
3. Q to Q 2nd	K to Q 5th
4. Q to Q B 2nd	K to Q 6th
5. P to Q B 3rd	P takes Q
6. Castles	P to Q 3rd

PROBLEM NO. 1064.

By H. Meyers, of Hanover.

BLACK.

WHITE.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

PARIS, Feb. 16, 1864.

SIR,—Permit me, in the interest of lovers of chess, to call your attention to a variation in the modification of the Evans's gambit known as "Mr. Fraser's defence," which appears to have escaped the notice of chessamateurs generally, and certainly seems to merit careful analysis. If you will have the goodness to publish this letter, I will send you the moves which I consider its utterance to suggest will be immediately tested, and its real strength or weakness fully established.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

In Mr. Staunton's "Chess Praxis" the Fraser attack (Variation G) is thus commenced:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	8. P to Q 4th	P to Q Kt 3rd
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	9. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q B to K Kt 5th
3. B to Q B 4th	B to Q B 4th	10. Q to Q 2nd	Q Kt to Q 4th
4. P to Q B 4th	P takes P	11. Q Kt to Q 5th	Q Kt to Q R 4th
5. P to Q B 3rd	P takes Q B 4th	12. B takes K B P
6. P to K 5th	P takes Q B 3rd		K to K 2nd
7. Castles	P to Q 3rd

The following is the next move given for white to

11. Q to Q 5th, instead of which, as this does not save the piece, and actually attacks Black for the purpose of being able to bring out his K R 1, I propose

13. Q to Q B 2nd, abandoning the Bishop at once, but paving the way to a powerful attack with Q R and Kt.

13. Kt takes B with it. P to K 5th. What is Black's best answer at this point? If 13. P to K R 3rd, White answers 14. P to K 6th. Black may now take the P with the King, with the Bishop, or move the King to K R 1st, or to B 1st.

I believe all these variations to be insufficient; but as I cannot hope you would publish it in the Illustrated London News, I refrain from sending on the long and tedious analysis by which my assertion is based. Should the Paris have emulated the position, and the conclusion at which they appear to have arrived is, that the move Q to Black, with a chance of retaining the piece he has gained, and finally exhausting White's attack, by the White Bishop getting out at Q 2nd, and the moves of 14. P to K 6th, in which case I suggest for White 15. R R to K sq.

Leaving the field of further analysis open to the numerous distinguished players of Great Britain, I have the honour to remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

JAMES MONTMORENCY.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

No. 1077.—By MM. Boilieau and Hervieu.

White: K at K 4th, Q at Q 3rd, R at Q Kt 2nd, and Q Kt 3rd, Kt at K B 4th and K 6th; Pawns at K B 4th, K 4th, and Q B 3rd, Q 3rd, Q 4th and Q Kt 4th.

Black: K at K 6th; Pawns at K B 2nd, Q 3rd, and Q B 5th.

White to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 1078.—By Herr Klerg.

White: K at K 8th, R at Q 8th, Kt at K 5th, Kt at K 2nd and K B 6th; Pawns at K 3rd and Q Kt 6th.

Black: K at Q 5th, P at K B 4th and Q Kt 6th.

White to play, and mate in three moves.

Black: K at K 4th, Q at K 7th, Bs at K R 6th and K 4th; Pawns at K B 5th, and Q Kt 3rd.

White, playing first, to mate in three moves.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL, in his tenth lecture "On Experimental Optics," given on Thursday, Feb. 11, concluded his explanation of the phenomena of the color spectrum with a fine example of the flame of fused sodium, which gives a yellow light. By the interposition of the electric lamp, replacing it by a dark band. Then, after referring to the phenomenon due to the retardation of some of the waves of light in passing through certain crystals, he explained that Dr. Tyndall stated that on passing through certain crystals a beam of light is split into two, one of which is more refracted than the other—this is "double refraction;" and when a ray coming through the electric lamp is reflected on the screen, and he interposed a piece of Iceland spar, two images were produced instead of one. After giving some further remarkable illustrations of the wave theory of light, as connected with Dr. Thomas Young's important discovery of interference, the lecturer, in conclusion, said that the phenomena he had now pointed round the point where the cones strike the water. These waves consist of a series of ridges and furrows, one after the other by forcing the water to assume a little spasm in the form of a cone. On the water, the waves long ray from one point to another, and the water does not pass with the wave. Professor Tyndall illustrated by means of the electric lamp, and among the examples were some deeply depressed furrows, which, by the agency of air currents, were of great horizontal length; the iridescent varnished papers of Messrs. De la Rue, Bevington, and Bros., were also shown.

MR. W. H. MILLER, M.A., in the Friday evening discourse on Feb. 19, "On Draining and Accumulation in relation to the functions of certain nerve-centres. We have, he said, two leading points, the nature of the fundamental purpose of a nervous system is that of establishing a communication between the body and the world. Now, as far as the one purpose can may influence the rest, as it were, by "sympathy." The simplest form of a nervous system is that of a single ganglion, or nucleus, and there we have one cell of which passes into the ganglion, while the other is distributed to certain parts, as the skin. Next in complexity to this simple nervous system is found in man. Reflex action is the power which every nerve-centre has of receiving impressions and returning impressions to it by the nerves, and of transmitting them through other nerve-lines to surrounding parts. Numerous actions occur in our bodies which are not under the control of the will, and which are termed "reflex actions," as the contraction of muscular fibre. Thus, when the spinal cord is injured, and communication of the will with the lower extremities, limb movements occur entirely beyond the patient's control. These are termed "excito-motor actions." Now, when the nervous system is complex, as in man, besides reflex centres, there are other independent of the will, and often in opposition to it. These are termed "automatic centres," such as those which are influenced by thinking and coughing. Examples of sensation and consciousness combined with reflex action are found in sneezing, laughing, &c. Actions are sometimes which are reflex, and produce ideas; and, as the result, certain acts are performed, the motive for which is not felt. Such are "instinctive actions." The centres supplied in these acts are the cerebellum of brain, composed of, 1, the medulla oblongata, a prolongation of the spinal cord, including the corpora striata and optic thalami; 2, cerebellum; and 3, the base—the corpora striata, optic thalami, and the optic, auditory, and gustatory ganglia, connected with the cerebrum. The cerebrum is the sensorium proper; and, 4, the cerebellum. The medulla oblongata is of vital importance; its complete injury causes instantaneous death. Consciousness is not essential to our well being, but nony rest. Sleep is defined as a state "characterized by certain changes in the nervous phenomena." Sleep is not perfect, but emphatically rest of the sensorium and cerebral lobes, the tissues of which are in a state of repair. Sleep is not a state of unconsciousness, but of the sense of relation to the world around us. Sleep is divided into the wave of balance between rest and repair. Sleep is to the body what the wind is to every organ in the body, from the lowest animal to man himself." Sleep varies in intensity, from mere drowsiness to the most profound sleep, when we are insensible to the world. In the latter conditions we are completely suspended. Dreams, therefore, are the result of the imperfect exercise of the sensorium. Dreams vary in a state of sleep. Dreams also vary exceedingly in intensity, some of the impressions being tardily and evanescent, others extremely vivid and lasting. Dreaming in health sleep is profound or prolonged according to the degree in which the brain is at rest. Dreams are the result of the imperfect exercise of the sensorium. Partially at rest, sometimes consciousness is retained, and radical, and other times characterized by a want of registration and co-ordination—a slowness generally in the mental operations. Dreams no longer than a few others. The nature of dreaming is often influenced by local action. Dr. Gregory's theory of dreaming is that the water at his bed, dreamt that he was ascending Mount Etna. Similar instances are well known. In "dry dreams" and "wet dreams" we have the same phenomena in connection with the will; and, if the sensorium be not checked, an unhealthy state of the mind ensues. Dreams are sometimes prophetic, and are so when they are the natural result of the will in the sensorium. Somnambulism is nothing more than dreams and are well known.—Somnambulism may be regarded as the result of a dream, or as a more complete exercise of the sensorium. Somnambulists are those in whom acts may be perfectly accomplished without the intervention of any sense; for the acts are not really performed, but only seem to be, and are heard and objects recognised by sight and touch. Nightmare and talking in sleep may be regarded as dreams. Trance, or somnambulism, is a state of passive action dream; yet generally no ideas are aroused and nothing is remembered. There is the same relation between trance and mesmeric somnambulism, because, of all portions of the nervous system, the cerebral lobes are most affected by mesmeric influence. Trance is a state of sleep, in which the mental faculties are suspended, and the senses, sensation, and objectless. Summarily, in profound sleep there are no acts beyond circulation, respiration, and reflex actions. In partial sleep, dreaming, and somnambulism, there are dreams; impressions are either subjective or objective, and, if the latter, they are registered in the sensorium, but not in the will, at least partial activity. Mr. Savory gave many illustrations of the foregoing principles, and concluded his discourse on the beneficial effects that may result from dreams, as showing ourselves what we really are. Dr. Henry Bence Jones, M.A., presided.

PROFESSOR FRANKLAND'S second lecture "On the Metallic Elements," given on Saturday last, was devoted to a consideration of the metals of the alkalies, with regard to "reduction," most solid metals are nearly colourless when melted, and the vapours of most metals are colourless. Potassium and sodium are white solids, which melt at a gentle heat, and boil at a high temperature, the interior of a bright vessel made of them. It was shown by means of the electric lamp that, in the case of potassium, the vapour is of a violet color, and a gold becomes red; silver, yellow; and zinc, blue, &c. Steel, after ten reductions, becomes as soft as iron, but it is not so if carbon be retained; hence this metal is fitted for colourless reflectors. "Tarnishing" was explained to be the result of the action of gases in most cases on the metal, planetary colour to that effect. Farming obtained green light by the action of chlorine on copper, and the colours of gold, copper, and silver by the same. Purple also obtained ruby, blue, and other tints from finely divided gold monochloride. Mr. Faraday, F.R.S., was in the chair. Aggregation of metals was illustrated. In the first case the metal was disaggregated when he annealed the gold. The colours of "soil-luminous" metals, and the combustion of metals in chlorine, &c. Specimens were examined on platinum wire heated between the poles of the voltaic battery, that the platinum-wire was not affected. Metals are now the subject, since each is found to possess colours more or less marked—the vapour of strontium being a beautiful crimson, that of barium, &c. In this way, however, it is difficult for the unassisted eye to discriminate between the metals; but when the spectroscope is employed, the colours of the flame of vapour-lines, the vapour of silver, copper, tin, lithium, &c., were shown; and the spectrum of several prominent lines of each metal was fully described.

PROFESSOR TYNDALL gave his eleventh lecture "On Experimental Optics" on Tuesday last, the 23rd inst., after showing additional illustrations of the colours due to interference, he proceeded to consider the phenomena of the polarization of light, and explained that a ray of light consists of a series of glass at an angle of 35½ deg. A portion of the ray which passes through the glass is also polarized; and, by adding a second plate of glass, a still further portion of the transmitted light is polarized. It was shown that a polarized ray of light, when it falls on a plate of glass, is entirely reflected or entirely refracted; but when the ray falls obliquely on the glass surface it is only reflected. Besides other experiments, it was shown that, when a beam of light passes through a plate of tourmaline, cut parallel to the axis of the crystal, that beam is polarized; but when the axes are crossed at right angles the beam which passes through the second plate is entirely cut off.

Professor Marshall will commence a course of six lectures on Tuesday and Thursday next, "On the Physiological Anatomy of Animal Life."

Professor G. G. Stokes, Sec. R.S., will deliver the Friday evening discourse on March 4, "On the Recent Advance in the Dissipation of Organic Bodies by their Optical Properties."

NEW BOOKS.

THE NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.
Now ready, at all Libraries.

PECULIAR. A Tale of the Great Transition. Edited by WILLIAM HOWITT. 3 v.
DR. JACOB. By the Author of "John and I."
WILLIAM LEIGHTON. By the Author of "Mabel." 3 v.
"Full of life and truth."—Morning Herald.
A WOMAN'S RANSOM. By the Author of "Grandmother's Money." &c. 3 vols.
ELLA NORMAN. By ELIZABETH A. MURRAY. Reflected in the Diadem of Children. 12 Great Mediterranean steamers.
ROBERT and BLANCHE, Published, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

MORE BOOKS, with Portraits, 25s.,
COURT AND SOCIETY FROM ELIZABETH TO ANNE. Edited by the DUKE OF BUCCLEUCH.
RICHARD BENTLEY and SON, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

MR. CHELLES'S SEQUEL TO "SELF HELP."
Now ready, in 1 vol. crown 8vo, price 6s.
INDUSTRIAL BIOGRAPHY: IRON WORKERS AND TOOL MAKERS. Being a Sequel to "Self Help" and "Workmen and Engineers." By SAMUEL SMILES.
Works by the Same Author.
SELF HELP. With Illustrations of Character and Conduct. 18th Thousand. 6s.
THE STORY OF GEORGE STEPHENSON'S LIFE. Workmen. 18th Thousand. Post 8vo. 6s.
LIVES OF BRITISH ENGINEERS. From the earliest Period down to the Death of George and Robert Stephenson. 3rd Thousand. With 9 Portraits and 300 Illustrations. 3 vols. 8vo. 63s.
WORKMEN—THEIR EARNINGS, SAVINGS, and STRIKES. In preparation.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

DENIS DUVAL: an Unfinished Story by the late W. M. THACKERAY, will be commenced in the CORNHILL MAGAZINE for MARCH, &c.
SMITH, ELDER, and CO., 65, Cornhill.

Now ready, Second Edition, 2s. 6d.; postage 4d.,
GOOD THINGS FOR RAILWAY READING. By ALEXANDER SMITH. Contents: "Horace Walpole: A sceptical collection."—Reader. "Fresh, racy, and originality."—John Bull.
LOCKWOOD and CO., 7, Stationers-hall-court.

Now ready, 1s., Monthly,
THE BOY'S OWN MAGAZINE, for MARCH. Contents: The Chinese Puzzle. Illustrated. Uncle Foss. Five Chapters. A Story of the Great Charter. By F. G. Kitton. Illustrated. Page Illustrations by Alfred Crowquill. The Rise Becomes Over the Border. By an Army Chaplain.—Illustrated. Sir Walter Raleigh. Illustrated. Curiosities of Natural History. By Shirley Hibberd. Illustrated. Sports and Pastimes. Illustrated. Feast and Monograph. By the Rev. J. G. Wood, M.A. F.L.S. &c.—Illustrated. The Boy's Own Conjuring Book. Illustrated. Curiosities of Science. By the Rev. W. H. Dallinger, F.R.M.S. Illustrated. My First Balloon Ascent. By Henry Coxwell.—About the Boys of Olden Times. By Henry of Glendale. Illustrated. Uncle Foss. Part 2. Illustrated. To Veterans.—Birth.—The Music of the Alkaline. By W. Mattieu Williams, F.C.S. Illustrated. The Rise for the Hind Legs. Illustrated.—Facts, Fancies, Fun, &c.
Every Article Illustrated with splendid Engravings, from designs by well-known Artists. Part I. for JANUARY, price 6d., Stitched.
Price 6d. Monthly,
THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE. Contents of No. XLVIII. (MARCH):—Mrs. Merrifield's Visit to the Museum of Cluny.—The Month: Its Characteristics.—Three Chapters.—Under the Window Pacing.—A Lady and Gentleman at Home.—Our Farm: Its Management and Produce.—Sunday Employments.—Our Boys and Girls.—Answers to Correspondents.—Advice About Portraits in Photography.—A History of Fashion.—and the Latest Fashions of the Month.—Cookery for Every Day in the Month.—The Book of the Month.—The Fashions.—The Supplementary Plate of Fashions.—Patterns of Needlework.—Knitting, Netting, and Needlework as Practised at the Present Time.—Explanation of the Work to be done in the Garden for the Month.—A Sheet of Patterns in Needlework.—Knitting, Netting, and Needlework.—Dress.—Let us know your face for a little time between the cares of the morning and the cares of the afternoon, with full-sized Diagrams for cutting out both articles.
A Supplement, containing Eight Pages, price One Penny, will be Published on the 1st of each Month, with Illustrations of Fashion, Needlework, &c.
Part I. for JANUARY, price 6d., Stitched.
Vol. I. (JULY to DECEMBER, 1863), price 5s., Cloth Lettered.
Vol. II. (JANUARY to JUNE, 1864), price 5s., Cloth Lettered.
Vol. III. (JULY to DECEMBER, 1864), price 5s., Cloth Lettered.
Authors.—Vol. Correspondence Columns. A Practice-plate of every Month. Vol. Correspondence Columns. A Practice-plate of every Month. Vol. Correspondence Columns. A Practice-plate of every Month.
Just Published, Part I. for JANUARY, price 6d., Stitched.
Including: The Cattle breed (two Illustrations): two needle; Sculpture, and Sculptors (two Illustrations): two needle; Sculpture, and Sculptors (two Illustrations): two needle; Sculpture, and Sculptors

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 1248.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, MARCH 5, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

THOSE whose business or whose pleasure it is to cultivate politics, or to watch, with interest more or less personal, the flow and ebb of party tactics, are just now very much on the alert. There is no longer any disguise about the fact that the Opposition in the House of Commons has assumed the offensive against the Government; and scarcely an evening passes in which there are not indications of a determination at least to dog the heels of Ministers, and to wound if not to strike home at them. It is no more than the simple truth to say that seldom has an Opposition enjoyed an opportunity more favourable for giving the political world evidence of their strength as Parliamentary assailants, and also to show, if only indirectly, that they possess the qualifications necessary to enable them adequately to supply the Ministerial deficiencies which they detect and expose. It was no secret that Lord Palmerston met Parliament this year under circumstances of no small embarrassment; and rumour was loud in the assertion that that embarrassment was aggravated by difference of opinion amongst the members of the Cabinet. The Liberal party, both within and without the walls of the Legislature, were dissatisfied with Government on account of the indifference which they displayed to domestic reforms; while their main strength, which lay in their foreign policy, had nearly, if not altogether, passed away from them. It was in vain to attempt to stop the ears of the English public to the universal cry of Europe that this country had lost its prestige and influence in foreign affairs; and it was with natural sorrow and humiliation that Englishmen saw Powers, great and small, flouting the remonstrances of our Foreign Minister, and acting with an independence of the opinion of Great Britain, such as, perhaps, the world has never witnessed since the time of Cromwell. If ever the weakness and divisions of Ministers formed the opportunity of Opposition it was then.

Of course, the chiefs of the Conservative party must have been affected with a remarkable blindness if they did not see that which was patent and palpable to the eyes of every thinking man in the country; and, as we have said, they set about to organise a system of attack on Ministers which has been persistently and, on the whole, ably carried out. There is no doubt that in the debates on the Danish question, and on the policy of the Government with regard to the detention of the vessels alleged to be built for the service of the Confederate American States, the Opposition have had the triumphs of talk with them. In the weekly expositions of the foreign policy of the Government with which Mr. Disraeli favours the House of Commons he has exhibited in no small degree those powers of sarcasm and dangerous banter which originally won for him the high place which he now holds. But a careful and impartial consideration of the modus operandi of the Opposition will, we think, show that they have not attained to the true standard of their function, and that their proceedings leave behind them a sense of something wanting, and a general idea of an unsatisfactory and somewhat baseless course of action. While they have been potent enough in exposing the errors of the Government, they have failed to give, even by implication, any assurance of their own superior discernment, and of those statesman-like qualities which would produce a confidence in their capability to amend all that which they condemn with a glibness and readiness which evince ability enough, although of a secondary and minor character. Much, very much, has been said which is clever, pointed, and true, by the principal speakers on the Conservative side; but we have in vain sought to detect beneath this surface power the elements of English statesmanship, of clear and decided views, of coherent purposes, and firm and steady resolve. They are prompt enough to accuse Ministers of being wanting in all these respects; but they impress no one with the notion that they themselves are the persons to supply the deficiencies which they expose. After the experience of the tactics of Mr. Disraeli and his followers in the House of Commons during the last month we are fain to come to the conclusion that on the great questions

"A TRAIN OF THOUGHT."—BY J. D. WATSON, IN THE WINTER EXHIBITION.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Emperor and Empress, Prince Napoleon and Princess Clotilde, Princess Mathilde, and Princess Anna Murat went to the Opera on Monday night, to see the first representation of the "Marquis de Villemer," a new drama by George Sand. The Duke and Duchess de Morny, M. de Nieuwerkerke, M. Baltelle, and many other Court notabilities were present.

The trial of the four Italians charged with conspiring against the life of the Emperor commenced on Thursday week, and concluded the following day. Orsini Trabucco were sentenced to transportation for life, and Imperatori and Scaglioni to twenty years imprisonment. Trabucco admitted his share in the conspiracy and explained the motives which actuated him. Imperatori, Scaglioni, and Orsini denied it. The prisoners which the French in Rome encouraged, drove him, he declared, quite mad. Orsini, from the first, had been opposed to the plot, but, once begun, Greco himself professed to make a full confession, and, when asked if he had any witnesses to call, replied that he had already answered the Court in the affirmative. The evidence as to Mazzini's handwriting went to show that as an expert in that matter he had been called to peruse letters attributed to Mazzini with a signature of Mazzini appended to them, and proved by the Prince's secretary in 1849. That, he declared, sufficed for him. He affirmed that, in "foundation, spirit, aspect, and physiognomy" the writings were the same. He took upon himself to say that imitation or deception would be impossible. Mazzini's handwriting interviened between the date of the signature and that of the letters. The Procureur-General Cordoen, in his address to the Court to the jury, when detailing the different letters of recommendation in Mazzini's handwriting found upon Greco, came at last to one directing him where to apply in case he stood in need of more money. The address proved to be that of "M. Bellegarde, Professor of History, London." The Procureur-General then proceeded as follows:—I turned to the London Post Office Directory to ascertain who the person could be who bore that name, and I found in the Directory under the name of Bellegarde . . . . . a person who was founded, of course, on the accusation of the Procureur-General.

The latest advices from Marshal M'Mahon will have the consound of the camp at Chalons this year.

The Court continues in deep mourning. He was formerly Prefect of Police, and in that capacity was sent on a private but important mission to Rome. He was subsequently sent by the Emperor to Berlin. He was visited on Sunday by the Emperor and Prince Napoleon.

The Vice de Chabrol-Chaméane, Commissary-Extraordinary, that the French Minister of Marine has sent orders for arming and manning the two sloops-of-war, the Dragonne and the Alcmène, which are now fitting at Toulon. The Dragonne is a screw corvette of 450 horse-power, and the Alcmène a screw sloop of 320 horse-power. Both are armed with 16 guns, and are intended for the Mexican coast.

The Vice de Chabrol-Chaméane, Commissary-Extraordinary of the republic of the Equator, has sent as a present to the Emperor Napoleon a flock of lamas and alpacas. The first portion has arrived, and are now at the Jardin d'Acclimatation.

A curious document has just been published giving a list of the ravages committed by wild animals in France in 1863 by the decrease in the forest of Compiegne. The total number killed by guns or traps amounted to 10,931, consisting of 1,000 wolves, 1,000 foxes, 533 wild cats, 1797 weasels, 357 hedgehogs, 1043 buzzards, hawks, and kites, 1,000 crows, 1,000 magpies, 1,000 jays, 1,000 ravens, and 1675 jays. The expense incurred for this destruction amounted to 3,000f.

The ball for the benefit of the Society of Dramatic Artists took place last Saturday at the Opera-Comique. It was very successful, attended, the crowd including a Prince of the Imperial house, an Italian Princess, the Duchess de Morny, the actresses of the different theatres, all their friends, and a few foreigners.

The Moniteur publishes a letter from Mexico announcing the capitulation of Oaxaca, the last city held by the Juarez party, which in Campeachy had its last resource. The ports of the western coast of Mexico are all blockaded by French ships.

A Scientific Commission in Mexico similar to that appointed formerly to follow the French expedition into Egypt has been appointed.

SPAIN.

Symptoms of dissatisfaction with the Ministry having been observable in the Cortes the Queen decided on dissolving the Chamber, and charged Senor Arrazola, one of the Ministers, to choose a new Administration, the members to be chosen from both sides of the Chamber. The new Ministry is composed as follows:—Arrazola Min. President of the Council, without portfolio; Pacheco, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Mon, Minister of Finance; Canovas, Minister of the Colonies; Mon, Minister of Finance; Canovas, Minister of the Interior; Pidal, Minister of Public Instruction; Bermudez de Castro, Minister of Public Works; Vilches, Minister of the Colonies.

A Royal decree has been published, offering a bonus of 7 per cent on all buyers of national property paying in advance the obligations they have subscribed for, which fall due before 1870.

TURKEY.

THE POLISH INSURRECTION.

Fifteen hundred insurgents, under the command of Rosik, having occupied the town of Opatow, in the government of Radom, were attacked by the troops of the line, and after a considerable fusillade force. The engagement lasted the whole day. The Poles, who had entrenched themselves in the houses, replied to the fire upon the Russians. The latter received considerable reinforcements towards the evening, and the insurgents were obliged to retreat. Towards the night, to the forest of St. Croix. Forty houses in the town were reduced to ashes.

The Warsaw journals we learn that a large portion of the population of Galicia is under the sway of the National Polish Government, and that the levies of recruits are proceeding as expected. To thwart this projected insurrection the Austrian Government have placed the province under martial law.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

On Wednesday the allies made a close reconnaissance towards Duppel, and found that the Danes had not commenced entrenching that place. The Danes have burned down all the farms on the line of their outposts. A letter from Alsen says:—"The Danes are all in fine spirits, and are looking upon the war as a mere amusement, and doubly sure. All that the engineers have asked was just a fortnight's breathing time, and during that time they would have their lines as if by magic, and whenever the assailants are ready they will be quite ready to find their way home fully as quickly."

No change has taken place in the position of the Austro-Prussians at Flensburg. They still occupy the town and district with a population of 20,000, is situated in Jutland, at about three miles from the border of Denmark Proper, and is defended by forts. It is defended by well-constructed fieldworks; but the Danes, feeling the impossibility of seriously resisting on that point the efforts of the allied army, evacuated it in order to concentrate themselves on Fredericia, where they have considerable means of defence. It is easy to understand the importance of the strategical position occupied by the allied army at Kolding, which is only about seven miles from Fredericia by a good road. The allied army, thus placed, commands both Duppel and Fredericia, and in case of need may remove the centre of action from the one point to the other. On Monday a cavalry engagement between two squadrons of Germans and two of Danes took place near Hadersleben. The Danes appear to have been successful, and to have captured thirty prisoners.

Letters from Sonderburg, on the island of Alsen, up to the 25th ult., describe the town as most populous for the wounded Austro-Prussian attack on Duppel, which they feel prepared to resist to the utmost. At first, according to some of the correspondents, they were doubtful whether their resistance would be successful; but they are now full of courage and confidence. The other intelligence from Sonderburg is that it is most inconveniently crowded, and that the soldiers are adopting various ways of killing time during their enforced idleness. It is noticed that the Danes allow the utmost freedom of access about their works to civilians of all kinds, including newspaper correspondents, and the freest circulation of intelligence, in amiable contrast to the careful exclusion of unauthorised reporting in the German lines. Numbers of civilians are fraternising with the Danish officers, whose life is thus described by the Times correspondent:—

We share their crowded rooms with them at the hotels, where we have to put up with the worst fare. Coffee, bad bread, sandwiches, sour-krout, and cabbage, smothering leather hash, stifling at the centres, freezing at the extremities, wathsome club dinners, and occasional allowances of bottled ale, which, oddly enough, is not bad. Then there are the cafés, abodes of confusion. We have to sit in the midst of a dense cloud of smoke, with the thermometer at 90 degrees, and must not be surprised if we are insulted, in the presence of the Danes, with whom bullet lost is spoilt beef, and among whom such a club is a recruiting station, by a set of fine young fellows. Barracks: the soup once a week, a "sweet soup," a compound of stewed prunes, rice, and fat, which whoever can eat instead of it is sure to be sent for like titbits. Finally, we are admitted to their armouries in the coffee-rooms, where they lift the guns, fence, try very long whips, bear, and, when making the atmosphere of the close, hot apartment as dense and heavy as to undo the day's work of hair-dressing, practise waltzing as one of the most delightful of vivid, wearisome, heavy rain, and other amenities of this wintry climate.

A Danish gun-boat has conveyed to Fredericia Count Scheel, which enables the Danes to take up a similar flank position towards Holstein as they occupy upon Alsen towards Duppel.

Swedish volunteers for the Danish army continue to arrive. Most of them are immediately despatched to the quarters on the island of Alsen, and, as many of them have before served in the Swedish army, they at once enter the ranks, either as privates or non-commissioned officers.

Amongst other news from Copenhagen comes the statement that Count Hamilton, the Swedish Minister to Denmark there, has been recalled, and that his request has been complied with by his Government. Another statement is that Count Gerlach has been intrusted with the command-in-chief of the army, in place of General de Hansen. This latter statement is unfounded. Major-General has been appointed Chief of this Staff.

Both Houses of the Diet have passed an address to King Christian on the 25th ult. The draught was unanimously approved by the Landsthing, the Folkething by 77 votes to 4, after a long and animated debate and the rejection of several amendments. The following is the full text of the address:—

Most Gracious Sovereign!

By the very oaths of the Danish people at the sudden decease of your illustrious predecessor, Frederick VII., and a voice to which the Danish Monarchy trending in the footsteps of our late lamented Monarch, by securing our freedom and independence, by the suppression of each encroachment of the foreigner to withdraw the Constitution of the 18th of November last. The ordinary Constitution of the Monarchy is the result of a thankful development of our affairs. After the German Confederation, under pretence of an execution, had occupied Holstein and Lauenburg, the Landsthing, in of your Majesty, with federal troops, and under their protection, permitted a Diet to assemble, which, in the name of an unauthorised fraction of the kingdom of Germany have rent their armies across the frontier of the kingdom of Denmark, and have, without any declaration of war, taken in order to seize as a pledge for the cause of the Duchies, the fortress of Rendsburg, in 1721, once surrendered and guaranteed to the Danish Crown, and over which neither Germany nor the German Confederation have any sovereign rights of possession. Your two honorable engagements our brave army yielded to superior numbers, and abandoned the frontier fortress, which it had held years, and which is in the possession of a small portion of Schleswig. The enemy has overrun the remaining portion, and has commenced to force the inhabitants of the country subjects to drive away many faithful servants of your Majesty, and to overthrow your order. With the help of God we hope, indeed, intelligence has been received that he has also invaded the province of Jutland.

Most Gracious Sovereign!

In such serious circumstances your Majesty's faithful Landsthing and Folkething have assembled, assuring their fidelity and devotion towards its King in the name of the people by whom it has been chosen. As were against superior numbers, and with the existing political relations, where confidence reigns between King and People, we will not seek consolation in the fact that the cause of the Duchies is the cause of the King, but your Majesty will faithfully protect our freedom and independence, and will never permit that, in future, disadvantageous treaties be entered across the frontiers of Denmark, or the connection between the kingdom and Schleswig be weakened by any pretext of right.

After the decided declaration of your Majesty's Government, the people may reckon that the determination of your Majesty will be upheld to the very cutlas of the war, as well as that your Majesty will strive to throw forge that connection between the two parts of the land of self-government which is to be sacrificed. Your Majesty, on the other hand, may feel assured that the hearts of your people will beat warmly for the cause of your Majesty, and that your people will be ready and determined to hold every sacrifice dear for the right and honour of Denmark.

Your Majesty's faithful Landsthing Kiw and people dwell together, we shall be able to meet the chances and dangers of war with cheerful courage.

Hail to the Throne!
Hail to our brave army!
Hail to our beloved country!

The address of the Landsthing was presented to the King on the 26th. His Majesty desired the presence of all the members on that occasion. In his reply to the address his Majesty said:—I thank you for the expression of your fidelity. Relying upon you and upon the loyalty of the Danish people, I shall not fail to do my duty, and I am also well convinced that you will be resolved to hold every sacrifice dear for the right and honour of Denmark.

The address of the Folkething was presented to the King on the 26th. His Majesty desired the presence of all the members on that occasion. In his reply to the address his Majesty said:—I thank you for the expression of your fidelity. Relying upon you and upon the loyalty of the Danish people, I shall not fail to do my duty, and I am also well convinced that you will be resolved to hold every sacrifice dear for the right and honour of Denmark.

A provisional law has just been issued imposing a war tax upon coffee, wine, tobacco, and salt. The duty on coffee will amount to 25 per cent.

From the Ministry of Marine has been issued an official notification that all ports and inlets on the east coast of the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein are declared blockaded as far north as Fahrwasser, with the exception of Eckernfahrde, the Isles of Als and Aeroe, and such other places as are actually under the authority of his Majesty the King. The blockade, which has already been successfully carried out at every place that shall again come into the power of the Royal Government, and another notice will be given as to the time of the provisional prize law—provisional until its ratification by the Sigsmal—Anzeiger says:

Danish accounts of the sharp fight at Oversee, during the retreat from Duppel, state that the Danish loss out of 2750 men engaged in their side 815 were killed or wounded; and of 4000 Austrians engaged 738 were put hors de combat. The report that many wounded Danish men was killed or wounded.

An Austrian gunboat has captured a Danish merchantman laden with coffee in the Mediterranean, and has left the prize at the Island of Cephalonia.

The Austro-Prussian Commissioners in Schleswig have re-established the law by which persons seeking to be admitted to a position in the Church or the Civil Service must prove that they are acquainted for at least two years' studentship in the University of Kiel. The abolition of this regulation was one of the points on one of the grievances complained of by the Schleswig-Holstein party.

At Kiel, yesterday week, Duke Frederick of Augustenburg received an address presented by a deputation from all parts of Schleswig stating that the people of Schleswig would accept no other Prince as their sovereign than the Duke. In reply, the Prince declared his intention of never surrendering his rights. The deputation is said to have consisted of 1000 members, some of whom were elected (one member representing about 400 inhabitants of the province), while the rest had joined voluntarily. The agitation in favour of the Prince of Augustenburg continues to increase, and is plainly discouraged by the Austrians and Prussians.

At the sitting of the Federal Diet on Thursday week Austria and

---

At a great ball given to the nobles of St. Petersburg a few days since one of the supporting pillars was found to be cracked from bottom to middle, but did not remain long, as he had only returned from a hunting excursion the day before. The Emperor and Empress of Russia, Diplomatic Corps at St. Petersburg have also opened their saloons; and, besides a entertainment. They will also be followed by a grand dinner in honour of the Duke of Cornwall, the youthful representative of Queen Dagmar.

On Wednesday there was a new series of experiments at Shoeburyness with the Armstrong 110-pounder. The object was to test the initial velocity of a smaller shot with a smaller charge of gunpowder than has previously been tried, objection having been taken that a shot of 110lb., with a charge of 12lb. of gunpowder, was too great a strain upon the gun, rupturing the vent-piece, and exposing the lives of those firing to considerable risk. The initial velocity of the gun with the above charge was 1,200 feet per second. The shot used in the present series of experiment with a 10lb. charge and a 10lb. shot was an initial velocity of 1045 ft.; with an 11 lb. charge, 1102 ft. With the 10 lb. charge the strain is on 10 5/8 cwt.; with 11 lb., on 11 5/8 cwt.; and with 12 lb., on 12 5/8 cwt. The proposed reduction would therefore be a great relief to the vent-piece, as shown likewise by a marked diminution in the extent of recoil. At the same time there is no great loss of range.

COUNTRY NEWS.

Russia proposed that the command-in-chief of the army in Holstein should be transferred to Prussia, and that two new civil commissioners should be appointed by the two great German Powers. The propositions were referred to the committee.

The report of the committee upon the Holstein succession question also came on for debate on Thursday week. Articles 1 and 2 of the proposals of the committee, stating the Treaty of London not to be binding upon the Diet, were rejected. Articles 3 and 4, rejecting the claims of the representative of the King of Denmark to a place in the Diet, and ordering a further report on the constitutional rights of the re-framing of which the Treaty of London must not be taken as a basis—were carried.

A popular meeting at Leipsic has passed resolutions in favour of the Germanic Confederation declaring its sympathy with the Duchies, of which "the object should, under no circumstance, be other than the complete separation of the duchies from Denmark."

The following circular despatch has been forwarded by the Austrian Government to its diplomatic agents abroad, and has also been handed to the Frankfort Diet (see Germany):—"The Emperor, all present circumstances to exercise the right of capture against Austrian, Prussian, and Federal commerce in the Danish Baltic Apostolic Majesty has been pleased to order the equipment of a squadron of ironclad vessels of war, which, in conjunction with a cruise between Gibraltar and the British Channel, and protect not only Austrian, but also Prussian and other German merchantmen against the Danish cruisers. Your Excellency is therefore requested to bring this measure to the knowledge of the Government to which you are accredited."

AMERICA.

News from New York extends to the 19th ult. General Meade left Washington on the 15th to resume the permanent command of the army of the Potomac. Mr. Henry Ward Beecher was entertained at Jackson, Mississippi, on the 9th ult., and had advanced to Brandon. A portion of his troops occupied Canton on the same day. General Sherman's plans are considered to be incomplete as yet. Mobile and Selma are considered to be the objects of the movement, which appears likely to be accompanied by a combined movement against Mobile, Savannah, and the Confederate armies and strongholds in Georgia. Naval advices from Pensacola announced that New Orleans are to co-operate. It is anticipated that the Confederates will open the campaign by a formidable attack upon Chattanooga.

President Davis has issued an address to the army thanking the troops for their services. He says that the spring campaign opens under auspices well calculated to sustain their hopes. Assured success awaits their efforts for liberty and independence.

President Davis has signed a bill prohibiting the exportation of tobacco, tea, sugar, and coffee, except by the Government, and also a bill prohibiting the importation of luxuries after March next, and fixing the scale of prices at which goods shall be sold. The latter section may be suspected.

Mr. Colfax, of Cincinnati, has been elected Speaker over Mr. Justice Christian presiding, a man named Edward Stanford was found guilty of murdering his wife, Mary Ann Stanford, by a jury of twelve men.

There are sixty applications for the office of head master of the Albert Middle-class School. The number of incorporation is being drawn up under the direction of Sir Fitzroy Kelly.

Captain Robertson, late of the 4th Dragoon Guards, has, after a short time in command of the Royal Irish Rifles, been gazetted to the 10th Hussars.

The Queen has approved of Mr. Edmond de Laya as Consul at Salonica in the room of Mr. Blunt, and of Mr. Frederick Lamplugh as Vice-Consul at Cardiff for the Queen of Spain; and of Mr. George Newenham Wright as Consul at Bilbao for the Queen of the Netherlands (Holland).

The Inverness Courier notices a curious lunar phenomenon which has been observed for several nights past at Tomatin, Tweedy work. The moon made her appearance in the midst of a brilliant halo, bearing on her left a dark object, which, from its shape, has been conjectured to be the exact reflection of herself, one on each side, the three being in a line.

Mr. A. Cockburn has succeeded Mr. Bell as Solicitor-General for the Wakefield Farmers' Club, on the subject of the malt tax, declaring his opinion that it ought to be repealed, and that the duty on hops ought to be lowered, the suffering for proof to his pamphlet of 1848. He recommends pressure for an unconditional repeal of the malt tax, and says that the hop duty ought also to appear to be honest and earnest to promises it sympathy and support.

The Queen has appointed a Knight Bachelor. The honour gained at Sunday for the purpose of erecting a memorial to the late Prince Consort. It has been decided to erect a statue of the Prince Consort in the Horticultural Gardens, Brompton, and the Duke of Buccleuch has given the site of the plinth, subject to the approval of Prince of Wales. The execution of the design has been entrusted to Mr. Foley, R.A., and the cost will be met by public subscription.

The ninth annual report of the Registrar-General of Births, Marriages, and Deaths in Scotland has been issued. It shows that during the year 1863 there were 71,421 births registered, and that the number of children were born, and that 71,421 people died. The population of Scotland is estimated at 3,007,000, so that 1 in 42 of the people died in the year. In the population, the deaths 2,30, and the marriages 0°74.

The Rev. Thomas Jones, Congregational minister, Thornycroft, of Nettenhall Wood, Wolverhampton, &c., to be Sheriff in the county of Stafford, in the room of Thomas Fletcher Fenton, Esq., deceased. Mr. Jones and Rosaveen Trevor Griffith, of Trevaylis Hall, Wrexham, Esq., to be Sheriff of the counties of Denbigh and Flint, in the room of Thomas Lloyd, Esq., of Gredicot, Abergele, Esq.

A boiler in the ironworks of Mr. Johnson, at West Bromwich, exploded, on Tuesday, in the midst of about forty men who were working round it. Seven of the men were killed, and several others severely injured, and brick work. Seven were killed and thirteen others were shocking extent, of which the boiler was the principal. The explosion took place on Wednesday, in the neighbourhood of Hanley, in the Potteries. There were but seven men, and only one of them escaped unhurt.

Manchester, which has already three public parks, is to have another. The committee of the Council has fixed upon a site for the south-country part of the city, and having a population of over 130,000 came on the consideration of the matter. The site is that of Kersal Moor, which, by a good deal of discussion it was decided, by a majority of one, that the inhabitants of Cheetham Hill division should have the benefit of the expense of the park, and that the city rate should be charged with the interest upon the borrowed money, and the sinking fund for its repayment in time.

A meeting of about 200 gentlemen, from various parts of the Midland counties, was held at the Queen's Hotel, Birmingham, on Monday, for considering the best course to be pursued by the friends of religious freedom on the next general election. The Rev. Newman Hall, Mr. Edmund Hall, and Mr. Carvell Williams were present as a deputation from the London Committee. A meeting similar to the meeting at Birmingham was subsequently held in Nonconformist views was carried. In the evening a public meeting was addressed by Dr. Hall, Mr. Hall, Mr. Williams, and other gentlemen, by Dissenting ministers and others.

The Mayor of Rochester has received the following gratifying communication:—"Dear Sir,—The Prince of Wales has directed me to express to you, that in the event of the Corporation of Rochester determining to do the arrangements connected with the towns of Hastings and St. Leonards and Rochester, the Prince of Wales would have no objection whatever. Their royal Highnesses will each retain a most agreeable recollection of their visit, and will always feel a deep interest in the welfare and prosperity of the town and Highness's command to express to the Corporation of Rochester, through its Chief Magistrate, and to request you will make known to the inhabitants generally, the gratification which the Prince and Princess feel in the kind, and, I may say, affectionate manner in which they were received by the people.—I am, dear Sir, very faithfully yours, W. KNOLLYS."

A meeting was held, on Thursday week, in the Mayor's Parlour, Newhall, Manchester, to consider a scheme for the formation of an Education Aid Society for the purpose of providing funds which shall be applied to the education of the children of the poor on principles in which all the religious denominations can join. The scheme is to be carried out independently of the school scene; the schools eligible to receive the children being those under the Privy Council Office Regulations. It is not the object of the Government grants are also eligible, provided they be recognised by some religious body or committee as the Education Aid Society. Further meetings will be held in order to remain with the parents; but the committee will make up the list to be submitted to the Education Aid Society. Subscriptions are solicited, and the sum of £1,000 per annum is required. The meeting was unanimously for this object were carried, and a subscription was opened at the meeting.

The usual weekly meeting of the Central Relief Committee was held on Monday, at the Mansion-house, Mr. Alderman Wire, chairman, in the chair. Mr. Maclure, honorary secretary, reported that the total amount received from the Mansion-house Committee was £79,000, and that £77,000 had been distributed. The chairman, in addressing Mr. Farrall, in the report, stated that in the last week there was an increase of 1,000 persons relieved in the city and suburbs, which was within the previous week. Grants were made from the general fund:—£1700 to Ashton; £750 to Bolton; £1,000 to Bury; £1,000 to Manchester; £1,000 to Oldham; £100 to Wilton; £100 to Burnley; £400 to Burnley; £150 to Bollington; £100 to Wigan; £100 to Wilmslow; £100 to Haslingden; £1,000 to Hyde; £100 to Bramley; £100 to Stockport; £100 to Marple; £100 to Middleton; £100 to Rochdale.

THE SHAKSPEARIAN TERCENTENARY CELEBRATION AT STRATFORD-UPON-AVON.—At the meeting of the committee—held in the house where Shakspeare lived and died, New Place—on Wednesday, the Mayor (Mr. F. F. Fancy) presiding, it was announced that Herr Meyerstein and W. H. Russell, Esq., LL.D., had accepted the office of vice-president. Mr. Hogarth attended the meeting and entered into preliminary arrangements respecting the exhibition of Shakspearian and other portraits of theatrical personages and scenes which will be held in the Town-hall during the month of April. Communications from the Monumental Memorial Committee, consisting of Sir R. M. C. Hamilton, Bart.; Sir Gastre Lindsay, Bart.; Tom Taylor, Esq.; Robert Bell, Esq.; and Samuel Phillips, Esq., were read, requesting the committee for the purpose of examining several proposed sites for the monumental memorial to Shakspeare, which is to be erected in Stratford-upon-Avon. The committee under the consideration of the Memorial Committee, and the result of their deliberations will shortly be made known.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegram was received yesterday (Friday) through Mr. Reuter's office:—

THE FEDERAL DIET.—Frankfort, March 3.—The Austro-Prussian proposition that the command in chief of the army in Holstein should be transferred to Prussia, and that two new civil commissioners should be appointed by the two great German Powers, was put to the vote in to-day's sitting of the Federal Diet. Seven votes only were given in its favour. Three votes, among which was Bavaria, proposed contre-propositions, and seven were for the return of the proposition being referred to a committee. This latter course was adopted by the Diet.

A communication from Naples states that the excavations being made at Stabiæ in the Quarter have been attended with success. Among the articles dug up are Bronzan vases and others from Nola, with lacharymatories in Greek glass, two golden garlands, a ring of the same metal, several bronze, uncoins, and a number of terra-cottas, among which there is a very remarkable one of Bacchus.

The last mail from the Cape of Good Hope contained 11,301 bags of letters. The number of letters despatched 1861 nearly 47,000 and from England to the Cape in postal money orders, and nearly 45,000 was sent from the Cape to England in the same manner. The customs' duties at the Cape amounted last year to nearly a quarter of a million sterling.

The Pasaah, which arrived at Southampton last week, brought among her passengers their Excellencies Balmerdahn and Bainbridge, Ambassador from the Court of Montenegro to Great Britain. The name of Malegny title; are short, stout, middle-aged men, dressed in European costume. They speak a little French. Their complexions are fair, they have thick lips, and very little hair on their faces. One of them is a elegantly portal, pleasant-looking man. The Ambassador's name is Ser. Ra. Vukotich, who acts as interpreter. [We intend to give Portraits of their Excellencies next week.]

The accounts of the Duchies of Cornwall and Lancaster for the year 1863 have been presented to Parliament. The total amount paid to the credit of the Council of the Duchy of Cornwall has been £70,527. The receipts to the Chancellor and Treasurer of the Household of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during the year amounted to £46,000. The outlay made on the Duchy estates during the year, for the expenses of management were £7674; and, after deducting other charges upon the estate, a balance of £70,527 remained to be paid over to the Council of the Duchy of Cornwall. The receipts of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the hands of the Receiver-General on the 22nd of December, 1862, of £10,024 was £57,345. The amount paid to Her Majesty for the year ending 31st Dec. was £50,000. Ser. Ra. Vukotich, who acts as interpreter. [We intend to give Portraits of their Excellencies next week.]

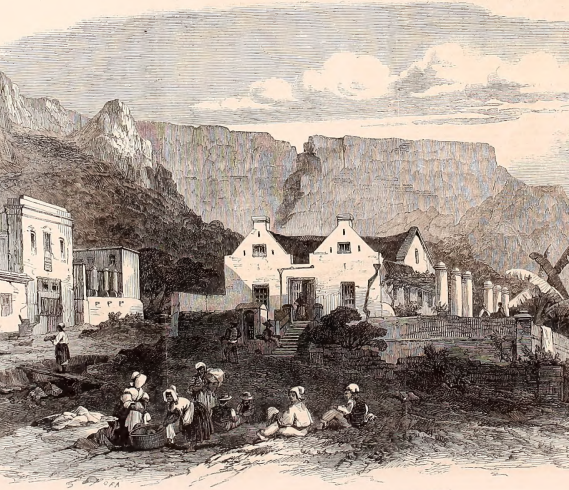
The accounts of the Duchies of Cornwall and Lancaster for the year 1863 have been presented to Parliament. The total amount paid to the credit of the Council of the Duchy of Cornwall has been £70,527. The receipts to the Chancellor and Treasurer of the Household of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during the year amounted to £46,000. The outlay made on the Duchy estates during the year, for the expenses of management were £7674; and, after deducting other charges upon the estate, a balance of £70,527 remained to be paid over to the Council of the Duchy of Cornwall. The receipts of the Duchy of Lancaster, in the hands of the Receiver-General on the 22nd of December, 1862, of £10,024 was £57,345. The amount paid to Her Majesty for the year ending 31st Dec. was £50,000. Ser. Ra. Vukotich, who acts as interpreter. [We intend to give Portraits of their Excellencies next week.]

The correspondence respecting the capture of the Saxon by the Federal Government was presented to Parliament on Saturday. In answer to the reception of the information of the seizure of the vessel and the murder of its mate, Lord Russell addressed a despatch to Mr. Adams, dated the 31st of Jan. 31 of the present year, to bring the matter under the notice of the Government at Washington, and to demand the release of the vessel, the detention to her owners, or satisfactory explanations on the subject. In another despatch of the same date, Lord John Russell directed Mr. Adams that the officer of the Vanderbilt, Donaldson, who shot the mate of the Saxon, should be delivered up to the British authorities. On the 2nd of February Lord Lyons addressed a letter to Mr. Seward and Lyons. After having described the officers of the Crown. There was nothing, he says, in the capture of the Saxon which could justify the violence which had been used, and the murder of the case from the jurisdiction of the Federal prize court. The trial of Donaldson for the wilful murder of Watts, as well as compensation for the widow, is to be insisted upon; and full compensation to the owners of the vessel taken from the property. Mr. Seward replied on the 5th February, 1863, Lord Lyons transmits a letter, on Feb. 4, from the Federal Secretary of State, stating that the President was ready to investigate the circumstances of the alleged murder had committed at Boston. The correspondence presented to-day contains Mr. Seward's letter of the 4th of February on the murder. The question of the legality of the seizure of the Saxon must be decided by the prize court, and the President will not interfere. The question of compensation remains to be considered by the two Governments.

THE AUSTRIAN AND PRUSSIAN FLEETS.—The following statement of the strength of the Austrian and Prussian fleets has been published in Austria. The fleet, exclusive of vessels employed in the inland waters of the empire, consists of one ship of the Line, 800-horse power, 84 guns; two frigates, 600-horse power and 60 guns; one corvette, 350-horse power and 18 guns; seven iron-clad frigates, 800-horse power and 18 guns; two iron-clad corvettes, 400-horse power and 10 guns; two iron-clad batteries, 300-horse power and 16 guns; two steam-yachts, 120-horse power and 6 guns—all of which are in the Adriatic. The Prussian fleet, exclusive of a floating of four corvettes, each carrying 28 guns; two ditto of 17 guns each; two screw gun-boats, two ditto of seven guns each; three smaller ditto, each; one yacht; one paddle-wheel corvette guardship, carrying 8 guns; two steam despatch-boats, each carrying 4 guns; and one transport steamer. An ironclad is being built for the Prussian Government in England. The entire Prussian fleet is stationed in the Baltic, therefore, consists of only 1,000 men and 24 guns.

THE TREATY OF 1832.—A copy of the treaty of the 8th of May, 1832, regarding the Danish succession, has been published as a Parliamentary paper. It is signed by the Plenipotentiaries whose accession to the treaty is intimated, and copies of the documents by which that accession was effected. The treaty is signed by the Plenipotentiaries of Austria, Prussia, and Russia. The treaty:—Bavaria, Belgium, Brunswick, Saxony, Wirtemberg, Hesse-Cassel, Hesse-Darmstadt, Baden, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Oldenburg, Saxe-Weimar, Brazil, Chili, Spain, Portugal, Tuscany, Two Sicilies, and Sardinia. The Powers which acceded to the treaty were:—Hanover, Dec. 11, 1832; Electoral Hesse, Dec. 12, 1832; Nassau, Dec. 14, 1832; Greece, Dec. 16, 1832; Portugal, March 15, 1833; Spain, Dec. 6, 1833; Saxony, Dec. 19, 1833; Belgium, Dec. 20, 1833; and Tuscany, Dec. 6, 1852. Oldenburg and Saxe-Weimar, by their accession, reserved to themselves the right of their hereditary treaties. The following States refused to accede to the treaty:—Switzerland, Jan. 14, 1863; Mexico, Jan. 15, 1863; Peru, Jan. 16, 1863; Hayti, Jan. 17, 1863; Venezuela, Jan. 24, 1863; Parma, Jan. 31, 1863; Baden, Jan. 26, 1863; Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Jan. 19, 1863; Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Jan. 19, 1863. The treaty of 1852, Saxony, Wirtemberg, Hesse-Cassel, Hesse-Darmstadt, Baden, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Oldenburg, Saxe-Weimar, Belgium, Spain, Portugal, Tuscany, Two Sicilies, and Sardinia. The Powers which acceded to the treaty were:—Hanover, Dec. 11, 1852; Electoral Hesse, Dec. 12, 1852; Nassau, Dec. 14, 1852; Greece, Dec. 16, 1852; Portugal, March 15, 1853; Spain, Dec. 6, 1853; Saxony, Dec. 19, 1853; Belgium, Dec. 20, 1853

WILLIAM DYCE, R.A.



Of the number of distinguished painters who have lately been removed by death there is none whose loss will be more deeply felt than that of William Dyce—whose laborious and anxious life was terminated by a painful internal disease on the 14th ultimo. Few, if any, living painters deserved to be appreciated so widely as he that is gone; and yet, perhaps, not one was justly estimated by so few. The time will, nevertheless, come, and that soon, when William Dyce will be named among England's greatest ornaments. We write this with a full conviction of its truth, derived from a day spent in careful examination of those great frescoes in the Palace of Westminster — the ill-paid labour of many years—which will perpetuate the name and fame of Dyce to future generations. Despite chronic ill-health and the gigantic nature of the task, quite enough has been done for this, notwithstanding cruel and unfounded reports of his having wilfully neglected to comply with the conditions of "the bond"; and although, like poor Thackeray, he was cut off in the prime of his powers, leaving one work unfinished and others only planned. There is, perhaps, at this moment no spot in London more truly melancholy than the Queen's Robing-room of the Palace, Westminster, with the unfinished frescoes of Dyce on the walls, and the painter's implements and materials lying about just as he left them. And the impression is deepened by the apprehension, probably only too well founded, that the unhappy painter was the subject of a grave public wrong. We have it from authority which cannot be disputed that the censures for supposed neglect and procrastination in the execution of the frescoes at Westminster, passed upon the painter by dilettanti M.P.s and in the reports of the Parliamentary Commission on the Fine Arts, acting upon a highly sensitive nature, very perceptibly aggravated the malady which buried Dyce into an untimely grave. It seems to have been forgotten that a painter is necessarily extremely slow in producing works all of which are executed in the tedious process of genuine fresco, the buon fresco of the Italians; which are all elevated in conception, composed with the utmost care and deliberation from materials requiring immense research to collect, and finished with extreme elaboration and minuteness.

Dyce never courted popular applause either by subject or treatment; hence, even the few works he publicly exhibited have probably been caviare to the multitude." His most eminent professional brethren and the best informed critics esteem him, however, as one of the most learned, if not the most learned, painter the British school has hitherto produced: one whose powers have been most completely and equally developed. He was imbued with the principles of the purest monumental art of Italy, and with the best of those of the mural painters of Germany, while he reproduced them with a freshness and harmony peculiar to himself. When he did not astonish or move the spectator by some quite unusual phase or expression of art—as he did occasionally, witness that marvellous landscape gem the "Pegwell Bay," exhibited some four years since, and a few religious pictures—he yet "edified," so to speak, what had been done by others in such a way as to give it new value and interest. In consummate draughtsmanship, in composition, in colour, his frescoes especially seem the quintessence of all the most valuable traditions of the schools, yet they are "academical" in no depreciatory sense of the epithet. He had, in short, what the mass of English artists are so deplorably in need of—the highest artistic culture. Indeed, his mere scholarship did not make him the better artist (and certainly Turner, William Hunt, and other of our greatest painters have had little education), it yet enabled him to treat successfully subjects he could not otherwise have attempted.

The leading facts and incidents of his life are of more interest than is usual in the case of artists. William Dyce was born at Aberdeen, in 1806. His father was a physician of good repute, and Fellow of the Royal Society; a cousin is the Rev. Alexander Dyce, the eminent Shakspearean critic and editor of the early English dramatists. The future painter was educated at Marischal College, took his degree of M.A. at sixteen, and it was then proposed that he should study the profession of medicine; but such was his natural bias towards art that he was permitted soon after leaving college to enter the Royal Scottish Academy. Some of his earliest appearances in public as an artist were with mythological subjects, naturally suggested by his recent classical studies. After two visits to Rome, having at his latter occasion studied two years in that focus of attraction to all aspiring artists, he returned, about the year 1829, to Edinburgh, where he was soon in request as a portrait-painter. He still continued, however, to practise the historical and poetical branches of art; and in 1836 contributed to the Royal Academy Exhibition "The Descent of Venus," from Ben Jonson's "Triumph of Love."

THE LATE W. DYCE, ESQ., R.A.

AN OLD DUTCH HOUSE AT CAPE TOWN, SOUTH AFRICA.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

"THE WOODS IN AUTUMN," BY HENRY JUTSUM, IN THE EXHIBITION OF THE BRITISH INSTITUTION.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Already Dyce had devoted much attention to ornamental art and had mastered the principles of mural decoration, when he published a pamphlet on the management of Schools of Design, then in course of being established by the Government. In this pamphlet the scheme of art-education proposed was a liberal one, and the kind of knowledge the author possessed was then so rare, that he was offered the head mastership of the new Edinburgh School, which he accepted in 1837. Soon after he was commissioned by the Government to examine the systems of art-teaching in France, Prussia, and Bavaria, and the report he made on his return was mainly the chief authority for the guidance of the schools. In the duties of the head mastership Dyce was enabled, by the lighter branches of design, founded on the study of "the figure" and of the historical styles of ornament, by Mr. Herbert, architectural draughtsman, and afterwards an R.A., who possessed similar qualifications to Dyce, while in the department of floral design and colour he was assisted by Mr. Redgrave, likewise now a Royal Academician. With teachers distinguished in the practice of art, Dyce was enabled to form a great fountain-head of all the arts of design—as it has proved in Italy and wherever the ornamental arts have flourished—the schools were rapidly brought into a prosperous condition. It was not long, however, before discrements occurred between the learned professors Dyce and Herbert, on the one hand, and the mere artisans on the other, who formed an influential section of the council. The result was that the talents of these able artists were lost to the schools, honours and emoluments went to a succession of vastly inferior men, and we are bound to add that several less satisfactory results than those at first promised have been attained at an enormous increase to the public expenditure. Meanwhile Dyce had published, among other pictures, a "Madonna and Child," St. Dunstan Separating Mary and Elgiva," and "Titian and Raffaelle," the latter exhibited in 1844 (the year he resigned his appointment over the Schools of Design) he exhibited "Joash Shooting the Arrow of Deliverance." It was a noble original work, and notable for its archæological propriety—a noble picture, the one for which he was, on the first opportunity, elected an Associate of the Royal Academy. The picture now in the Crystal Palace Gallery some six years ago.

In the Westminster Hall competitions Dyce came prominently forward, and displayed great mastery in the almost unknown process of fresco. In 1844, "Joash Shooting the Arrow of Deliverance," "The Consecration of Archbishop Parker in Lambeth, A.D. 1559," which were of the most excellent, although unequal, character as further specimens. During this year he was appointed by Prince Albert to succeed Etty as one of the painters to fill the compartments of the summer-house in the gardens of Buckingham Palace, and subsequently he was employed to execute some frescoes at Osborne. In 1845 his cartoon, frescoes, and colored sketch for the "Baptism of Ethelbert" were approved and accepted, and the subject was afterwards executed in the House of Lords. In 1849 Dyce commenced the extensive series of frescoes in the Queen's Robing-room, which he has not lived to finish. Between the years 1851 to 1857 he executed, with the joint consent of the Fine-Art Commissioners, the series of frescoes comprising Our Lord Enthroned (a "Majesty") and the Seven Sacraments, and the Twelve Apostles, on the east wall of All Saints' Church, Marylebone, which will be memorable in the history of English art as the first really important frescoes executed in an English Protestant church. A painter so exclusively employed on pictorial mural works could not naturally be but sparingly represented on the walls of the Academy, and the following are his exhibited oil-pictures since 1849, when he was elected a Royal Academician:—"Titian's First Essay in Colouring," "The Good Shepherd," "Contentment," "St. John Leading Home the Virgin," a picturesque Italian peasant; "Pegwell Bay" "George Herbert at Bemerton,' and "Portrait, name unknown." In the last-mentioned works this accomplished painter carried minuteness of realisation farther even than the pre-Raphaelites. Like other great mural painters, Dyce was occasionally driven to find advantage in his oil pictures. In these he colouring was occasionally cold and thin, but in such technical matters he excelled in the frescoes at Westminster. From Dyce's designs a stained glass window (the choristers' window) has been erected in Ely Cathedral, another in Alnwick Church, in memory of the late Duke of Northumberland. In 1851 he exhibited a sculptured portrait of a lady.

The series of frescoes in the Queen's robing-room is designed to illustrate the whole cycle of the famous Arthurian romances—to depict the aspects and typify the characteristics of chivalry in the mind, code, and the virtues of chivalry. The artist engaged to paint seven frescoes, and he has virtually finished five. "The Knights of the Round Table," "The Meeting of Jacob and Rachel," a subject afterwards repeated; "King Lear and the Fool in the Storm," "Ornithorhynchus Paradoxus," "The Essay in Colouring," "The Good Shepherd," "Contentment," "St. John Leading Home the Virgin," a picturesque Italian peasant; "Pegwell Bay" "George Herbert at Bemerton,' and "Portrait, name unknown." In the last-mentioned works this accomplished painter carried minuteness of realisation farther even than the pre-Raphaelites. Like other great mural painters, Dyce was occasionally driven to find advantage in his oil pictures. In these the

THE COURT.

The Queen continues at Windsor Castle, in the enjoyment of excellent health.

Yesterday se'nnight her Majesty, attended by Viscountess Jocelyn and Major-General Seymour, drove out. Princess Helena and Princess Louisa, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. R. De Ros, went to London, returning in the afternoon. The Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz and Prince Edward and Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar arrived at the castle and lunched with the Queen.

On Saturday last her Majesty received addresses of congratulation on the birth of the infant Prince. The Right Hon. Sir George Grey arrived at the castle at twelve o'clock, and had an audience of the Queen. At one o'clock the Sheriffs of London and the members of the Court of Lieutenancy of London had the honour of an audience, to take her Majesty's pleasure as to receiving the address from the city of London and the Court of Lieutenancy. They were introduced by the Right Hon. Sir George Grey. The Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Princess Christian, and Prince Leopold, received them in the Audience Drawing-room. Her Majesty was attended by Viscountess Jocelyn, Lady Caroline Barrington, Bishop the Hon. Henry Ryder, of the See of Gerrnaes, Viscount Sydney, the Marquis of Salisbury, Lord Cremorne, Lieutenant-Colonel Cavendish, Major-General Seymour, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. D. De Ros and Colonel Sir T. M. Biddulph. The following deputations were then introduced to the Queen :—The deputation with the City Remembrancer at their head, the Sheriffs, the principal civic authorities, the deputations from the Court of Lieutenancy, the city of Dublin, the city of Edinburgh, and a deputation representing the body of English Presbyterian ministers in and near the city of London and Westminster. Addresses were received the several addresses and returned a gracious answer to each. The Lord Mayor, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, the Lord Mayor of Dublin, the Rev. J. Macfarlane, the Rev. Dr. Sadler, and the principal members of the various deputations were afterwards presented to the Queen by Sir George Grey, and had the honour of kissing her Majesty's hand. The deputations retired to the Waterloo Chamber, where they were served for the deputations in the dining-room, and shortly after the various members left for London. Prince Arthur, attended by Major Elphinstone, arrived at the castle from London. Lord Alfred Paget, Hon. Edith Jocelyn also arrived at the castle.

On Sunday the Queen, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Prince Arthur, and Prince Leopold, attended Divine service in the private chapel of the castle. The Rev. Dr. Richard Lee, Dean of Windsor, officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena and the Princess of Hohenlohe, and attended by Viscountess Jocelyn, the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, Major-General Seymour, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. D. De Ros, went to London, by a special train on the Great Western Railway, and visited Princess Mary, Duchess of Cambridge, at Marlborough House. Her Majesty afterwards visited the Duchess of Cambridge and the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg at St. James's Palace. The Queen returned to Windsor Castle. Her Majesty returned to Windsor at a quarter past one o'clock. Prince Arthur, attended by Major Elphinstone, arrived from London. Sir Charles Phipps, of Westminster and Lady Augusta Stanley arrived at the castle and had the honour of dining with the Queen.

On Tuesday her Majesty, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, walked and drove in the Home Park and Long Walk. Her Majesty held a Council. Earl Granville, the Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Somerset, and the Right Hon. Edward Cardwell, Secretary for War, Privy Councillors, Clerk of the Council, attended. Earl Granville and the Duke of Somerset had audiences of the Queen. The Right Hon. Edward Cardwell also had an audience and received from her Majesty the Gold Stick in Coloneel of the 2nd Regiment of Life Guards. Lord De Tabley and Lieutenant-Colonel Sir H. Bentinck were also sworn in Members in Waiting. After the Council the Ministers returned to town. Prince Leopold attended at the Council, dressed as a Field-marshal.

On Wednesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked in the grounds of the castle. Princess Helena, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington and Lieut.-Colonel Cavendish, returned from London. Princess Louisa, attended by Lady Augusta Stanley, Prince and Princess Anselie, visited the Queen and remained to luncheon. Mr. Cleere, the Mayor of Windsor, had the honour of an interview to present an address to the Queen from the town of Windsor, to congratulate her Majesty on the birth of the infant Prince. The address, with the Royal family, take daily walks and drives in the vicinity of the castle.

Lady Churchill has succeeded the Viscountess Jocelyn as Lady in Waiting.

Lord De Tabley and Lieut.-General Sir H. Bentinck have succeeded Lord Cremorne and Lieut.-Colonel Cavendish as Lord and Groom in Waiting, and Lord Alfred Paget and Major-General Seymour as succeeded Major-Gen. Seymour and Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. D. De Ros as Equerries in Waiting to the Queen.

THE LEVEE.

By command of the Queen, a Levée was held on Wednesday in St. James's Palace, in the name of Prince of Wales and the Duke of York. The Prince of Wales, attended by his gentlemen in waiting, arrived from Marlborough House about two o'clock, and was received by the great officers of the Court of the Queen's household. The Lord Mayor of London (attended by his equerry), Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, and Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar arrived at the palace. The Prince of Wales entered the Throneroom, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward and Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar and the great officers of state.

The foreign Ambassadors and Ministers having been introduced, several presentations took place in the diplomatic circle. The following were among the most noticeable presentations in the general circle :—

The Marquis of Normanby, on his succession to the title and return from the government of Nova Scotia, by the Duke of Newcastle.

Major-General Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., on his return from Canada, and on appointment to the command of the Brigade of Guards, by his Royal Highness the Field-marshal Commanding-in-Chief.

Lord Sherborne, on succeeding to the title, by the Earl of Dudley.

Lord Hatherley, on succeeding to that title, by Lord Cranworth.

Colonel Lord James Murray, on appointment as Groom in Waiting to her Majesty, by the Lord Chamberlain.

Sir Benedict Palmer, on his appointment as Attorney-General, by the Lord Chancellor.

The Solicitor-General, by the Right Hon. Robert J. Phillimore, D.C.L.

The Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, by Viscount Palmerston, G.C.B.

Mr. Hillsley Hickman, Mr. Alexander Hickman, Jun., by the Right Hon. Sir George Grey, Bart.

Mr. Grant Duff, by the Right Hon. Sir George Grey.

Commissary-General Foster, on appointment as Commissary-General-in-Chief, by the Secretary of State for War.

Captain Speke, her Majesty's Indian Army, on return from Victoria, N'yanza, by Sir Roderick I. Murchison, K.C.B.

Dr. Arthur Farre, on appointment as Physician Accoucheur to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, by the Lord Chamberlain.

THE KING OF THE BELGIANS.

The King of the Belgians arrived at Windsor Castle on Thursday on a visit to the Queen, and also to be present at the christening of the infant son of the Prince and Princess of Wales. His Majesty arrived at Dover on Wednesday afternoon, and was met there by the Lord Warden Hotel, proceeding the next day to Windsor. The King was met upon landing by Sir Van De Weyer, the Belgian Minister.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales continue at Marlborough House. The Princess and the infant Prince are in good health.

On Thursday se'nnight the Prince rode out. Later in the day his Royal Highness visited Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar, also the Duke of Cambridge and the Duchess of Inverness. The Princess, attended by Countess De Grey, drove out. In the evening the Prince, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, went to Christ's Hospital to witness the public supper of the boys. The Duchess o' Cambridge, the Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and Prince Edward and Prince Gustav, Princess, and Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar visited the Prince, at Marlborough House.

Yesterday se'nnight the Prince rode out. The Princess, attended by Countess De Grey, drove. Princess Helena and Princess Louisa visited the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. The Prince attended the debate in the House of Lords. The Prince and Princess dined with the Duchess of Cambridge at St. James's Palace.

On Saturday last the Prince and Princess drove out. In the evening their Royal Highnesses, accompanied by Prince Arthur and Prince Leopold, honoured the Princess's Theatre with their presence.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess attended Divine service at the Chapel Royal St. James's. The service was performed by the Rev. the Sub Dean, Dr. Cureton, and the Rev. Mr. Hawtrey, assistant-curate. Their Royal Highnesses drove out.

On Monday the Prince, accompanied by the Princess of Hohenlohe, visited the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. At three o'clock the Lord Mayor of London, with a deputation of the principal civic authorities, together with a deputation from the Court of Lieutenancy, the Lord Mayor of Dublin, the Lord Provost of the city of Edinburgh, and the Rev. Dr. Sadler, and the Rev. Mr. Macfarlane, with deputations, arrived at Marlborough House, to present addresses of congratulation to the Queen, Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Prince. Their Royal Highnesses, attended by the Countess De Grey, Lord Hatherley, Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, Captain Seymour, Major Teesdale, Colonel Keppel, Captain Grey, the Hon. R. H. Meade, Mr. C. Wood, and Mr. Knollys, received the deputations in the drawing-room. The deputations, attired in their state robes, were severally introduced by Lord Alfred Paget. The addresses having been received and graciously responded to, the deputations retired. The Prince afterwards rode out. In the evening the Royal Highnesses, attended by Major Teesdale, honoured the Strand Theatre with his presence.

On Tuesday Princess Helena, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington and Lieutenant-Colonel Cavendish, arrived at Marlborough House on a visit to the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Princess received several deputations charged with the presentation of gifts—a national testimonial from Ireland, a gift from Scotland, and a Dane's residents in this country, and offering from North Holland, and the Prince and Princess of Denmark. The Princess afterwards drove out. In the evening the Prince and Princess entertained at dinner the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, and the Countess de Dornbourg, Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar, M. de Rilke, and the Count de Flahault, Equerry to the Queen of the Scots Footlee Guards was in attendance. The Duke de Nemours and Princess Marguerite visited the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House.

On Wednesday the Prince held a Levée at St. James's Palace on behalf of her Majesty. The Princess drove out in the morning. Their Royal Highnesses, attended by Countess De Grey and Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, visited Princess Mary, Duchess with their presence. The Prince and Princess gave the first of a series of dinner parties at Marlborough House on Wednesday.

The christening of the infant Prince will take place on the 10th inst., at the Chapel Royal, St. James's Palace. It is the intention to attend the ceremony were issued on Monday to the members of the Cabinet and the Royal Household.

The Princess will hold a Drawingroom, by command of the Queen, on Saturday, the 19th inst. All presentations will be considered as being made to her Majesty. The usual regulations will be observed. It is not expected that gentlemen will go to the Drawingroom, except in attendance upon the Queen or Princess.

The Prince and Princess are expected to leave Marlborough House for Sandringham House, Norfolk, on the 15th inst., and to remain there until after the Easter holidays.

Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel has succeeded Major Teesdale as Equerry in Waiting to the Prince.

PRESENTATION OF GIFTS TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

Several deputations charged with gifts waited on her Royal Highness the Princess.

The presentation of the jewelled national token of South Wales to the Princess of Wales took place in the Throneroom at Marlborough House. The token was presented to her Royal Highness by Lady Llanover, attended by the Misses Waddington, by Lady Llanover, Lady Frances Pratt, Lady Jane Walsh, and Miss Sumner. The gift is a bracelet composed of gold, pearls, and diamonds, with the lock, surmounted by a bouquet composed of the Welsh leek, the rose, and shamrock, the harde emblems of the four seasons, and a motto in Welsh.—"From Cambria to their Princess." A bracelet, with five emeralds and diamond centre, the belt, in the centre, with diamonds, emeralds, and rubies, with a motto in Welsh—"God preserve our Princess." The jewel contained in the centre of the lock is a locket, and bears a suitable inscription in the Welsh language. The Countess Dowager of Dornbourg, Prince Gustav of Saxe-Weimar, received with a gracious reply, and expressed her high approval of the gift. The Danish Ambassador, on behalf of Denmark, offered a gift; its value is £2000.

An address to the Princess from the province of North Zutland was next presented by M. de Bille, the Danish Minister.

A deputation was appointed by the committee to present the "Alexandra Vase" from the Danish inhabitants in Great Britain. Consul-General Westenholz read an address in the Danish language, to which the Princess returned a gracious answer. (The Alexandra Vase is depicted and described on page 232.)

Lord Elcho and Mr. Ramsay presented to the Princess three offerings from Australia, consisting of a flower-stand, composed of five circles of gold, with a gold ornament in the centre, and a bracelet, from the ladies of Victoria (an engraving of which appeared in our Number for Dec. 19, 1863, page 619); a gold locket, from Sir James P. Palmer, President of the Legislative Council of Victoria; and a casket, from the ladies of Victoria, Sydney, and supported by a pedestal of gold, from the ladies of South Australia. These three offerings were forwarded through the Duke of Newcastle.

PRINCE ALFRED.

Prince Alfred continues at Buckingham Palace. Yesterday se'nnight his Royal Highness, accompanied by M. Van de Weyer and attended by Major Teesdale, left Buckingham Palace, and proceeded to Kelso en route for the Hirsel, on a visit to the Earl of Home.

On Saturday his Royal Highness arrived at Edinburgh at the Hirsel repaired to the loch, where two or three hours were spent in curling and sliding. After luncheon a party, of which the Prince formed one, tried their skill on the ice at the Dane's walks at Bingham. The Prince returned to Holyrood on Monday.

Princess Augustus of Saxe-Coburg, with her young family, arrived from Coburg at Buckingham Palace on Saturday.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch will return to town on the 10th inst., from Selkirkshire, in order to be present at the christening of the infant Prince.

The Duke and Duchess of Grafton have arrived in town from Wakefield Lodge, Northamptonshire.

The Duchess (Dowager) of Sutherland left Stafford House, St. James's, on Monday for Dunrobin Castle.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ailesbury have left Pall-mall for Savernake Forest.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Tweeddale have arrived at Claridge's Hotel from Yester House, Haddingtonshire.

Marquis and Marchioness Townshend and Lady Audrey Townshend have returned to their residence in Grosvenor-place from Brighton.

Maria Marchioness of Ailesbury has left town for Savernake Forest, Wilts.

The Marchioness Dowager of Lothian, Lady Alice Kerr, and Lord C. Kerr, returned to town on Friday, from Scotland, for the season.

The Marquis of Bristol and Lady Adelina Hervey have arrived in St. James's-square, from Ickworth Park, Bury St. Edmunds.

The Marquis of Normanby has arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, from Mulgrave Castle.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The marriage of the Count de Paris with the eldest daughter of the Duke de Montpensier will take place early in May. A marriage is also spoken of as to be celebrated between Mr. Peyton Pigott Conant (late Captain, 16th Lancers) and the Hon. Rose Ida Caroline, eldest daughter of Lord Dorchester.—A marriage has been arranged to take place between Mr. Cuthbert Listowel, of the 15th Hussars, eldest son of Mr. John Wingfield Lorking, of The Pine, Kent, and Lady Adela Hare, daughter of the Countess and niece to the present Earl of Listowel.—A marriage is arranged to take place in the coming spring between the Count de Lauraine and Miss Louisa Standish, only daughter of the late Charles Standish, Esq., of Standish Hall, Lancashire, and niece of Monica Lady Gerard, of Garswood Park, Lancashire.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

It is proposed to commemorate the elevation of the Rev. Harold Browne to the bishopric of Ely by set ting a stained-gla s window in the parish church of Hadleigh, Suffolk, of which he is Vicar.

The Bishop of Gibraltar has appointed the Rev. F. H. S. Gardiner, formerly Curate of Christ Church, at Monte Video and of the Walkerian colony near that city, to the chaplaincy at Florence, Italy, rendered vacant by the resignation of the Rev. T. Cowell.

The Bishop of London met the clergy of his diocese, on Thursday, at St. Paul's Cathedral, to hear from the statistics which he had collected respecting the spiritual wants of London, and to consult them as to the best mode of utilising the vague and indefinite offers of help which were being made to supply these wants.

The Bishop of Manchester has been appointed by the Board of Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England to be the principal member of their estate commission for the Diocese of Manchester in the room of Sir Thomas Tancred, who has been filled by the Bishop of Winchester since the retirement from it of the Lord Bishop Blomfield in 1856.

A handsome stained-glass window has been erected in the north transept of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Armagh, as a memorial to the late Lord Primate. His Lordship took a deep interest in the restoration of the Cathedral, and expended on it the munificent sum of £20,000. The sum-total erected by the artists, Messrs. Lavers and Barraud, are well carried out.

On Wednesday, Miss Burdett Coutts laid the foundation-stone of a new church in Carlisle, to be called St. Stephen's Church, and to be erected on the east. The church will be built in the Gothic style, and will have a nave and James streets. The church will be in the Geometric Gothic style, and will be 120 ft. long by 60 ft. wide, and will seat 1000 persons. The church is to be built entirely, and finished with an ornamental gilt cross.

The Convocation of the Province of York, at their sitting last week, could not come to any satisfactory understanding on the subject of the Burial Service. The Lower House resolved that the Service as approved by a large majority of the Lower House, but rejected by two to one by the Upper House of the Bishops of Durham and Carlisle and the Archbishop of York. The Convocation agreed to the alteration of the 25th canon respecting preachers in churches.

On Wednesday, Miss Burdett Coutts laid the foundation-stone of a new church in Carlisle, to be called St. Stephen's Church, and to be erected on the east. The church will be built in the Gothic style, and will have a nave and James streets. The church will be in the Geometric Gothic style, and will be 120 ft. long by 60 ft. wide, and will seat 1000 persons. The church is to be built entirely, and finished with an ornamental gilt cross.

The Convocation of the Province of York, at their sitting last week, could not come to any satisfactory understanding on the subject of the Burial Service. The Lower House resolved that the Service as approved by a large majority of the Lower House, but rejected by two to one by the Upper House of the Bishops of Durham and Carlisle and the Archbishop of York. The Convocation agreed to the alteration of the 25th canon respecting preachers in churches.

On Wednesday, Miss Burdett Coutts laid the foundation-stone of a new church in Carlisle, to be called St. Stephen's Church, and to be erected on the east. The church will be built in the Gothic style, and will have a nave and James streets. The church will be in the Geometric Gothic style, and will be 120 ft. long by 60 ft. wide, and will seat 1000 persons. The church is to be built entirely, and finished with an ornamental gilt cross.

The Convocation of the Province of York, at their sitting last week, could not come to any satisfactory understanding on the subject of the Burial Service. The Lower House resolved that the Service as approved by a large majority of the Lower House, but rejected by two to one by the Upper House of the Bishops of Durham and Carlisle and the Archbishop of York. The Convocation agreed to the alteration of the 25th canon respecting preachers in churches.

The Bishop of Manchester has appointed the following gentlemen to be the preachers at St. Paul's Cathedral on the mornings of the present month :—On Sunday, March 6, the Rev. C. J. Evans, Incumbent of St. Matthew's Church; Sunday, March 13, the Rev. C. D. Bolton, Incumbent of St. Michael's, Ashton-under-Lyne; Sunday, March 20, the Rev. Charles Bardsley, secretary to the Bishop; Minister of Curzon Chapel, Mayfair; Good Friday, March 25, the Rev. W. S. Simpson, Chaplain to the Bishop; Sunday, March 27, the Rev. Canon Stowell, Vicar; afternoon, the Rev. H. Vernon, B.D., secretary to the C.M.S. The Bishop himself, on Sunday, March 6, will preach at Salford, and on Sunday, March 13, at Bolton. On the following is the list of preachers appointed by the Bishop of London for the ensuing month :—Sunday, March 6, the Rev. Dr. Cureton, Sub-Dean of the Chapel Royal, St. James's; Sunday, March 13, the Lord Bishop of Ripon; March 20, the Dean of Chichester; March 27, the Rev. Henry Melvill, Canon Residentiary.

TESTIMONIALS TO CLERGYMEN.—Two handsomely bound addresses—the one to the Rev. Francis Kilvington and Keach's "Key to the Scripture Metaphors," accompanied by a purse containing £100, presented to the former, on Tuesday evening, at the Mechanics' Institution, Mr. William Mayo Gunn in the chair; the latter, to the Rev. W. Landels, Baptist Minister of Regent's Park Chapel, Maida-hill, by members of the congregation of St. Judes, Middlesex-street, the Rev. T. Lewis, Minister, on Wednesday evening, in the form of presentations—To the Rev. W. W. Du Buric, Curate of Leyton from the parishioners, on Wednesday evening, a handsome silver inkstand, with an illuminated address from the ladies of Leyton and other friends; a handsomely illuminated address, with a purse containing £100, was presented to the Rev. Frederick S. May, Curate of Christ Church, Paddington, a full set of Bishop Jeremy Taylor's works, in calf and carved, to the Rev. Thomas Q. Dale, B.A., Curate of Caterstock and Glandford, a handsome silver inkstand, by the parishioners and friends of Caterstock.

Lord Lyttelton, Lord Lieutenant of Worcestershire, has issued a circular to the clergy of the county, in which he requests the attendance in Worcester Cathedral, in which he states what has been done and what remains to be done in the restoration of the fabric. The south side of the tower has been restored, the east and the two eastern transepts having been completed in a similar manner. The windows have been filled with stained glass, and the roofs of the two transepts have been thoroughly repaired, and a large new window has been inserted in the north end of the north transept. The nave has been entirely restored, with the exception of the clerestory windows, which are now in course of restoration. The whole exterior of the south side of the nave to be restored, a new large west window inserted, and the roof renewed. The restoration of the nave is now to be proceeded with, in charge of which, the architect is to be figured and restored, the whole of the clerestory windows remodelled, and the roof renewed, but in a certain, and not in a modern, style. New arcades, floor restored, and the fittings materially improved. Plans for these alterations have been prepared by Mr. G. E. Street, architect, London. The cost of the architectural estimate. The sum raised is—for the exterior, £8,000; for the interior, £13,240: total, £21,240. £2,000 has been promised by public subscription, and the Dean and Chapter of Worcester Cathedral having exhausted all the resources at their command for the preservation of the fabric.

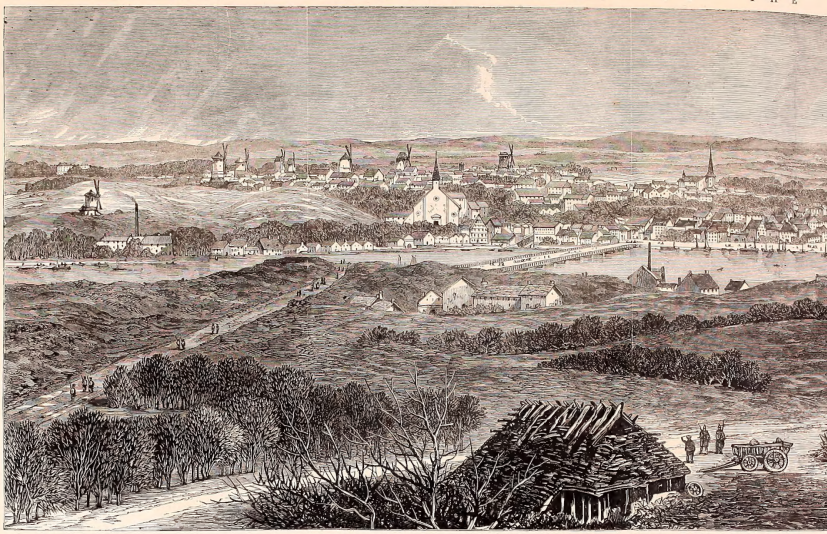
PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. J. W. Taylor, vicar of All Saints', Derby, has been appointed one of the Archdeacon's Rural Deans, or Guardians of the Spiritualities of the vacant see of Ely; Rev. A. B. Haselwood, Vicar of St. Philip's, Birmingham, to be Rural Dean of that district; the Rev. H. Isaacson to be Rector of Holme Pierrepoint, Nottingham; Rev. G. S. Bowdler to be Vicar of Bromsgrove; Rev. J. Vivian, Vicar of Tavistock, to be Surrogate; Rev. W. Field to Gotterdam with Chalfont, Kent; Rev. J. Hall, Vicar of Bilston, Staffordshire, to be Rural Dean; Rev. Archibald Campbell, Rector of Kilmeny, Islay, to be Bishop of Argyll and the Isles; Rev. C. Calthrop, Incumbent of Stoke, Cumberland, to the High Sheriff of Cumberland; Rev. J. Hall, Vicar of Bilston, to be Rural Dean; Rev. J. Hall, Vicar of Greetland; Rev. T. Hall, Vicar of Islip, Oxon, to the High Sheriff of Yorkshire. Curates: Rev. A. Christ to St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey; Rev. Charles Jones to St. Andrew's, Holborn; Rev. J. Folsen to Lambeth; Rev. J. M. Fuller to St. Peter's, Eaton-square; Rev. F. W. Bennett to St. Mary's, Whitechapel; Rev. De Courcy Laffan to Bermondsey; Rev. J. F. Nelson to St. John and St. Michael, Paddington; Rev. G. W. Oliver to St. Bernard's, Bermondsey; Rev. T. Wilkinson to St. Mary Magdalene, Bermondsey; Rev. H. Williams to Bermondsey; Rev. T. W. Williamson to St. Mary's, Bermondsey; Rev. R. Williams to Bermondsey; Rev. J. Stephenson to Stockton.—Guardian.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—In a Convocation at Oxford, on Thursday week, the new examination statute, which has been for some time under discussion, was submitted to a full house. It was the occasion of Convocation voted, of whom 281 voted for and 247 against the statute, which was therefore carried by a majority of 34.

The Rev. C. E. J. Meyer has been elected Librarian to the University of Cambridge.

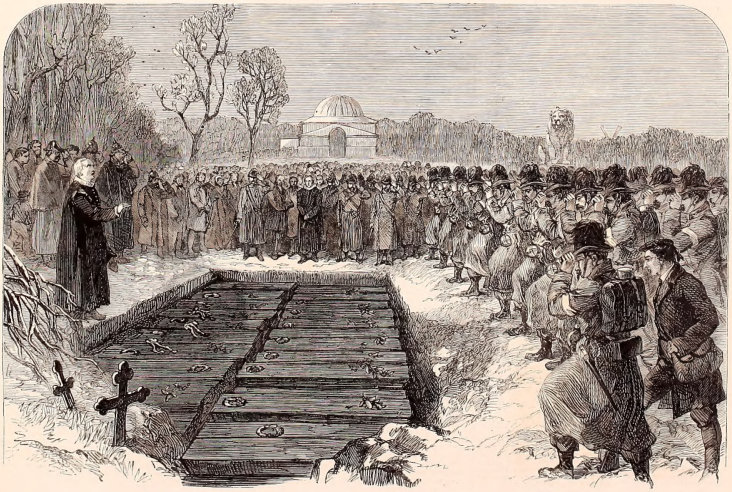
The endowment of masterships in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge on the birth of a Prince was presented to the Prince of Wales yesterday (Friday) at Marlborough House.

The Prince of Wales visited Christ's Hospital on Thursday week. Some of the boys recited passages from Shakespeare in the great hall in honour of the visitors. The Queen was present at one of those readings in 1845, and the Heir Apparent, on Thursday week, was accompanied by Prince Arthur. The Prince was received with great demonstrations of loyalty.



The following appointments are announced :—Head of the Isle Rev. W. Oxenham, Rugby; Second Master at Rugby, Rev. J. Y. Watters, Esq., B.A., of Jesus College, Cambridge, is to be English Master at Guildford Royal Grammar School.

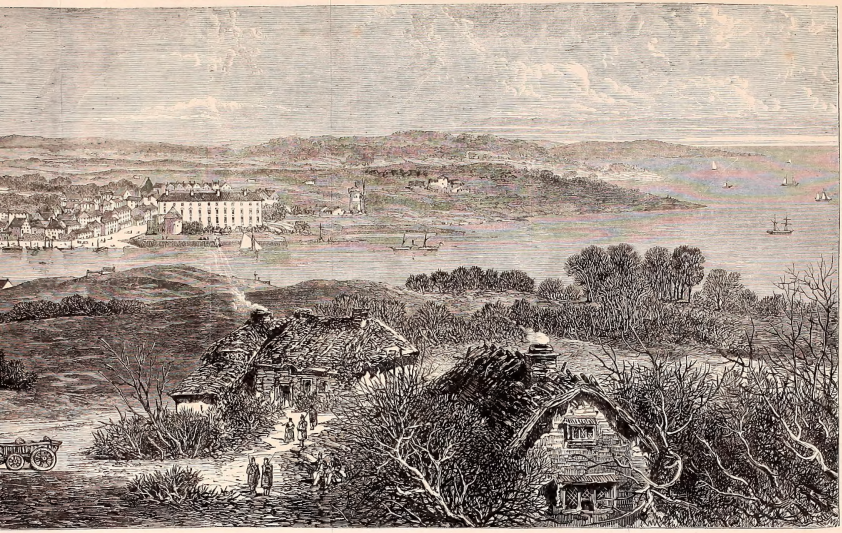
CASUALTIES.



Committees for the relief of the sick and wounded Danes have been formed at Edinburgh and Glasgow. The Glasgow committee forwarded a first contribution of £1,000 on Saturday.

During last month there sailed from Liverpool to the United States ten large three-decks, under Government supervision, having on board 741 cabin and 6000 steerage passengers; and to Victoria four ships, with 139 cabin and 947 steerage passengers. Of the emigrants to the United States, 760 were English, 854 Irish, 17 Scotch, and 130 other countries: of those to Victoria, 103 were English, 20 Irish, and 16 Scotch. Of the emigrants to the United States, 733 were English—nearly unprecedented, as went to the United States during the first month in November. Of those to New South Wales with 4 passengers, one to Victoria with 64 passengers, three to the West Indies with 18 passengers, three to South America with 64 passengers, and two to Africa with 27 passengers—making a total of 1000 souls. The number of emigrants during the month is small, considering month of last year, there is an increase in the past month of 1799 souls. The number for the last 12 months is 18,000 of 237 passengers by the last, when compared with the month of January last, there is an increase of 3164 passengers.

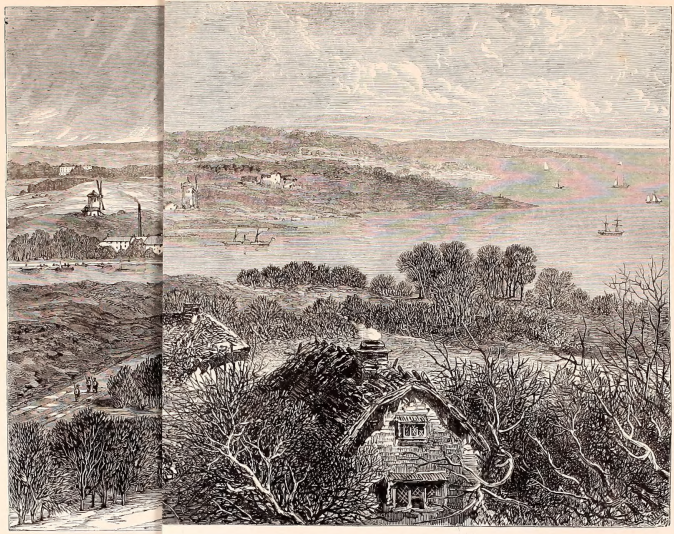
ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE



SONDERBURG, WITH THE ISLAND OF ALSEN, VIEWED

BURIAL OF SIXTY AUSTRIAN AND DANISH SOLDIERS AT FLENSBURG.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

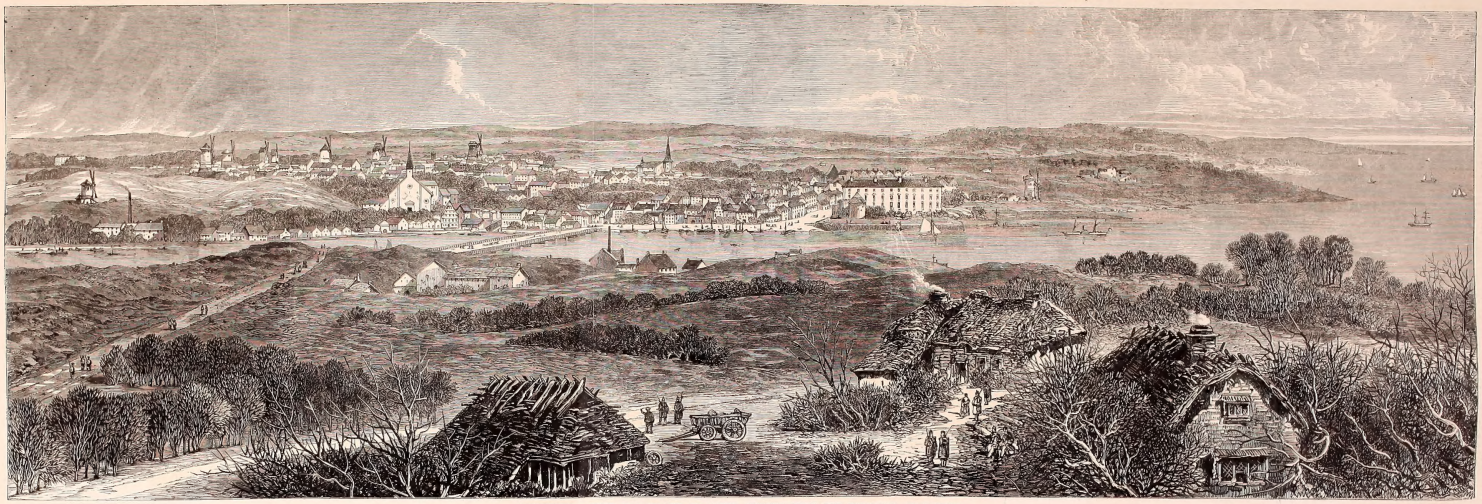
THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

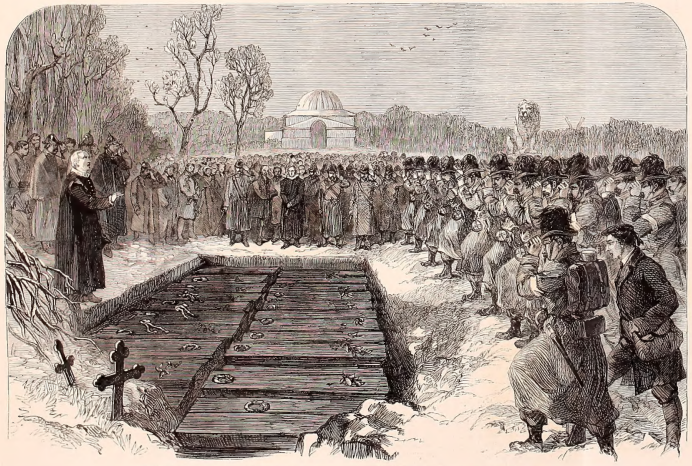


F ALSEN, VIEWED FROM THE WINDMILL AT DUPPEL.

APENRADE, LATELY THE AUSTRIAN HEAD-QUARTERS.

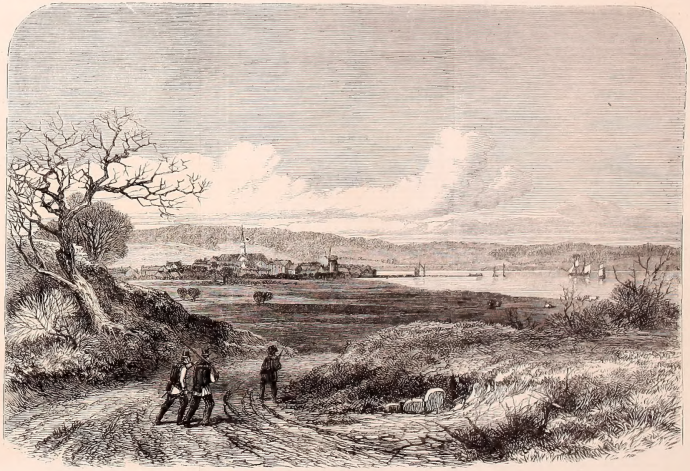
SCHLESWIG.





BURIA

APENRADE, LATELY THE AUSTRIAN HEAD-QUARTERS.



ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

SONDERBURG, WITH THE ISLAND OF ALSEN, VIEWED FROM THE WINDMILL AT DUPPEL.

BURIAL OF SIXTY AUSTRIAN AND DANISH SOLDIERS AT FLENSBURG.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

APENRADE, LATELY THE AUSTRIAN HEAD-QUARTERS.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

It would seem as if the chief of the Opposition had organised a series of Monday evening entertainments, lasting from five to six o'clock. There would also seem a probability that the series was intended to be continued until further notice; but after the speech which he received this week the continuation is at least doubtful. To speak plainly, once more Mr. Disraeli has inaugurated the week in Parliament by delivering one of his bitter and sarcastic impeachments of the foreign policy of the Government; and the air of alacrity and self-confidence which he has worn on former occasions of the like evil-tendence which he has worn on former occasions of the like kind was not diminished by the circumstance that Lord Palmerston was this time in his place, having come, no doubt, early, as well a proper sentiment of his presence being required. Treating, perhaps, with a supposed playful weakness of his colleague, he had himself risen for unlimited smartness; and, if it would not be considered impertinent, we should say was fantastically gay as a lark in the first of May-cockles. Neither he nor any one else, looking to the antecedents of Lord Palmerston in the present Session, expected him to rise at once and go to the counsel lion and play the part with such spirit and effect. It is not too much to say that the Prime Minister seemed to enjoy it. He is a member of her Majesty's Government, there was no difficulty, of course, in seeing the gentleman smile and laugh at the hits of the bursting with indignation at such an accusation, and believed that he was only up to his usual game of playing with the House for the sake of a personal issue in the house. Of course no opportunity was afforded to that gentleman to vindicate himself, and the accusation remained thoroughly his old influence, and laughed with Mr. Disraeli in a manner which seemed to say that he was quite aware of the fact that he was once more a taste of his special quality, grateful for the privilege of being allowed to indulge in it.

On the same evening there occurred a scene which may be called the moment of fiery imposition—originating one wonders from what source—Mr. Cox set himself to rip up a mystery. The Italian conspirators in Paris, alleged that one of their men in direct communication with a member of her Majesty's Government, there was no difficulty, of course, in seeing the gentleman smile and laugh at the hits of the bursting with indignation at such an accusation, and believed that he was only up to his usual game of playing with the House for the sake of a personal issue in the house. Of course no opportunity was afforded to that gentleman to vindicate himself, and the accusation remained thoroughly his old influence, and laughed with Mr. Disraeli in a manner which seemed to say that he was quite aware of the fact that he was once more a taste of his special quality, grateful for the privilege of being allowed to indulge in it.

On the same evening there occurred a scene which may be called the moment of fiery imposition—originating one wonders from what source—Mr. Cox set himself to rip up a mystery. The Italian conspirators in Paris, alleged that one of their men in direct communication with a member of her Majesty's Government, there was no difficulty, of course, in seeing the gentleman smile and laugh at the hits of the bursting with indignation at such an accusation, and believed that he was only up to his usual game of playing with the House for the sake of a personal issue in the house. Of course no opportunity was afforded to that gentleman to vindicate himself, and the accusation remained thoroughly his old influence, and laughed with Mr. Disraeli in a manner which seemed to say that he was quite aware of the fact that he was once more a taste of his special quality, grateful for the privilege of being allowed to indulge in it.

On the same evening there occurred a scene which may be called the moment of fiery imposition—originating one wonders from what source—Mr. Cox set himself to rip up a mystery. The Italian conspirators in Paris, alleged that one of their men in direct communication with a member of her Majesty's Government, there was no difficulty, of course, in seeing the gentleman smile and laugh at the hits of the bursting with indignation at such an accusation, and believed that he was only up to his usual game of playing with the House for the sake of a personal issue in the house. Of course no opportunity was afforded to that gentleman to vindicate himself, and the accusation remained thoroughly his old influence, and laughed with Mr. Disraeli in a manner which seemed to say that he was quite aware of the fact that he was once more a taste of his special quality, grateful for the privilege of being allowed to indulge in it.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

(The following abstract of the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 26th inst., appeared in our Town Edition last week.)

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, Feb. 26.

THE DANO-GERMANIC WAR.—Lord DELAWARE (in the absence of the noble Earl (Earl Russell) in his place, asked whether the note from the Federal central government addressed to the Diet at Frankfort, and published in Berlin with reference to Schleswig, had been received by her Majesty's Government; and, if so, whether they had not received notice of the question. He would in that case have asked whether the statement in the note that it received was that the Commander-in-Chief of the army had no orders to send troops into Holstein, but that the Danish troops had, on the contrary, received orders to cross the Danish troops were on the frontiers, they took up a position in their front, and that they were in Holstein. Supposing that to be a fact justified in crossing the frontier; but, not having orders, the commander's conduct was unjustifiable, and he would ask whether it was the fact that such a question had been put to her Majesty's Government, and, if so, what was the answer to it. The Earl of CLARENDON said he could not state the intention of the German Powers in any way that could be considered official, but he could state a matter of fact. The Danish Government, in ordering the seizure of the German Duchies, had broken the Treaty of 1852, by which it was agreed that the Prussian Government might be obliged to demand compensation, not for the seizure of property, but for the loss of it. That was a matter of fact since, and retain "the material guarantee" until their claim was satisfied.—In reply to Lord Malmesbury, the Earl of CLARENDON said that no communication of that kind as officiating prosecutor should act, who should be assisted by the Attorney-General. The Lord Chancellor said that the Attorney-General was not in a position to act as prosecutor. The Lord Chief Justice of England was summoned as the recent court-martial was therefore perfectly regular.—The Earl of CARNARVON called attention to the speech of Mr. Bright at Rochdale, stating the slightest imputation on Sir Hugh Rose.—Lord CRANWORTH said that he had not seen the speech of Mr. Bright, but he presumed by the Deputy Judge Advocate in privately questioning the witnesses as he examined the Court, and that he was not present at the trial or preliminary.—The Earl of LONSDORO vindicated the conduct and character of Colonel Crawley, who had been appointed to the post of Deputy Judge Advocate upon the Government to do him complete justice by paying the whole of the expenses incurred by him in defending himself from the late prosecution. After some further conversation the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, Feb. 26.

The Malt for Cattle Bill and the Conveyancers (Ireland) Bill passed through committee.

The Lead Drainage (Provisional Order) Bill, the Inclosure Bill, and the County Courts (Ireland) Bill were read a second time.

TOWNLEY'S CASE.—In answer to Mr. MORRIS, Sir G. GREY said he had received a letter from Mr. Townley, in which he stated that he considered the sentence of death would not be entitled to any remission of that sentence.

THE NEW FOREST.—Mr. T. DUNCOMBE asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether her Majesty's Government intended to carry into execution the provisions contained in the Act of last Session for the disafforesting of the New Forest by stationing cruisers off the coast of Hampshire.—Mr. LOWE said that it was not the intention of the Government alluded to had been colorably evaded on a technical point. The Government, however, did not think that the thing it was without design to that quarter. Great progress had been made in the preparations for the Act, and he hoped that the measure would be carried into effect.

CELTICITY.—Mr. HENNESSY called attention to the taxation of Ireland, with a view of showing that that country had been made unjustly contribute to the taxation of England.—Mr. GLADSTONE, as a private member moved for the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry.—Mr. F. PEEL, in reply, said the Government did not think that a Committee was necessary, and the Government could not, on their own responsibility, assent to the appointment of a Committee. He did not think that the time had arrived when it would be just or expedient to grant a Committee of Inquiry. He did not think it would be for the advantage of the country that the Government should be called upon to produce evidence to facts would prove that or to a mistaken impression. He did not think that the taxation of Ireland was unequal as a whole taxation; but for a great many years afterwards the only paid one. Mr. MAGUIRE, Mr. Fagan, Mr. Macartney, and Mr. Bagwell, the latter having enjoyed by Great Britain, inasmuch as it was levied in the latter kingdom on the gross receipts, while in Ireland it was levied on the income of the income tax was also more favourable to the middle classes of Ireland than those of this country. After a few words the motion would be elected unanimously.—The motion was ultimately agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The Vestry Cess Abolition (Ireland) Bill passed through committee on the 7th of April.

Lord R. Cecil gave notice of a motion to the effect "that it is unconstitutional and inconsistent with the right of her Majesty's subjects for any Minister of the Crown to exercise the power of the Royal Veto in order to defeat the intention of ships belonging to countries at war with her Majesty."

Mr. LAYARD, in answer to a question from Mr. Dalglish, stated that the Ottoman Government had not yet come to any decision as to the Danish Minister's application for her present incomplete state while hostilities were going on between Denmark and Germany. He was not aware that any stocks on the accusation of the Danish Minister that no attempt would be made to sell the Danish Government stock in the London market.

The attention of the House was drawn to the statement made by the Prime Minister in the House of Lords, that a letter had been written by the Emperor of the French, that a letter written by Gross to a M. Fould was addressed to a M. Fould, a banker in Paris, and not to the late M. Fould, a British Parliament. Mr. Stansfeld indignantly denied that there was any portion of truth in the statement, and, speaking on personal knowledge of M. Mazzini for a considerable number of years, declared that he was incapable of such conspiracy.

NEW FOREST DISAFFORESTING.—Mr. DISRAELI invited the Government to furnish some information respecting the state of our relations with the Court of Berlin. The Government, he said, had been charged with having, by some fruitless efforts, in a new proposition which they had made in relation to the affairs of Germany, destroyed the unanimity which had been so nearly effected by the Great Powers and those who were interested in the different questions which had arisen out of the Treaty of 1852, and which had been the object of the labours of the Conference. For himself, he must confess that he entertained the greatest apprehension that the Government, by their conduct to the non-German Powers with great severity, changed the whole character of the negotiations which had been carried on, and were willing to precipitate the country into war, merely to maintain a principle which, however important, was the subject of apparently incompatible opinions, and to produce a peaceable settlement of that which formed the object of the Conference.—Mr. GLADSTONE replied.—Mr. H. FITZGERALD the subject dropped.

THE HOUSE then went into Committee of Supply on the Navy Estimates, beginning at the number of men, 70,000.

The votes of 71,300 men, at £2,874,647 for their wages, and £1,398,129 for victualling, were agreed to, after a short discussion.

On the vote of £146,000 for the Admiralty Office, Mr. LINDSAY moved the reduction of the vote by £5000, the charge for a school of naval architecture. On a division, the amendment was negatived by 100 to 15, and the vote agreed to; as were £132,274 for establishments at home, and £17,000 for establishments abroad.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

ALLEGED FEDERAL RECRUITING IN IRELAND.

The Marquis of CLANRICARDE, in moving for copies of any papers that might have been received by the Government relative to recruiting in Ireland for the army of the Federal States, inquired whether any remonstrance against such a proceeding had been addressed to the authorities at Washington. It was, he said, notorious that American agents had been enlisting recruits in the same Island, and as it was in violation of the principle of neutrality, and a breach of the municipal law, he urged that it was the duty of the Government to put a stop to it.

Earl RUSSELL said he had no doubt that any attempt on the part of the Federals to enlist recruits for the army of the United States would be a breach of the principle of neutrality, and that it was an offence against our own municipal laws, which, if detected, would subject the offenders to punishment, and a strong complaint to the Government of the United States. On more than one occasion, in fact, the Government had made such complaints, and the Marquis had exhorted to were going on on behalf of the Federal Government in Ireland, and he would make every remembrance with the Lords on the subject.

That gentleman had, however, indignantly denied the truth of such alleged charges, and had declared that he would not allow his name to be used in such a manner. He (Lord Russell) was informed in which great was forthcoming. The Earl of DONOUGHMORE inquired whether the Secretary of the Foreign Office had received any communication from the Minister of foreign countries must unfavourably with the course they had adopted in the matter.

The Earl of DERBY inquired whether the Government had received any information from the Governors of Canada and Nova Scotia to the effect that there were in the habit of assembling in those places for the purpose of going through the form of enlisting recruits for the Federal army, and then dismissing them on receiving illegal proceedings.

Earl GRANVILLE said that the Dublin authorities had directed the Lord Mayor to call the attention of the Dublin Brotherhood, and there was no reason to believe that it was a perfectly constituted organisation.

The motion was then agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

The report on Supply was brought up and agreed to.

The Navy Estimates (Civil Service) Bill was also brought up, was agreed to.

The Court of Justiciary (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

The Mate's Examination and Certificates (Amendment) Bill were respectively read a third time and passed.

Lord LOVAINE moved for leave to bring in a bill to amend the law relating to naval prize; a bill to provide for agency and distribution of naval prize; and a bill to amend the naval prize act, 1864.

Lord Hotham gave notice that, in Committee on the Army Estimates, he should move a reduction of the number of troops in the service by 10,000 men.

Mr. LINDSAY moved for a return of the number of refugees up to the 31st March, and Mr. Liddell also proposed his motion as to Cuba.

Mr. CARDWELL moved the Army Estimates in Major Banks, who, in connection with Mr. Walcott's grant would be commenced and carried out at a date not later than the 1st of May, 1865. The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained to the action from Mr. Walcott not being able to obtain the necessary metal for the manufacture of rifles.

CIVIL SERVICE AND MISCELLANEOUS ESTIMATES.

Mr. MARK LOCKHART moved the resolutions on the Civil Service Estimates have been for many years rapidly increasing, and ought to be reduced. In 1835 the amount of the Civil Service Estimates was £4,000,000, while in 1863 it was £8,000,000. There was then a difference of £5,412,000, which, if the estimates were reduced to the level of 1835, would be the amount of the reduction to be effected. There, however, to the manner in which reduced taxes recovered themselves, he would not go into that question. He would merely add that there was a vote for £7,500,000, which even the Chancellor of the Exchequer might fairly and safely reduce by £500,000. He moved a reduction of that amount to the whole of the Civil Service Estimates, namely the sums of the stamp duties, including the fire insurance duty. It was not his intention to go into the question of the income tax, which he thought ought to be remitted. He considered every ground it was desirable that the expenditure should be reduced, and at some early period the income tax should be abolished.

Mr. F. PEEL, in reply, said the increase in the Civil Service and Miscellaneous Estimates was not unsatisfactory. He thought that real, and that economies was a subject rather of congratulation than of regret. At one-decimals began he would say that the Government would be willing to consent to the increase had arisen. He should be glad if any means of reducing the expenditure could be suggested, but he could not consent to the vote. The Government proposed, as they had already said, to reduce the vote for the Queen's Bench Prison, which Mr. Torrens, Mr. Scudegate, and Mr. Ewart took part in opposing the motion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

Mr. Fleyer took the oaths and his seat as member for Dumfriesshire.

The Act Amendment (Ireland) Bill, the Valuation (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill, the Naval Prize Acts Repeal, and the Naval Prize Bills.

The LAIRD CLERK read a letter from the motion of Mr. LAIRD, that the House resolve itself into Committee on the Chain Cables and Anchors Bill, Mr. GIDDY moved that the bill be referred to a Select Committee, as there were many technical points and private interests to be considered.—Mr. OSWYORN seconded this proposition, which has already been spoken for by Mr. Liddell, Mr. Laird, Mr. Bentinck, and Sir J. Elphinstone, was agreed to.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

Their Lordships sat only for a few minutes. The Chain Cables (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

Mr. Long gave notice that on Monday he would ask Lord Palmerston whether the Government intended to introduce Reform measure during the present session.

The privileges of searching and seizing contraband of war on the high seas, &c., was the subject of a motion by Mr. Cave, who observed that it was a mere principle of impartiality as was shown to the Federal States.

Mr. THOMAS BRASSEY moved for the appointment of a Select Committee of the House Department if there would be any objection to allow letters posted at the Charing-cross Post-office after the usual hour on the day of the removal of the great privilege it would afford to the public and the small amount of labour it would entail on the officials. There would be a great benefit to the adoption of the proposal. The Post Office authorities estimated that 70,000 letters were posted after the usual hour every week-day, and that it would require a force of twenty-five men to dispatch them to the country. It would not, however, be necessary to employ the Post Office, for the letters could easily be making similar application.

SUPPLY.—THE ARMY ESTIMATES.

The House then going into Supply.

Mr. STANSFELD called the attention of the House to the reduction of the military force in India, and moved a resolution declaring it desirable to defer the remarks on the subject until the Marquis of Hartington had made his statement with a view to show that reduction was unadvisable.

Colonel SYKES said that he should support the resolution at the present year of the assembling of the Yeomanry Cavalry for the accustomed period of six days' training on grounds which he had stated on Monday, and he should vote for it and contrary to the recommendation of the Committee appointed by Lord Herbert to inquire into the subject of Yeomanry.—The House then went into Committee of Supply, and, from the unusual pressure on the revenue of the country, an increase of £1,000,000 in the Income Tax was necessary, and he should therefore recommend not to do so. He would, however, support the reduction of the Income Tax as low as possible.—General PEEL condemned the course pursued by the Government in their treatment of the Militia and Yeomanry, and said that in 1859 and 1860 he had the Government fully appreciated the services of the yeomanry force, and were only hindered from doing more for them by the fear of the cry of waste from Sir W. Miles, His House divided, when Colonel Sibrard's motion was negatived by 100 to 15, the numbers being 87 to 138.

The House then went into Committee.

The Marquis of HARTINGTON entered into an explanation of the Army Estimates. The total amount required was £15,745,000. It was true that £1,000,000 more than last year was asked for, but the Government were not responsible for the increase. The Government had, on the contrary, become a peace policy, and there were peace estimates. If the honourable gentleman opposite (Mr. Stansfeld) had been in office he would have made objections; but he pointed out that great efforts had been made for some years, and the Army was now in a satisfactory state. He was aware that the organisation of army and stores had now reached a proper completeness, and they could safely reduce the expenditure. He would not, however, reduce the force below 200,000 men. He concluded by moving a vote for 64,000 men, exclusive of the troop Force, for India, for the year ending March 31, 1865.

The remainder of the night was occupied with a discussion of the Estimates.

Mr. Sorabjee Pestonjee (of the firm of S. P. Framjee and Co., Bombay) has given £1000 to the Committee of the Royal Asiatic Society of Bombay, in addition to the Bombay University, to be called "Framjee Cowasjee Pestonjee Institute," for the purpose of the Society's library and reading-room in connection therewith, open to competition for all universities of India, of which Mr. Rashtiel Bomanjee, Parsee Merchant, Bombay, has subscribed £1000.

Mr. G. N. Cama, of Bombay, £5,000, and others sums of not less than £500 rupees each.

Lieutenant-General Cartwright, her Majesty's Inspector of Militia Yeomanry Cavalry in England and Wales, and Chief of Volunteers in his report for the past year made to the Secretary of State that in the course of his inspection he discovered it to be a common practice in many counties for individuals and companies to communicate with the police, seeking police information as to the character, respectability, and means of persons residing on their districts, and offering recommendations to the service. General Cartwright suggests for which the force was established, open to competition for all universities of India, of which Mr. Rashtiel Bomanjee, Parsee Merchant, Bombay, has subscribed £1000.

Mr. G. N. Cama, of Bombay, £5,000, and others sums of not less than £500 rupees each.

Lieutenant-General Cartwright, her Majesty's Inspector of Militia Yeomanry Cavalry in England and Wales, and Chief of Volunteers in his report for the past year made to the Secretary of State that in the course of his inspection he discovered it to be a common practice in many counties for individuals and companies to communicate with the police, seeking police information as to the character, respectability, and means of persons residing on their districts, and offering recommendations to the service. General Cartwright suggests for which the force was established, open to competition for all universities of India, of which Mr. Rashtiel Bomanjee, Parsee Merchant, Bombay, has subscribed £1000.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The President of the Royal Society has issued invitations for conversazioni, to be held at Burlington House, on the 13th inst. and April 9.

It is proposed to construct a boulevard from Belgravia to South Kensington. It will be 100 ft. wide, and commence at Pont-street and terminate in the Cromwell-road, opposite the Kensington Museum and gates.

At the anniversary festival of the Royal Literary Fund, in St. James's Hall, this year, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will preside.

Mr. Robert Biddulph, the head partner in the banking firm of Biddulph, Cocks, and Co., of Charing-cross, died on Sunday, at his residence in Eaton-place, aged sixty-three.

The Metropolitan Board of Works have voted an increase of salary to their principal officers. The solicitor's salary is augmented from £1000 to £1200 a year, and the clerk has an increase of £500 to £1000.

Mr. Horace Jones, of Furnival's Inn, has been elected architect to the Corporation of London, in the room of the late Mr. Bunning. There were seventeen candidates, but, owing to withdrawals and one cause, only six went to the poll.

At a meeting of bankers, magistrates, and merchants, sympathising with the Danes in the unequal struggle they are waiting to defend to the last extremity, held at the Mansion-house, on the motion of the recipient of the Lord Mayor, for the purpose of raising a fund for the relief of the wounded and suffering Danes, it was stated that the amount of the fund already subscribed was £6000, and that the subscription list would be open for another week or more. It was also announced that the Queen had subscribed £100, and the Prince of Wales £50.

The Saddlers' Company have offered a prize of £50 for the best design for a silver cup, to be presented by the Company to the Lord Mayor elect, on the 9th inst. The cup is to be of the value of £100, and the remaining £50 is to be expended in the execution of the design. The cup is to be of the Elizabethan period, and to be surmounted by a figure of Queen Elizabeth, in her robes of state, holding the sceptre in her right hand, and the orb in her left. The cup is to be ornamented with figures of Time, Truth, and Justice, and with the arms of the Company, and the Lord Mayor elect. The cup is to be made by the successful competitor, and delivered to the Company on or before the 1st of October next.

The Sailing Committee of the Royal London Yacht Club have determined upon the following programme for the forthcoming season:—Saturday, May 7, opening trip; Monday, May 16, Dover match, for a cup of plate value one guinea for the first boat, and £5 for the second; course, from Erith to the Nore Light and back; entrance to close May 9; Tuesday, June 14, annual and other class matches; course, from the Nore to the Kentish thirty guineas for the first boat, £10 for the second; course, Erith to the Nore Light and back. Third class, piece of plate value £5; second class, £10 for first boat, £5 for the second; course, from Erith to the Chapman Head and back; entrie for both races to close Wednesday, June 8.

Last week the births of 2000 children—1010 boys and 981 girls—were registered in London. In the corresponding week of the years 1854-63, the average number (corrected) was 2037.—The deaths in London were more numerous last week than they had been in the preceding seven weeks January. They rose to 1677. The average number of deaths for the eighth week of ten previous years, 1854-63, is 1494, corrected to the present population, 1617. While the mortality from phthisis (157 deaths) is considerably less than it was in previous weeks, that from bronchitis (107 deaths) is rather greater than usual in 304 cases in the week, pneumonia in 97, heart disease in 70 cases. Nine assassinations are included.

On Wednesday morning, for the first time, the public entrance to the platform of the Victoria Metropolitan Railway was opened, and the new booking-office and waiting-rooms in the large range of buildings facing the Strand will be ready to be brought into service in a few days. The line, which was on Wednesday cleared for the convenience of general passengers had been opened for the conveyance of passengers to and from the Exhibition, but this service is now completely run through the entire length of the station. The trains at present start from the temporary station in the Strand, and pass by the temporary entrance to Villiers-street, Strand, and thence under about a hundred feet from the Charing-cross and, but the whole of this additional length of line will soon be in use on the new station, when the trains will arrive at and depart from the actual terminus.

An excellent performance of Mendelssohn's chef-d'œuvre, "Elijah," was given by the National Choral Society, at Exeter Hall, on Wednesday evening; under the direction of Mr. Benjamin Wells. The principal solo singers were Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, Miss Rotherstiel, and Miss E. Heywood. Mr. Reeves was in full possession of his fine voice, and sang splendidly. Mr. Santley not only sang the music belonging to the part of Elijah beautifully and unrivalled like manner, but delivered the recitatives promptly and effect. Miss Rotherstiel acquitted herself of her arduous task in the manner to be expected of one possessing her talent. Miss E. Heywood, a lady-pupil of the Society, who made her début in the "Elijah" a hundred feet from the Charing-cross and, but the whole of this additional length of line will soon be in use on the new station, when the trains will arrive at and depart from the actual terminus.

An excellent performance of Mendelssohn's chef-d'œuvre, "Elijah," was given by the National Choral Society, at Exeter Hall, on Wednesday evening; under the direction of Mr. Benjamin Wells. The principal solo singers were Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, Miss Rotherstiel, and Miss E. Heywood. Mr. Reeves was in full possession of his fine voice, and sang splendidly. Mr. Santley not only sang the music belonging to the part of Elijah beautifully and unrivalled like manner, but delivered the recitatives promptly and effect. Miss Rotherstiel acquitted herself of her arduous task in the manner to be expected of one possessing her talent. Miss E. Heywood, a lady-pupil of the Society, who made her début in the "Elijah" a hundred feet from the Charing-cross and, but the whole of this additional length of line will soon be in use on the new station, when the trains will arrive at and depart from the actual terminus.

The South London Working Classes' Industrial Exhibition was opened on Monday in premises at the Camberwell Shakespeare and a number of industrial gentlemen. The exhibition consists of a large collection of articles of every description, chiefly in the form of new boxes, and will be found to contain a wonderful amount of ingenious and skilful labour. The meeting was addressed by the Earl of Shaftesbury, who stated that the total amount received at the door during classes had improved more than 50 per cent within the last twenty-five years. The main object urged upon them was the cultivation of industry and the exercise of temperance and economy, in order to raise themselves in the social scale and secure for them the independence which they had a right to. Their habits ambition, they were looking. Mr. Bright also delivered an eloquent address, in which he said that he was glad to see the working classes in active action of the Government under which they lived and on his own moral character. While insisting on the necessity of wise and judicious legislation, he said that unless the working classes themselves were prepared to exercise the power which the best Government in the world could not prevent them from abusing into a means of degradation and ruin. Sir E. Perry, who put in an appearance for the purpose to the exhibition; Mr. Warner, M.P., the Rev. Newman Hall, and other gentlemen also addressed the meeting. The Rev. Newman Hall said that on his part, of objects of utility and taste which have been produced by the exhibitors, who are all working men, he should have much pleasure in awarding a prize of £5 each. These articles are classified as useful, ingenious, ornamental, scientific, artistic, literary, musical, and curious, and number in all about 1000 articles.

A meeting of the Royal National Life-boat Institution was held on Thursday, in the house, Adelphi-terrace, Mr. Hugh Pearson in the chair. It was moved to the effect of the Rector life-boat of the institution for saving the crew of seven men from the steamship Rector, of Newcastle, which, in the storm on the night of the 17th ult., was wrecked on some rocks off Redcar, on the Yorkshire coast, and that the Duke of Northumberland, the president, and the silver medal be awarded to the coxswain of the life-boat and on his own moral character. While insisting on the necessity of wise and judicious legislation, he said that unless the working classes themselves were prepared to exercise the power which the best Government in the world could not prevent them from abusing into a means of degradation and ruin. Sir E. Perry, who put in an appearance for the purpose to the exhibition; Mr. Warner, M.P., the Rev. Newman Hall, and other gentlemen also addressed the meeting. The Rev. Newman Hall said that on his part, of objects of utility and taste which have been produced by the exhibitors, who are all working men, he should have much pleasure in awarding a prize of £5 each. These articles are classified as useful, ingenious, ornamental, scientific, artistic, literary, musical, and curious, and number in all about 1000 articles.

A meeting of the Royal National Life-boat Institution was held on Thursday, in the house, Adelphi-terrace, Mr. Hugh Pearson in the chair. It was moved to the effect of the Rector life-boat of the institution for saving the crew of seven men from the steamship Rector, of Newcastle, which, in the storm on the night of the 17th ult., was wrecked on some rocks off Redcar, on the Yorkshire coast, and that the Duke of Northumberland, the president, and the silver medal be awarded to the coxswain of the life-boat and on his own moral character. While insisting on the necessity of wise and judicious legislation, he said that unless the working classes themselves were prepared to exercise the power which the best Government in the world could not prevent them from abusing into a means of degradation and ruin. Sir E. Perry, who put in an appearance for the purpose to the exhibition; Mr. Warner, M.P., the Rev. Newman Hall, and other gentlemen also addressed the meeting. The Rev. Newman Hall said that on his part, of objects of utility and taste which have been produced by the exhibitors, who are all working men, he should have much pleasure in awarding a prize of £5 each. These articles are classified as useful, ingenious, ornamental, scientific, artistic, literary, musical, and curious, and number in all about 1000 articles.

The French Jockey Club has published its programme for 1864. We learn from Galignani that the total amount of money to be contended for is 1,000,000 francs, distributed as follows:—For the Grand Prix meeting, six days' racing, 39 prizes, 194,000f.; Paris summer meeting, two days, 12 prizes, 60,000f.; autumn meeting, three days, 15 prizes, 75,000f.; Chantilly spring meeting, three days, 15 prizes, 65,50f.; Chantilly autumn meeting, three days, 15 prizes, 65,500f.; Prix du Bois de Boulogne will commence on the 10th of April, and end on the 25th of May; Prix de Paris, on the 26th of May, and end on the 8th of June; Prix du Jockey Club, on the 9th of June, and end on the 19th. The Paris Summer Meeting is fixed for the 4th and 5th of June. Besides the Grand Prix, the Jockey Club gives a gold vase, the value of which is 5000f., to be run for on the first evening race, for which the engagements must be made in 1864. In 1865 the Jockey Club will give a gold vase, value 5000f., to be run for on the first evening race, and in 1866 20,000f., in 1867, the Poule d'Essai from 6000f. to 10,000f.; and in 1868 the Poule des Poulains from 3000f. to 6000f., and the Poule des Produits from 6000f. to 6000f.

Sir Rowland Hill has tendered his resignation as Secretary of the General Post Office.

By direction of the Secretary of State for War, all the large Armstrong rifled guns are in future to be designated by their calibres, and not by the number of pounders, according to the old system.

The Scotsman states that her Majesty has approved of twelve of those memorials of the late Prince Consort which have been selected, removed to Holyrood, where they will be placed in such of the public apartments as may be deemed most appropriate for their reception.

The Council of the Royal Humane Society have unanimously awarded the silver medal of the society to Mr. Nicoll, who has also received the silver medal of the society for his gallant conduct in endeavouring to rescue a boatman named Bowden, who was drowned in the Thames during the Hampstead-heath Holiday, on the 11th ult. Mr. Nicoll, who severely injured his hand in the effort to save the life of Bowden, is recovering from his injury; and ever since, but is now recovering.

The Times correspondent states that there will be no dispatch of American mails this week viâ Galway, as the company have again failed to fulfil their contract. The mail steamer Connaught, of the Galway and Atlantic Company have applied to the Post Office authorities for permission to withdraw from the contract, and intimated their intention of entering into negotiations with the Admiralty for the purchase of the vessels employed in the service, with another company. The Post Office authorities have given no answer to the application. The directors are reported to be of opinion that they can carry on the service with profit, but the Government are unwilling to incur the risk of responsibility, endeavour to effect a sale of their interest in the project, with a view to the Cunard mail steamers, or some other company, undertaking or carrying out the project. Two or three companies are said to be in negotiation with the Atlantic Company on the subject at present."

THE GREAT PRECEDENCE QUESTION.—The decision of the Privy Council in this matter is that Dublin is not to have precedence over Edinburgh, nor Edinburgh over Dublin; and, in the presentation of addresses to the sovereign, each city is to have pre-audience alternately. This decision is looked on as rather a triumph for Dublin, because, in the first instance, the Government was inclined to give the precedence to Edinburgh, on the opinion in its favour of Garter King-of-Arms, whose reasons, however, have not yet been communicated to the public. Dublin, however, has always claimed the precedence, on the ground that it has pre-audience the other day at Windsor, because the Corporation of Dublin had an audience of the Queen on the occasion of presenting an address, with regard to all future presentation of addresses, by those two capital cities.

THE LONDON GAZETTE,

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26.

BANKRUPTS.

J. RANSOM, Kensington, harness-maker.—J. WOOD, Bermondsey Market, dealer in vegetables.—S. HARDIMAN, Hackney-road, plumber.—C. P. HUTCHINGS, Brook-street, Grosvenor-square, and Bedford-row, Holborn, solicitor.—J. MACKINNON, Gracechurch-street, wine-merchant.—J. GREEN, Bedford-row, Holborn, tailor.—J. GREEN, Bedford-row, Holborn, tailor.—J. GREEN, Bedford-row, Holborn, tailor sonment of the unhappy King Christian II. of Denmark, from 1532 to 1549. For sixteen years and a half, after being deposed by a vote of the Rigsdag or Diet of the kingdom, which had elected his uncle Frederick in his stead, the fallen King was confined here, in a gloomy cell, the door of which was walled up. His only companion was, at first, a boy, who soon pined away and was succeeded by an old soldier, from whom the King would hear tales of military adventure, to beguile his captivity; but the soldier also died, and then the King used to walk incessantly round and round his cell, pressing one hand on the edge of a circular stone table, which still shows the mark where its rim was worn away by his touch. The tower in which he was imprisoned was however, demolished above a century ago. This unfortunate King, who hated his nobles, loved plebeian company, played fast and loose with the Lutheran and Protestant creeds, and practised the ancient custom of piracy on the high seas, was perhaps unwisely to others. But it is satisfactory to learn that he was not left to die in such a dismal imprisonment as that of Sonderburg. His wife, Isabella, a daughter of the Emperor Charles V., exerted herself constantly for his relief, till, upon the accession of Christian III. to the throne of Denmark, he was removed to Callundburg, and there, after some years of milder treatment, expired. The Castle of Sonderburg has for a century or more been royal property; since it was sold, or rather mortgaged, by the Dukes of Augustenburg, its former owners, to the Danish Crown for certain sums of money. It has been latterly used for a granary, and one part of it for a gaol. It is a plain square building, the walls of red brick, the roof of red tiles. The turrets and round towers at each corner have disappeared. In the chapel, which remains, is the tomb and escutcheon of Duke John, of Sonderburg.

APENRADE, LATE THE AUSTRIAN HEAD-QUARTERS.

The town and port of Apenrade—or, as it is called in the Danish language, Aabenraa—is situated on a gulf of the eastern coast of Schleswig, some twenty miles to the north of Flensburg. The peninsula of Sundewitt, now occupied by the Prussians, is formed by the Gulf of Apenrade to the north and by the Flensburg Fiord to the south. The Austrians, when they moved on from Flensburg, in the middle of last month, took up their quarters at Apenrade; but General Gablenz, the commander of the Austrian forces, remained there only a few days. A few only of the Austrian troops are now stationed there. The present head-quarters are at Hadersleben, still further to the north, and close to the frontier of Jutland. The View engraved on page 229 shows the aspect and position of the town of Apenrade, on the edge of an alluvial plain washed by the waters of the gulf.

TESTIMONIAL TO GEORGE SMITH, ESQ., LL.D., LATE CHAIRMAN OF THE CORNWALL RAILWAY COMPANY.

THE CASTLE OF GLÜCKSBURG.

The Castle of Glücksburg, of which we give an Engraving from a photograph by M. Brandt, of Flensburg, is now occupied by a division of the Prussian army. This place stands on the southern shore of the Flensburg Fiord, five or six miles distant from the town. It was there that the late King of Denmark died. The present King, as Duke of Sonderburg-Glücksburg, takes his family name from this estate, though it is not among the ancient possessions of his family, but was given to them by a royal grant in 1825. Glücksburg was originally founded, in the thirteenth century, as a convent of Cistercian monks. This was broken up at the Reformation, and the place became the property of Duke John of Sonderburg. The elder branch of his lineage having expired in 1778, this domain lapsed to the Crown; but in 1825, as we have seen, it was restored to the younger branch—namely, that of Sonderburg-Beck, from which the present King is descended. The castle, which was built in 1603, is a square and massive pile, almost entirely surrounded with water, a deep moat having been dug in the ground formerly consecrated for the churchyard of the ancient monastery. It is approached by a stone bridge over the moat. At each of the four corners of the building is a hexagonal tower, with a conical roof. The halls and chambers have vaulted ceilings, and the whole house, both within and without, has a stern and forbidding appearance. But the neighbouring scenery is very pleasant; Quelienthal, within a short walk, being a favourite resort of picnic parties from Flensburg town.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. G. SMITH, LATE CHAIRMAN OF THE CORNWALL RAILWAY COMPANY.

The directors of the Cornwall Railway Company, about six weeks ago, presented to their late chairman, George Smith, Esq., LL.D., of Trevu, Camborne, an elegant drawing-room clock and pair of candelabra, with an address thanking him for his labours in the promotion and construction of that line during the last twenty years. A large number of his friends among the gentlemen of the county of Cornwall have likewise subscribed for another testimonial of a more general character, in order to express their respect for "his manly and

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: THE CHATEAU OF GLÜCKSBURG, NEAR FLENSBURG.

THE ALEXANDRA VASE, PRESENTED TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES BY THE DANISH RESIDENTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

THE ALEXANDRA VASE, GIVEN TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES BY THE DANISH RESIDENTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

This wedding gift, presented on Tuesday to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales by her Danish countrymen in Great Britain, has been designed and executed in cxydised silver by Mr. Ies Barkentin, jun., of Regent-street, Anglo-Danes. The form of the vase, which with its base is 3 ft. 6 in. in height, has been studied from the purest Greek models; but the ornamentation is Scandinavian throughout, and the figures in the various groups are all illustrative of either the mythology or the history of ancient Denmark. Upon the body of the vase and its neck and handles, the most characteristic of the mythological tales of the North are indicated in groups of figures, executed in repoussé work in very low relief. Here are the Scandinavian Fates, and the deities and heroes of the Walhalla, with the skilful artificer dwarfs, the battle of Asgerut, the death of Balder, and other subjects of that kind. On each side is a large medallion of nine figures, one of them equestrian, in the highest relief; the projection of these figures, however, has been carefully subordinated to the contour of the vase. In one medallion Queen Thyra Dannebod appears superintending the building of the Dannewerk and encouraging the workers in their labour; and in the other medallion Queen Dagmar is represented interceding with her husband, Waldemar the Victorious, on behalf of the imprisoned peasants. Seated within the handles, the figures of Thun and Frea are introduced; and the cover supports a statuette of Canute, the Royal Anglo-Dane, with his crown and sceptre and mantle of state as he might have appeared when he rose from his chair beside the advancing waters of the flowing tide. Below, on a bese in the stem of the vase, are small medallion portraits of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, alternating with the armorial bearings of the Heir Apparent of England and those of Denmark, as they are borne, without any heraldic difference, by the Princess. The vase itself is encircled with this inscription:—"Brudegave til Danmarks Datter fra Dansk Mand og Kvinder i Storbritannien"—Bridal Gift to Denmark's Daughter from Danish Men and Women in Great Britain. Upon the base, in low relief, are representations of a Vikingar fleet, a group of barrows, Druidical circles, and the monument of the Princess, with the date of her marriage.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE LATE JOHN STRANG, ESQ., LL.D., CITY CHAMBERLAIN OF GLASGOW.

TESTIMONIAL TO THE LATE DR. STRANG, CITY CHAMBERLAIN OF GLASGOW.

On the 16th of September last a very handsome testimonial was presented to the late Dr. John Strang, for nearly thirty years Chamberlain to the Corporation of the City of Glasgow. It consisted of the gift, of about £1300, subscribed by his numerous and fellow-citizens, which was to be accompanied by a piece of silver plate. The meeting at which this presentation took place was duly reported by the local papers. Sir James Campbell presided; and the Lord Provost, with Mr. Buchanan, M.P., Mr. Dalglish, M.P., Sir E. Colebrooke, M.P., Mr. Ewing, M.P., Sir Andrew Orr, and other well-known gentlemen were present, besides most of the bailies, councillors, and other members of the Glasgow municipality. They commended Dr. Strang not only for his official conduct and for his private virtues, but for his active furtherance of almost every useful public object in Glasgow during the last half century, for his literary and scientific acquirements, and for the valuable periodical statements compiled by him to show the social and commercial progress of that city. Dr. Strang then received the sum of money which formed part of the testimonial, and thanked the subscribers for having thus relieved him of all pecuniary anxiety for the remaining days of an already protracted life. The silver vase which had been ordered for him was to be manufactured by Mr. D. C. Rait, of Glasgow, from the design of Mr. W. Beattie, sculptor, of Newman-street, London. It is now finished, but Dr. Strang no longer lives, and it will be delivered to the survivors of his family. The vase, as shown in our Engraving, is of classic form, copied from an antique. There is on each side a figure of Innocence, reclining on a festoon of ivy and oak suspended from two goats' heads, which form the handles of the vase. On the silver pedestal is engraved an appropriate inscription.

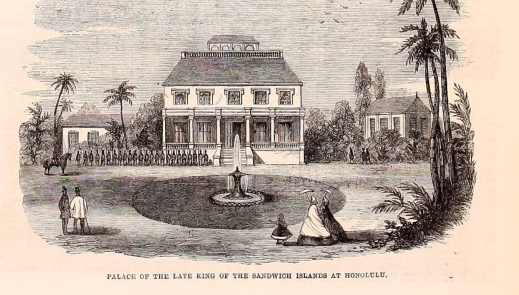
THE ROTTERDAM MUSEUM.

THE city of Rotterdam has suffered an irreparable loss by the destruction of its museum in the Schieland Palace, which was burnt down on the night of the 16th ult. We have engraved above a photograph of the Schieland Palace. It was considered the finest public building in the Netherlands, except the Royal Palace at Amsterdam. It was erected, in 1662, on 750 large fir piles, driven 60 ft. into the ground, forming a site 100 ft. square. In the court at the back of the building, originally inclosed but now a public place, there is a beautiful lime-tree, which was planted by William III., King of England and Stadtholder of Holland, and which has happily escaped injury. In 1811 the municipal palace was fitted up, at great expense, for the residence of the Emperor Napoleon and the Empress Maria Louisa during their short stay in Holland. In 1813, Prince Nassau, the Russian Field Marshal, made it his headquarters; and in 1815-16 was occupied by the Emperor Alexander and his suite while they were the guests of the Municipality. Subsequently it was converted into the court of the civil tribunal for the department. In 1847, a collection of valuable paintings, bequeathed to the city by M. Boymans, was transferred to the halls of the palace to form the nucleus of the costly treasure of art which have now for the most part been destroyed. The collection gradually increased till it numbered about four hundred paintings, among which were pictures by Rembrandt, Gerard Dow, Van der Velde, Ostade, Teniers, Murillo, De Craeyer, Jan Steen, Potter, Cuyp, Hobbema, Van Ostervanne, and Ruysdael; while several choice specimens of modern art, by Schelfhout, Kockkock, Schotel, Bakhuizen, and others, had recently been added. Many—it is said a hundred and fifty—of these paintings, as well as some of the valuable prints, were rescued from the fire, though most of them are in a damaged state. In this museum was also a large and unique collection of Japanese porcelain, which, together with several marble statues, was entirely destroyed. The basement floor of the building was used for the School of Design, all the models and apparatus of which were destroyed. The museum was insured for £50,000, a sum far below its real value—which, in fact, no money can represent. It is supposed that the fire was caused by the carelessness of the workmen employed in repairing the upper part of the building. Nothing, however, but the four walls of the Schieland Palace is now standing; all within is a blackened mass of ruins.



THE ROTTERDAM MUSEUM, LATELY DESTROYED BY FIRE.

THE LATE KING OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

WE have lately heard much of a growing civilisation and Christianity in that important group of islands which forms a half-way station between America and Asia, in the North Pacific Ocean. The young King, whose untimely death is now lamented by all who feel an interest in the moral and intellectual progress of the Hawaiian race or in the political independence of the Sandwich Islands, was indeed a fine fellow, with the mind and manners of an English gentleman. We engrave his portrait and a view of his palace at Honolulu, from photographs taken on the spot. His late Majesty Alexander Liholiho Iolani, who reigned under the dynastic name of Kamehameha IV., was born, on the 9th of February, 1834. He was the grandson of Kamehameha the Great, being the son of Kekuaoa, a warrior of the times of the Conquest, a chief of high rank, who married the daughter of Kamehameha I., the founder of the line. It was this Kamehameha I. by whose military and political genius were united in one compact body those islands, which had previously composed so many independent States, each having its own monarch. That was Kamehameha the Great. The one who has just died was Kamehameha the Good. It was on the 15th of December, 1854, that Kamehameha IV. ascended the throne of the Hawaiian Islands. Never, perhaps, did any Sovereign more sincerely resolve that, since he was called to bear the honours and with them the cares of royalty, he would faithfully perform its duties. He has done so, not merely as an active, keen, and energetic ruler, but as a zealous patron of every work of social improvement or instruction designed by the English Church missionaries and others for the benefit of his people. On the 19th of June, 1856, he married Emma, the granddaughter, by a native woman, of John Young, an Englishman. In May, 1858, the happiness of the royal marriage was completed by the birth of a son, who, unfortunately, died in August, 1862; and this event cast a gloom over the sensitive and affectionate mind of the young father, which is thought to have hastened his own death. The late King had received from English private tutors a good liberal education. He was well acquainted with the Latin, French, and German languages, as well as with all the best English literature. He spoke English, which is the Court language at Honolulu, without the slightest foreign accent. As for his personal appearance, he stood over 5 ft. in height, was of an olive complexion, a very pleasing countenance, and an agreeable gentlemanly demeanour. At the levées, drawing-rooms, and State ceremonials, as well as in private company, he conversed with the greatest ease, intelligence, and self-possession. The English Bishop of Honolulu, who has written a short memoir of him in the Guardian, describes him as "a man of rare physical powers, of elegant tastes, and keen perceptions. He could enjoy Kingsley, Thackeray, and Tennyson, and was for ever quoting Shakspeare. But the bent of his mind was still theological." He had actually studied some works of controversial divinity. Since his family bereavement he had sought consolation in translating the Book of Common Prayer, with a vigorously written preface of his own. It is well known that Queen Victoria has always taken a kindly personal interest in the Hawaiian Royal family. At the baptism of the little Prince, who was to have been educated by the Bishop of Honolulu until he should be old enough to be sent to Eton, our Queen and the Prince of Wales were to have been the sponsors, personally represented on that occasion by the British Commissioner, Mr. W. Follett Synge, and by Mrs. Synge, as proxies. This interesting ceremony awaited only the arrival of the newly consecrated Bishop, Mr. Staley, before he could reach the islands, the young child was carried off, and now the father is no more. He died in the palace of Honolulu, on Nov. 30. On the Sunday following, in the church, hung with black, Bishop Staley preached his funeral sermon, which was printed at full length in the native Hawaiian newspaper. The King's body, dressed in military uniform, lay in state for many hours, in a room lit by funeral candles, where stood the widowed Queen, the Queen Dowager, the Princess Royal, and all the great personages of the Court, while thousands of the people, thronging to the palace as soon as the news of this national calamity had reached them, were admitted by turns to look upon their deceased monarch and to cry aloud with the voice of mourning for his loss. Such is the custom of the country. The new King, brother of him we have just noticed, reigns now by the name of Kamehameha V. The Bishop says he also is a man of strong will, well-educated, and a thorough gentleman; well-disposed, moreover, like his late brother and the Queen Dowager, to that missionary branch of the Episcopal Church of England which is established in the Hawaiian Islands. All this is very gratifying and very curious, if we remember how the Hawaiian savages, eighty-five years ago, killed our great sailor Captain Cook, and observe what a change has since been wrought in them. The British Government, is it true, has long ago renounced all claim to annex these islands to our empire, and has recognised the independence of their native kingdom. There is still a sort of "moral protectorate," which has thus far proved most beneficial. The best account of the present condition of the Sandwich Islands will be found in an instructive book, published a year or two since by Mr. Manley Hopkins, the Hawaiian Consul in London, whose brother at Honolulu is, we believe, King Kamehameha's Minister of Finance.

KAMEHAMEHA IV., THE LATE KING OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

PALACE OF THE LATE KING OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS AT HONOLULU.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 16th ult., at Creaton Park, Cambridgeshire, Lady Vaughan, of a daughter.

On the 27th ult., at 40, Queen's Gate-terrace, Lady Augusta Fitzroy, of a son.

MARRIAGE.

On the 24th ult., at Chilton Balscholwell, near Bruges, Yorkshire, by the Rev. Edward Kahler, John Shields, eldest son of John Douglass, Esq., of Tinpahlie, Kincardineshire, to Valentine Antonia de Pauline, eldest daughter of Baron Ernest de Foelthe, and the Hon. Isabella Anastasia Somerville, of the late Lord Athlone.

DEATHS.

On the 27th ult., at the Charterhouse, William Andrew Chatto, in his 67th year.

On the 15th ult., at Christianstad, Sweden, in childbed, Annie Elizabeth, wife of J. N. Milner, Knight of the Swedish order of Wasa, and eldest daughter of the late John Martin, Esq., of Hopmansgrove House, Hamilton, Jamaica.

On the 27th ult., at Kelton Grange, Rutland, the Hon. Emily Grace Granthorpe, relict of the late Captain Granthorpe, Esq., and sister of the late Baroness Chetwode.

On the 29th ult., at Cheltenham, Mary Ann, relict of Sir Thomas Phillipps, Bart., in the 68th year of her age.

On Dec. 19, at the residence of her sister, Dorking, Surrey, Caroline, the devoted wife of the Rev. Robert Stevenson Ellis, M.A., Chaplain of H.M. Legation, Copenhagen, deeply and deservedly regretted by all surrowing family. Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." Proverbs xxxi. 28.

On the 31st inst., aged 76, Hannah, relict of John Sleigh, Esq., and sister-in-law of the Rev. Mr. Jay, of Argyle-street, Manchester-the-Hill, Lancashire, afterwards of Lois, Staffordshire.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our Own Correspondent.)

The demand for money for commercial purposes having increased to some extent, and the purchases of stock, both for cash and on time, having been on a very moderate scale, the market for Home securities has been dull, and prices have declined. The settlement of the accounts has led to a tempting business, and the new Consols issue of Exchequer Bills will bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, the Unfunded Debt, on the contrary, having ceased, the currency has shown rather more firmness than in the previous week.

The general money market is well supplied with capital, and discount the lowest rate for the best commercial paper are as follow:—

Three days' bill . . .	2	Four months' bills . . .	2½
Sixty days' bills . . .	2	Six months' bills . . .	2½
Three months' bills . . .	2

In the Stock Exchange loans have been offered at 3 per cent, if on government security.

The bank of England has received £2,000,000 in specie and 60 not, the money market at Paris has become rather easier. On safer parts of the Continent, however, money is still in demand.

About £2,000,000 in bullion has arrived from various quarters, and £1,000,000 has been withdrawn for the interior of the country and for exportation. The Australian gold fields have contributed £500,000 to the West Indies.

The trade with India have disposed of £400,000 in bills on the various Presidencies, and the Council Bills within this week amount to £1,370,000.

Much of the Continental exchanges are in favour of this country, and there is still a profit on the import of gold from America.

The Bank of England has issued notes to the value of £1,000,000, both for Scotch and Irish circulation, against which £1,000,000 in gold has been received and New Three per Cents, 91 to 91½; India Stock, 221 to 223; Ditto, Bonds, 1½ to 2½ pm; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; India Bonds, 1 to 3 pm; Long Annuities, 16 to 16½; Ditto, Short, 1½ to 1½. On the following day the Market, generally, was heavy. Consols declined to 91 to 91½; New Three per Cents, 91 to 91½; India Stock, 221 to 223; Ditto, Bonds, 1 to 2 pm; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, 1864, 1 pm; Ditto, Bonds, 2s. to 3s. pm; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; India Stock, 221 to 223; Ditto, Bonds, 1 to 2 pm; Long Annuities, 16 to 16½; Ditto, Short, 1½ to 1½; Bank Stock, 217 to 219; Ditto, Bonds, 1 to 2 pm; Exchequer Bills, 1 to 3 pm; Ditto, 1864, 1 pm; Ditto, Bonds, 2s. to 3s.

NEW MUSIC.

KUHE'S LA FAVORITA.—A remarkably effective and brilliant piece on the best melodies in Donizetti's opera. 4s. Hanover-square.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S I PURITANI.—A new and most admirable piece on airs from the splendid opera of Bellini. Free.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA SONNAMBULA.—An elegant, pleasing, and most successful piece on Bellini's melodious and ever popular opera. 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A beautiful and plaintive melody, treated with remarkable grace and refinement. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. A vigorous, dashing, and thoroughly effective piece, in the style of the "Tarantella." Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANDANGO. One of the most recent and successful pieces by this unrivalled and fascinating composer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. A very spirited and brilliant Waltz, the most popular since the celebrated Victoria Waltz of Schlesinger. Piano Solo, 4s. Duet, 5s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LES 2 D'EAU. Played by the Composer at his Pianoforte recitals with unbounded applause. A charming, romantic, and charming composition. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. A most effective and popular piece, very popular and extensively encored. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, "Qui Vive!" One of the most popular and brilliant of the season. Illustrated London News. "Full of effect. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song. Sung by Miss Poole at the Grand Ball and other Concerts, with unprecedented success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 76, Hanover-square.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.
IN TRAINING SCHOOLS.—The New National Song. GOD BLESS THE PRINCE OF WALES. In four voices, price 2d., or 12s. per 100.
Ditto. Tonic Sol-fa Edition, four male voices, 2d., or 14s. per 100.
THE PRINCE OF WALES' MARCH. Arranged for the Pianoforte by Brinley Richards. Price 3s. Also arranged for the Military Band, and may be had of the Publishers in separate parts, price 2s. each.
[Twelfth Section. "Agnus Dei" (First Setting). "Organ Accompaniment to the Mass" from Beethoven's Mass in C. Price 3s. Also, Book 3rd. Waltz Questions on the Theory of Music," New Edition. Price 1s. 6d.
ILLUSTRATIONS AND EXERCISES FOR THE PIANOFORTE. 20th Edition. Price 4s. 6d. Illustrated.
THE PRINCIPLES OF HARMONY. Practically Explained for Singing Classes. Price 1s. Illustrated.
HAMILTON'S DICTIONARY OF 500 MUSICAL TERMS. 19th Edition. Price 1s. 6d. Illustrated.
HAMILTON'S MODERN AND ANCIENT MUSICIANS OF MUSIC. 32nd Edition. Price 1s. All Musicians.
Queen Adelaide and Co. buy and sell Pianofortes by Indoor Apprentices.—Pianofortes and the Hands of Schools that they are prepared to Purchase.—Queen Adelaide and Co. Pianofortes for Sale.—Queen Adelaide and Co.—Cash. Queen Adelaide and Co. Apply Pianoforte and Case for repair. Queen Adelaide and Co.—Queen Adelaide and Co. New Rectangular-street.

BEL DEMONIO QUADRILLE, introducing the Music of Mr. Balfe's song and chorus, "Ever, ever, ever," from "Bel Demonio." Composed by W. H. HUGHTON. Price 3s. Post-free for 18 stamps.—ROBERT COCKS and CO.

BEL DEMONIO VALSE (performed every evening at the New Strand Theatre (Madame Rose Leclercq the prima donna) and other admired airs in "Bel Demonio," by Balfe. Price 3s. Post-free for 18 stamps.
DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG, THE OAK AND THE SAPLING, composed by HENRY SMART. Price 2s. 6d. post-free. "This is one of the most successful songs of Mr. Smart's. It is universally admired. Censure from Bird & Hodgson, 33, Cheapside.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE; and NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE. Two Sacred Melodies, arranged for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s. each.—ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street.

PIANOFORTE DUETS.
JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN; and NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE. Arranged by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 4s. each.—ROBERTS and CO. 67, Queen-street, Cheapside.

GUNGL'S DANCE MUSIC, played by all the Military and Quadrille Bands in the Kingdom. Solo and Duet Editions of all the Waltzes, Polkas, Quadrilles, and Galops. Lancers, &c., are now published.—A MOONLIGHT TABLE WALTZES. Solo 4s., Duet, 4s.
LES HIRONDELLES WALTZES. Solo 4s., Duet, 4s.
ADIEU DE VIENNE WALTZES. Solo 4s., Duet, 4s.
PERPETUAL MOTION POLKA. Solo 3s., Duet, 4s.
GARDENIA BALL POLKA. Solo 3s.
A LA MODE QUADRILLES. Solo 3s., Duet, 4s.
A. LAMOTTE and CO. 244, Regent-street.

ANNETTE'S NEW SONG, COME, MY PRETTY MAIDEN. Price 3s. (post-free for 18 st.), and LOVE AND LOVE ONLY. Ditto. Sung by Miss Richard Andrews, Dr. Tree, or Miss Dolaro.

MARY DEAR.—SIMS REEVES'S New Song, by HOWARD GLOVER, enthusiastically encored at the Concerts of the Queen's Theatre, Hanover Hall, now published, price 3s., by DUNCAN DAVISON, 244, Regent-street.

Dedicated by Graphic to Miss Dolaro, Mrs. Weiss, and Miss Poole.
MASONIC SONGS, AIRS, MARCHES, and GLEES. GERMAN PATRIOTIC SONGS. Sole Publishers, RICHARD ANDREWS, F.F.C.O., 61, No. 1 post-free for 12 stamps.
Lists of Contents, Collections, and Manuscripts.

ADDISON and LUCAS'S Price Medal Violins, copies of the great Cremona makers, 4l. 4s. Violoncellos, 8l. 8s. Double Basses, 12l. 12s. Pianofortes, Concertinas, Harmoniums, Harps, Guitars, and other Musical Instruments, Lowest prices, by Regular and strict system. Illustrated Catalogue gratis and post-free on application.
Address and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street, W.

MUSICAL BOX DEPÔT for the Sale of Musical Boxes, by the best makers, playing the most popular airs of the day. Also a Lady's Cylinder Musical Box, in case, to play one air, 2l. 2s. Catalogues sent free. Lists of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free.
CHESSHOLME and SON'S (from Bradbury) Prize Medal Cabinet Pianofortes, in Rosewood or Walnut, 7 octaves, 30 guineas; 6½ octaves, 25 guineas; 6 octaves, 20 guineas. 25, Berners-st., Oxford-street. Lists free.

TO LOVERS OF MUSIC.—Come and hear NETLAND'S MUSICAL BOXES. 21 per Air. Snuff-boxes, Work-boxes, Cabinets, Musical Canes, Musical Pocket-books, Musical Watches, Musical Lockets, and Musical Canes.—62, Strand, Temple-bar.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPÔTS, 56, Cheapside, and 26, Leadenhall-street, Nicole Frères Musical Boxes, at 21 per Air, playing the most popular airs of the day. Also a large assortment of Musical Boxes, from 5 to 8 Airs, at 2 per Air. Also the largest Stock in London, with newest accompaniments.

HARMONIUM.—A Lady offers a 14-guinea Instrument for Seven Guineas, elegant Italian walnut case, three stops, full compass, nearly new, suitable for church or drawing-room.—Mr. A., Pembroke Villa, Pembroke-road, Wood-green, N.

CAUTION.—THE CELEBRATED LORD CLIVE TROMBONE can only be had of R. STENDALL, Fife Maker, and his Agents. Will read the name of a lark-ship at night miles. Also Cornets, Saxhorns. Address, 66, Strand, London, Catalogues, 2d., recommendable prices.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price 45 5s. SMITH, BECK, and BECK, 31, Cornhill, E.C. (late 6, Coleman-street).
Catalogues sent on receipt of six postage-stamps.

THE ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Hyde Park-corner, Knightsbridge, Hyde Park, Middlesex, and the Equestrian, offers to the families of the nobility and gentry the comforts of a home, with the luxuries of a first-class and unincumbered house. It is close to the Palace, to the Parks, Piccadilly, and Belgravia.—Communications to be addressed to the Manager, Alexandra Hotel Company (Limited), Hyde Park-corner.

£1000 IN CASE OF DEATH, or an allowance of £6 per week while laid up by accident, for the payment of 2s. 6d. Apply at the Railway Passengers' Assurance Office, 64, Cornhill, London, and 10, Regent-street, and 61, Cheapside.
WILLIAM J. VIAN, Secretary.

NORTH DEVON.—FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, Pleasantly situate, Pleasure Grounds and Gardens, Coach-house, Stabling, Fine Orchard, and about 4 acres of Rich Pasture Land, close to a first-class market town, suitable for a gentleman's family, or for the Residence of a Medical Man. Key next cottage previously disposed of by private contract. For particulars apply to Mr. J. Bowden, Auctioneer, Barnstaple.

HIGH-CLASS EDUCATION for the SONS of GENTLEMEN, at HOME and ABROAD.—The Rev. THOMAS HOLLOWAY, M.A., Rector of Clerkenwell, RECEIVES a select Number of PUPILS, to whom he imparts a Thorough Education, combining the Advantages of Private Tuition and Home Comforts with the Discipline and Assistance of a Public School. Terms, Two Hundred Guineas per annum. Address, Mrs. Holloway, Clerkenwell Rectory, Middlesex. Dejeuner.

VACANCY for a JUVENILE INMATE in the HOUSE of a CLERGYMAN, near Bath. Terms, 40 guineas. Address, Rev. C. Bowles, Rectory, Bathampton, Bath, who will afford—Address M. D., care of Mrs. Powell, 8, Union-street, Bath.

SMART'S SOLE WRITING INSTITUTION, for correct and Scientific Penmanship. Open from 9 till 9. Ten till Nine daily. Persons of all ages received (privately), and taught in Classes, Single Lessons, or Separate Branches. Terms moderate. No extra charge for Stationery. Improvement guaranteed in Eight to Twelve Hour Lessons. Separate rooms for Ladies, to which Gentlemen are not admitted. 97, Chancery-lane, Fleet-street.
N.B.—Agent to the Work of Reginald Innocence Company.

A MARRIED MEDICAL MAN, residing in a town, desires Assistance in his Practice, and, if desired, a share. Address M. D., care of Mr. Powell, 8, Union-street, Bath.

NO. 7, BANK-BUILDINGS, corner of Old Jewry, E.C. Open from 10 till 4. Office for Payment of DEATH INSURANCE COMPANY.
J. W. GRAM, Secretary.

TOINVENTORS.—The GENERAL PATENT OFFICE undertakes the Registration of Designs, Inventions, and affords mutual facilities to Inventors. Printed Instructions gratis.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 5, Cornhill, and 14, Regent-street, W., Manufacturers to the Queen. The best wrought SILVER SPOONS and FORKS, at Manufacturers' prices. Fiddle Pattern, per dozen: Table Spoons, £2 5s.; Dessert, £1 15s.; Tea, £1. Kings Pattern, do., do., do., Queen's Pattern, do., do., do.
Old Pattern, do., do., do., Lily Pattern, do., do., do.
Thread Pattern, do., do., do., Bead Pattern, do., do., do.
Double Thread, do., do., do., Thread and Shell, do., do., do.
Double Thread and Shell, do., do., do., Double Bead, do., do., do.
Grecian Pattern, do., do., do., Antique Pattern, do., do., do.
Gothic Pattern, do., do., do., Honiton Pattern, do., do., do.
Shell Pattern (gilt), do., do., do., Rose Pattern, do., do., do.
Rose Pattern (gilt), do., do., do., Shell Pattern (gilt), do., do., do.
Fiddle Pattern, Full Size, per dozen, £3 3s.; Dessert, £2 2s.; Tea, £1 5s.
Kings Pattern, do., do., do., Queen's Pattern, do., do., do.
Thread Pattern, do., do., do., Bead Pattern, do., do., do.
Double Thread, do., do., do., Double Thread and Shell, do., do., do.
Double Thread and Shell, do., do., do., Double Bead, do., do., do.
Grecian Pattern, do., do., do., Antique Pattern, do., do., do.
Gothic Pattern, do., do., do., Honiton Pattern, do., do., do.
Shell Pattern (gilt), do., do., do., Rose Pattern, do., do., do.
Rose Pattern (gilt), do., do., do., Shell Pattern (gilt), do., do., do.
1 Pair Sugar Tongs ... £1 5s. 0d. | 1 Pair Sugar Tongs ... 1 15 0
1 Pair Fish Carvers ... 1 10 0 | 1 Pair Fish Carvers ... 1 15 0
Each article is warranted of the best quality, and is kept in stock in the Showroom. It contains the weights and prices of over 1000 articles of Plate, Cutlery, Electro-plate, Nickel Silver, Britannia Metal, Lamps, Baths, Tea Trays, Stoves, Fenders, Fire-irons, Bronzes, Marble Clocks, Dressing Cases, Portmanteaus, &c., and the best-silver-plated manufactures, gold and silver wedding, clerical presentation, and other testimonials, designed and made by the British Artists employed by A. B. Savory and Sons.
For the use of connoisseurs a work is printed with large illustrations, containing a history of the manufactures.

DISH-COVERS and HOT-WATER DISHES in every material, in great variety, and of the newest and most recherché patterns, at prices from 10s. 6d. to 10l. each. Tin Dish-covers, 6s. 6d. the set of six; Block Tin Hot-water Dishes, 10s. 6d. the set of six; Sheet Iron Bakers, 7s. 6d. the set of three; Copper Saucepans, 1s. 6d. per lb.; Copper Stewpans, 2s. per lb.; Iron Bedsteads, 8s. 6d. each; Patent Dish Covers, 4s. 6d. each; Block Tin Hot-water Dishes, with wells, 12s. the set of four; Tea Trays, 1s. 6d. the set; Kitchen Utensils, 20 per cent lower than any other house. Illustrated Catalogues sent post-free. Orders above 2l. delivered carriage-free.—RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 336, Strand, W.C., and 1, Paternoster-row, E.C.

SECONDE and CONFITURE for a Dressing-room and Dining-room. Two complete suites are manufactured on purpose for the Exhibition, in the "Queen Anne" style, in excellent condition, modern forms, and exclusive patterns. The Dressing-room suite comprises a wardrobe, with plate-glass doors and drawers, a dressing-table, a toilet-glass, a towel-horse, a washing-stand, and a chair. The Dining-room suite consists of a sideboard, a dining-table, and a set of chairs. Both suites are manufactured in the best Spanish mahogany, by the BELGRAVE FURNISHING COMPANY, No. 13, Hanover-street, Hanover-square, and 3, Grafton-street, Bond-street.

SILVER FIR BEDROOM FURNITURE, Polished Pine Dressing-room Furniture, and Polished Pine Suites. The BELGRAVE FURNISHING COMPANY, 13, Hanover-street, Hanover-square, and 3, Grafton-street, Bond-street, sole agents of this elegant and unique furniture, at the above-mentioned prices. Illustrated Catalogues gratis and post-free on application.

FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING for marriage-feast. See our Illustrated Catalogue, containing 350 Engravings, with Prices and Estimates, sent free by post. Nothing is charged for packing. Purchasers may select from the whole Stock of Furniture, Carpets, &c., in the Establishment, at the prices quoted in the Catalogue. JAMES GRAHAM and CO., 88, 89, 90, 91, and 92, Oxford-street, and 1, 2, 3, and 4, Hanway-yard, Oxford-street. Established 1830. Cabinet Furniture, Carpets, Bedding, Room Suites from 18 to 100 guineas. An assortment of Old Furniture always on hand.

FURNITURE CARRIAGE-FREE to any Railway Station in England.
Drawing-room Suites, complete ... £25 0 0
Dining-room Suites, complete ... 25 0 0
Bedroom Suites, complete ... 25 0 0
Illustrated Catalogue and Price Lists sent free.
HEAL and SON, 196, Tottenham-court-road.
Illustrated Catalogue gratis and post-free on application.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the best and cheapest Furniture in London. Purchasers are invited to inspect the Stock of Furniture, Bedding, Carpets, and Printed Furnishing List gratis and post-free.
JOHN HARRIS and SON, 77, Baker-street, Portman-square.

FOUNTAINS, STATUES, JARDINIÈRES, and VASES, in Stone and Terra-cotta. Statues (Life-size), Busts, Sundials, Flower-pots, Vases, Fonts, Pillar Pots, Shells, &c., SEDLEY and CO. Show-rooms, 29, Jermyn-street, St. James's, Duncannon-street, Strand, and Nursery-grounds, Battersea. Illustrated Catalogues, 6d. each. Estimates free.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.—SELLING OFF. The Stock of JAMES TURNBULL and CO., having changed their premises, are SELLING OFF the whole of their Stock of Furniture Guilders, St. Candlish-street, which are much more extensive than those they are about to occupy. Purchasers will find it to their advantage to inspect the Stock, as it is intended to effect an entire change in the system of Furniture now in vogue, and to sell at very low prices and a speedy return. Catalogues, with Terms, Plans, Estimates, and Drawings, and Cabinets will be effected at a very considerable Reduction for Cash.
JAMES TURNBULL and CO.

GENUINE FLOWER SEEDS, post-free, 1s. per packet of sixteen. Twelve packets, 10s. each. Annuals 24 varieties, 5s. 6d.; 36 varieties, 8s.; 50 varieties, 10s.; Biennials, 24 varieties, 5s. 6d.; Perennials, 24 varieties, 5s. 6d. Sent to any address on receipt of Post-office Order.—JAMES CARTER and CO., Seedsmen to H.R.H. the PRINCE of WALES and H.M. the QUEEN. The largest Stock in London, with newest correspondence.

HARMONIUM.—A Lady offers a 14-guinea Instrument for Seven Guineas, elegant Italian walnut case, three stops, full compass, nearly new, suitable for church or drawing-room.—Mr. A., Pembroke Villa, Pembroke-road, Wood-green, N.

CAUTION.—THE CELEBRATED LORD CLIVE TROMBONE can only be had of R. STENDALL, Fife Maker, and his Agents. Will read the name of a lark-ship at night miles. Also Cornets, Saxhorns. Address, 66, Strand, London. Catalogues, 2d., recommendable prices.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price 45 5s. SMITH, BECK, and BECK, 31, Cornhill, E.C. (late 6, Coleman-street).
Catalogues sent on receipt of six postage-stamps.

KING and CO. Silkmercers, &c., Regent-street, London.
Great Failure among Silk Manufacturers.
In consequence of the recent extraordinary failure to the amount of 250,000 worth of New Spitalfields and Black Silks, 21l. per cent under the manufacturers' prices.
Intending purchasers in the Country should write immediately.
The Ladies Silk Mercers in a state of unprecedented NEW MIXED FANCY SILKS, 1 guinea the Dress, usually 2 guineas.
NEW BLACK FABRICS.
Patterns sent post-free to all parts of the world.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

NEW CHECKED
SPRING SILKS, 21s. the Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW STRIPED
SPRING SILKS, 21s. 7d. the Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW CORDED
SPRING SILKS, 21 10s., a Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW MOIRE ANTIQUE
SPRING SILKS, 21 15s. 6d., a Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW GROS-GRAIN
SPRING SILKS, 21 17s. 6d., a Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW BROCHE AND CHENE
SPRING SILKS, 22 2s., a Dress, at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW
SPRING LAWNS, 6s. 6d. a Dress.
Last Year's Muslins at Half-price.
At KING'S, 243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

NEW
SPRING CAMLETS, 10s. 6d. a Dress.
All the New Spring Fashions in endless variety.
At KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

BLACK GLACÉ SILKS, 21 a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK BROCHÉ SILKS, 21 5s., a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK GROS GRAINS, 21 10s. a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK CORDED SILKS, 21 15s. a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK DRAP DE LYON, 22 a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.

BLACK MOIRE ANTIQUE, 22 5s., a Dress, at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns sent post-free.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

PLAIN AND FANCY, IN EVERY NEW COLOUR,
CORDED SILKS,
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW CRÊPE SILKS,
21 guineas the Dress, usually 2 guineas.
PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.
21 15s. 6d. Full Dress of 14 yards.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NOW READY, THE NEW STOCK OF PLAIN GLACÉS AND POULT DE SOIES,
at 2 15s. 6d., 3 3s., 3 10s., 3 15s., 4 4s., 4 10s., 4 15s., 5 5s.
At Peter Robinson's,
103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

STOCK OF SILKS.
PETER ROBINSON
Desires attention to a recent purchase which under value.
Rich Brocade Silks, 2 guineas, worth 3.
Rich Rebrocca, 2 guineas, worth 3.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

GLACÉ SILKS, STRIPES,
21 4s. 6d. the Full Dress.
Rich Broché Glacé Silks, 21 15s. 6d.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW CHECKED GROS GRAINS,
21 15s. 6d.
Broché Glacé Silks, 2 guineas. Rich Moiré Antique, 2 guineas.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW SPRING DRESSES,
at PETER ROBINSON'S,
embracing every variety in British and Foreign Manufactures suitable for present and approaching season.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

ALL LAST YEAR'S FRENCH ORGANDIE MUSLINS, perfectly fresh, and many of the patterns equal to new, reduced to 1s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

MUSLIN CURTAINS,
Last Season's,
at 10s. 6d. per pair.
A clearance of upwards of 1000 pairs of Muslin Curtains, previous to the early spring trade taking.
Fine Lace Curtains, 4 and 5 yards long, 7 and 8½ yards wide, commencing at 6s. 6d. per pair.
A quantity of very fine Lace Curtains, 10 yards long, 54 in. wide, at 30s. per pair.
A Sample Pair sent anywhere on approval; can be returned if not approved.
JOHN HARRIS and SON,
Complete Household and Family Linen List
Post-free on application to 77, Baker-street, Portman-square.

LADIES' MANTLE CLOTHS.
Waterproof Tweeds and Melions, Blue Diagonals, Black and Coloured Beavers, Witneys, Cheviots, &c., Black Cloths for gentlemen's dress coats, Fancy Cloths for trousers, Woollen Cloths for servants' and boys' wear, linen, 36, 40, per yard, to the finest quality, equally cheap.—HEWETT, BERESFORD, and CO., 111, Holborn-hill (corner of Ely-place), London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
BLACK SILKS, 16d. Full Dress, at KING'S.
Rich Fancy Silks,
Rich Glacé Silks, 2 guineas the Dress.
Black Glacé Silks, 2 guineas, worth 3 guineas, for £2 10s.
Jones, Lewis, Bird, and Co., Bath-street, and Rich Cross-lines Imperial Silks,
Rich Striped Glacé Silks,
Rich Moiré Antique,
now selling at
NICHOLSON and SONS' WHOLESALE WAREHOUSES,
42 and 43, St. Paul's churchyard.

COURT TRAINS.—SEWELL and CO. beg to announce that they are prepared with a fine collection of COURT TRAINS,
suitable for Court Dresses, in white and the new shades of colour.
Carpets Dress, Petticoat, Robe-court.

FRENCH FURNITURE CHINTZES, in the newest and most elegant designs and colours, 1000 pieces of FRENCH CHINTZES on sale at half price, from 1s. to 1s. 6d. per yard.—the popular pattern of Lilac and Rose, 1s. 6d. per yard. Cretonne Cloth, Cash-price-shawls, and Fringe-drapery, Below-square, W.

BAKER and CRISP'S
New Goods, 42 in., 42 in., 42 in., 42 in., 42 in., 42 in.
The New Grenadine and Grenadine Mohairs, from 2s. 9d.
The New Checked Muslins, from 2s. 9d.
The New Gauzes and Jaconets, from 2s. 9d.
The New Printings, 1½ yard wide,
Patterns sent free.
Baker and Crisp, Regent-st. 191, Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS, GRENADINES, MOHAIRS, SILKS, &c., at half the original Cost.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SLIGHTLY SOILED.—French Cambric-Muslin Dresses, 1 guinea; Silk and Satin, 2 guineas; Mantle, Bonnet, Shawl, or Sectional cover selling for 5l. 5s., 12s. 6d.; 10l. 10s., 25s.; 21l., 50s.
PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

BLACK SILKS! BLACK SILKS!
Rich, Bright, Wide, and Durable,
at 1s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.—BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

THE NEW HEADDRESS.
Velvet Bands, with Rosette and ends in all colours, 6s. 6d. and 7s. 6d. each. Post-free for stamps.
BAKER and CRISP, reviewed to 198, Regent-street.

HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL SCOTCH TARTAN CASHMERE DRESSES, 1 guinea.
ROYAL STUART TARTAN CASHMERE DRESSES, 1 guinea.
TARTAN CASHMERE DRESSES, from Silk and Irish Poplin, 2 guineas. Patterns of the Tartans and Fancy Fabrics, Patterns forwarded to the country free.—19, Regent-street (entrance corner of Vigo-street).

ELDERDOWN PETTICOATS.—These Petticoats are made from the finest down of the Eider duck, and are therefore unparalleled for elegance, lightness, and warmth. Prices and patterns on application. Directions (letter of every size) and self-measure.
W. B. DARSON and CO., 1, Maddox-street, Regent-street.

MOURNING DRESSES.—The business of JAMES SPENCE and CO. is conducted entirely on the old-established and well-known system of a Good Stock, Good Fit, and Moderate Charges. Patterns and Prices sent free to any part of the kingdom. Observe the Address, 247, Regent-street, W. (Corner of Vere-street.)

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. HAWLEY begs respectfully to Direct the Nobility and Gentry's attention to his Stock of Watches and Clocks, which he has made by special appointments to his late Majesty George IV., his present Majesty William IV., and her Majesty Queen Victoria, and to the Royal Family of France. Also to the Royal Exchange, No. 2, and 32, Cornhill, No. 2, 3, and 4, Royal Exchange-buildings, and 34, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, London.

TO BE SOLD FOR £18 18s. (cost £34), a Handsome Brougham, by HUNTING (WATCH, by appointment), in first-rate order and equal to new. May be seen at WALES and CO.'S, 98, Chancery-lane.

INVITATION NOTE PAPER, Return Visiting Cards, Address Dies, Monograms, Crests, Note Paper, Dies, Presses, Foreign Post Papers. Black-bordered Note Paper, Envelopes, Pocket-books, Diaries. Superiority of the best quality, at the lowest prices.—THOMAS DE LA RUE and CO., 110, Bunhill-row, Cornmarket-street, London, E.C.
Illustrated Price-list sent free on application.

PENCILS, Black Lead and Coloured Chalks, A. W. FABER'S
POLYGON, HEXAGON, and VENETIA, sold by all Stationers, Artists' Colourmen, and Fancy Repositories.
Agents—Heintzmann and Rochussen, 7, Friday-street, London, E.C.

TO LADIES.—GREEN TISSUE IVY LEAVES, for Trimming Dresses, Bonnets, and Hats, 1s. per yard of strip. Bruising patterns for dresses (2 yards) 10 stamps. Post-free.—BAKER and CRISP.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.
LINOLEUM, 4 yards wide, 2s. 6d. per yard.
67, 68, Tottenham-court-road. W. Cutbush, Proprietor, Chelsea, &c. of Estimates sent free on application.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO HER MAJESTY THE PRINCESS OF WALES.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
Awarded the Prize Medal 1862.

TEETH.—OSTEO-EIDON Mouth, Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—The Osteo-eidon system, such as wonders, purity of materials, accuracy, and freedom from pain, Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W. Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W. Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W. Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W. Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W. Messrs. Gabriel, the old-established Dentists, 27, Harley-street, W.

TO MOTHERS and INVALIDS.—KLAM'S ABDOMINAL SUPPORTERS, superior to shape, make, and wear, 10s. 6d., 12s. 6d., 15s. 6d., 21s., 25s. 6d. Manufactory, 7, Great Marlborough-street, London.

PIMPLES and all Unsightly Eruptions of the Skin, Redness, Roughness, and Irritation, are removed by the use of CRIMP'S ANGUS HEDGES' "SALVUS PEDIS."
Sold by all Chemists, in Pots, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each.
Britain: 106, Fenchurch-street, London.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL, prescribed by the most eminent Medical Men throughout Europe as the only effectual remedy for CONSUMPTION, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, ASTHMA, GOUTY AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, and all SCROFULOUS DISEASES OF THE SKIN, GLANDS, AND BONES.
Is thoroughly tasteless and inodorous.
Is sold only in Imperial Half-pints, Pints, and Quarts, sealed with the Government Stamp and signature.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.
DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S., Author of "The Spas of England."
"I consider the Light-brown Cod-liver Oil of Dr. de Jongh to be a very great improvement on the ordinary Cod-liver Oil, and to possess in a remarkable degree all its therapeutic agents of great value."
DR. GRANVILLE, F.R.S.
DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is not only the most efficacious, but the most economical, as it is entirely free from nauseous taste and smell, and may be taken in much smaller doses than the ordinary Cod-liver Oil, and without the inconvenience and repugnance so frequently experienced in the administration of the Pale Oil."
DR. DE JONGH.
BROWN CANTON, Esq., F.R.S.
Practical Chemist to the Apothecaries' Company.
"I have submitted Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil to analysis, and have found it to possess the valuable properties of the Pale Cod-liver Oil, in a much more concentrated form. Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil is also unclogged with a view to test their relative superiority."
BROWN CANTON, F.R.S.
DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only by respectable Medical Vendors, in Imperial Half-pints, Pints, and Quarts, at 1s., 2s., 4s., and 8s. each, or labelled with his stamp and signature, WITHOUT WHICH NONE CAN POSSIBLY BE GENUINE, by Dr. de Jongh's Sole Consignees and Druggists,
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, London, W.C.

LEFT-OFF CLOTHES.—Uniforms, Liveries, Miscellaneous Wardrobes, and Jewellery purchased to any amount, by Mr. and Mrs. D. DAVIS, of Marylebone-street, Golden-square. Ladies waited upon at their residences. Parcels sent, money orders remitted. Established seventy years.

NEW MUSIC.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASONS, No. 4, of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE contains a selection of Hymns Authentically adapted for use Sunday Look. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DIDDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 80, contains Twenty fine Songs, by Dibdin and other nautical favourites. All with Piano-forte accompaniments. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of this celebrated Opera as Pianoforte Solos is now ready, containing all the favourite subjects and better published as duets. In two books, 5s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST, with ENGLISH WORDS. This popular Opera is now ready, complete, with Italian, French, or English words, price 10s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Princes and Princess of Wales, and at the Concerts at the Crystal Palace, where it was published. 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CAMPBELL (Composer of the Rantipole Galop). Just published, extensively Illustrated. Price 3s. Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, and a New Galop, by CARDEW (Composer of the Rataplan Galop). Originally Illustrated. Price 3s.; Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNE LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, founded on all the best airs now in vogue. By D. GODFREY. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' FAIRY'S DREAM. Romance for the Pianoforte. A new edition of this charming Romance by BRINLEY RICHARDS.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR ENGLISH AIRS.
No. 1. Home, sweet Home. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. British Grenadiers. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Rule Britannia, and Britons strike home. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR IRISH AIRS.
No. 1. St. Patrick's Day. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Oft in the stilly night. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. The Harp that once. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR SCOTCH AIRS.
No. 1. The blue bells of Scotland. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Scots wha hae. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Auld Robin Gray. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just published, Kuhle's new Galop, sung by Miss Poole at the Crystal Palace Concerts, arranged for the Pianoforte. 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Osborne's new and charming Galop, arranged as a brilliant Pianoforte Duet. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from that Opera. Just published, extensively Illustrated. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Splendidly Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 5s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Splendidly Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Sidney Nelson, and sung with great success at the Ballad Concerts.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PFEIFFER'S HOMMAGE A GOUNOD. Pfeiffer's Grande Air Caracté et Marche Funèbre Sonore in "Faust," for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE FAUST POLKA. By F. WARTHEN. Just Published. Splendidly Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE POPULAR CAVATINA, in the Garden Scene of "Faust." Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves at Her Majesty's Theatre. Price 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS. Just out. Spot Song, sung by Mr. W. H. Cummings, composed by GARDEN. Price 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—The Publishers, and the best Editions at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. Post-Office order (Islington) to CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

KUHE'S SEE THE CONQUERING HERO COMES. Price 4s. (Brilliant but not difficult.) Also, Kuhle's Fantasia on "Rule Britannia," Always applauded.—CRAMER and CO., 201, Regent-street.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN NATIONAL SONG.
THE POLISH NATIONAL SONG.
THE POLISH NATIONAL MARCH.
THE QUEEN NATIONAL SONG.
Arranged for the Pianoforte, by CHARLES COOTE. Just published. Each free by post for 18 stamps.
London: BOOSEY and SON, 97, Regent-street.

NEW SONG BY CLARIBEL.
MARIONA'S SONG. Price 3s. The most popular song of this accomplished Composer. Order of any Music-seller. Published by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, Cavendish-square.
ALL CLARIBEL'S NEW SONGS, &c., on the same terms as to Sale and Exchange.

THE LAST NEW SONG.
WHEN THE SILVERY MOONBEAMS SHINE. By W. HUTCHINSON. Price 2s. A charming Song, with unbridled applause; by M. Allan Irving. Published by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, Half price, of HALE and CO., Chelmsford.

A LL NEW MUSIC SENT FREE BY POST, AT HALF PRICE, on receipt of orders, by HALE and CO., Chelmsford.

MUSIC CATALOGUE. Just published, the New and Valuable Catalogue of all the most popular Music of every Composer and Publisher. Post-free, 6d.
GUTMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, W.

MUSIC, HALF PRICE and Post-free. Any Music sent post-free at half price. All orders executed by return of post. Country Music Warehouse, 192, High-street, Portsea.—GUTMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW.—A new Weekly Journal of Music and the Drama. Price Fourpence. Contains 16 pages of Music, Part-Songs, &c., and 16 of all Newsvenders and Musicsellers in town and country, or EDIT and Co., Paternoster-row; and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

SUSAN'S STORY, by CLARIBEL, new Ballad, published this day, will equal in popularity any of this favourite Author's songs. The words are charming. Price 2s. Also, Claribel's new song, THE MESSENGER BIRD, published this day by special request. Price 2s. Lastly, I loaded each the warbler, in; My Own Love Lays, in; Shall, Children of Maggie's Farm, in; Mary Morison Polka, in; Mary Morison Waltzes, in; Mary Morison Quadrille, in; Fourth Edition of the companion song, Jessie's Bridal. Also new Editions of Claribel's Songs. Four-part Songs. Pianoforte Pieces, and Dance Music. Published by BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Tenth Edition of
FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. By CLARIBEL. The most popular Ballad of the day. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JANET'S CHOICE. Published this day, a Pianoforte Arrangement of the admired Song, "Janet's Choice," by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S MAGGIE'S SECRET.—Claribel's new Ballad, with Violin Obbligato, has reached an Encore, has been transcribed by Kuhe in his most popular manner. Price 4s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Sixth Edition of
RAPPELLE TOI. By GEORGE FORBES. The most popular Irish piano-published since "The Harper's Dream." Price 3s.; post-free.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "RAPPELLE TOI."
A STRING OF PEARLS.—Brilliant Fantasia on the Song by GEORGE FORBES. Price 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

A HAPPY THOUGHT. Morceau Elégante for the Pianoforte. By CHARLES COOTE, Author of "The Stirrup Cup." Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BY THE AUTHOR OF SALOPIA.
PASTORAL Pianoforte Piece, by CHARLES COOTE. Price 3s.—Sir Henry, Author of "Salopia" (19th Edition). Price 3s.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

A SAUCY SONG.—WHAT DOES IT MATTER? Words by HENRY SMART. Composed by her Brother, Frederick Romer. Price 2s. Also, No. 2 of this pleasant little song is beginning to be popular.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S TWELVE ANTHEMS for the CHURCH. Edited by Edward Hodges, Mus. Doc. Bassoon and Stanley. Arranged by Nordmann. Price 1s. in cloth boards, or in Four Books, 3s. each. Boosey's Anthems will be the most successful publication of all which will complete, and complete vastly fifty successors.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MOZART'S 12TH MASS, for Pianoforte. By HENRY SMART. Complete, in Results' "Global Music" by the same Composer, for 4s. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

THE HARMONIUM MUSEUM contains Twelve Numbers, price 1s. each, of Standard Compositions, with instructive introductions on playing the Instrument. By HENRY SMART. Published by BOOSEY and SONS. Also to be purchased, Part I. Sacred, 3s.; Part II., Secular, 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE HOUSEHOLD BOOK OF PSALMS, with Appropriate CHANTS, Single and Double, for Psalms and Hymns Tunes for every kind of metre, and 50 Single and Double Responses. By JOHN HULLAH. Price 2s. 6d., cloth boards. Mr. Hullah's Manuals.—Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' LIBRARY.—Two-Guinea Subscribers have the use of twelve pieces of Music in town, or twenty-four in the country, at one time, exchangeable as often as they please. Quarter of the one amount of Music.—BOOSEY and SONS.

WHARTON'S 18, 24, and 30 NEW Sacred Song. Written by F. W. Edgerton, M.B.S.L.A. Composed by J. L. Hatton. Price 2s. each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

The prettiest Drawing-room piece is
GANZ'S FOUR AIRS TOL DERIEL. Melodie-chantante. Price 3s. 6d.
A most pleasant Pianoforte Duet, by Ganz, on the elegant.—Illustrated Brevet.—HUTCHINGS and ROMER, 9, New Bond-street.

THE NEW NOCTURNE.
SENTIMENT POÉTIQUE. By IGUMO. A charming piece. Price 3s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW GERMAN VALSE.
LILLY DELL WALTZ. Price 4s. With a beautiful floral Illustration.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE QUADRILLE. Just published, Coote's Quadrille, on Airs from Shakspeare, performed, under the direction of the composer, at the Surrey Gardens Concerts, and Crystal Palace. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Septet, 4s.; Full Orchestra, 5s. "It is not Surrey Gardens Music."—Vide Times. "Coote's Quadrilles are the finest."—Vide Morning Post. "Coote's Quadrilles are the finest."—Vide Morning Post.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S EXTRAVAGANZA GALOP. Price 3s. Sound Solos, 4s.; Septet, 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Celebrated Dance Music Composer.
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA VALSES. Price 4s. Illustrated with a splendid Portrait in Colours of the Princess. Duet, 4s.; Septet, 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CORK LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing Martha Chorus, "Let us Haste," "The Merry Peasant," "Ah! Sorry to be Moving," "The Dare," and other popular Airs. A real Irish Jig for the last figure. Illustrated with Portrait of Mr. Alfred Mellon, conductor.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

A FEW COPIES ONLY ARE TO BE HAD.
COOTE'S ALBANY WALTZES. Price 4s. Illustrated with Portrait of Albany.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S NEAPOLITAN WALTZES. Introducing "Rainbow Chorus," "Torreano Farewell to Naples," "Miss Kate Rooney's" Barcarole, and "Tarantella."—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S CORK POLKA. Price 3s. One of the very best published, and will need no paper laying the instrument.—Vide Society Journal.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

ENCORED FIVE TIMES NIGHTLY AT THE STRAND THEATRE.
DOLLY PERKINS. By HARRY CLIFTON. Price 2s. Sung with great success.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

MERRY SONGS. Have you seen the new Song-book with Illustrations by Gaughan Umbrella ... 2s. 6d.
Jemima Brown ... ... 2s. 6d.
Grumpy Gaze ... ... 2s. 6d.
Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHEERY SONG. 2s 6d.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD. Duet I might fly to thee.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

HERE, UPON MY VESSEL'S DECK! By HUNT. From 3s. 6d. A most spirited composition.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

HALF PRICE.—Music sent post-free at half the published price.—CRAMER, Wood, and CO.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Opera. By G. A. MACFARREN.
"A sweet summer morning." Vocal Duet. ... ... 3s. 0d.
"The Lover's Mistake." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"The morning call Duet." Sung with Chorus ... ... 3s. 0d.
"The good old days of the Minuet." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"All is over." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Our early rights." Ballad ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! Lady Fair." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! Lady Fair." Arranged for Cornet and treble voice ... 3s. 0d.
"I can't for Pity." Romance in E flat and F ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Tis Love that makes the World go round." Four-part Song ... 2s. 6d.
"Tis Love that makes the World go round." Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"My lord of May." Ballad in D and C ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! Lady Fair." Romance in E flat and F flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! Lady Fair." Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
"She'll make me happy." Valse ... ... 3s. 0d.
Quadrille on the favourite airs. F. Berger ... ... 3s. 0d.
"I can't for Pity." Arranged for Cornet and Treble Mezzo-forte. 3s. 0d.
"Oh! Lady Fair." Arranged for Cornet ... ... 3s. 0d.
The Overture, for Pianoforte ... ... 6s. 0d.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

Quadrilles on the favourite Airs, by C. Coote ... ... 4s. 0d.
Waltzes on the Favourite Airs by C. Coote ... ... 4s. 0d.
Polka on the favourite Airs, by C. Coote ... ... 3s. 0d.
Overture, arranged by Brinley Richards, Francesco Berger, Briccialdi, Coote, &c. Price 6s.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. ASCHER'S "LE CHANT DES MAIADES" (played by Miles. Goddard). 3s.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BISHOP'S MELODIES. 3s. each.
No. 1. Home, sweet Home.
No. 2. Bid me discourse.
3. Tell me my Heart.
4. Should he upbraid.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BANDS OF GOLD. Ballad, sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. Pianoforte Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s. 6d.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

W. C. SELLÉ.—SYMPHONY OF SPRING. A beautiful Pianoforte Piece. 3s.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE CLARKES LANCERS. Set.
SWEET SPIRIT HEARKENS. Beautifully Illustrated. 4s. Founded on four of the most favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. L. HATTON'S NEW SONG.
I DREAMT I WAS A CHILD AGAIN. 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

AT VENICE. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S last Ballad. In A flat and pastoral position song.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL'S IN THE HOUSE. Song by GEORGE LINLEY. 2s. 6d. This Song will rival in popularity the "Sands of Dee" and "Maid of Athens."
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL'S GUIDE. By RENÉ FAVARGER. 3s. 6d. (A charming piece.)
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BREEZE AND THE HARP. By MISS GABRIEL. 3s. "A beautiful song, and one of the best that Miss Gabriel has written."—Vide Press.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

EARLY MORNING. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. 3s. (Beautifully Illustrated with a View of Mont Blanc.) Brinley Richards' Early Morning has been seldom successful in its setting of this pathetic ballad.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

PET MARJORIE. Ballad. By F. ROMER. 2s. (Illustrated.) Founded on Mr. R. B. Peake's popular story of "Marjorie's Fortune," sung nightly, tenderly and charmingly.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOOD, FAIRER THAN THE MORN. 3s. "Mr. Good has written a fine song."—Vide Notes & Queries. "Mr. Good's song is very fine."—Vide Press.
CRAMER, Wood, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

ENGLISH CONCERTINAS, by JOHN LACHENAL. Full Compass, with all the latest Improvements. Concertinas for Learners, from 3 to 4 guineas; Ditto for Performers, from 5 to 10 guineas. Lists free on application.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE COTTAGE, or SIX-GUINEA, HARMONIUM. Specially adapted for Drawing-rooms.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE SCHOOL, or TEN-GUINEA, HARMONIUM. Specially adapted for Schools and Lecture-rooms.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE CHURCH HARMONIUM, at 20, 25, and 40 guineas. Very powerful, and admirably adapted for places of worship of every size and description.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, by Byrne, and other makers. An immense variety, new and second-hand, for Sale, Hire, and Exchange, including instruments with Rosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' 17-GUINEA PIANOFORTE is the best cheap Pianoforte ever made. Second-hand Pianofortes, by all the best makers, from 15 to 80 guineas, and Pianofortes on the Three Years' System.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' 26-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in Rosewood or Walnut, and in Italian Walnut, in the richest, elegant case, suitable for any drawing-room. The workmanship is of the highest character, and the tone is full and rich. Size of that case, 6ft. equally fine specially distinguishes four-octave Pianofortes.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' 25-GUINEA PIANOFORTE in "Brevets," and "Cottage" Cases, is more than usually higher than the 26-guinea piano, and the tone is consequently more powerful. The 25-guinea piano is a most elegant instrument, of great power and sweetness, and all the very latest improvements.
BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street, London.

PIANOFORTE MANUFACTURERS, London, &c.—Wanted, 2 Indoor-trained Pianoforte Actions.
Tuneless Pianofortes ... ... 20 guineas.
Small Cottage Pianofortes ... ... 25 guineas.
Boudoir Pianofortes ... ... 30 guineas.
Pianofortes for Hire ... ... 15s. per month.
Pianofortes on the Three Years' Purchase System.
Cottmann and Co., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a large Stock of Pianofortes at very moderate prices, suitable for the Country, with every improvement, the cheapest Pianofortes in Europe. Due to the Country Trade. Lists free.—OETZMANN and CO.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM SUITES, in rich Spanish mahogany coats, in 3 pieces; plain tracks changes. Warranted.—IIT., Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a large STOCK of COTTAGE, semi-cottage, and full-compass Pianofortes, by all eminent makers. These instruments are beautiful in tone and action, and in elegant cases, suitable for any drawing-room. Lists free.—OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, W.

PIANOFORTES of all descriptions on HIRE, and Old Instruments taken in Exchange. Repairing and Tuning by moderate terms.—IIT., Regent-street.

BUTLER'S BRASS BAND INSTRUMENTS, E flat Cornets, Soprano, Alto, Tenor, Baritone, Bass Horns, Trombones, &c., are all manufactured on the premises and sold at prices much below any made in England. Lists, with testimonials, forwarded on application. Cornets warranted, from £10 10s. Manufactory, Haymarket, London. Prize and Illustrated price-list free.

HARMONIUMS FOR HIRE at CHAPPELL'S.—ALEXANDRE'S best Instruments—

	Per Month.
No. 1 and 2. One Stop	10s. 6d.
3. Three Stops	12s. 6d.
4. Five Stops	15s. 6d.
5. Ten Stops	21s. 0d.
6. Fourteen Stops	25s. 0d.
7. Ten Stops, Percussion Action ...	25s. 0d.
10. Fourteen Stops	42s. 0d.
11. Fifteen Stops	52s. 6d.
12. Fifteen Stops	63s. 0d.
13. Eight Stops, Two Keyboards ...	31s. 6d.
14. Twelve Stops, Ditto	42s. 0d.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.
No. 1. Three Stops, Percussion and Knee Swells ... 12s. 6d.
No. 2. Five Stops ... ... 15s. 6d.
No. 3. Ten Stops ... ... 21s. 0d.
N.B. A considerable Reduction from the above charges for Instruments taken for a Series of Months.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, in handsome carved oak cases, all genuinely reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION HARMONIUM, in handsome CARVED OAK CASE, with all recent improvements, viz., Walker's tubular pneumatic swell, knee stop, and right hand, in oak case, 70 guineas. A large assortment may be always seen at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by CHAPPELL, and all by best known makers of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, which have been taken in exchange for new, and reduced prices. Also, New Instruments of every description.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The Cheapest and Best Stock in London. Secondhand, Cottage, Grand, &c., for Sale or Hire.—50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (Registered), with Check Action, Trichord—a very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass, sleek action, and rich tone, suitable for a drawing-room. Price 50 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and cheaper Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements, 40 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, by CHAPPELL, and all by best known makers of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES, which have been taken in exchange for new, and reduced prices. Also, New Instruments of every description.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The Cheapest and Best Stock in London. Secondhand, Cottage, Grand, &c., for Sale or Hire.—50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (Registered), with Check Action, Trichord—a very elegant Pianoforte, of small size, the full compass, sleek action, and rich tone, suitable for a drawing-room. Price 50 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and cheaper Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements, 40 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, Trichord, and full compass, 40 guineas. This instrument has Three Sets of the finest-toned strings, and is the most elegant Pianoforte ever made, combining the greatest amount of tone and elastic portability with the most perfect mechanism. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and cheaper Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements, 40 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To musicians preferring the pure Italian quality of tone, this Pianoforte will be found unrivalled. Price 50 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with a moderate price. The action is of the most simple description as to touch, and the tone is of the purest Italian quality. In every respect, the most complicated action and indifferentness in many of the finest kinds of Pianofortes are entirely avoided. Price 40 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and all the latest improvements, 50 guineas; in walnut, 45 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, Trichord, and full compass, 40 guineas. This instrument has Three Sets of the finest-toned strings, and is the most elegant Pianoforte ever made, combining the greatest amount of tone and elastic portability with the most perfect mechanism. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and cheaper Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements, 40 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To musicians preferring the pure Italian quality of tone, this Pianoforte will be found unrivalled. Price 50 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with a moderate price. The action is of the most simple description as to touch, and the tone is of the purest Italian quality. In every respect, the most complicated action and indifferentness in many of the finest kinds of Pianofortes are entirely avoided. Price 40 guineas. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and all the latest improvements, 50 guineas; in walnut, 45 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, with Check Action, Trichord, and full compass, 40 guineas. This instrument has Three Sets of the finest-toned strings, and is the most elegant Pianoforte ever made, combining the greatest amount of tone and elastic portability with the most perfect mechanism. Also, a Pianoforte of the same description, but with Check Action and cheaper Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements, 40 guineas.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and BRADD, PIANOFORTES.—Manufactory of every description, including all the recent kinds by these eminent makers, for Sale or Hire, on the Three Years' System, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY, 207 and 209, Regent-street (the largest in Europe). The most extensive assortment of Pianofortes for Sale or Hire.
The quality of every instrument may be relied upon as at least equal to the description. The stock of Pianofortes is so large that anybody requiring a Pianoforte can select the kind wanted in exchange, without loss as the buyer, any time within six months, the amount paid for hire. Lists free on application, or a visit to the Gallery is invited.
Pianofortes by every maker of eminence will be found in the Gallery.

CRAMER'S SELECTION of SEMI-GRAND and SQUARE GRAND PIANOFORTES, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, Kirkman, Pape, Pleyel, Wolff, and other eminent makers, and in this assortment, Pianofortes by Broadwood are selected from the various manufactories and are brought together under the same roof, that they may be tried side by side. The prices are similar to those charged by the manufacturers themselves.
CRAMER'S Pianofortes for Hire or Sale in Regent-street, at 201.

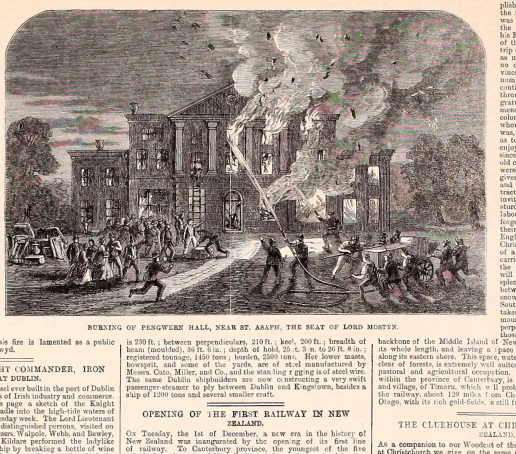
CRAMER and CO.'S SELECTION of SECONDHAND PIANOFORTES is by far the largest to be found in this country. Instead of the ordinary manner of an assortment of Pianofortes, which is generally a collection of cast-off instruments, which have been sent to the best makers. Cramer and Co. have but three of the purest tone and the most perfect mechanism in their hands as depositories of the very highest quality that it is possible to produce. Many of these instruments are equal to new, and the difference in price between which Cramer and Co. offer their second-hand pianofortes and those of the usual description, is the great advantage of a more varied selection than can be found elsewhere, Pianofortes for Hire, Purchase, or Exchange.—201, Regent-street.

THE Best 50-GUINEA PIANOFORTE that can be had of CRAMER'S new Pianoforte Gallery, 207 and 209, Regent-street.—Cramer and Co.'s Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe) is the best place to select from.

THE Best CHEAP PIANOFORTE is CRAMER'S new Pianoforte, with check action, trichord treble and metallic plate, 35 guineas.—Cramer and Co.'s Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe) is the best place to select from.

THALBERG'S GRAND PIANOFORTE. This magnificent Instrument, manufactured by Messrs. Erard, and selected by M. Thalberg as the best adapted for this country, has been purchased by Cramer and Co., and is universally admitted to be the finest Pianoforte ever imported into England. Cramer and Co. have also a great variety of second-hand Pianofortes in stock, by all the most popular manufacturers. The tone has great volume, superior with great sweetness, and the touch is perfection.

CRAMER'S CHECK-ACTION COTTAGE. Price 42 guineas.—This beautiful instrument is of the smallest size, with the full compass of seven octaves, and has the check action, trichord treble, and metallic plate. The tone is full and rich, combined with an elegance of design, quality of wood, and general appearance, which renders it a most desirable Pianoforte for a drawing-room. Cramer and Co.'s Pianoforte Gallery (the largest in Europe) is the best place to select from.



CRAMER'S NEW SQUARE PIANOFORTE GALLERY (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

CRAMER, Wood, and CO.'S GENERAL STOCK of HARMONIUMS is one of the most extensive and varied to be found in any establishment in the world.
Second-hand Instruments of all kinds.
201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ARTIST'S CONCERTINA, manufactured under the immediate superintendence of Mr. Richard Higgins. In purity of tone, delicacy of touch, mechanical excellence, and general finish, this instrument is unrivalled. The system of fingering is the same as that of the best Pianofortes, and retains their perfect tuning in any climate. Price 12 guineas, including case.—Cramer, Wood, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

PENGWERN HALL, ST. ASAPH, THE SEAT OF LORD MOSTYN.

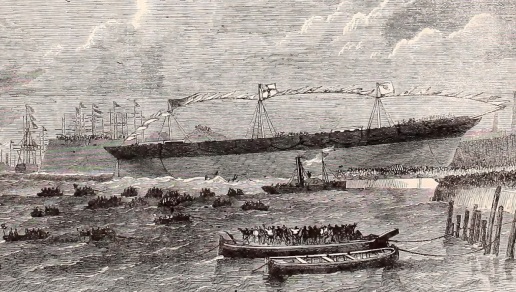
A SKETCH of Pengwern Hall, in Flintshire, which was destroyed by fire a week or two since, is herewith engraved. This mansion, one of the noblest in the Vale of Clwyd, was the residence of the late Lord Mostyn, but has, since his death, been occupied by his brother, the Hon. T. P. Lloyd. It was built, in 1787, by the first Sir Edward Lloyd, uncle to the late Lord Mostyn, and great-uncle to the present Lord. Its situation is very beautiful, in a thickly wooded park. The house was partly of Corinthian architecture, but with a certain originality in the design of its front. It contained not only a great deal of costly furniture, plate, and jewels, but many choice paintings—Dutch, Italian, and English—besides the rare and valuable library of Welsh records and MSS. known as the Mostyn Collection. Fortunately, these treasures are for the most part saved. The fire having broken out at four or five o'clock in the afternoon, hundreds of people soon hastened to help in putting it out, or in getting out whatever they could, and a lady of the family, Miss Lloyd, of Cefn, who resides not far from Pengwern, is said to have shown extraordinary courage, by entering the burning house over and over again to fetch some cherished heirlooms of the house of Lloyd. The Hon. Mr. Lloyd and Miss Lloyd are much esteemed in the neighbourhood for their benevolence, and this fire is lamented as a public calamity throughout the Vale of Clwyd.

BURNING OF PENGWERN HALL, NEAR ST. ASAPH, THE SEAT OF LORD MOSTYN.

LAUNCH OF THE KNIGHT COMMANDER, IRON STEAM-SHIP, AT DUBLIN.

THE launch of the first large iron vessel ever built in the port of Dublin is a noteworthy event in the progress of Irish industry and commerce. We have therefore engraved on this page a sketch of the Knight Commander, as she glided off her cradle into the high-tide waters of the Liffey, on the morning of Wednesday week. The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, with a large company of distinguished persons, visited on this occasion the building-yard of Messrs. Walpole, Webb, and Bewley, North Wall. The Marchioness of Kildare performed the ladylike office of "christening" the young ship by breaking a bottle of wine upon the bows. Next moment the "dog-shores," or props by which the vessel was upheld, were knocked away, and she gracefully descended into the river, saluted by the guns of H.M.S. Ajax and by the cheers of 20,000 spectators. The Knight Commander belongs to Messrs. Carlyle and Geddes, of Liverpool, and is intended for the Calcutta trade. Her keel was laid down in January, 1863; but it was necessary to go to work several months before that time, in order to form the ground upon which her building was to take place, for which purpose, by driving in piles for an embankment, a space was reclaimed from the swampy bottom formerly covered by every tide. Sheds and workshops were erected on the artificial shore, where about three hundred Irish workmen have been busy for the last twelvemonth, under skilled English and Scotch shipwrights or engineers, in building this fine iron steam-vessel. Her length over all is 230 ft.; between perpendiculars, 210 ft.; keel, 200 ft.; breadth of beam (moulded), 30 ft. 6 in.; depth of hold, 20 ft. 3 in. to 20 ft. 8 in.; registered tonnage, 1450 tons; burden, 2500 tons. Her lower masts, bowsprit, and some of the yards, are of steel manufactured by Messrs. Cato, Miller, and Co., and the standing rigging is of steel wire. The same Dublin shipbuilders are now constructing a very swift passenger-steamer to ply between Dublin and Kingstown, besides a ship of 1200 tons and several smaller craft.

OPENING OF THE FIRST RAILWAY IN NEW ZEALAND.



ON Tuesday, the 1st of December, a new era in the history of New Zealand was inaugurated by the opening of its first line of railway. To Canterbury province, the youngest of the five principal settlements of New Zealand, belongs the merit of having been the first of them to introduce the railway locomotive and the electric telegraph. The sketch by Mr. R. Kelly engraved on page 241 was taken on the occasion of the opening of the first portion of a line which is eventually to connect the seaport town of Lyttelton with the town or "city" of Christchurch, the capital of the province, distant only six or seven miles from the port, at the head of the great Canterbury Plains. The line, when complete, will include a tunnel 2880 yards long, under a range of hills 1200 ft. in height, by which the harbour of Lyttelton is almost surrounded, so as to be shut out from the town of Christchurch and from the interior. This tunnel was commenced two years and a half ago, and, under the able and indefatigable superintendence of the resident engineer of the line, Mr. E. Dobson, about half the length has been successfully accomplished. The ceremony of opening the first portion of the railroad was performed by his Honour the Superintendent, who, with his Executive and other members of the Government, made the first trip down the line. The event, as may be supposed, was one of no ordinary interest to the province, and drew together a large number of the inhabitants. Trains continued to run up and down throughout the day, and afforded gratuitous rides, as well as immense amusement, to crowds of colony-bred young people, to whom a ride in a railway-train was, perhaps, a novelty; as well as to many others, who had not enjoyed that mode of conveyance since they emigrated from the old country. The day's festivities were crowned with a dejeuner given by Messrs. George Holmes and Co., the enterprising contractors, to which more than 500 invited guests sat down. The sturdy Maoris, too, who had laboured as "navvies," were not forgotten, but were regaled by their employers in good old English style. The Lyttelton and Christchurch line is the beginning of a system of railways, to be carried to the north and south of the Canterbury province, which will open up millions of acres of splendid alluvial plain that lie between the coast line and the snow-capped ranges of the Southern Alps. Our Engraving takes in a distant view of those mountains, which, covered with perpetual snow, and as high as those of Switzerland, form the backbone of the Middle Island of New Zealand, traversing almost its whole length, and leaving a space of some fifty miles in width along its eastern shore. This space, watered by many rivers and quite clear of forests, is extremely well suited, at least in Canterbury, for pastoral and agricultural occupation. At its southern extremity, within the province of Canterbury, is the rising port, or roadstead and village, of Timaru, which will probably become the terminus of the railway, about 120 miles from Christchurch. The province of Otago, with its rich gold-fields, is still further to the south.

THE CLUBHOUSE AT CHRISTCHURCH, NEW ZEALAND.

As a companion to our Woodcut of the opening of the new railway at Christchurch we give, on the same page, an Engraving (from a photograph by Mr. John Elsdon, photographer, of Christchurch) representing the Christchurch Clubhouse, which was built in 1861, from the designs of Mr. Mountfort, a colonial architect, and which is the best edifice of its kind in New Zealand.

THE GRAVE OF COMMODORE BURNETT.

THE wreck of H.M.S. Orpheus, which foundered upon the bar of Manukau Harbour, in the northern island of New Zealand, about a twelvemonth ago, a commemorated by the tomb of Commodore Burnett, C.B., erected in the cemetery of Auckland, at the expense of the surviving officers of that ship, and others who have served under him. We have received from one of our correspondents in

LAUNCH OF THE KNIGHT COMMANDER, IRON SCREW STEAM-SHIP, BUILT AT DUBLIN.

New Zealand a photograph of this monument, which is shown in our Engraving on page 241. The cemetery of Auckland is situated but a quarter of a mile out of the town, and has a southern aspect. In the background of our View is Mount Eden, an extinct volcano, from the summit of which there is a most extensive and beautiful prospect of the green and fertile country around, with the eastern and western shores of the narrow isthmus, between Auckland and Manukau, to which the island is here contracted. The inscription on the upper part of Commodore Burnett's tomb is as follows:—"Sacred to the memory of Mary Burnett, who departed this life on the 19th December, with 22 officers and 167 men, in the total loss of H.N.S. Orpheus, on the Manukau Bar, New Zealand, on the 7th February, 1863." On the tombs are inscribed these words, "Erected by the officers of her Majesty's ship Orpheus to the memory of their late commander." And on this side of Commodore Burnett's tomb is our Engraving, is the grave of Captain Hay and the Gilbert Islanders gallant young officer who was killed in a fight with the Maoris at Pukekohe, on the Waikato River, on the 15th of September last.

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF FEMALE ARTISTS.

We could not, if we would, conceal the fact that the exhibition of the Female Artists' Society in the Egyptian Hall of Piccadilly is a failure, retrograded rather than advanced. The retrogression is, in truth, an inevitable and reverse reply of the progression which preceded it so low, that we are compelled to ask the question, Is this society, after the fair trial it has had, likely to be benefited in the class it was originally designed to encourage. If we are to answer this question with perfect frankness and honesty, and with a sincere desire to befriend these lady artists in their best interests, we must reluctantly say that we believe it is not calculated, as at present conducted, to be of any real service.

In the first place, there are so few works worthy of being regarded as models for imitation, that one may almost say that the society solicites to artists contributing to them—the advantage of affording comparisons between the efforts for excellence of artists of both sexes—is necessarily lost. In the next place, a very large proportion of the contributions are of that class which, in the amateur performances of amateur ladies whose position in society places them far above the necessity of studying art sternly as a means of gain or as a taking professional rank. Of course, if this were confessedly an amateur exhibition no objection could be taken to the character of the pictures. But it is to be apprehended that many works by females, who are not of necessity amateurs, and by no means of the same rank, do not receive fair consideration, either from the lack of space, or from the lack of the necessary qualifications in the amateur hangers. Certain it is that a large number of professional ladies, and even those who are not of the amateurs, have successively ceased to contribute to this exhibition, and that the list of the present year contains the names of but ordinary exhibitors. Many even of the so-called members and honorary members of the society are not represented on the walls. And it we dare only slightly upon our mercury, we find no longer represented the names of several of the original founders, as Miss Mutrie, Miss Rosa Bonheur, Mrs. Thornycroft, Miss S. Durant, Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. E. Bury (now more widely known as Miss Eliza Fox, in Water Colours), the Hon. Mrs. Boyle, Lady Eastlake, Mdme. Melchior, Mrs. S. Bartholomew, Miss Fanny Corbaux, Miss Florence Claxton, Miss Florence Fox, Mrs. Anna Mary Howitt, Miss Frederica Bremer, Miss Lance, Mrs. Nattali, Mrs. Higford Burr, Mrs Newton, Miss Mary Moseley, Mrs. Anderson Critchett, Miss Cole, the Misses Pattrick, and others equally noteworthy. Surely there must be some powerful reason for all this. It is not that the eminent female artists, and those who look to their professional position for a maintenance, are unwilling to aid the society by their close exhibitions, the loss may be ruinous to the society, for it will have found its proper place in the estimation of the public, and we believe it will be no permanent injury to those who say that it be supported by its sufferers. We have already said that if the work of any female artist has sufficient merit to offer the first exhibition and sale it will be received and considered, nay, indubitably, hang on the walls of any exhibition of the society.

Having, as the first duty of our position, given a word of plain, though we trust not uncourteous, warning to the management of this exhibition, we must now beg the reader to believe that, though the average merit of the pictures exhibited is not of a high order, the exceptions sufficient in number and interest to repay a short visit.

Foremost among these is a picture, No. 25, by Mdme. Schewanig Goll 'buying her Wedding Dress,' exhibited in the British Institution, which we reviewed last year. This picture is to be noticed would form an apt companion or pendant to that just named for it epitomises a whole story. The scene is laid in some Dutch court and from the same seafaring population, "buying their Merchant." The poor widow is weeping bitterly, and the young women hasten to assist and serve her with their sympathy. Technically, this picture has rather foreign than English characteristics and its chief merits are good composition, freedom of execution, and great loudsomeness. The management of the light throughout claims, indeed, very high praise. The arrangement of the local colours and colour and the incorrect foreshortening of the head of the widow. A portrait by the same artist (418) has great truthfulness of drawing and colour. Nevertheless, Miss Kate Swift already takes a high place among our female artists, and her works on the present exhibition is open to her. By a sister of this lady, Miss G. Swift, there is a characteristic picture (No. 27) of a Dutch interior, 'Minding Nets.' Miss Birgette Neumann sends a little picture of "A Dame's School" (No. 178), which, though a little heavy and unattractive at first, improves greatly upon acquaintance. The old woman's head is good in expression, is indicative of nice sentiment of execution, and is finished, but not overfinished, with a due possession of the homely figures and interior—not forgetting a quaint, cupboard-like window. Another small picture (No. 179), 'Sunday' (1793), by Mdme. Peyrol, exemplifies the excellent qualities which this lady (Mrs. Bonheur) possesses with the peculiarities which her style also belongs. An effective little work is Miss Emma Brownlow's picture of a 'Gentleman's Cabinet,' with a small child at the door of it afraid to slip into the "trouc des pauvres," and entitled "On Thoughts of Country Interest" (No. 180). Miss Mutrie's picture of a female figure promising "Desolation" (181), though somewhat unpleasant and sensational in its exaction, is indicative of nice sentiment and elevation of style. Other of the pictures we must pass over at a more sorne with red deer (169) by Miss Lefroy; two Eastern views (187 and 188) by Mdme. Peyrol; painful and high Art, by Miss Rosa Maine; landscapes showing the influence of the Williams' school, by Miss C. M. Graham, Miss A. Jones, J. W. Jones, and Miss Emma Brownlow, rendered with much truth of effect by Miss A. Dundas; and a view, by Miss Louisa Corbaux, of the large cemetery of Père la Chaise, near at knowle (269), with its ancient casements and carved wainscoting, pointers, and old furniture. This work has improved greatly during some years, and its low tone may induce the visitor to pass it by without due justice to its truthful drawing and faithful colouring. This same painter is a large contributor of water-colour drawings, all of which, from 'Lost Chord' (the illustrations suggested) was of body colour to give stone textures, their extreme effectiveness of light and shade, and general facility, are among the most artistic works in the room. A large "View of Rome" (No. 1), taken from a lofty subject, the reader will exclaim), with the massive towers of St. Mary Maggiore, and the heights of the Sabine hills in the declining shade, is remarkable for its grasp of broad gradations and masses of shadow. The same may be said of another work by Miss Lichfield Cathedral" (77), the artist-haunted "Terrace at Haddon" (111), the "Mouth of a Welsh Bay, Caernarvon" (112), and "Ullswater" are rendered with equal spirit and facility.

From among the drawings of figure-subjects we should select as the work of most merit and promise the study of a head, entitled "Evangeline" (167), by Miss Eliza Martin. Some rare though not the most obvious qualities are traceable here. The refined and appropriate expression of this face is that of a susceptible which is almost pathetic in intensity. The drawing, the modelling, and the manner of execution are all to be highly commended. Miss Adelaide Burgess is also admirable in expression, as witness her "Beggars" (44), and "The Broken Lily" (78), although, to account for the intense grief of the girl at her broken flower, one must perforce imagine that some other associations have pointed her grief, young as she is. The sweetness of this artist's colouring is seen to advantage in the drawing of a girl seated on an old-fashioned settee, entitled "Sweetmeats of a Berlin wool" (100); unfortunately, however, this special charm is qualified by the great extreme of colour in the "stippling" of the flesh. Mrs. Backhouse has, as usual, much vigour and purity in her coloured studies of children, of which we may mention one that bears the title of "Sweetmeats" (No. 6) and another entitled "Gipsy" (91).

In the department of still-life there is always enough and to spare in this exhibition to fix the attention of the most indifferent visitor's attention. A group formed by a silver pastile-burner against a purple curtain, a vase of flowers, and a few miscellaneous artistic objects of gold and bijouterie in a drawing (128) exhibited by Miss L. L. Dodd, is one of the best. The flowers are, indeed, very beautiful colour. There is good feeling for colour, too, in the fruit pieces, "Fruit" (No. 29), by Miss Duprez; "Fruit" (No. 30), by the same primary requisite, in this kind of work, is to be found also (together with much delicacy of execution) in the flower pieces by Miss Fitzjames. There is a study, by Miss Sophia Beale, of a red herring, in a willow-pattern dish, standing on a knotted deal table (56), which, in the rhetorical effect of its subject, is perhaps not the least remarkable thing in the room. The wedgy, watery sky in "Rocks near Hastings" (125), by Miss Mary Gow, is by no means her to be possessed of some imaginativeness as well as courage and delicacy. Miss Mary Ann Mutrie's picture (No. 126), 'Group of flowers; the magnolia, peony (called "the Red Admiral" from the butterfly alighting on it), and other flowers,' is, like her sister's, very powerfully executed, but which strike us as not quite so free and pure as some former studies from Nature by this lady. We have marked for more or less favourable notice—though our space admits of no further particulars—the following pictures:—Miss Howitt's 'Wayside Greeting,' and the Misses E. Partridge, A. H. Laird, M. Gastineau; Bouvier, Seymour, and Miss Cloverdell. We must, however, spare a final word of special commendation for the excellent drawings by Miss Fraser, illustrative of six of Hans Anderson's "Fairy Tales" (229).

Messrs. Howell and James, of Regent-street, are about to publish a host of fabulous birds, which, we presume, are intended to be sensed under the sanction of the London and Stratford-on-Avon Tercentenary Committees, will, doubtless, be "Shakspearian." The drawings, executed by Mr. Felix Miller (who executed the model for the bust of the Princess of Wales), are clever, and the birds, which are Game Fowls, and copies in different sizes will be obtainable in ceramic statuary, French and Italian terra-cotta, Parian, &c. Judging by Mr. Felix Miller's "portraits of Shakespeare," very properly come to the conclusion that no single representation of any great poet is to be accepted as entirely satisfactory. The author's "portrait" is, perhaps, the least so; we should have some latitude for idealising a genius so exalted. The designer of the bust of Shakspeare for the Stratford-upon-Avon Committee has given us a large head, with a massive forehead, but it is the most satisfactory effigy for popular distribution which has hitherto appeared.

The council of the Royal Horticultural Society invite sculptors to contribute works of art to the International Exhibition at South Kensington. Purchasers will again be made by the society to the value of £50.

A movement is on foot to replace the Drumclog monument to the Scottish Covenanters by a more suitable and permanent memorial.

Mr. R. J. Wyatt, who recently returned from Rome, has great pictures of London and Paris at the Collesseum, and who re-painted the pictures of Rome, Venice, Florence, and Naples, in Baker-st., has been engaged for some months at the Crystal Palace on an exact reproduction of the ancient Egyptian temple of Rameses the Great, Abou-Aron, to be placed on a large stage in the centre transept of the palace, and about which the performances of the Royal Italian Opera will take place. It is also intended to make within the house, an exact full-size representation of the tomb of the same king, and that of the room below, and to place there as many Shakspearean relics as can be collected.

The exhibition of Mulready's pictures and drawings at the South Kensington Museum will open on Saturday next.

There will be no picture exhibited by any associates at the Royal Academy until the proposed modifications in the constitution of that body shall have been effected.

Mr. Morton Edwards has executed a bust of the Prince of Wales, which is to be carved in marble for the city of Toronto.

The friends and admirers of the late William Behnes, the eminent sculptor, are anxious to erect a suitable tablet to his memory over his grave at Kensal-green Cemetery, and to procure a bust of the deceased for presentation to the National Portrait Gallery or other institution. Subscriptions are received by Messrs. Coutts and Co.

The monument to the late Sir Benjamin Hall, Bart., the secretary of the late Sir G. Cornewall Lewis is, we understand, to be from a design by Mr. John Gibbs, architect, of Oxford.

MUSIC.

We have nothing to add to what we have already said respecting the performances of the Sacred Harmonic Society in Covent Garden, both of which, as English opera-houses, are on the eve of closing, to be followed, immediately, by the season of the Lyceum. Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. Harrison retire definitively from Covent Garden, their places being filled by Mdme. Lemmens Sherrington and Signor Gardoni. The latter artist has, we believe, in contemplation the prosecution of their theatrical enterprise no information has yet been given to the effect that they have announced a concert tour in the provinces, beginning at Leamington on the 28th inst., and terminating in Dublin on the 26th of April. Their company is to consist of Mdme. Lemmens, Mr. Harrison, Signor and Mdme. Marchesi; M. Lotto, the violinist; and Mr. George Perren, the pianist and composer.

The Philharmonic Society has begun its fifty-second season. The first concert took place on the 15th ult., instead of on the usual night, on Monday last, Feb. 29. That being the birthday of Rossini, who has completed his seventy-second year, a performance of his music was only once in four years—it was determined to mark the occasion by making the greater part of the concert consist of a selection from the works of the composer. The programme, accordingly, principally included two of his finest overtures—"Semiramide" and "The Siege of Corinth"; and all the vocal pieces were from his pen. They were the grand aria, "Ricsh al soglio," from "Zelmira," sung by Mdme. Rudersdorff; the duet, "Ah! Matilde," from "Guillaume Tell," by the same lady; the tenor air, "Cujus animam gementem," from the Stabat Mater, sung by Signor Gardoni; the bass air, "Deh! calma," "Rosecrona, O cara," from "Guglielmo Tell," sung by Mdme. Parepa and Mr. Lawler; the duet, "Ah! quanto paventai," from "Semiramide"; a MS. symphony by Cherubini, composed expressly for the Philharmonic Society, and performed for the first time; the pianoforte concerto in D minor, performed by Mdme. Arabella Goddard; and a trio in C minor, by Mozart, for the same lady, and two pieces, admirable in themselves, were as admirably performed, and the audience expressed their satisfaction with extraordinary warmth. Cherubini's symphony, a composition of merit, if it was written about forty years ago, when the author was in this country. It was never published; and the score, in the concerto (one of the most charming of his works) was received with the enthusiasm which the appearance of this unrivalled pianist never fail to excite. She was applauded to the echo, and when she had repeated the brilliant finale, received the most unequivocal marks of favour. Mr. Cooper's oboe solo was executed in a masterly manner and deservedly applauded; but it was too long, and the oboe, though an excellent orchestral instrument, lacks variety in a solo performance. The singers were eminently successful in Rossini's vocal pieces. Mdme. Parepa sang with a power and brilliancy which no prima donna of the day has ever surpassed; and Mr. Lawler, Mr. Cooper maintained his reputation as a sound and excellent artist. Altogether, this was one of the best and most successful concerts ever given by the Philharmonic Society, a concert which gives auspicious augury of the season now begun.

At the Monday Popular Concert, the same evening, Arabella Goddard, who had been playing the Philharmonic audiences at the Hanover-square Rooms, again delighted the audience at St. James's Hall by her exquisite performance of Mendelssohn's pianoforte sketches, entitled "The Lake, the Millstream, and the Fountain." These beautiful little descriptive pieces, so full of graceful fancy, were applauded to the echo. In other respects, the concert, also, was highly agreeable, including, as it did, a quintet of Mendelssohn, a trio of Beethoven, and a quartet of Schubert, Beethoven, Haydn, and Mendelssohn, sung by Mdme. Rudersdorff and Miss Banks.

The first trial by the Sacred Society of Musicians this season of new orchestral compositions by members of the society took place on Wednesday evening, the 24th of February, at the concert-room Rooms. This, we think, is one of the most important objects accomplished by this society. A great obstacle to the progress of young composers in the present day in this country is the extreme difficulty they experience in obtaining a hearing for their essays in composition, especially when they are of any length or importance; and this great help the society affords them. Of new compositions submitted to the council by the members, a certain number, consisting of those which appear to possess the largest amount of merit, are selected exclusively for trial, and are performed with the utmost care by a magnificents orchestra. Thus they receive every justice, and those which show real merit and excellence are afterwards given at the public concerts of the society. At the trial last week the pieces performed were an Andante, by Adolph Gollmick, a concerto for the flute, composed by Mr. C. G. Macfarren, and played by Mr. Pratten, and a symphony in E "Sedymion," by Miss Alice Mary Smith, a lady associate; overture in A, "The Bridal Wreath," by E. Aguilar; overture to a comedy, by E. Howell; and a symphony in A, by C. A. Barnett. In every one of these pieces we can truly say that its merit entitled it to the honour of being given at the concerts of the society. Mr. Gollmick's symphony gave ample proof of his knowledge of the works of the great masters, and especially Haydn and Mozart, from the last he has taken for his models in form and style. Miss Alice Smith's overture to "Sedymion" is a composition by a lady of talent, and one of the musical art seldom cultivated by composers of her sex. It is fresh, elegant, and graceful. Mr. Macfarren's flute concerto, as a composition, we need not speak. He has long since "won his spur;" but Mr. Radcliffe, who played it, gave promise of being a performer of the highest order. Mr. Aguilar's overture in B flat minor is a comic opera not yet brought on the stage, but possessed of merits which can scarcely fail to secure success. Mr. Howell's overture is work—as overture to a comedy—is light, sparkling, melodious, and full of spirit. Mr. Barnett's symphony, consisting of members of the society and invited visitors; and the performance of these trial compositions, by the same orchestra which plays at the Rev. Frank Mori. was a pleasant and interesting evening's entertainment.

THE THEATRES.

PRINCESS'.—On Saturday Shakspeare's eccentric "Comedy of Errors" was revived at this house, under the "the Keeleys." It was an opportunity of astonishing the London public, as they had already astonished many provincial audiences, with the perversion of the two Dromios. Our readers are aware that this early and primitive play is an adaptation of the "Menæchmi" of Plautus, and abounds with the mistakes which arise from the resemblance of two pairs of twins. Shakspeare presents us with the plot with more than his usual improbability, and nowhere makes an effort to reduce its pressure. But, instead of this, the poet supplies a psychological reference by way of explanation, the subtlety of which is characteristic of Shakspeare's mind. In the events of the story he supposes an inner relation to the character of the twin brothers, and the two sets are born, also, distinguished by strange contrasts—domestic love and a roving spirit; and out of these contrasts arise the wife and their misfortunes—their troubles and their quarrels—their congenial sympathies and their personal attractions. Shakspeare, in these circumstances, makes explicatics, notwithstanding their outward similarity. Their love of wandering is exhibited in their adventures, and their misfortunes in adventures accordingly. To these contrasts Shakspeare has added a personal attendant to each brother—one of them a fool, and the other a tender, devoted woman. With these preliminaries we may better understand the scheme. The drama is not complete. To bring the details of the piece more closely together many reductions have been made, and the whole is presented in one act, no doubt to the advantage of the piece. At the end of the curtain. The similarity of the two Dromios is so decided, in consequence of the costume, that Mrs. Keeley and Mr. Charles Mathews and Mr. Henry Webb, that the audience failed manifestly to distinguish one from the other, and thus the supposed together at the conclusion of the play. From the want of that close resemblance between Mr. Keeley and Mr. Webb, the Antipholus of Syracuse could not be in like degree identified with the Antipholus of Ephesus, and the same may be said of Mrs. Keeley and their husbands. The doubt injured by abridgment in its higher qualities, and made to partake more of the character of a burlesque than it did of old. Mr. and Mrs. Keeley were regards it as a farce; but his dictum is rightly disputed by Gervinus, who properly points out that the comic parts of the piece are not to be separated from the thoroughly poetical, which, however, so far from interfering with the extravagant scenes in the two pieces, serve to render them the more extravagant. Nevertheless, as he insists, it appears monarchy with sufficient importance to introduce the two Antipholuses and the Dromios of a mere farce, of which, to adopt his words, "the kernel as well as the shell consists of the most external and loose similar twins." Further observes that "the hostilities between Syracuse and Ephesus form the farthest possible background, and that, as the picture begins to be drawn, the comic parts of which can scarcely be considered more fanciful and exciting than the rest of the piece." That the esthetic significance has been so far disturbed may be admitted; and we much regret that in this year of Shakspearean celebration the poet's works should be presented as a mere farce, and nothing more. But, on the other hand, an acceptable adaptation has been produced, illustrated with some beautiful scenery, and rendered with a strong impression of humour. One of the two Dromios, so marvellously identified in the persons of the brothers Webb, is, we are happy to say, above that "farcical" The performance was unequivocally successful and was received with irrepressible laughter. The "Comedy of Errors" will in effect very be improved if Mr. David Fisher were placed in the part of Antipholus of Ephesus in place of Mr. Charles Mathews. Mr. Nelson, both in appearance and manner, than Mr. Vining; and the closer resemblance would be of considerable advantage.

HAYMARKET.—Mr. Sothern, owing to an accident, has been for a short time disabled; but on his return to the stage was desirous of signalising the event by appearing in a new character. This he has done in connection with a new piece, written by Mr. H. T. Craven, and entitled "Home for Good." The piece is composed with the manner of an entertainment rather than a drama, and consists entirely of one visible part. The scene is laid in a room in a house in Manchester, in the action being "voices, and nothing more." Buncum Muller is a wealthy Manchester man, who has a propensity for imitating the manner of the immortal dramatist, and has written divers pieces with titles similar to those of his productions, which, of course, the managers will not accept. His shrewish wife has locked him in his chamber without his dinner, and to beguile the time he apostrophises a bust of Shakspeare and tells the tale of his grievances. Opposite his own window resides a certain Julia, whom he had loved and ought to have married, but that in a desperate mood he wedded in spite the virago who now made him the most wretched of men. A pistol which he handles considerably, and the contents of which he sometimes enter the opposite window, from which he fancies that Julia is observing his motions. The idea that he may have wounded her is beginning, we believe, to be relieved by information given to him by a policeman that the shot has only perforated a mahogany chest. Further relief also comes, for Mrs. Bunkum's first husband is discovered to be living and anxious for reunion, the lady being likely to come into some property. He is now free to confirm his attachment to Julia, who, in a postscript to a carelessly read letter, has accepted him, and is further made more happy by his tragedy having been accepted by Mr. Beckstone. The curtain then falls to rise again and show Muller in the act of repeating one of the speeches in his accepted play to the host of Shakespeare's characters, with the tempt the a cloak so as to resemble a resplendent figure. The situation, with the fanciful language of the speech, provoked much laughter from the audience, and brought down the curtain finally with applause.

THE FARM.

We are gradually drifting into spring at last, and therefore we may hope ere long to see more signs of activity on the farm. Live mowings and the disgust of the speakers at the Malt for Cattle Bill. But for that and little else at St. Albans. The Duke of Richmond did not have got over such a trying, ungenial winter. The Aldermen must have made no small impression on the London Corporation, for the letters from the correspondents of the local papers seem to have quarrelled about him and his "huge bargain" with scarcely any contradiction. Even the local orators have pounded him into a jelly active ever since, and the after-dinner hour of next.

and subsisted on him in their after-dinner hour of next.

The Agricultural Gazette records the success of the Steam Plough Company at Wakefield, and it is well that, at a time when so many large concerns of a similar kind are coming to grief, they should have such a prosperous beacon before them:—"A capital of £2200 has been raised in £1 shares, and during the first year 1865 the profits amounted to the past year, and £113 11s. 5d. in oil, repairs, and management charges, there remains a balance on hand of £1,000 11s. 5d. This is available for a dividend. A dividend of 7½ per cent has accordingly been declared, leaving £150 7s. 5d. in hand. The profits for the year 1865 will be given in the first instalment towards the formation of a reserve fund to provide for the replacement of the plant when it is worn out. Another instalment will be carried to the reserve fund, which will no doubt be needed during the next half-dozen years."

The Steam Plough would seem to have made a controversial bit at last when they leave themselves ready to prove that the contending engineers of the Royal Agricultural Society's meetings, and are professionally engaged by more than one of the exhibiting firms. This is essentially unfair, and proper, and we have no doubt that public curiosity to see how the council will deal with it.

The Shrewsbury meeting next season will open with one of the most remarkable weeks on record, as between Tuesday, March 13, and Tuesday, March 20, no less than fifty-five (a round 50 is the number in the first editions of the catalogues) will be brought inside the noses and stakes for encounters open to all comers. Of very high repute and stakes for encounters open to all comers. Of very high repute are Tregonwell Frampton and Washburn. Mr. Wetherell gets the first battles of Farringdon and Mr. Henry Smith's, of Eton, the second battle, with nearly fifty bead, at Henley Smith's, of Eton, the second battle, with nearly fifty bead, at Henley Smith's, of Eton, the second battle, with nearly fifty bead, at Henley

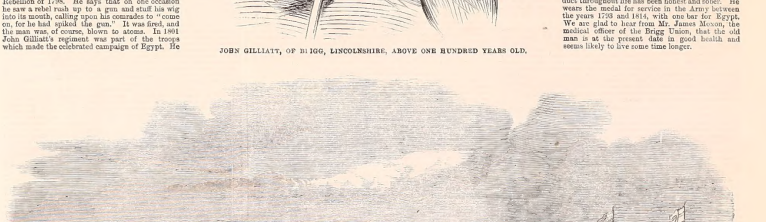
HINDOO BATHERS IN THE RIVER JUMNA SURPRISED BY A SNAKE.

HINDOO BATHERS SURPRISED BY A SNAKE.

LARGE water-snakes abound in the canals and nullahs flowing into the Jumna about Delhi. The scene here represented is not uncommon in that part of India. A peculiar fearlessness or recklessness of danger is characteristic of the natives; it is the same quality which has often prompted them to attack a leopard or, in some rare instances, even a tiger, single-handed, and with only a lathee or long stick for a weapon; or to mount a savage, bare-backed horse, the rider himself without any covering but the small dotee or waist-cloth. In the instance here depicted the native will swim after the snake several hundred yards in midstream, with a strong current. Paddling hand-over hand, as a dog swims, which is the common method of swimming used by the natives in India, he at length comes up to his chase, when a fierce battle ensues. In the scene sketched by our Artist the man was wading in a shallow part of the river. The scene is very animating and exciting for the snake, when hard pressed, will turn and show fight; but he is usually killed without inflicting more injury upon the man than temporary loss of breath and exhaustion. These snakes are often 6 ft. long, and their bite is very severe, though it is not venomous.

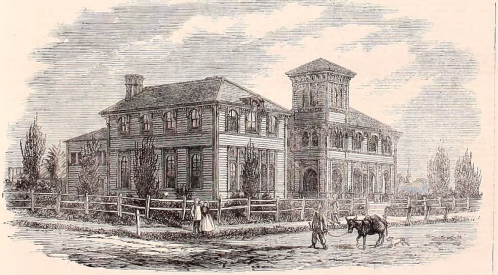
CATTLE-LOOTING IN SCINDE.

THE practice of cattle-stealing still flourishes in the hill districts of northern India. Our Illustration shows a party of these predatory mountaineers, who have made a descent upon the villages in the plains belonging to another tribe and are driving off all the cattle they can lay their hands upon, to the utter ruin, in most cases, of the poor owners thus violently despoiled. It is but a few weeks since the mountaineers of the Murree Hills, on the frontiers of Scinde and Beloochistan, near the Bolan Pass, made an extensive raid into Cutch and the district of Gundava, where they were very successful in their cattle-lifting operations, having carried off 500 head of cattle and 800 camels. This exploit seems to have emboldened them; for Major Green, the acting political superintendent on the frontier, reports, in a letter to the Commissioner of Scinde, that a strong body of the marauders, some mounted and some on foot, had since attacked the village of Foolgeee, and were driving off all the cattle in the place; but some 300 men of the Mungbals and Khybereen had been sent in pursuit, and would, it was hoped, recover a portion of what had been taken and give the cattle-stealers a wholesome lesson for the future.



CATTLE-LOOTING ON THE FRONTIER OF SCINDE.

THE CENTENARIAN, JOHN GILLIATT.



THE remarkable veteran whose portrait is herewith engraved, from a photograph taken the other day by Mr. Empringham, master of the Brigg Union Workhouse, in Lincolnshire, was born either at Waltham, near Grimsby, or at Caistor, in the county of Lincoln, according to his own belief, on Plough Monday, in the year 1761. If he be right in this date he has attained the age of 103; but, from some inquiries which have lately been made, it appears that he was baptised in the parish church of Waltham, on the 1st of February, 1767. In his early manhood he was pressed into the Navy, and served on board the Dictator, 74; the Trusty, and another ship which he calls the Invincibles. He does not seem to have remained long at sea, for about 1791 he enlisted into the 7th Dragoons. This regiment being sent into Holland, he there went through the campaign of 1793, under the Duke of York. On one occasion, in a personal conflict with a French cavalry soldier, he lost the middle finger of his left hand, as shown in the portrait. The old man has often told anecdotes of this campaign; and particularly how the soldiers of his regiment converted their buttons into a coin which they called "the Duke of York's currency," and so passed them off to the country people as genuine money. When this fraud was discovered, and the regiment was paraded before the Duke, there was scarcely a soldier who had a complete set of buttons on his coat. He says the Duke rode down the line and, when he had finished his inspection, shook his fist at them and, in a half-laughing way, said, "You rascals! I can call you anything but cowards; but don't do it again!" Having been discharged from the Dragoons in consequence of the injury to his bridle-hand, Gilliatt returned to Lincolnshire, and lived at Caistor with his parents. But a pressgang visited the house in pursuit of him, so that he had to leap out of a window and run away. To escape a forced service in the Navy, he enlisted into the Army once more. As a recruiting party of the 3rd Regiment of Guards was fortunately in the town, he ran to their quarters and was accepted. He soon joined his regiment in London. Being sometimes on guard about the palace, he was more than once familiarly addressed by King George III. and Queen Charlotte. His regiment was ordered to Ireland, where it remained five years, engaged in suppressing the Rebellion of 1798. He says that on one occasion he saw a rebel rush up to a gun and stuff his wig into its mouth, calling upon his comrades to "come on, for he had spiked the gun." It was fired, and the man was, of course, blown to atoms. In 1801 John Gilliatt's regiment was part of the troops which made the celebrated campaign of Egypt. He well remembers their landing from their boats, in front of the sand-hills, on the shores of Aboukir Bay, the rapid formation into line, and the charge which defeated the French. He went through the whole campaign, receiving only two wounds. Once he was struck on the head by a musket ball, which ploughed up his scalp and knocked him down; but, says the old man, "I jumped up and fired twenty-five rounds after that;" and once he was struck on the hip by a fragment of shell or stone. He was near Sir Ralph Abercromby when that General received his wound, and he remembers seeing the white-haired veteran commander bleeding, yet still on horseback, some time afterwards. He has frequently related, with tears in his eyes, how Sir Ralph then said to his soldiers, "Stand firm, my lads, and I can die happy." After the regiment had come home John was invalided and pensioned on account of his partial blindness, caused by the heat and sand of Egypt. In his discharge, dated 1804, John Gilliatt was stated to be forty years of age when he left the Army. He suffered but little from his wounds, and his eyesight became, in a great measure, restored. He returned to his old trade, that of a bellhanger, and entered the service of a Mr. Harrison, of Sleaford, with whom he remained forty-two years. He married, and had two children, who died, however, in childhood. When too old for work he became chargeable to Scawby, in the Brigg Union, and was sent into the Brigg Workhouse about eighteen years ago. There he remained eleven years, until the late Earl of Yarborough kindly made him an allowance, which has been continued by the present Earl. Our Portrait of old John gives a good idea of his appearance. The sight of one eye has been lost, and that of the other is very defective; but his hearing is nearly as acute as ever; he has teeth enough to masticate his food, and his appetite and digestion are good. He lives upon the ordinary diet of men of his class, and is fond of a glass of ale and a moderate quantity of spirituous liquor. He has been a smoker since early manhood, and will now consume from three to four ounces of tobacco a week. When in his prime he stood 5 ft. 8 in., but he does not now measure more than 5 ft. 2 in. He has been a remarkably strong, well made, and good-looking man; with a large, round chest, well-knit frame, and powerful limbs; and has scarcely ever known what it was to be out of health. His conduct throughout life has been honest and sober. He wears the medal for service in the Army between the years 1793 and 1814, with one bar for Egypt. We are glad to hear from Mr. James Moore, the medical officer of the Brigg Union, that the old man is at the present date in good health and seems likely to live some time longer.

JOHN GILLIATT, OF BRIGG, LINCOLNSHIRE, ABOVE ONE HUNDRED YEARS OLD.

OPENING OF THE FIRST RAILWAY IN NEW ZEALAND, AT CHRISTCHURCH, CANTERBURY PROVINCE.—SEE PAGE 237.

THE CHRISTCHURCH CLUBHOUSE, CANTERBURY, NEW ZEALAND.—SEE PAGE 237.

THE GRAVE OF THE LATE COMMODORE BURNETT, LOST IN H.M.S. ORPHEUS, AT MANUKAU, NEW ZEALAND.—SEE PAGE 237.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE.

3rd Dragoons: General C. S. Wather; to be Lieutenant-General.
4th Dragoons: Major E. W. Hunnybun; to be Colonel.
1st Lancers: Brevet Major R. T. Dunlop; to be Lieutenant-Colonel.
7th Hussars: Cornet A. T. Hutchinson; to be Lieutenant.
8th Hussars: Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. C. Cocks; to be Second Captain.
Rifle Brigade: Cornet J. Wells, Esq., to be Lieutenant.
Grenadier Guards: Ensigns and Lieuts. A. J. B. Henry, Esqrs., Fellows of Adeln, to be Lieutenants and Captains, vice Lord Arthur Hay, promoted.
Coldstream Guards: Ensigns R. Chetwynd and Hon. Hugh Lowther, to be Lieutenants and Captains, vice Hon. C. Bagot, promoted. Ensigns and Lieuts. Hon. Hugh Lowther and Hon. Hugh Dawnay, to be Lieutenants and Captains, vice Hon. C. Bagot, promoted. Ensigns and Lieuts. Hon. Hugh Dawnay, Hon. Hugh Lowther,

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

LADY CHARLOTTE BANKES.

Lady Charlotte Elizabeth Bankes, whose premature and lamented death occurred suddenly, on the 22nd ult., at her husband's rectory, Corfe Castle, Dorset, after she had given birth to a girl four days previously, was the eldest daughter of John, second Earl of Eldon, by his wife, Louisa, daughter of Charles, first Lord Farnborough; and was great-granddaughter of the Lord Chancellor Lord Eldon, first Earl of Eldon, and sister of the present Earl. Her Ladyship was married, on the 9th of October, 1856, to her cousin, the Rev. Edward Bliss Sutton Bankes, third son of Henry Bankes, of Kingston, and son of the Rev. Edward Bankes (of the family of Bankes, of Corfe Castle), Prebendary of Gloucester and Rector of Bere Regis, by Eric Lady Huntingtower, now Jane Scott, younger daughter of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Eldon. Lady Charlotte Bankes was in her twenty-ninth year. Her Ladyship leaves an infant family.

SIR CHARLES WAKE, BART.

Sir Charles Wake, tenth Baronet of Courteenhall, in the county of Northampton, was the eldest son and heir of the late Sir William Wake, by his first wife, Mary, only daughter of Peregrine Edward Cust, first Lord Brownlow, and sister of the present Earl of Derby of Sir William Wake, Bart., M.P. for Northamptonshire. He was born on the 21st of November, 1791, and was educated at Eton and at Christ Church, Cambridge. He succeeded his father, as tenth Baronet, on the 15th of January, 1841. He married twice; first, on the 21st of August, 1815, his cousin, Mary Alice, daughter of the Edward Bliss[1], but by her (who died on the 3rd of September, 1816) he had no issue. Sir Charles married, secondly, on the 1st of June, 1822, Charlotte, second daughter of the late Sir Thomas Cullum, Bart., and by her (who survives him) he leaves six sons and a daughter. His fourth son, the Hon. and Rev. Courtenay Wake, Rec., in holy orders, is distinguished as having, while magistrate of Arundel, held the office of Mayor of the College of the Purbeck house against the Sopor nuisance in 1857. Sir Charles Wake died on the 31st ult., at his residence in Portman Square. He was succeeded by his eldest son, the present Baronet, who was born in 1949, and married, in 1851, Margaret, eldest daughter of Edward Stilwell, Esq., of Southampton, and has a youthful family of sons and daughters. Although the name of this family occurs in the Roll of Battle Abbey, it claims a known descent from Hereward Wake, the Saxon hero of the Isle of Ely, who married, in 1070, with Hereward's rule, placed in the institution by Duke William in the same year. The Wakes of the ancient house (Hereward's Lake) successfully opposed and made terms with the Conqueror. A later and immediate ancestor was Sir Baldwin de Wake, Knight, who fought gallantly under the Black Prince at the battle of Najera. Among his descendants were Archbishop Wake, in 1716, Archbishop of Canterbury; and his representative in the beginning of the seventeenth century, Sir Baldwin Wake, was created a Baronet in 1621. His son Sir John Wake, the second Baronet, was devoted Cavalier: the latter mortgaged his estate to help Charles I. He was the ancestor of the Baronet just deceased.

SIR WILLIAM WINDHAM DALLING, BART.

Sir William Windham Dalling, second Baronet of Burwood Park, Surrey, was the eldest son (by his second wife, Louisa, daughter of Sir Thomas Sutton, Bart.) of Sir John Dalling, Bart., Chief Justice of Bengal, and afterwards Governor and Chief in the Carnatic, created a Baronet on the 11th of May, 1838. He was born in the year 1800, and entered the Army, where he became a Lieutenant-Colonel in the 2nd Foot Guards. He succeeded to the Baronetcy, on the death of his father, in January, 1758, and has this and the dignity for more than a century and a quarter. He was High Sheriff of Norfolk in 1839. He never married. He died at his seat, Lansdown House, Bath, on the 16th ult. Sir William's two younger brothers are both in holy orders. The eldest, the Rev. Sir John Dalling, succeeds to the title; the second, Sir Edward Dalling, is Rector of Bishop's Cannings, and has a numerous family. He married, in 1851, Sir William's only sister, Louisa Frances, daughter of the late Rev. Mrs. Robert Meade, are also both deceased. As Sir William leaves no male heir, the Baronetcy of Dalling becomes extinct, and the old surname of the Dalling family (formerly of Pitfield, Co. Bucks, and of Great and Little Grand Surrey) Dalling, in the county of Norfolk, passes away. The Dallings had occupied the estate of Pitfield, in Buckinghamshire, with a hundred years ago, of John Dalling, Esq., of Bungay, grandfather of the Baronet just deceased, with whom, however, he seems to have had no connection. Burnham House.

BISHOP GILLIS.

The Right Rev. James Gillis, D.D., Bishop of Limyra, Vicar Apostolic of the Eastern District of Scotland, died suddenly, through not titularly, Roman Catholic Bishop of Limyra, was a native of the Highlands, and his mother, Mr. Gillis. His father was a native of the Scottish Highlands, and his mother was a French Canadian, a connection of the late much respected Bishop Carruthers, and since that excellent Prelate's death he has been himself Vicar Apostolic of the Eastern district of Scotland. Dr. Gillis, the deceased great general accomplishments and highly polished manners. His best friends admitted that he was somewhat impulsive, but his errors of judgment and shortcomings were always forgiven him in opinion. He was eminent as an orator and preacher, not only in English but perhaps more in French. So highly was the eloquence of his French sermons appreciated that he was lately selected by the French Bishops to deliver before the Emperor Napoleon III. the discourse on the occasion commemorating the Fête de Sainte Geneviève. Prelate died on the 24th ult. By his demise the Roman Catholic Church in Scotland is deprived of a prelate of singularly great and extensive influence, and the general Edinburgh public loses a very amiable and worthy citizen.

MAJOR-GENERAL WILLIAM SUTTON, C.B.

Major-General William Charles Sutton, C.B., commanding Bengal and Dower, who died recently, after a long illness, aged fifty-six, entered the British Army in 1825, as Ensign and Lieutenant in the 16th Foot, and served in the Burmese war of 1824-26. At the commencement of the latter war he defended the village of Kemmendine, on the Irrawaddy, with a party of sepoys, against an attack from the Burmese, who, numbered 6000 strong, advanced, holding the rank of Brigadier-General, throughout the operations in the north of China, in 1842, and was present at the capture of the Bogue forts, the Chinese advance on Tien-Tsin and Pekin, and the battles of Sept 18, and 21. He had received the war medal for the Kaffir War of 1846-47, with clasp for Seven Fountains, and was made a C.B. for his conduct in China. He rose through the various grades, and became a Major-General Dec. 11, 1862.

MISS LUCY AIKIN.

Miss Lucy Aikin, a lady of considerable note in the literary world, died at Hampstead, on the 29th ult., in the seventy-fifth year of her age. She was the niece of Dr. Aikin, the well-known physician, and sister of Dr. John Aikin, who was also a medical writer, and a friend of Dr. Priestley. Miss Aikin's first production was a volume of poems, published in 1810, and she subsequently published a number of works, chiefly historical, including the rank of Brigadier-General, throughout the operations in the north of China, in 1842, and was present at the capture of the Bogue forts, the Chinese advance on Tien-Tsin and Pekin, and the battles of Sept 18, and 21. He had received the war medal for the Kaffir War of 1846-47, with clasp for Seven Fountains, and was made a C.B. for his conduct in China. He rose through the various grades, and became a Major-General Dec. 11, 1862.

MISS LUCY AIKIN.

Miss Lucy Aikin, a lady of considerable note in the literary world, died at Hampstead, on the 29th ult., in the seventy-fifth year of her age. She was the niece of Dr. Aikin, the well-known physician, and sister of Dr. John Aikin, who was also a medical writer, and a friend of Dr. Priestley. Miss Aikin's first production was a volume of poems, published in 1810, and she subsequently published a number of works, chiefly historical, including "Memoirs of the Court of Queen Elizabeth," which appeared in 1818, and was followed by the Life of Addison, in 1843. Miss Aikin has also been recently engaged with materials for a memoir of her father, Dr. John Aikin, which she did not live to complete. She was the author of the well-known essay on "The Inconsistency of Human Character," and of a number of other productions, which, though not of a high order, were always marked by good sense and good feeling. Miss Aikin was a zealous supporter of the movement for the improvement of the condition of women, and was a member of the Committee of the Ladies' Institute. She was unmarried, and lived with her brother, Dr. Arthur Aikin, who survives her.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

I. H. R.—The fault of a King being left without any of his men does not exempt him from the penalty of checkmate.

J.—Your position is not sufficiently intelligible. Send a diagram of the position.

Inverness.—We regret to say that we cannot find room for the solution of Mr. Kemp's Problem, No. 1044.

W. H. Gossip.—With regards as to style that the name of the chief prize-winner at the Liverpool Tournament is Mr. Mackenzie, and not Mackenzie, as printed in No. 1042, page 207, column 2, line 3 from bottom.

Constant Reader.—With the best play on both sides, the result would probably be a drawn game.

T. W. of Hull.—Upon carefully examining Mr. Lowenthal's problem, No. 1039, we believe it to be sound, though the solution is somewhat complicated. Mr. Lowenthal's K. B. P. is thought that the daughter of

F. G. Morton.—Bristol.—Messrs. Hemsoe published by Kent and Co., Paternoster row.

A. Z.—The best book for beginners is Staunton's.

F. G. Morton.—Bristol.—Messrs. Hemsoe published by Kent and Co., Paternoster row

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN. LUCILE. The celebrated Hymn, for the Piano forte. Price 3s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S DANISH NATIONAL AIR HYMN. Price 3s. "One of the most effective and best Hymns we have seen."—Musical World.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S LAST NEW PIECES. Rosalie, the Prairie Flower. Price 3s.
Monthly, monthly over the snow. Price 3s.
Ye stones to be a duet. Price 3s.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN SOLOS, with accompaniments for Pianoforte. Price 3s. each.
No. 1. Home, sweet home.
No. 2. Last rose of summer.
No. 3. Blue bell of Scotland.
No. 4. The Harp that once.
No. 5. Hope told a flattering tale.
No. 6. The harp that once through Tara's halls.
London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE TUTOR, price 4s. "This is decidedly the most useful and best Instruction Book we have seen."—Musical World.
London: J. WILLIAMS, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S GEORGIANA VALSE, Illustrated by J. BRANDARD. Price 4s. Solo and Duet, Orchestra, &c.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S CHRISTMAS CAROLS, Price 3s. Solo, 3s. Duet, 4s. Septet, 4s. Orchestra, &c. (Postage-free.) The beautiful Quadrille Bands on Christmas subjects are published in THE LILLIPUTIAN MUSIC.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S IDA VALSE, Illustrated by COLONEL BRANDARD. Price 4s. Solo and Duet, Orchestra, &c.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S REAPER VALSE. Illustrated in Colours by J. BRANDARD. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, &c.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S ABERDEEN C. QUADRILLE. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price 4s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, &c.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S TOPSY-TURVEY GALOP. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, &c.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S FANTAISIE DE CONCERT on "Robin Adair" and "Coming Home, My Love." Price 4s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S MY LODGING IS ON THE LONELY MOUNTAIN. Price 3s. Easy, but brilliant and effective.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S THE CAPTIVE GREEK C. GIRL. Transcribed for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE FRIEND'S GIFT.—A Collection of the most Popular Airs, Hymns, arranged in a very easy and pleasing manner, and fingered for the Piano. By J. BRUNNER. In 12 Books (Nos. 1 to 6 Ready). Price 1s. each.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and Cheapside-hars.

THE SPIRIT OF THE AGE. "Like a fresh breeze of the waters," sung nightly by Miss Emily Spiller's "Minstrels," at the Egyptian Hall. Words by CHARLES BARNARD. Price 3s.—J. WILLIAMS, Holborn-hars, and Cheapside.

HANDICAP GALOP by ERNEST HANDLEY, price 4s. The highest-class Galop that has been performed by all the military bands in the United Kingdom.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE PICKET OF THE POTOMAC, by MARY S. HENRY. 4s. net.
The beautiful and touching words of this song were found in the pocket of a young soldier who was killed on the picket line of the Potomac river, on the second night after the battle of Bull Run.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S BEL DEMONIO G. Orchestra, 4s. Duet, 4s. Solo, 3s. Played nightly at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE BOLD MARCO, Sung by M. Forbes in the popular drama The Bandit's Bride, at DROURIAM. Made by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Price 3s. 6d.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S SABRA VALSE, slightly played at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden. Price 4s.—London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-hars; and 123, Cheapside.

REMINISCENCES OF SHAKESPEARE, for the Pianoforte. By C. W. GLOVER.
No. 1. THE FOUR AGES OF MAN.
2. HAMLET.
3. MACBETH.
With highly finished Chromolithographs. Price 3s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE AVON QUADRILLE, by F. WALLERSTEIN, on the most favourite Airs introduced in Shakspearean Plays; with beautifully illustrated titlepage, by TAYLER. Price 4s. Solo and Duet.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS OF
THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS.
Where would you be?—Price 2s. 6d.
Beneath the weeping willow ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Nelly Gray ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Weeping, sad and lonely ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Dooley's painting at the door ..... Price 2s. 6d.
The Relics of the police ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Twenty.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS by POPULAR COMPOSERS—
Away," Virginia Gabriel ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Sweet Spirit, hear my prayer," Virginia Gabriel ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Oh, can't you hear me, Mary Ann?" Virginia Gabriel ..... Price 2s. 6d.
The Shepherd," Miles Cary ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Sweet Spirit, hear my prayer," F. Wallerstein ..... Price 2s. 6d.
Home! Home! Sweet Home!" F. Wallerstein ..... Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S OTELLO (Prière and Romance). Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S LE NOZZE DI FIGARO and DON GIOVANNI. Transcriptions for the Piano. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S QUI LA VOCE. Transcription (facile) of the favourite Cavatina from "I Puritani." Price 3s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Third Edition. With Portrait and Autograph. Price 1s.
IT IS THE HOUR.
LEARN SOON.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, 9s. 6d.! Weighs 6 oz., is achromatic, and as strong that ships, houses, trees, &c., 12 miles distant, appear close at hand. Sent free by post for 9s. 6d., and when used as a landscape glass it extends on a twenty-five inch range. Address, "Reconnoiterer," Post-office, Charing-cross, Charing-cross.—You never see an article that so completely answered to maker's recommendation."—H. P. Barker, Esq., Farnley, Otley.—"Your Reconnoiterer is a treasure."—Rev. J. Lee, Ashton-on-Mersey.—"I am pleased with them."—From a report by the Head Gamekeeper of the Marquis of Breadalbane.—"The accuracy of price is not secured at the cost of efficiency."—Sunday Times.—"Its powers will bear comparison against all the glasses possessed by the members of the corps, and it is the best glass I have ever had."—Capt. Hall, Rifle Brigade, Glen Shiel, Inverness-shire.—"Your Reconnoiterer, the Prince Glass, showing bullet marks at 1200 yards, 12s. 6d. These Glasses are the best I have ever had."—Lieut.-Col. Hall, Rifle Brigade, Glen Shiel, Inverness-shire.

THE PLANETS and DOUBLE STARS seen by a new Telescope for £5, which will also distinguish the cost of a ship at sea, the time of day, the name from letters, &c., at public-house fire mills, and make open a sealed letter, and all other objects at a distance. Sent free by post for 5s. 6d. in stamps or nothing, to perfect vision, and if not so, the money returned. The most important reports to telescopes saying £50. It has a hole-in-the-centre eye-piece, and is a perfect Galileo. Sent free by post with strict private advice, and other particulars, and eight sheets of paper for a diagram, with other particulars, and eight sheets of paper for a diagram, with other particulars, and eight sheets of paper for a diagram, with

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1249.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, MARCH 12, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES BILL.

NOTHING so easily and effectually puts the optimist believer in the English character into a passion as an insinuation that the people of this country are not absolutely capable of self-government. If a too-watchful Minister hits an administrative blot in any matter not under the immediate supervision of the State, he is as nearly as possible denounced as a traitor to one of the great principles of British liberty, and he is accused of endeavouring to bring about a system of centralisation, and to be a secret but active agent on behalf of something like despotism. The latest offender in this sense is the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, having brought in a bill of very modest dimensions which enables the Government to hold out to the purely industrial classes the means of obtaining annuities and the advantages of life insurance on the most moderate scale, for which the State gives security, has suddenly found himself in the very centre of a horde of supporters of certain alleged vested interests. The minor insurance offices and the friendly societies are up in arms against an attempt on the part of the Government to do well and securely for the working classes that which they have attempted to do for themselves, and in too many instances lamentably failed to effect, if nothing worse. An organised opposition—a suggestive phrase, and well understood by a certain class of agents of the most general capabilities—has been pitted against the scheme of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, finding himself at bay, has turned and literally ripped up the system with which he proposes to compete.

On Monday last Mr. Gladstone stated his case, and in a speech which was cognate to that famous intellectual effort last year in which he laid bare the weaknesses and the iniquities which have intruded themselves into the system of endowed charities, left to the most assured of his opponents but one argument, and that almost ad misericordiam—namely, that in a matter of such importance time and opportunity for the most ample consideration of his measure should be given. The object of the bill is to afford to the purchaser of a small annuity, or to the provident working man who seeks the benefit of life insurance, a security which is now attainable only by the comparatively wealthy. Even at the present time, when societies for life insurance are included practically, if not avowedly, in the speculative schemes of the day, it is in the power of a man of comparative wealth to select from a goodly number which are in existence an association for the insurance of his life, which has been for many years so managed that it counts its accumulations by sums which stand for hundreds of thousands, and even of millions, and therefore holds out as good a security to its policy-holders as is possible in institutions established on commercial principles. With ordinary discretion, no man of any but the highest or the middle class need incur any risk in the matter of life assurance. It is, unhappily, far otherwise with those whom, for want of a better phrase, we call the poorer classes. They, as a body, are far from insensible to the benefits derivable from associations which enable thrift and providence to reap their ultimate reward. Accordingly, friendly societies and benefit clubs, applicable to age, sickness, and death, abound throughout the country, and, on the face of them, seem to supply a demand which is highly creditable to those who make it. A class of smaller insurance offices, which spread like a network over the whole country, agencies, comes in to afford facilities for such provision as prudent men of industrial pursuits are able to secure for their families: and it would also appear on the surface that all that is needed is in actual operation; and that it is only the coercive, the unthoughtful, and the spendthrift, in every rank of life, who do not acknowledge in practice the philanthropic efforts of a number of more or less disinterested persons who have set their mind and hope for the future to every homestead in the country. What the real state of the case as regards the humbler classes is let the speech of Mr. Gladstone tell.

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: HIGH-STREET, HADERSLEBEN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

Into the painful details of that most valuable exposition it is not necessary to enter. Suffice it to say that it was shown to demonstration that the majority of the associations which hold out inducements for the investment of the savings of the humbler classes are based on fallacious principles and are mismanaged in many instances; and the fact is patent that every year some—in truth, a great many—of them collapse, with results to the confiding members that are only too obvious. No one ventures to deny this; not even those half-interested persons have a grate loudly about interference with the right and the capability of the working classes to manage their own affairs in reference to a matter in which self-government is positively absurd. For all these associations to be managed by a few officials—can deny that a state of things exists which demands a remedy. It may be that the measure proposed by Mr. Gladstone is not the best remedy; but, whether it come into operation or not, the public mind will have taken a vast deal of good. The comparatively feeble opposition to the bill in its discussion on Monday night was based on the ground that its immediate operation—nay, the effect of its discussion—would be the destruction of a number of the existing societies and insurance associations. It seems to us that this is an admission of the whole case against those institutions. Their existence on sufferance and fallibility are therefore not gainsaid. It cannot be said that such of them as will topple over before the blast of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's speech are not practically fraudulent receivers of the poor man's hard earned savings. Some of them, more or less short, will disappear amidst the crash of associations to which they are committed. Is it not, then, an absolute mercy to make quick work of such unstable concerns, and to prevent their going on a little longer on the "tick" towards ultimate dissolution. At least there would be gained this advantage, that the loss of the contributors would stop where it is: and those who have the heart and the courage to retain their prudent habits under the assurance of pecuniary loss and discouragement as most inevitably come upon them would have an opportunity of beginning again in a new institution which not only holds out but positively affords the blessing of security.

As we have already intimated, it is possible to argue that the proposition of Mr. Gladstone is not perfect as a cure for an acknowledged evil of no common magnitude. It may be open to the charge of being a violation of the principle of political economy, non-interference by the State in personal transactions; but the question is, whether the interference of Government is not as justifiable in this instance as in the case of the Factory Act, for example, where the necessity of helping those who were unable to help themselves has induced Parliament to interpose and to set aside a principle which is justly dear to all Englishmen? It is clear that a great social and moral evil exists which can only be met by legislation; and, certainly, the legislation which is proposed in the bill of Mr. Gladstone is of the gentlest and least aggressive character. To use his own language, the measure prohibits no man from doing anything, but only furnishes facilities for that "self-help" which so eminently characterises our industrial classes, and which at present is to too many instances a mere empty sound, and that in a refuge to which the provident man amongst the humbler classes can resort when he becomes conscious that he has been the victim of a fallacious and delusive system of investment.

With the round, safe, and long-established assurance societies the Government measure cannot possibly interfere. It cannot affect or influence legitimate transactions in the least degree: but it can do much to diminish the confessed evils connected with institutions spread over the country, which are ignorantly, carelessly, and even fraudulently conducted, which absorb the contributions of the members in agency and expenses of management, or a few practically irresponsible managers of which, as has been shown in several instances, squander them on their feastings and pleasures. We believe the time which has been granted for consideration and inquiry, and, as it has been said with a certain grim humour, to produce an answer to the statements of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, will give opportunity for proof of the monstrous evil which is spread over the whole country; and that in the result the main objection to the measure of the Government will be, not its sweeping character, but its actual inadequacy to the necessity of the case.

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

THE HIGH STREET OF HADERSLEBEN.

On our first page this week is engraved a sketch, by our Special Artist, of the principal street of Hadersleben, when the Prussian and the allied Prussian and Austrian armies. This town, which is situated on the north coast of the Baltic Sea, on the eastern coast of Schleswig, has a population of about six thousand souls. It is nearly built on a small island, connected by bridges with the other portion of the town. Hence it was anciently called the Venice of Denmark, and the Danish poets have displayed among the heraldic insignia of the town. Its municipal privileges formerly included the right of coinage, and in the chaotic period in 1270, the Duke of Schleswig allowed this community to be governed by its own laws. Its commerce, which, on an ample share of those vicissitudes which have befallen the whole province, was unduly under the supervision of Denmark. Since 1830, when great improvements were made in the harbour, the maritime trade of Hadersleben has much increased; and it is likely to profit by the extended communication of the country from Flensburg northward, pursuing through Hadersleben into the province of Jutland.

ROAD LEADING BEYOND MARSHAL WRANGEL'S HOUSE.

Our Artist has sketched another scene in the streets of Hadersleben, which is engraved on page 249. The Prussian Commander-in-Chief, Field Marshal Wrangel, on Wednesday week, issued the following (see next week), lodges at the hotel of Jürgen Ruhen, where he is nightly serenaded by a male quartet club. The house immediately opposite, on Gabilen, also resides in this house. The band shown in our Engraving is playing in front of Marshal Wrangel's house.

CHAPEL AT GRAVENSTEIN, USED AS A BARRACK.

In our Journal of Feb. 27 was an Engraving of the outside of the Castle of Gravenstein, on the Island of Alsen, at the Flensburg Fiord, where Prince Frederick Charles of Prussia has established his head-quarters, while preparing to attack the Danish fortifications at Duppel. We now give, on page 249, a Sketch of the interior of the chapel, by our Artist, of the interior of the chapel, which in these days has been converted into a guard-room for the Prussian soldiers. A group of them seated at the altar seem to be writing letters to their friends.

DISTRIBUTING MEDALS TO THE AUSTRIAN TROOPS AT HOSTRUP.

The Sketch, also by our Special Artist, at page 249, is from the Chapel at Gravenstein, was taken at Hostrup, a village five miles from Hadersleben, upon the occasion of presenting the medals to the Austrian Brigade Gondrecourt, for their good conduct during the battle of Oversee, when the Austrians drove the Danes in the act of fastening the medal to the coat of one of the Austrian soldiers. An Austrian orderly officer, Count Caboga, stands at his left hand, or a little behind, exactly in the centre of the picture. At the left hand corner, beside the table, are several of the Austrian Staff.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Archduke Maximilian and the Archduchess Charlotte, his wife, arrived in Paris on Saturday last, and went on to the Tuileries, where they were received by the Emperor and Empress. According to the Moniteur, the Archduke's acceptance of the Presidency of the Mexican crown is certain, and the final reply to the deputation only is now forthcoming.

The Pacha of Egypt having expressed his desire that the serious differences existing between him and the Viceroy of Egypt's Consulary should be referred to the Emperor, on the understanding that both parties should be bound by his decision, the Emperor has consented to examine minutely all the points at issue and submit the results to him. The names of the commissioners are M. Thouvenel (chairman), Mallet and Suin, senators; M. Gouin, Minister Plenipotentiary Ivirne Corps; and M. Duvergier, Conseiller of State.

The regimental manœuvres of the Imperial Corps L'Guidatif took place on Tuesday. M. Stevenard, the Opposition candidate, obtained a majority.

Marshal MacMahon, Duke of Magenta, is to command the camp of Châlons this year. He has been in command for the preceding years, of two divisions of infantry and one of cavalry, with the requisite artillery and engineers. He will be assisted by part of the Staff and the Army Works Corps. The Generals appointed to command divisions are Bourbaki, Lebrun, Ladmirault, and Bourbaki for the infantry, and the Prince de la Moskowa, Aide-de-Camp of the Emperor, for the cavalry. General Fapol is to command one of the brigades.

The flock of alpacas presented by the Government of the Equator to the Emperor are now at the Zoological Gardens in the Bois de Boulogne, and, having recovered their appetite, enjoy excellent health.

The Senate has been prorogued, and on the 15th the Corps Législatif will close its session. M. Stevenard, the Opposition candidate, obtained a majority.

The sum realised for Eugène Delacroix's works and sketches exceeded anything ever known before.

France has just lost another artist in M. Alaux, of Bordeaux, a member of the Institute, and a distinguished painter of historical subjects.

The racing season of the present year in France commenced on Sunday, at the Champ de Mars, Bordeaux.

M. Champanhet, of Shanghai, has been appointed Postmaster-General of China.

SPAIN.

Senor Mon, the new Prime Minister, has made a statement to the Congress in which he declared that the Queen had given the constitutional question satisfactorily, with the co-operation of the Cortes. The Duke of Tetuan, the Minister for Foreign Affairs, the Council brought in a bill abolishing the Constitutional Reform Act of 1858, which was carried by a majority of 100 votes against 50. The bill in the first is for the suppression of electoral offences, the second regulates the Parliamentary disabilities of public functionaries, and the third proposes the appointment of Mayors of towns by the Crown.

News received from St. Domingo reports that the insurgents are everywhere discomfited. They have not the means of proceeding their movement any longer.

ITALY.

The Emperor Napoleon has sent a reply to an address of the National Italian Society, forwarded to his Majesty on the occasion of the anniversary of the battle of Solferino, congratulating him as follows:—"Such attempts cannot change my sentiments towards your country. I shall always take the honour to which you refer to its just evidence."

Letters from Rome of the 2nd inst. state that a fight took place in the Forum on the previous evening between Pontifical and French soldiers. Several were wounded on both sides. General de Montebello has given orders to surround the neighbouring Pontifical barracks. The French and Roman authorities have respectively organised patrols and taken measures for keeping order. One account says that both parties were pelted by the Roman populace.

The trial of Cipriano La Gala, and the other brigands arrested on board the French vessel in Genoa, is now proceeding before the Court of Assize of Naples. The evidence discloses some shocking revelations with regard to the cruelties practised by the band to which these miscreants belonged. Witnesses mutilated in a ghastly manner have appeared to bear testimony against the prisoners.

The Turin papers relieve statements of the concentration by Austria of large bodies of troops in Venetia.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The elections to the Folkething, the Representative Chamber of the Rigsraad, are going on in Denmark, and the Copenhagen candidates returned are all thorough-going Liberals and Nationalists, favourable to the most energetic prosecution of the war. In the parts of Schleswig not occupied by the Austro-Prussian troops the elections to the Rigsraad are also stated to be going forward.

The President of the Council of State, in addressing his constituents, has again declared that he would never consent to a dismemberment of the union between Schleswig and the monarchy.

The newly-appointed Commander-in-Chief, General Gerlach, has issued the following proclamation to the Danish army:—

Soldiers!—His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to intrust me with the command of the army assembled here. We are opposed to powerful enemies; but I, who have lived many years in Russia, know the Russian character—have no fear of the Prussians. They were defeated in the war of 1848 to 1850 not a single man under my command was taken prisoner. In the war of to-day. As your commander, I shall never unjustly place you in danger. As faithful and valiant Danish men, you will show yourselves worthy of the confidence placed in you by the King and the country. It shall be my task to care for your welfare to the best of my power. For that purpose I demand great intelligent exertion. Soldiers! Let us do our duty. God save the King! God for King and country.

According to a Copenhagen telegram, the Austrian troops have been concentrated in front of Düppel, and it is expected that the fallen will participate in the impending position.

Some fighting has taken place in Jutland. A Prussian division of the guards, consisting of the Cuirassier Regiment and Jäger von Wrangel, advanced on Tuesday, and, meeting with some Danish troops at Sundeved, drove them back upon Frederica. So, at least, says the Prussian account, which tells nothing of any other engagement on either side, and only reports that the Prussians captured a large number of cattle, which were sent back to themselves.

The Austrians advanced at the same time towards Veile. They encountered the Danish outposts in front of that place, and drove them back. Three Danish infantry regiments, three batteries, and two cavalry regiments took up a strong position under the Veile river. An action ensued, which ended in the Danes being dislodged, with considerable loss, and the retreat of their troops. Veile is now the Austrian story as it comes from Kolding, but it is partly confirmed by a telegram from Copenhagen. The Danish loss was 200 killed and four other officers were wounded. Veile stands on the east coast, at the head of an inlet of the Little Belt, somewhat to the north of Fredericia.

None of the Royal Danish Foot Guards have made a descent to reconnoitre upon the eastern coast of Holstein, as was at first received by the inhabitants.

An Imperial ordinance, dated the 3rd inst., was promulgated at Vienna on Saturday last, containing regulations for the capture and disposal of prizes in the present war with Denmark by Austria. The ordinance purports to be issued on account of the hostile measures adopted by Denmark against Austrian ships.

Confidential negotiation in Stockholm asserts that Sweden is accelerating her military preparations, and is concentrating troops. Resolutions summoning the Government to aid Denmark were adopted in a large popular meeting in Stockholm on Sunday. Count Bjoerstjerna, who was formerly Minister at Constantinople, is to be appointed Swedish Ambassador at Copenhagen.

AUSTRIA.

Count Bindorff, President of the Council of the Empire, died on Tuesday week.

The Emperor Alexander has issued decrees completing the emancipation of the Polish peasants, and organising "communal administration and tribunals." The appointment in Poland, which all connection between the nobility and the peasantry is entirely severed." The former decree was formally proclaimed on Sunday in the principal squares of Warsaw.

The Augsburg Gazette states that, according to several reports to the Russian Government respecting the Caucasian tribes who have made their submission, 400,000 families offered the alternative—death themselves in the Kuban or to emigrate to Turkey, this having been found necessary to the maintenance of tranquillity. About the half of these people are stated to have chosen to proceed to Asia Minor, and the rest of their removal will be borne by the Russian Government.

GREECE.

A Ministerial crisis has taken place at Athens. M. Tringhetta has been appointed Minister of Justice, and M. Petrinos Minister of Justice, and M. Roseikis Minister of Marine.

From Corfu we learn that Fort Vido is half demolished. The citadel is still untouched, and may probably remain so. The Ionian Islands and Fort Abram are partly dismantled. Turkey is constructing fortifications opposite Corfu, on the Albanian coast. It is said the administration of the Ionian Islands will be intrusted to a military governor.

AMERICA.

We have news from New York to Feb. 24. It consists mainly of conflicting rumours. First, we are informed that Sherman had reached Vicksburg with 20,000 men, and Ohio Bulletins with 30,000 estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000 men; that he had defeated Polk, had captured seventeen guns, and was pursuing; and that Admiral Farragut was preparing to attack the Confederate forts at Mobile Point. A different statement, however, is made in the Richmond papers. These papers state that Polk's troops have been received with great loss at Grant's Pass, and that the Federal force at Quitman consisted of about 1000 men only, and that the main body of the retreating force had, however, shot the alleged defeat of Polk. General Lee Street was announced to have arrived at Meridian with reinforcements. Polk was also retreated beyond the French Road River. General Gilmore had returned from Florida to Hilton Head, and reported that operations had been successful. The Confederates have been twice repulsed in an attack upon the Federal position at Newbern, North Carolina. General Meade will retain the command of the army of the Potomac during the next campaign.

The Committee of Ways and Means reported back the bill authorising the Secretary of the Treasury to sell the surplus gold, with a recommendation that it be not passed, and that no further action be taken.

The National Executive Committee had nominated Mr. Chase for the presidency, while the Maryland State Union Convention had named Mr. Lincoln.

INDIA.

By the arrival of the Bombay mail we have news from India to the 14th ult. Sir John Lawrence had fairly got to work, and was summoning to his councils those who had co-operated with him in the Punjaub. A sanitary commission has been appointed to promote the health of the troops, and a hospital is to be established at Madras. A splendid palace has been destroyed by fire at Nagpore.

CHINA AND JAPAN.

China is tranquil. The Japanese question is unsatisfactory. The Princes were endeavouring to exclude foreign trade at Yokohama. A telegram from New York states that advices had reached that city from Japan conveying the information that on Christmas Day the houses of the British Legation were on fire and burnt down, and that on Jan. 1 a large portion of the town was also destroyed by fire.

NEW ZEALAND.

There is no important news from New Zealand, the war there being, we are assured, virtually at an end.

The King of Bavaria died at Munich, on Thursday morning, in his fifty-third year. The last act of his Majesty previous to his decease was to sign the instructions to his representative at the Federal Diet to urge forward the vote on the execution question in the duchies.

As Algiers has become a great winter resort for English people, the Chaplain of the English Church, the Rev. Mr. Rogers, has just published a pamphlet in English tracts in connection with his church. The library refers to all English residents.

The Canadian mail-steamer Bohemian was wrecked on the 22nd ult., near Portland, on her outward voyage from Liverpool. The crew were saved, as well as the mail-steamer passengers, some thirty in number; but the steerage passengers, of whom there were about ninety, several are reported missing.

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegram has been received through Mr. Reuter's office:—

SPAIN.—THE PASSIVE DEBT.—Madrid, March 9 (Evening).—In to-days sitting of the Congress Senor Bulmaceda moved that the sinking fund for the passive debt should be increased. The Minister of Finance replied favourably to the proposition, which was then referred to the committee.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Cleet two-year-old finishes have given a nice tone, so far, to the meetings of Vol. The Lincoln trio—Vivian, Ian Mcdonald, and Blackbird—were again the first three, with the same jockeys up, at Nottingham, but, instead of a length, there was only half a neck between them, and a thick head between the two latter. Vivian was a nice a gear as ever wore plates—carried 9 lb. extra, and won again; and a good race all round the two others were revealed. Utah Creek by Lexington and East Lynn by Lambton ran a dead heat for the Tyro Stakes on the first day at Lincoln, and Vivian was troubled with fog, rain, mew, and small fields. At Derby, Real Jam bid fair, after much hesitation, to realise her name at the Spring meeting, but it may be noted that Nottingham proved anything but "real jam" to the bookmakers, as it is calculated that they have shared £15,000 to "the upper ten." Lord Coventry has become quite as much of an Absalom with bad mothers-in-law as Mr. Merry, and the pair of Emblem, Emblematic, and Umpire may fairly rank with Weatherbeaten, Saucebox, and Defiance. Last year Emblem (10 st. 6 lb.), who had only scored seven races out of twenty-six on the flat, won the Liverpool Steeplechase by twenty lengths; and this year her own sister, Emblematic by Teddington, beat Miss Darby by Dry Hobbs, repeats the feat. Arbory carried 11 st. 12 lb., or 10 lb. more than he did in '63, and got home second. Mr. Merry must indeed be come to grief with Mr. Edwards before they get to Beeher's Brook, were the only representatives of the latter's stable engaged in the race. Mr. Merry's friends had such a severe fall at Derby six days before that concussion of the brain was dreaded, and Rainbow was of course not to be found in the Steeplechase. Happily, he came round with quiet; and, albeit he had a broken finger, he handled the weapon with such effect that Umpire won easy enough, and is said to have landed £10,000 for his Lordship. Real Jam was the first over the Derby course, which was crossed the month before "Harry," Chester, Thomastown, and Ocean Witch finished next in order behind Arbory and Umpire. Of course, the first favourite and the pet of many prophets and tipsters, was not in the first four, and five. Emblem did not start. Through the clue, the weights, were heavy; but no accident occurred to the jockeys, and the Visitation of the Grand National. Emblematic (who will have 11 st. 6lb. on her at Aintree) repeated the performance of Emblem, and won easily; but only won a Selling Stakes at Leicester as a two-year-old, and was knocked about in the Liverpool Spring Cup, as stated in our last issue.

The Sporting Gazette states that it is Mr. Naylor's intention to have an annual sale of thoroughbred yearlings, like those of Messrs. Tattersall's there. The dams of Kettledrum, Dundee, Diophantus, Pirbright, Eastnor, Ben Nevis, Gunpowder, Cracker, Gamecock, Lady Elizabeth, Camerina and Fez de Jose, along with Governess and Somnesmeide, were all in his paddocks last autumn, and, therefore, there is there again. The first blood colt by Kettledrum arrived on this day with the Boot Stud Lot, and the shape of a bay colt from Ellermire. The three foals by him, so far, have been sold for 1,000 guineas. Mr. Naylor bought Little Agnes by The Cure, the dam of Prince Arthur, for the future Shotover Stud, and has since sold her and her foal again at a considerable fifty.

The athletic games between the two Universities, which have just been inaugurated on the new Christ Church cricket-ground, bid fair to be quite as popular in the one as they have been in the other. Putting 8ft. 5in. (Mr. E. H. Gooch), the long jump, 18ft. (tilttc), the hundred yards race, 10½ sec. (Mr. J. Derbyshire), and the mile race, 5min. 10sec. (Mr. Nutkott or Nelly Hill), and the quarter of a mile race, 56 sec. (little), Oxford was not far behind. The high jump, 5ft. 6in. (Mr. Lloyd), hurdle-race of twelve flights, 17½ sec. (Mr. E. W. Finch), the 250-yard walking race, 2min. 30sec. (little), and the third only beaten by 2 ft. from the winner), the one-and-a-half-mile steeple-chase, 7min. 45 sec. (Hamilton), and the one-and-a-half-mile steeplechase, 9 min. 46 sec. (Mr. R. C. Gerard), were all scored by Oxford. The Cambridge men will live events out of the eight the Cambridge men ran second, so that the balance of success fairly resulted in favour of the men of the two from Trinity) represented Cambridge, and "the house stable" brought out an equal number. It will be Oxford against the field in the return train next year.

Fetlock has had divided a stake in Herefordshire with Rompings Girl and another, between his defeat for the Waterloo and his appearance at Aintree, moved away to be the Craven Cup colt; his owner laid £40 to £5 on him over night for his course with Zuccita. A few days later, all he could do with Hotspur Hopeful in the run up, an although he had all the best of the speed, he was beaten a head and has been in low level when the hare was killed. The Dunlop division—viz. Marshal Forward, Rosicrucian, and Fetlock, were again out of luck; but Mr. Borrow's Bit of Fashion by Black Flag run up for the Aintree Selling Stakes, and Mr. Hibbert's Gamester Traveller, and led him very decisively from the slips. Belle of the Village was run down on the first round of the Veteran Stakes before Fiery Dream, who ultimately won it, and Mr. Warwick was reappointed judge for the ensuing season.

LIVERPOOL SPRING MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Handicap Plate of 40 sovs.—Lord Dunglas, 1, Poland, 2, Sara, 3.

Steeplechase of 10 sovs. each, with 100 added, for Maidens.—Mr. Nesbitt, 2, Riverdale, 3. Tyro Stakes.—Dead heat between Utah Creek, by Lexington, and Miss Thompson, 3. Liverpool Spring Cup.—Mr. Lawrence's Revolution, 2, Veterinarian, 3.

Handicap Hurdle Race.—Sefton Cass, 1, Chester, 2.

WEDNESDAY.

Sefton Handicap.—Veterinarian, 1, Rose, 2, East Lancashire, 3.

All-aged Selling Stakes.—Mr. Nesbitt walked over.

Grand National Hunters' Steeplechase.—Alcibiade, 1, Arbory, 2, Chester, 3.

Grand National Hunters' Handicap.—Lamlash, 1, Arbory, 2, Chester, 3.

Welter Stakes.—Gamester, 1, Jack Ashton, 2.

Aintree Plate.—Mr. Borrow's Jack Ashton, 1.

Hunters' Steeplechase.—Bright Hope, 1, Brandisgoth, 2, Jordan, 3.

SHREWSBURY RACES.—TUESDAY.

Corndy Members' Plate.—Jack Ketch, 1, Rose of Denmark, 2, Allesbury, 3.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs. each.—Mr. Bulkeley's Bellerophon, 1.

Forward Handicap.—Annihilator, 1, Arbory, 2, Chester, 3.

Severn Handicap.—Rose of Surrey, 1, Lord Cloud, 2.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs. each.—Mr. Jackson's Jumbo, 1, Mr. Nesbitt, 2.

Hop Handicap Race.—Vivadiere, 1, Wortham, 2.

THE EASTER-MONDAY VOLUNTEER REVIEW.—We are authorised to state that the Secretary of State for War has sanctioned a review of volunteers being held in Blackheath, on Easter-Monday, the 28th inst. Applications from corps desirous of attending this review are to be made upon the prescribed form and transmitted to the Lord Lieutenant of the proper counties not later than the 23rd inst.

The annual competition of the Oxford University Rifles by Colonel Maude, C.B., took place on Thursday week. The corps mustered in Queen's College, in good numbers, and, after a short parade, marched off to their yard-ground. After marching past in grand divisions, several battalion movements were then gone through with precision. The firing was then skirmished—three companies extended—and, after keeping up a steady fire for some time, the companies were called in, and the skirmishers were thrown out on the left flank. These were then strengthened, and ultimately drove the retreating enemy from the ground, after which the companies were re-formed, and expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the state of efficiency.

The annual distribution prizes of No. 5 (Penn) company of the 3rd Manchester (40th Lancashire) Rifle Volunteers took place last Saturday evening at the Adelphi Tavern. The prizes in the first period third class were won respectively by Sergeant Canavan, Corporal Anderson, and Private Hamilton; second class, Sergeant Brooks, and Private Brownlow. The prizes were won, second class, Sergeant Martinez, Sergeant Burne, Private Dixon, and Sergeant Canavan. The first class prizes were won respectively by Sergeant Burne, Sergeant Anderson, Sergeant Martinez, and Private Dixon. The winners of prizes in the second and third periods were, first class, Private Bell, Private Higby, Lance Corporal Hamilton, Private Swallwood, and Private Wright. In the third period second class Private Bell, Private Rucker and Morley, and Sergeant Hunt also carried off prizes.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The Winter Exhibition of Pictures at the French Gallery, Pall-mall, closed on Saturday last.

The Queen has approved of Don Edoardo Badia y Ortiz de Zoniga as Vice-Consul in London for the Queen of Spain.

There are several Japanese studying engineering in the establishment of a large engineer near London.

Her Majesty and the Princess of Wales have granted their patronage to a bazaar, to be held in May next, in aid of the building-fund of the Female School of Art.

The Prince of Wales has intimated to the council of University College his acceptance of the office of vice-patron of the hospital, an office he has worn since the death of the Duke of Sussex.

The Winter Exhibition of Sketches and Studies by Members of the Society of Painters in Water Colours, at the Gallery of the Society in Pall-mall East, closed on Saturday last.

In the southern district of St. Giles's there were, on the night of the census, 2,000 persons who had no other shelter than a shed, and less than ten families sleeping in it, without counting single men and women so old. The Rookery, which was pulled down, was a thirty-by-forty house, and paved the night.

The opening was held at the London Tavern, on Tuesday, to pass resolutions in favour of the equalisation of the sugar duties. Mr. Crawford, M.P., presided. A resolution in accordance with the object of the meeting was proposed by Mr. Gregory, M.P. An amendment was, however, moved in favour of the present system of duties, and carried by a large majority.

The Lords of the Committee of Privy Council on Education, before the Act Session, are about to make a selection of the most important objects in the national collection at the South Kensington Museum, and to distribute them in the provinces, subject to the right of re-purchase with a view of furnishing the local schools of art with the means of studying all the finest specimens of art.

The success of the South London Working Classes Industrial Exhibition, in Camberwell, continues, and the 100th day established. Crowds have visited the place, the doors often having to be shut from the overcrowding. Saturday was a great day, the receipts amounting to £200. Last Saturday evening more than 4000 paid for admission. Not an article has been removed from the place, and no accident has occurred.

The Soane medallion and £50 were awarded on Monday at the Royal Institute of British Architects to Mr. Edward Lamb Lamson, for his design for an hospital to accommodate twenty-five pensioners. The structure is to be erected in Dulwich, from the bequest of Alleyn, the actor, tailor, &c. Mr. Watson, who is abroad, received the travelling studentship of £100 for his design for a church to be built in Rome, &c.

At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, on Monday evening last, the following papers were read:—1, "Notes on the Physical Geography of the Nile Valley," by Mr. Samuel Baker, communicated by Sir R. I. Murchison, F.R.S.; 2, "The Upper Waters of the Fraser and Peace Rivers, with Remarks on the Physical Geography of the Rocky Mountains," by Dr. Rae.

A Committee of the Court of Common Council, to whom the Bridge-house Estates Committee referred the question of the purchase of a series of extensive improvements to and about the neighbourhood of Guildhall, including the new thoroughfare between Gresham-street and Cheapside, and the offices of the Corporation, so as to adapt them the better to the general transaction purposes of the Corporation, and to the increase of which the large expenditure on every public occasion for special entertainments or otherwise.

The Right Hon. Sir J. T. Coleridge, Sir Cresswell Cresswell, and Mr. Metropolitan Board of Works, on the bills for railway and other schemes now before Parliament, which will affect the Metropolis, and recommended upwards of 90 bills pages, and given an elaborate account of 81 railway schemes which have been promoted during the present session. The report deals with the schemes with the various streets and sewers to a serious extent. To se schemes involve the taking down and rebuilding of 1,000 houses, the making of 8 branches, of 47½ miles in length, with 31 bridges over the Thames and two tunnels under the river. The estimated cost of the whole of these works is stated to exceed about £70,000,000. Accounts of these schemes have appeared.

A meeting of the Court of Governors of Bedlam was held on Saturday week at the London Tavern to take measures for preventing the City from being deprived of the Bethlehem Hospital when the leases of the latter were threatened. Mr. Crawford, M.P., was in the chair. It was the general opinion of the meeting that the site of the present hospital was unsuitable, inconvenient, and unadapted for its present use, it was too limited in the scope of its inquiries to be all that was required. The governors were unanimous in the opinion that the present Bethlehem Hospital should remain in the city of London, as railway could be so constructed that was not absolutely necessary to the interior of the city, and that would be a great convenience to the public.

The Metropolitan Board of Works have made the following arrangements for the opening of the Thames Embankment:—That part of Scotch-town-road from the Bull and Gate public-house to the Embankment may be used by carriages and foot passengers. That the Embankment, including thoroughfares are to be so called and the names of subsidiary places assigned to them, as follows:—Victoria-embankment, Victoria-street, Buckingham-street, in Scotch-walk the name of Swan-street has been abolished and incorporated with Page's-walk. That the Embankment, including the Temple Gardens, is to be called and the names of the several terraces abolished. In Shoreditch the names of Gloucester-walk, Buckingham-walk, Queen's-walk, Victoria-walk, and the whole line of thoroughfare has been called Peabody-street.

The members of the Royal Academy of Arts and others mustered in great force last Saturday evening in Westminster Hall, and for two hours were crushed in close proximity to the statues of the Duke of Wellington and of their Assistant, Captain Pape. The movements were performed in a steady and soldier-like manner, and the Captain was frequently applauded for his setting-up and preliminary drills. The committee of this regiment formed in the Academy-rooms, and the members have since been assembling there. It was resolved, however, with much success that a commodious shed has been secured for drilling purposes in Burlington-gardens, and the regiment intends to assemble there in future. The Captain, assisted by the Sergeant-Major, Lord Truro has also granted to this corps the use of the Lincoln's-inn-fields Gallopings, and the regiment will assemble there on Saturday.

On Monday the annual general meeting and forty-second election to vacancies in the Printers' Pension Society took place at the London Tavern, Bishopsgate-street, Mr. Alderman Lawrence in the chair. The business of the general meeting was of a formal character. The secretary read the report of the committee of management for the year 1863, which stated that the annual subscriptions received during the year 1863 amounted to £1,100, under the presidency of Viscount Enfield, M.P., and had realised £300 to the funds; while the committee had to announce the addition to the next anniversary festival, which will take place on the 6th of the next month, will be presided over by Mr. Alderman Lawrence, M.P. The total funded capital thus had increased to £3,6. The funded property of the institution consisted of £11,000, three per cent consols, and £25,000 in the Three per cents long-dated, and £6,000 in the Three per cents reduced, and £6,000 in the Three per cents. The permanent fund amounts to £29,350, producing a dividend of £718. The stock of the Printers' Pension Society consisted of £600 three per Cent Reduced, producing an annual dividend of £441. The Newton estate, Whitechapel-road, was let on lease for twenty-one years, at £70 per annum. The total receipts during the year, including £653 subscriptions and donations at the festival, amounted to £1,753. The total disbursements were £1,753. The chairman announced that the Prince of Wales had consented to preside at the annual dinner on the 6th of May next.

LAW AND POLICE.—Mr. Justice Mellor granted an application, on Saturday, for a writ of habeas corpus to release the Poles at Millbank, as other witnesses as Calo relative to the steam-cane which have been seized at Birkenhead.

The action in the Court of Admiralty at the suit of Captain Paton, as owner of the Lady Jocelyn, against the Mersey Steam Company.

A case came before the Thames Police Court last Saturday which illustrates the wretched rates of remuneration to which the unfortunate poor are subject in London. A boy, named Thomas Hall, was charged with stealing two pairs of shoes, on a dispute of 8d. He protested that the work the shoes were made for he was entitled to receive 1s. 6d., but refused to pay me when I asked him for the alteration. It came out in the course of the examination that the sempstress had been working down to the rate of twopence halfpenny per pair of trousers, and the nine articles when mounted and made up were retained as the price for 1s. 6d. A penny. The Judge ordered the defendant to pay the sempstress the disputed 8d.

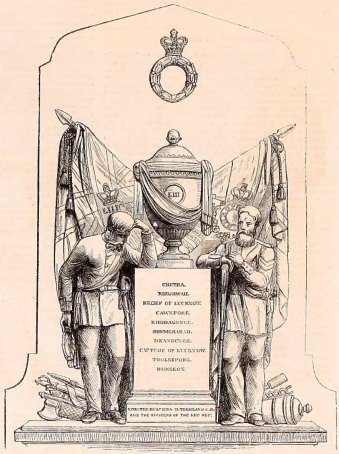
The Soane medallion was made at the Guildhall last Saturday, a solicitor of the Building agency in London, the appreciation of Mr. W. Sharp, solicitor of the Building agency in London, the appreciation of Mr. W. Sharp, Mr. Lamb, Mr. Lamson, Mr. Watson, and Mr. Stevens, the latter of whom obtained possession of a large number of Governors' votes, and the latter of whom found their way to the Court of Governors at Bridge. No prize was transmitted them to his agent in London, who went to Mr. Sharp to have them negotiated, and, getting the Guildhall Dean, and Mr. Lamson, who was that day formal part of the securities carried off by the Dales when they broke into the Court of Governors. The Court of Governors of the Royal Free Government ascertained the number of the books, and these numbers were then compared with the number of votes. The magistrate said he was a warrant against Mr. Sharp, but issued a summons against the Lord Chancellor's agent and another person, and he was to be at once to the opportunity of accounting for their possession of "stolen property."

TESTIMONIAL TO THE LATE MAYOR OF NOTTINGHAM.

The handsome piece of plate which was given two or three weeks since by the inhabitants of the town council of Nottingham to their esteemed fellow-citizen Mr. Richard Enfield, the late Mayor, is engraved on the next page. The speeches made on that occasion and the numerous letters of regret which were read on the memorable occasion with which men of all parties and classes joined in doing honour to a most meritorious public servant, have already made the public of the Metropolitan Mayor, has by his own energy and ingenuity, become one of the first of Nottingham's manufacturing merchants, and of its citizens. He has had much to do with those great improvements in the lace manufacture which have distinguished of late years Nottingham, contributed immensely to increase the prosperity of that place. His knowledge of the trade has enabled him to represent the interests of its staple trade on several critical occasions. In the year 1860 one of the joints, Mr. Enfield, the late-chairman of the jurors, of the International Exhibition. He has been a member of the Town Council, and has—filled the office of Mayor of Nottingham. As a member of the corporation, he has been conspicuous for the energy and zeal with which his conduct has been impartial, judicious, and attentive; while the local charities of Nottingham and its institutions have found a liberal patron. There are his public merits, as testified by Mr. W. Parsons, the present Mayor of Nottingham, in the letter to Mr. Enfield, upon the gratuitous plan in a very graceful and good-humoured speech. In a only objection which was made by a member to the proceedings at the meeting was that the Britkin testimonial ought to have been left open to a general subscription, so that the whole of the inhabitants should have been invited to take part in it.

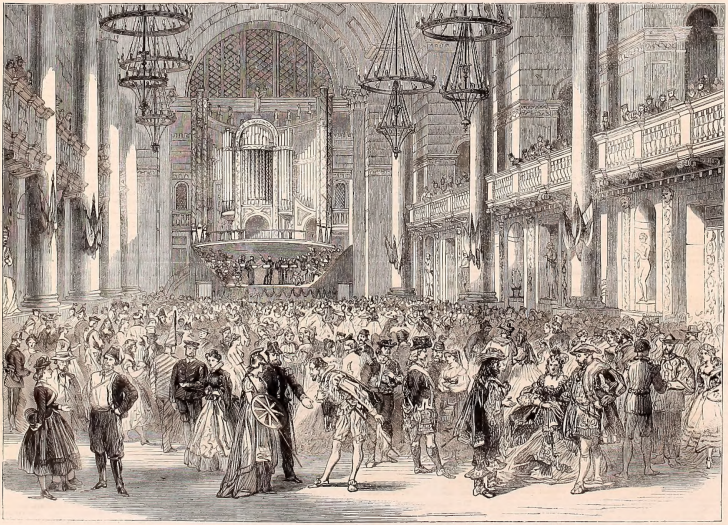
The gift which we may be seen in our Engraving, consists of a six-branch candelabrum, or epergne, which was manufactured by Messrs. Elkington and Son, of Angel-street, St. Martin's-le-Grand. It contains about 400 ounces of silver. The main feature of the design is an oak-tree, the spreading branches and foliage of which support the figures of Liberty, Justice, and Prosperity. The bare consists of a tripod pedestal rising from ledges of rock, and resting on three lions' heads with fore feet. Upon the highest surface of the pedestal are the arms of the town of Nottingham, with the legend "Vi et Animis," the name of the Mayor, Richard Enfield, the legend of which is "Face et bella parata;" and the presentation inscription, which is as follows:—"Presented to Richard Birkin, Esq., J.P., by the Magistrates and Council of the town of Nottingham, as a token of their high appreciation of the valuable and important services rendered during his respective mayoralties in 1859, 1860, 1861, and 1862." On the plateau of the pedestal, above the inscription, the figure of Liberty is represented seated in a space; to the right of this figure is that of Justice in classic costume, the right hand resting on a sword, and the left holding a pair of scales and scales. The third figure, Prosperity, is shown with cornucopiæ. The oak represents the staple manufacture of the town, and, naturally, forming a canopy of silver foliage. There are six branches, at the ends of which either glasses or tapers can be fixed at pleasure.

MONUMENT TO THE 53RD (SHROPSHIRE) REGIMENT.



A MONUMENT has just been erected in the vestibule of St. Chad's Church, in Shrewsbury, at the expense of Lieutenant-Colonel Sutherland, C.B., and other officers of the 53rd Regiment, in memory of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of the regiment who fell in action or died from the effects of their wounds and exposure in the campaigns in China and India during the Indian mutiny in 1857, 1858, and 1859. The funeral urn stands on a pedestal with military trophies thrown over it, with the regimental badge above, and the Queen's crown and motto at the top. On the front of the urn the right stands an officer leaning, in a mournful attitude, upon one arm, which rests on the tablet containing the names of the dead. On the left hand a Colour-Sergeant leaning on his rifle reversed. Various weapons of war are scattered at the feet of the figures. The Manning, of York-terrace, Regent's Park. The work is executed in the Caen Carrara marble, with a background of black marble. The base, of Sicilian marble, not shown in our Engraving, bears the names of 2 Colonels, 1 Major, 2 Captains, 3 Lieutenants, 1 Surgeon, and 3 private soldiers. The same church already contained a monument to those of the Shropshire regiment who fell in the War of the Sutlej nineteen years ago.

GRAND FANCY-DRESS BALL IN ST. GEORGE'S HALL, LIVERPOOL.



AT Engraving on the preceding page, from a sketch by Mr. Woods, of Grand Fancy-Dress Ball in St. George's Hall, Liverpool, which took place on Tuesday week, in St. George's Hall, in aid of the funds of the Blue-coat Hospital, one of the most ancient and permanent decorations of St. George's Hall must be well known to our readers from the Engravings we have published on some former occasions. The scene here depicted is full of animation, and the varieties of costume afford great scope for a learned fancy. In the middle of the foreground we see a British Admiral, arm-in-arm with Britannia herself, to whom Sir Walter Raleigh is just making his bow. A West India planter, with right coat and broad-brimmed straw hat, is Chinese, a mandarin of the first class. A Turk, a Highlander, an Indian chief, and other national or historical characters, in grotesque combination, may be discovered in this motley crowd. The gentleman in Egyptian costume, to the left hand, is a laborer of our artist himself.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. R. BIRKIN, EX-MAYOR OF NOTTINGHAM.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

MONUMENT IN ST. CHAD'S CHURCH, SHREWSBURY, TO THE OFFICERS AND MEN OF THE 53RD (SHROPSHIRE) REGIMENT, WHO FELL DURING THE INDIAN MUTINY.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

FANCY-DRESS BALL IN AID OF ST. ANN'S DISPENSARY, AT ST. GEORGE'S HALL, LIVERPOOL.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

THE CRICKET-MATCH BETWEEN MADRAS AND CALCUTTA: THE MADRAS ELEVEN.

WE give above, engraved from a photograph taken by Mr. B. Smith, of Madras, the portraits of eleven members of the Madras Cricket Club who lately went to Calcutta to play against the Calcutta Cricket Club. Attempts had been made in previous years to bring the two elevens together, but were discountenanced by the absurd notion—still prevalent with some old Indians—that a good seat in the saddle or a good hit to square leg is evidence of an idle disposition in the members of the civil service. It required some courage to make the announcement that eleven men wanted permission to leave their Presidency for such a frivolous pursuit as a game of cricket. Fortunately, an old Etonian—Sir William Denison—was at the head of affairs during this last cold season, and his experience had not led him to the septuit conclusion of the Friend of India—"the letter recicker, we wowe pobble servant." He kindly threw his influence into the scale, and it was mainly owing to him that the match came off. The Madras Eleven reached Calcutta on New-Year's Day; and, the match having been fixed for the 6th and 7th of January, ample time was allowed them to familiarise themselves with the Calcutta ground. It is admitted that both clubs might have been more strongly represented; but, on the whole, they were well matched, and the issue for a long time hung in the balance. Madras won the toss, and took the first innings. Mr. Mullaly played his customary game, scoring in less than sixty-seven runs, which comprised a five, seven fours, four threes, and six twos. Mr. Sandwith followed him with a fine display of hard and Oxford reputation. The whole innings of the Madras Eleven brought them 165. After four inclusive, at 3 p.m., the Calcutta men went in. They scored just 100, of which 43 were made by Captain Grant, including three threes and eight fours. Of the latter the Hon. A. Stewart made one four and two threes. Next morning the Madras side took their second innings and gained 141, thirty-five of which were by the invincible batting of Captain G. Hills against them. One bit of Captain Beckley's, a fiver to square leg through the palings, deserves particular mention. The Calcutta men, as usual, had their last innings, in which the two Messrs. Hills got together, and scored, one to the other 21! till they were both caught out. The match was finished on the morning of the third day, the second innings of the Calcutta men being completed for 191 runs. The total score for Madras in both innings together was 305; and for Calcutta, 291. Madras, therefore, remained the winner by no less a majority than 61. The Madras Eleven consisted of Mr. H. Linton, Mr. F. Hutchins, Captain Jago, Mr. F. W. Prince, Mr. F. Brandt, Captain Beckley, Mr. R. Melville, Captain Lindley, Captain Hope, Mr. G. Lenox, and Captain Hills. In our last engraving Mr. Linton is the gentleman with a handkerchief about his head, and with his bare arms crossed, who stands in the middle, being the fourth of the standing figures; Captain Beckley stands at the end of the line. The Calcutta players were Captain G. Hills, Mr. R. T. Partridge, Mr. J. W. Rutherford, Captain H. Ross, Mr. C. Hills, Mr. A. H. Leeming, Captain Grant, Mr. H. W. Aitken, the Hon. A. Stewart, Mr. J. Lloyd and Mr. B. Drummond.

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG: BAND PLAYING BEFORE MARSHAL WRANGEL'S HEAD-QUARTERS AT HADERSLEBEN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 216.

THE SHAKSPEARIAN TERCENTENARY.

At the meeting of the council of the National Shakspeare Committee on Monday the following report was received from the sub-committee to which, at the previous meeting, had been referred the question of the best means of celebrating the tercentenary of the birth of Shakspeare:—"By the kind permission of the Royal Agricultural Hall, in which Mr. Bosisto, Mr. Rimi Bosisto, Messrs. Cunningham Brothers, and other Australian and Canadian artistes, and a choir of 2000 voices, will take part, Mr. G. A. Macfarren has undertaken to write a cantata and overture, which shall be the 23rd there will be a concert at St. James's Hall, and a grand Shakspearean masque of a novel kind and on a scale worthy of the Royal Agricultural Hall. On the third there will be Shakspearean readings, a number of special performances, and the usual banquet, in the theatre, of the large hospitals. A number of minor ones in the evening. On the Monday there will be another master Shakspearean performance, and on the following days, should the general committee do not have been formed in the City, and a separate subscription is to be opened there. The working committee recommend the following scheme:

On Wednesday evening a public meeting of delegates from the various trade societies in the metropolis will be held at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, to be addressed by the persons of the working masses whereby the respective trades may be induced to join in the Shakspeare Tercentenary Commemoration, on the 23rd of April next. Mr. Richard Mansell, having been voted to the chair, briefly explained the object of the meeting. The National Shakspeare Committee, it was well known, were desirous of making this tercentenary a general and universal expression of the English people; and they felt that such an universal expression would be declined unless the every classes of the working classes was heard in it. They had, therefore, taken steps for obtaining that object, and had appointed a committee to carry out their views; and it was for the present meeting to come to such arrangements as might be required for carrying out that object. To the right hon. gentleman who had said that the classes would feel a pride in helping on, and he was sure they would really mean to help on, the tercentenary, he (Mr. Mansell) had to say that he was followed by Mr. Shirley Brooks, Mr. Tom Taylor, Mr. Cox, Mr. Cowden Clarke (a deputation from the National Shakspeare Committee), who explained the manner in which their co-operation was to be solicited, and (2) that the working classes were expected to take in the celebration. Mr. Howell (Secretary) afterwards moved a resolution to the effect that the arrangements communicated by the National Shakspeare Committee are entitled to the warm sympathy of the working classes, and that the Council of the Crystal Palace be hereby conferred by the great poet, desire to duly celebrate the approaching three-hundredth anniversary of his natal day. Mr. Cox, in a few appropriate words, moved a resolution to the effect that a committee, with power to add to their number, be appointed to carry out the objects of the meeting, and report for the future. Mr. Shirley Brooks, in a few appropriate words, moved a resolution to celebrate the anniversary, and to take such steps as might demonstrate the desire of the working classes to participate in the memory of Shakspeare. Both resolutions were unanimously adopted, and a numerous committee was appointed.

At the festival of the Stratford-on-Avon Shakspeare Club, held on the Mayor (Mr. R. F. Flower) in the chair—the name of Henry Spicer, Esq., was added to the list of vice-presidents. Amongst the many suggestions for a monumental memorial was received, in which, after discussing the merits of the various plans proposed, it was urged that the Shakspeare site approved to them to unite all the conditions required, being eminently central (situated at the intersection of four of the principal streets), and the most open and accessible point in Stratford. A memorial placed there would be appreciated by the whole of the visitors to the town, and would be seen to advantage by the wives from both east and west, and to be kept in good repair. Mr. Hall, the Market House, which would tend to be substituted for the present one. Amongst the gentlemen who contributed £50,000 each to the fund, the chief grounds, the sub-committee unanimously decided on the site of the present Market House as the most appropriate for the erection of the statue. Mr. Hall, by Mr. Brown, of the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, in commemoration of the Stratford Tercentenary Celebration Festival, was presented for the committee's reaction and approved.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the Most Noble Henry Vane, Duke of Cleveland, K.G., of Raby Castle, Durham, has been proved under the 200 in the principal registry of her Majesty's Court of Probate on the 1st inst., and the personalty sworn under £40,000. The executors are the Right Hon. and Most Reverend Robert Thomas, Lord Archbishop, and G. L. Parkin, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn-fields. The testator bequeaths to his wife, Lady Augusta Vane, all the household furniture, plate, &c., at Raby Castle, and £1,000 per annum during her widowhood, and £2,000 per annum for the maintenance of his daughters to his sisters, and has bequeathed amongst them the jewels of the late Duchess. To his son, Harry Vane, Earl of Darlington, he gives the sum of £10,000 for his own use. To his sister-in-law, Lady Augusta Fenton, £10,000, besides interest on £20,000 now standing to her credit. To his son, Lord Barnard, he gives £10,000, free of legacy duty. To Lieutenant-Colonel Augustus Meyrick, £10,000. To Lieutenant-Colonel Fenton, £10,000, besides interest on £20,000 now standing to his Grey and Lieut.-Colonel Keppel, left Marlborough House at a quarter to five o'clock, and proceeded to Windsor Castle, on a visit to the Queen. Their Royal Highnesses travelled by the Great Western Railway. The Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary visited the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House.

On Tuesday their Royal Highnesses returned to Marlborough House from Windsor Castle. The Prince drove to the Victoria Station of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway at half-past two o'clock, to meet Prince John of Glücksburg, upon his arrival from his Continent on a visit to their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House. The Princess, attended by Countess De Grey, drove out. Prince John of Glücksburg visited the Duke of Cambridge, also the Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary. In the evening the Prince and Princess and Prince John of Glücksburg, attended by Countess De Grey, Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, and Baron Gablenz, honoured the Lyceum Theatre with their presence.

On Wednesday the Princess took a drive. The Duke of Cambridge visited Prince John of Glücksburg at Marlborough House.

BAPTISM OF THE INFANT PRINCE.

The baptism of his Royal Highness the infant Prince, grandson of her Majesty the Queen and of his Royal Highness the Prince Consort, son of their Royal Highnesses Albert Edward Prince of Wales and the Princess of Wales, took place on Thursday, at one o'clock, in the chapel within Buckingham Palace.

Due arrangements were made in the chapel for the performance of the sacred rite. Two rows of chairs, one on each side of the centre, were appointed to the use of the Queen, the sponsors, and the Royal personages invited to be present.

The principal appointments, or parts, of which there are four (two on each side of the chapel), were assigned to the representatives of foreign Powers connected with the Royal family, to the Cabinet Ministers, and to the other official dignitaries who were present without taking an active part in the ceremony.

The altar was lined with crimson velvet, panelled with gold lace, and on the communion-table were placed the golden vessels used in the sacrament.

The font was placed in advance of the haut pas, immediately at the head of the two rows of chairs appropriated to the Queen, the sponsors, and the members of the Royal family who were represented upon the occasion.

The head and foot were placed in the gallery, and consisted of the choir of her Majesty's Chapel Royal, St. James's, and the choir of the Queen's Private Chapels, together with her Majesty's private band, assisted and strengthened by a powerful combination of vocal and instrumental performers.

The following Royal personages and others were present at the ceremony :—

The Queen (sponsor).

His Majesty the King of the Belgians, K.G. (sponsor).

His Royal Highness Prince Oscar Frederick William Oscar-Gustavus-Glücksburg, representing his Majesty the King of Denmark (sponsor).

Her Royal Highness the Princess Alice, representing the Royal Highness the Crown Princess of Prussia, Princess Royal of Great Britain and Ireland (sponsor).

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred, K.G. (sponsor).

His Royal Highness the Grand Duke Frederick of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, representing her Royal Highness the Duchess of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha (sponsor).

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, representing her Serene Highness the Dowager Duchess of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg (sponsor).

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, K.G., representing his Serene Highness the Landgrave of Hesse (sponsor).

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, K.G.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales.

His Royal Highness Prince Arthur.

His Royal Highness Prince Leopold.

Her Royal Highness Princess Louisa.

Her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice.

Her Royal Highness Princess Mary of Cambridge.

His Serene Highness Prince Frederick William of Solms-Braunfels.

His Serene Highness Prince Philip of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

Her Serene Highness Princess Clotilde of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha.

His Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar.

His Serene Highness Prince Gustavus of Wasa.

The clergy officiating were :—The Archbishop of Canterbury ; the Dean of her Majesty's Chapels Royal ; the Bishop of London ; the Lord High Almoner, the Bishop of Oxford ; the Clerk of the Closet, the Bishop of Chester ; the Rector of Sandringham ; Lower-spinage, the Rev. Henry Howarth ; the Dean of Windsor and Chaplain to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales ; and the Rev. A. P. Stanley, D.D.

The Foreign Ministers, Cabinet Ministers, and others invited to the solemnity assembled in the lower dining-room at Buckingham Palace at half-past twelve o'clock, and were conducted to their several seats conducted to the seats provided for them in the chapel.

The Royal personages having been conducted to their seats, and the great officers of state and attendants having taken their places on each side of the chapel, the service commenced with the performance by the band of the hymn, "Praise the Lord, O my soul;" the Lord's Prayer, and the hymn, "I will give thanks to Thee, O God."

When the band ceased the Lord Chamberlain accompanied by the Groom of the Stole to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and the Chamberlain to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, conducted the infant Prince into the chapel, his Royal Highness being carried by the Lord Steward, Mrs. Charles Spencer Cowper, Mistress of Maclesfield, one of the Ladies of the Bedchamber to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales.

The Royal Infant was attired in a robe of Honiton lace—the same which was worn by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at his christening—with a cap of Honiton lace ; a cloak of crimson velvet lined with ermine, and a mantle of white satin edged with Honiton lace.

When the Archbishop of Canterbury commenced the prayer, "Almighty everlasting God," the Archbishop received from the Infant Prince to the Queen, who handed his Royal Highness to the Archbishop.

On reaching the portion of the service for the naming of the child, the Archbishop demanded of the sponsors how it should be named. They answered,

"ALBERT VICTOR CHRISTIAN EDWARD ;"

and his Grace of Canterbury baptized the child.

After having received the sacred symbol, his Royal Highness the Infant Prince was returned to the arms of the Queen.

The Countess of Macclesfield afterwards took the Prince, who was re-conducted into the chapel in the same way as on entering.

The exhortation and blessing having been given by the Archbishop, the ceremonial concluded with the performance of Handel's grand chorus from the Coronation, "The Lord Jehovah reigneth, He is clothed of God."

As soon as the ceremony was concluded the Queen, attended as on entering the chapel, was conducted by the Lord Chamberlain to the White Drawing-room, where the Royal personages invited to the baptism after retiring from the chapel in the same order as on proceeding to it.

The Royal personages, with the exception of the Queen and members of the Royal procession, also retired from the chapel and proceeded to the state apartments.

During the ceremony the Duchess of Wellington, the Lord Steward, and the Lord Chamberlain stood near her Majesty, and the ladies in attendance and the officers of the Royal household formed a line behind the members of the Royal family on both sides of the chapel.

The ceremonial having concluded, the visitors proceeded to the Green Drawing-room and Picture Gallery, and shortly after partook of a collation with the Royal family in the supper-room.

The supper-room had been handsomely fitted for the occasion, much of the most curious and most costly of the plate belonging to the palace was displayed upon the tables and upon the buffet, and conspicuous among the viands was a superb christening cake.

During the collation the Lord Steward gave the following toasts :—"His Royal Highness Prince Albert Victor of Wales," after which the band played "Rule, Britannia ;" "His Majesty the King of the Belgians," after which the band played a Belgian air ; "His Majesty the King of Denmark," after which the band played a Danish air ; "The Queen," after which the band played "God save the Queen ;" "The Prince and Princess of Wales," after which the band played "The Prince of Wales Quick Step."

In the evening the Prince and Princess of Wales gave a banquet at Marlborough House.

The Prince will hold a Levée, on behalf of the Queen, to-day (Saturday).

Sir Charles Wood has received and presented to the Prince and Princess an address of congratulation from the Mohammedan community of Calcutta, upon the Royal Highnesses' marriage.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred arrived in London on Wednesday night from Edinburgh, in order to be present at the ceremony of christening the infant Prince.

The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort have arrived in town from Badminton.

The Duke and Duchess of Cleveland have arrived at their residence in Curzon-street from Raby Castle.

Marquis and Marchioness D'Andigne returned to the French Embassy on Monday from Paris.

The Earl and Countess of Macclesfield returned to Eaton-hall on Monday morning from Paris.

The Earl and Countess of Mount Charles arrived in town on Tuesday from Bridge-place, Canterbury.

The Earl and Countess of Portarlington have arrived in town from visiting the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough at Blenheim House, Oxon.

The Earl and Countess of Zetland left town on Monday for Aske Hall, Yorkshire.

Countess Craven and the Ladies Craven have arrived at Combe Abbey, Coventry, from a visit to the Countess of Selkirk.

The Earl of Sefton left Ashdown Park, Berks, on Monday, for Croxteth Park, Liverpool.

Viscount and Viscountess Ingestre have arrived in town from Heaton Hall, Manchester.

Viscount Hamilton returned to Chesterfield House on Tuesday from Beaudesert, Staffordshire.

The mother of Lady Eleanor Hare, sister of the Earl of Listowel, with Mr. Edward Heneage, late of the 1st Life Guards, is fixed to take place on the 17th.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Duchess of Inverness entertained at dinner on Saturday evening last, in Belgrave-square, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Lord Palmerston, Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, and a select circle of the aristocracy.

Countess Granville gave a dinner party on Saturday evening at her residence in Carlton-gardens.

Lord Ashburton has had a soirée on Saturday evening last at Ashridge-park, Hertfordshire, which was attended by all the elite of the political and fashionable world. Previously to the assembly the noble Viscount and Viscountess entertained the Prince and Princess of Wales at dinner at Ashridge. Viscountess Palmerston will give a ball at Cambridge House on Wednesday next.

Countess Russell had an assembly yesterday afternoon at the house of the Right Honorable Lord John Russell, in Chesham-place, Belgrave-square, to visitors, including the leading members of the diplomatic circle, together with many of the nobility in town, amongst her Ladyship's wide circle of friends.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Archbishop of York will not hold his primary visitation this year.

An association is being formed in the diocese of York, with the Archbishop as President, to promote the instruction of the parochial choirs throughout the diocese in Gregorian music.

Stained glass memorial windows were last week erected by Mr. Pethwick Pethwick in Bath Abbey Church, in memory of the late Rear-Admiral ; and St. Alban's Church, Worcester.

The Rev. Canon Jones, of Liverpool, contains orders by her Majesty approving and ratifying various schemes and representations of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

The Rev. William Lee, D.D., Archbishop King's Lecturer of Divinity, and formerly Professor of Ecclesiastical History in the University of Dublin, author of "Lectures on the Inspiration of Holy Scripture," and an essay on Miracles, and other works, has been appointed Archdeacon of Dublin.

The clergy of the diocese of Peterborough, assembled on Thursday week, after having undergone renovation, at a cost of about £1000. The bell of the tower has been restored by Mr. Taylor, of Oxford.

A movement is on foot amongst the nobility, gentry, clergy, and others of Hereford, to erect a statue to the memory of Bishop Coplestone, late Bishop of Llandaff, who during the last twenty-one years has been unremittingly in his episcopal capacity at Hereford. It is proposed that the memorial shall take the form of the restoration of Rotherhall Church, in which parish the Episcopal Palace is situated, and wherein the late Bishop officiated for a time just ere he obtained the greatest possible interest.

A general ordination will be held by the Archbishop of York on Sunday, the 21st of July next. The Bishop of London will hold a general ordination in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, London, on the 24th inst. Ordinations will be held by the Bishop of Peterborough, at Peterborough ; by the Bishop of Lincoln, at Lincoln ; by the Bishop of Salisbury, at Salisbury ; by the Bishop of Hereford, at Hereford ; by the Bishop of Chester, at Chester ; by the Bishop of Ripon, at Ripon ; by the Bishop of Durham, at Auckland ; by the Bishop of Bath and Wells, at Wells ; by the Bishop of Worcester, at Worcester ; by the Bishop of Oxford, at Cuddesdon ; by the Bishop of Winchester, at Farnham. The Queen has been graciously pleased to approve and ratify the royal consent and recommendation to the Bishop of Rochester to exhibit his next general ordination on the 3rd of July ; and the Bishop of Chichester will hold his next general ordination on the 10th of July.

The Rev. Henry Woollam, M.A., Curate to the Ven. Archdeacon Jones, Incumbent of St. Paul's, Waterloo, near Liverpool, has lately been presented by the parishioners with a handsome purse of gold and a valuable piece of plate.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—The well-known case of the Regius Professor of Greek at Oxford has excited much public interest, and, as a consequence, it was recently received by the University Council, without opposition, and by the body of resident members of Convocation, by a majority of seventy-seven to fifty-six, that the Professor's statutory obligation to reside should be dispensed with. The Vice-Chancellor of the University pronounces no judgment on the Professor's theological writings. The particulars of the case will be found in the "Notes and Queries."

"The Christian Year," and was accepted by Dr. Parry and his immediate successors, and by Dr. Jeune, the present Master, previously to his elevation to the Bench. Twenty-one years ago Keble was elected Professor of Poetry at Oxford. On Tuesday he delivered the opening lecture of his second term of office. The theatre was crowded to excess, and notice is given that certain persons not bodies corporate would be admitted to the approaching commemoration by her Majesty.—The Rev. Evan Evans, Senior Fellow, Tutor and Vice-Rector of Lincoln College, has been elected Rector of Exeter College.

At Cambridge the Chancellor's Medal for Legal Studies has been awarded to Mr. Frederick Pollock, B.A., Scholar of Trinity ; and the Chancellor's Medal for Classical Scholarship to Mr. Richard Shilleto, Scholar of Trinity ; and the Bristowe Scholarship to Mr. H. Sedgwick, Scholar of Trinity. The Rev. Dr. Kennedy, Head Master of Shrewsbury School, has been appointed Examiner.

The Bangalore Journal states that a letter has been received from Rut Ramaji expressing his regret that the presence of business at the Foreign Office will probably prevent his visiting Aberdeen for his installation as Lord Rector of the University until autumn.

The Rev. R. G. Watson, M.A., First Senior Optime, 1858, formerly Head Master of the Halstead Grammar School, has been appointed to the head mastership of the Dorset County School, Dorchester.

The Rev. Dr. Cartmell, Master of Magdalene College, Cambridge, has been elected First Ecclesiastical Master of King Edward VI. School, Norwich.

A testimonial, consisting of a splendid gold watch and chain and a beautifully illuminated address, has been presented to the Rev. Percival Bowen, late Head Master of the Aberdare Intermediate School, by the country people, in recognition of his services during a period of upwards of thirty years.

COUNTRY NEWS.

There have been heavy floods in the counties of Leicester, Derby, and Notts. The valley of the Trent was flooded for miles.

The value of the tobacco at present in the Queen's Warehouse, at Liverpool, is estimated at £6,000,000.

About 1½ ton weight of vualluk was caught in the River Wye, in the Isle of Wight, one day last week.

Captain Falcon, late commander of the steam-ship Great Eastern, has been appointed manager of Watkin's Railway.

Mr. Joseph Wright, solicitor, has been elected Coroner for the Doncaster district, in the West Riding, in the room of Mr. W. Marriott, resigned.

A committee was appointed, at a meeting held at the Townhall, Manchester, on Wednesday, to raise a subscription for the sick and wounded Danes, and for the relief of the families of the killed.

The 4th West York Regiment of Militia will assemble for twenty-one days' training, at Leeds, on the 18th of April next, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Cairnes. The recruits will assemble on the 4th of April for preliminary drill, under the adjutant.

The protracted pleadings as to the relevancy of the information filed in the Court of Session in the case of the suspected murderer mixed in the Clyde were brought to a close at Edinburgh yesterday week. The Judges took time to consider their decision.

Mr. William Coulson, well known in medical circles in London, was entertained at a dinner at Penzance, Cornwall, yesterday week, as a mark of public satisfaction at the manner in which he had discharged the duties of High Sheriff during the year.

John Eden, Esq., of Beamish Park, Durham, has built and endowed seven almshouses, at a cost of £12,000, which are well occupied by old worshipful, who have been for a long number of years employed on the Beamish estate, and who, by their long and faithful conduct, and constant attendance, bedroom, kitchen, and every convenience for the comfort of the inmates.

The Earl of Chichester, Lord Lieutenant of Sussex, has communicated with the commanding officers of the several volunteer corps in that county, requesting them to assemble the following day at the volunteer review on Easter Monday. The rise selected is on the Downs, near the race stand at Lewes.

At the Shrewsbury Shirehall, on Tuesday, a meeting, numerously attended by the magistrates, gentry, and tenant-farmers of the county, was held to deliberate on the means to be taken to obtain a total repeal of the malt tax. The High Sheriff presided. Several resolutions were passed in favour of total repeal, and it was resolved to petition Parliament in that sense.

The Duke of Northumberland has given £150 towards the erection of a new bridge at Alnmouth, Northumberland ; and the Duchess and owners of the property in the neighbourhood have come forward in the same manner to defray the expense of erecting a stone bridge in the place of the premises wooden structure.

At a meeting held at Wolverhampton, on Thursday week, the colliery proprietors in "the thin coal district" determined to resist all demands for an advance of wages. The men's delegates, after the meeting, also decided that no strike should take place, but that a week's notice should be given for a strike, the whole of the trade would give their men notice to cease work.

Upwards of 1000 persons met at the Ashton Townhall on Monday night, when resolutions were passed in favour of Mr. Thomas Bartlolo, recently town clerk of the borough. The testimonials consist of two pieces of plate, and a purse containing 1000 sovereigns. The presentation was made to Mr. Bartlolo by the mayor, managers, and subscribers of Ashton and the neighbourhood ; and a second address from the young women in the service of Mrs. Bartlolo. The latter address, followed by a purse, was presented to Henry Bartlolo, Esq., by a number of the foreigners of Ashton-under-Lyne, in recognition of the kindness and valued services of Mr. Bartlolo during a period of seventeen years, and in acknowledgment of his successful exertions in obtaining from the Government the liberation of Mazzini from prison, at the memorable operatives of the manor of Ashton-under-Lyne. March 7, 1844."

A REMARKABLE CASE.—On Thursday week, at the Home Circuit came into a strange conflict with the Judge, Lord Chief Baron Pollock, in the Court of Exchequer. The case was one of a charge of theft of mixed corn, well knowing it to have been stolen. The main evidence against the prisoner was that of the prisoner's wife, and that chief, who, due to wild was clear corn. The Judge stopped the case and told the jury they could not receive a verdict of "Guilty." The Judge said that he had not anticipated that the jury would find the prisoner guilty, and that he had left the case to them in order that they might have the responsibility resting on them again that they could not convict on the evidence. They persisted, however, in returning a verdict of "Guilty," and the Judge then directed a verdict of acquittal. A discussion ensued, the jury continuing to adhere to their verdict of "Guilty." The Lord Chief Baron then left the matter, and the Judge, after the jury had retired from the Court, acquitted the prisoner.

Mr. Justice Shee arrived at Northampton on Monday, and opened the commission for Norfolk. The calendar of prisoners is unusually heavy. There are 60 prisoners for trial, 20 of whom are females. Twenty-one of the twenty-seven cases for the county, and

The Grand Jury for the county of Essex was opened at Chelmsford on Monday by Baron Bramwell. The calendar contained 100 prisoners. The Baron

Bernard Cargay was found "Guilty" at the Carron Assizes, yesterday week, of the murder of Peter Reilly, of Coatlaeeta, twelve or thirteen years ago.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

Lord John Hay, who was recently in command of the Odin, on the China station, has been selected as the Captain of the Achilles.

The lieutenant-governorship of the Royal Military College at Sandhurst will, it is understood, be filled up by the promotion of Colonel Lockhart first to be Major-General.

A committee has been appointed to sit at Burlington House, with General Sabine as its chairman, to inquire into the merits of gun-cotton. General Sabine is also a member of the committee on the Armstrong gun.

Lieutenant-General Robert Swinburne died at his residence, Grosvenor-square, on Monday, after a short illness. He entered the service in the Army June 24, 1813.

The examination for admission to the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, will take place on June 16 ; that for the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, on July 4 ; and that for the Staff College on July 11.

Public notice will be given as soon as the date of the next examination for direct commissions has been fixed, and the necessary communications will be made to the several candidates concerned.

The Gazette of yesterday week contains a list, dated India Office, March 1, 1864, of the officers appointed to the Bengal Staff Corps to date from the 15th of February, 1861, and specifies the rank they are to have in her Majesty's Army from the date of their appointment to their regiments.

The standard for recruits for the infantry has been lowered by an inch—namely, to 5 ft. 3 in. The standard for the Royal Artillery for the Marines remains as at present, at 5 ft. 4½ in. for lads from eighteen to twenty, and at 5 ft. 5 in. for those above twenty years of age.

Her Majesty's armour-plated ship the Zealous was successfully launched on Saturday morning last, from Pembroke Dockyard. She is a wooden screw steamer of 3715 tons burden and 800-horse power. She carries twenty guns, but can be fitted for thirty-two. She is built, and her armour backing is 9 in.

A copy of the proceedings of the late court-martial for the relief of Colonel Crowley was published last Saturday, in the form of a Parliamentary paper. The court-martial was held on the 19th of February, and appended is a new plans and notations of Sergeant-Major Lilley's quarters in the cantonment of Hong Kong. The total of the expenses occasioned by this court-martial, to be defrayed from the imperial revenue, is £18,318 17s. 6d.

The Royal Engineers have successfully floated out of her dock at Portsmouth on Tuesday, in the presence of Vice-Admiral Sir H. Seymour, Rear-Admiral Sir F. Grey, Commodore Key, C.B., Captain Hewlett and her Captains Cowper, Coles, Caldwell, Seccombe, Key, Colonel Somerset, and a large number of naval and military officers. The Royal Sovereign was a wooden decker, but has been cut down and converted into a cupola-ship, with three turrets, on Captain Coles's principle. She is 3240 tons burden, and draws 24 feet when valuable for coast defence. She floats much lighter than was expected, and draws 18 feet 6 inches aft and 17 feet 6 inches forward. She is a great success in conversion goes.

To the end of last month 19,760 applications have been received and 17,158 volunteers enrolled in the Royal Naval Reserve.—The Gazette of yesterday week contains an order by her Majesty in Council, the duties relating to personal accounts of officers of the Royal Naval Reserve, duties relating to personal accounts of officers of the Royal Naval Reserve. The regulations state which are to be substituted in the service described by that court-martial, to be that the number of officers on the active list shall not exceed 700, and that they shall be of the following classes—Lieutenants, un-Lieutenants, engineers, and first-class assistant engineers ; they further state that, in addition to the officers of the Reserve on the active list, there shall be a class of honorary officers of not more than 1000 lieutenants, and 100 in number, and they give various rules applicable to the mode of appointment, qualifications, promotions, retirements, resignations, removals, discipline, service afloat, and pay, allowance, and pensions to widows.

THE WAR IN SCHLESWIG.

CHAPEL AT GRAVENSTEIN USED AS A PRUSSIAN BARRACK.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

DISTRIBUTING MEDALS TO AUSTRIAN TROOPS AT HOPTRUP.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 305.

OFFICERS OF THE 1ST SURREY VOLUNTEER RIFLE CORPS.—SEE PAGE 256.

THE 1ST SURREY RIFLE VOLUNTEER CORPS.

The Engraving which occupies the preceding page represents the officers of the 1st Surrey Rifle Corps in full uniform. This is one of the oldest of the metropolitan corps, having been formed in 1859. The county of Middlesex, indeed, has the precedence in the volunteer annals, the Honourable Artillery Company being the oldest in existence. Next comes the county of Devon, whose volunteer force was established about the year 1650; and Lancashire holds the third place, the first corps there having sprung into existence a short time before the 1st Surrey. The establishment, and the 1st Surrey consists of eight companies, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Macdonald, formerly Lieutenant-Colonel in the 1st Royal Surrey Militia, but distinguished Indian veteran General Sir George Pollock, G.C.B., K.S.I. The Adjutant of the corps is Captain Freeman, formerly Captain in the 13th Regiment. The officers there have all served in that gallant body the 60th Rifles. With these advantages, the 1st Surrey has gained a reputation which is very well-drilled as well as a good-shooting regiment. Its marksmen have lately taken part in competitions at Wimbledon, Metropolitan Artillery Company, and of the London Rifle Brigade, besides having on several occasions met with other corps. Hitherto the 1st Surrey has not yet succeeded in carrying off the Queen's prize at Wimbledon, one of its sergeants, Sergeant Adams, was in the shot at Wimbledon, 1863. The number of marksmen is steadily on the increase, year by year, and would this year have been much larger, but for the difficulty in getting a first-class range.

The band of this corps, comprising twenty-four performers, claims to be the best of the volunteer bands, and, under its able leader, Mr. Callcott, formerly of the Coldstreams, performs every Thursday evening, at the head-quarters of the corps, in Exeter Hall, Strand. The value of the prizes distributed this year at the Crystal Palace, on Saturday, 5th, divided into seven classes, ranged in the amount from £3 3s. to £15 15s., in addition to challenge cups of greater value. Several of the officers of the corps will be seen grouped in our Engraving. Colonel Macdonald is seated at one end of the table, with Mr. Harrison Weir, the Assistant-Commandant, on his over a map or drawing, at the other hand. Captain Freeman, the Adjutant, stands behind the silver cups, in the centre of the background.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

THE art, or, indeed, the science, of Parliamentary "whipping-in" was, if not an invention of the Tories, at least brought to perfection by a prominent chief party. As a rule, the Whigs have always been very sensitive "whippers-in," the great, the most notable, exception being Sir William Molesworth, who has always, we think, been never surpassed, in skill and tact in that peculiar vocation. At the present time a close fight for the possession of office is not expected, and has the best teamsters, who are better able than those of the Ministry to put pressure on their followers, been chosen by them to do their business to steer into the division lobbies. Twice within a few days the Government has been compelled to resort to put the most charitable construction upon the queer position in which they found themselves; for we are disinclined to suppose that they were so base to proclaim, that they have been within an ace of being beaten on account of inherent weakness. There is something in the way in which defeat comes upon a Government which aggravates the painful fact itself, and certainly when the casualty is led by the Chief Secretary for Ireland, it is not likely to be, in a country gentleman, being a partner in a mercantile firm—though he should say, decidedly a cheaper article than sugar—to be a School of pecuniary cavalry—the mortification must be more than ordinarily severe. Happily for the Government, Mr. Horsman was both in and out of Parliament, being saved by a majority of "one" from being overturned by Colonel Edwards' motion, and the country will understand and appreciate this at once; but it will be difficult to bring the cause of the case pure and simple to the comprehension of the uninitiated. But we will ask them to imagine a legislator who, when he addresses the House on a Government question is so struggling with an idea that somehow the Constitution of the country depends on the keeping up of the learning of its present party is coextensive with the preservation of the breed of horses, and who probably in his recent estimation places the game laws before the Habeas Corpus Act, and imagines that it is the duty of Her Majesty's Government on the question whether there should be the usual training this year of the force in a manner somewhat new to the front and most soldier (and cavalry soldier)-looking corps which we have ever supposed to exist.

On a later occasion Ministers were placed in a still more mortifying position, even in former times, when a Government measure was upon the point of honour in reference to their Parliamentary strength, could have had but one result. The question involved related to some changes in the administration of the Navy, which, as proposed by Mr. Adderley and a considerable number of co-thinkers, chose to attribute to the Admiralty most injurious effects, owing to the fact that the vice-president of the department which regulates these things. There is a luxuriance, an exuberance, in some minds as to the ease in which the House sets about to criticise this right hon. gentleman. Even the country has to be in constant communication therewith, and can whip with scorpions where others can only flagellate with a penny cane, does not prevent the sitting Member for Manchester, for which has a strong family likeness to a personal feeling. Well, on this occasion a new "rugy whipper-in" for the Government vice-president, and some of the smartest ente came from behind—smartest, because of their purity onlookness; and the debate ran so completely one way of it, that an honourable and learned member actually moved the adjournment, on the ground that nothing had been said on the part of the Government. However, the House was determined that the discussion arrived which signifies that Opposition arguments are exhausted and an official reply is called for. Then, as usual, curious to relate, was absolutely bland, courteous, and—in an awkward, unpractised sense—conciliating. Mr. Somerset Beaumont, the motion that he should oppose the motion, and argued against it with his usual rhetorical skill, which, backed as it is by great knowledge and from a purely intellectual point of view, is hugely to be admired. But the circumstances of the case were unfavourable to the speaker that Mr. Disraeli, having given notice of an interpolation to the Government on the subject of the Fenian papers, and the same notice for the same evening having been given by Lord Derby in the Lords, it was expected that a great party demonstration was intended, and that a manifestation was to be made on the part of the Government in both Houses. This brought together a large assemblage of Opposition members in the House of Lords, but the Tories lately never interesting anything particular, or, as was insinuated, prevented from active movement by the fear of the Income-tax Inust, his first publicly acknowledged one—did nothing particular. Advantage was, no doubt, taken of the presence of many Conservatives to ask their support of Mr. Adderley against the Government; and it turned out that, in fact, the Tories were there, culminating to a triumph against the motion, the chief "whipper-in" with bated breath and whispering humility, and consequently hidden by the stereotyped smile which it is part of his business to wear, assisted to the House, and was observed to be a swinging majority in favour of the motion. This was telegraphed from behind by Mr. Lowe, and Mr. Horsman rose to say a few words, and, above all, not changing in the least his line of argument, wound up what sounded more like a recommendation to the motion by saying, in the most pick-tooth way, that he would agree to it. Astonishment, for a moment, prevented the shout of ironical laughter which greeted such a humiliating concession; and men who have known parties and Parliaments in days gone by, and who witnessed this scene, pondered over the mutability of human affairs, and wondered what next would come to put to shame those who profess to govern men and guide the State.

Amongst the recognised officers of the House of Common proper, formal posts were at no period fewer, but there has been always some particular member who may have been supposed to have appointed himself to perform the function which belonged to the regular mimic. At the present moment, however, there is no one in the House who consciously performs this task, although there are one or two who unconsciously develop the necessary qualities. Since the return of Mr. Fermand to Parliament he seems to have been accepted as one who can and will dissipate at times the organised dulness of the present Parliament. Not that he intends to be comic, for, if ever a man and a member was impressed with the belief of the seriousness and intense gravity of the grievances of himself and the electors of Stockport, it is Mr. Fermand. Hence, the "roar" of laughter which when fell for him the House would have dissolved from inanition, he has taken to be in earnest, and has entered into the arena of debate by dockyard officials on him in his contests for the borough, which he has at last won. Mr. Fermand, as he is most pathetic, and when his tale is supposed by him to be at its most horrible point, the House roars with mirth. But, in his happy selfconfidence, he has found out that the House is not to be moved, or therefore a passionate mode of expressing sympathy and uttering consolation, by the happy quality of laughter, and he blessing us for them to those who possess this! Oddly enough, the only man in the House who can be relied upon to laugh at the right time is Mr. Fermand was gentle, long-suffering, apologetic, sympathetic, Lord Clarence Paget. The Government have made a wonderful, and a sudden change in the spirit and demeanour of the hitherto meek and candid Secretary to the Admiralty. Before we can recover from the first blood in him, for he broke out into language against Mr. Fermand which was no unparliamentary, although it was a measure was made which is supposed to involve all sorts of terrors—namely, that the words to be taken down. A very scanty, half unintelligible House, suffered from probable fear of the parliamentary Speaker: and an incident which ought to have been appalling, in a Parliament which was not Parliamentary, was passed over, and place was at once re-established. It is believed that Mr. Fermand will appear in the House to-night (Wednesday) to call Sergeant Vicinus" one a forthright during the present Session.

With unfeigned pleasure we turn from the matter to dwell for a while on the circumstance of the introduction of the Army Estimates by Sir Hartington, on Monday last. The new Secretary for War is not Lord Palmerston's facilities as an administrator was that essential one of knowing when to stop, and when to go on with a speech. When, therefore, Lord Hartington was appointed to the very responsible duty of the War Office, we thought that the House was to have not his capability at once upon trust; and in a short time their confidence was justified by the performance by the new Secretary of his duties with admirable tact, skill, and, with adequate knowledge, a grasp of what he was talking about. But the House of Commons has a way of its own, and it is not to be wondered at that the new Minister from all its members who wish to stand well with it—and it is not to be supposed that there is a single exception—should have felt it a catch that peculiar tone when he first became a prominent personage in the house. The Secretary for War has fully succeeded in acquiring it. Nothing can be more deferential—in the proper and highest sense of the term—than his demeanour towards the House; and while nobody holds his own as a Government official more steadily and to greater effect. In moving the Army Estimates—in an address which occupied a long time—Lord Hartington never made a check, and exhibited rare, arrangement, and acquaintance in his statement, which, indeed, is the very perfection of the art of speaking. Many of the economies which old and experienced members and statesmen passed upon Lord Hartington's proposals were, in fact, economies not very easy, when a War Minister has to develop principles as well as to state facts and figures.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

The following abstract the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 4th, the day appointed for the Session, published fully

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, March 4.

No business of public importance was transacted by their Lordships, who only sat about half an hour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, March 4.

The report of Supply was brought up and agreed to.

The Bankers' Clearing House Bill

The Marine Bill was brought in and read a first time.

The Earl of DERBY, in moving the second reading of PALMERSTON, in reply to Sir W. Stirling, said that Captain Speke had, no doubt, by his discoveries, added much to our knowledge of Africa, but he (Mr. Layard) thought that the discoveries of Dr. Livingstone were of much greater importance. He confessed he could hardly see what benefit would be conferred on the mass of mankind by the discovery of the sources of the Nile, except that of personal gratification. Dr. Livingstone had encountered great dangers, and discovered things of equal importance to Captain Speke's discoveries, and, besides, was given every attention to the case of Captain Speke, and other cases of a similar character. He (Mr. Layard) would be glad to take any steps in his way of their special recognition.—Sir W. MILES gave notice of his intention to move for a Select Committee to inquire into the state of the Nile.

SIR MORTON MONTGOMERY'S SERVICES AT MOROCCO.—Mr. LAYARD, in reply to Mr. Bentinck, said that the services rendered by Sir Morton Montgomery at the time of the late disturbances at Morocco were of the most valuable kind. (Mr. Layard) could not believe that the Sultan gave any sanction to the atrocities which had been committed. Sir Morton Montgomery had certainly succeeded in obtaining a mitigation of those severities and in putting some of the perpetrators to death. Sir Morton Montgomery had a high tribute to the hon. Baronet for having at his advanced age undertaken the duty of proceeding to Morocco, and rendering such important service to his country. The Sultan had consented to yield equal religious rights to the Jews and Christians. Mr. LAYARD said he had no intention to oppose the pensions; nor did he think his heretofore are to those of his own creed, but he thought the House ought to be informed of the facts.

THE LATE MR. MACAULAY'S PENSION.—Mr. LAYARD, in reply to Mr. Treasury whether there was any truth in the following statement, extracted from the Glasgow Herald:—"The Secretary to the Treasury has formally applied to the Post Office authorities for permission to discontinue the mail to the town of Cromarty, which has existed for 200 years. It is understood their intention of entering upon negotiations with another company for the use of steamers sailing between Leith and Inverness, in which the new company will not be in readiness to sail even then. The directors are reported to be of opinion that the mail service is not sufficiently remunerative at present to their possession, and will, in all probability, endeavour to effect a change in the arrangements." Mr. LAYARD said that the statement was correct, and that the Post Office authorities had given notice to the Cromarty Company that they would not be held entitled to the mail service after the 31st of March next. The Post Office, he believed, was not bound to continue the service.

CHINA.—Colonel SYKES called attention to the resolutions of County reports touching European settlements in China, and to the Memorial which had been entered at some length into a history of the proceedings of the English in China, contending that the Government had been guilty of a flagrant violation of the natives generally.—Lord PALMERSTON admitted that the plan of the Memorial was good, and contained much valuable information. He thought the House should accept the Opening Address of the Governing British Settlements offered to them at this service, had proved a failure, and both the orders in Council had been issued with the object of forcing the trade with the Chinese had two—namely, cruelty and perfidy. He was informed that steps had been taken to establish a Consular Court at the Bay of Yeddo.

PENAL SERVITUDE.—On the second reading of the Penal Servitude Acts Amendment Bill, Mr. HENLEY moved that the House should go into Committee that day six months. In which the arguments for and against the measure which had been made by the introduction of the bill were repeated by Mr. Beach, Mr. Hardy, Lord Robert Cecil, Mr. Ayrton, Mr. Bouverie, Mr. Walpole, and Mr. Mowe. The amendment was ultimately withdrawn, and the bill read a second time.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

Sir John Lawrence's Annuity Bill was read a second time.

Lord Cornwallis inquired why, in the distribution of the Parliamentary grants for the payment of the Kertch and Yenikale Railway, the officers who were not present at the operations were included in the list of those entitled to the prize money.—The Duke of Somerset said that the distribution had been made in accordance with a proclamation of March, 1854, and the existing regulations in such matters.

Lord Granville called the attention of the House to the report of the Select Committee on railway schemes within the limits of the metropolis; and moved that the report be referred to the consideration of the Committee on the Victoria-station and Pimlico-pier, Victoria-station, Railway, Oxford-street and City Railway, London Main Trunk Underground Railway, and Victoria-station and Railway, Chelsea Extension Railway, Battersea Park and Hampstead Junction Railway (Extension to Charing-cross), London Underground Railway, and Tottenham and Hampstead Junction Railway. On behalf of the Bills he incurred in respect of the said bills is remitted; and that the said report be referred to all the Committees on the said railway bills when the Lords Committee of the metropolis may be referred in the present Session. The motion was ultimately agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The Mutiny Bill was brought in and read a first time.

The House went into Committee pro forma on the Warehousing of British Spirits Bill, and the Chairman was instructed to report the bill with no alterations.

The Local Taxation (Provisional Orders) Bill was passed through Committee, with the addition of a clause authorising the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to make use of the sum of £1,000 for that purpose.

The Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes (Ireland) Bill was passed through Committee.

Mr. O'Hagan obtained leave to introduce a bill to amend the Common Law Procedure Act (Ireland), 1853, and the Acts amending the same, and to make other provisions in relation thereto.

Lord Palmerston, in reply to Mr. Disraeli, said the accounts which the Government had received of the invasion of Jutland by the Austrians were to believed the German news wanted to get possession of Fredericia. One reason given for the occupation of Jutland was that the Danish army could not defend Schleswig. The Government thought that the whole military operations hitherto had not been of a character to throw upon the Danish Government the German Governments knew the opinion of her Majesty's Government on the matter, and there was no reason why we should not speak with them openly.

GOVERNMENT ANNUITIES.

On going into Committee on the Government Annuities Bill,

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said that the last report of the Registrar of Friendly Societies showed such an unsatisfactory state of those institutions that public attention was directed to the matter, and it appeared to him that it was the duty of the Government to interfere and to amend the law on the subject, by making it operate on a point on which it was now inoperative. The object of the bill was to afford to the working classes of sensible, or assurance for the people, it was abstractedly the duty of the Government to afford them the facilities which had been granted for the use of the Post Office Savings Banks Act, which Parliament had passed. It was not proposed to undertake assurance business to any greater extent than those on which ordinary insurance offices acted. He admitted that Government assurance offices could not be called into existence and business was only to be justified on the ground of preventing evil. The proposed bill had grown out of the necessity of dealing with friendly societies, and, therefore, the Government had thought that they could do the most helpful class of the community. By exempting friendly societies from several duties and taxation, they would practically make their responsible for them; and the form of intervention or remedy now chosen was a simple one, and it was thought that it would answer the end in view. There were friendly Banks—but of giving the poor man a certain security for his investments. If the Government undertook the duty, it would be necessary for them to view to prevent the failure of the institutions. The object of the bill was, in fact, to that object, the Government had peculiar sources for intending parties and rendering the bill easy of application. In the course of his explanation toward assurance societies, he contended that the principal companies were either useless or mischievous in their operations, as they did more by small business roughly by the present bill, and were, in fact, independent even of Government control. Mr. HUBBARD, while he approved the principle of Government assurance societies, he contended that the good associations need not fear the rivalry which the bill would create in country districts. The great security of the advantages of which the people ought not to be deprived if they desired it. Lord STANLEY of Alderley thought that the bill would be of great advantage for obtaining annuities at a moderate rate. He was glad to find that the Government offered were perfect security, greater facilities for preserving policies which were frequently lost through carelessness, and facilities to the migratory habits of the industrial population. In short, there would be no fear of Government interference with the trade to any serious or previous prevailed. The right hon. gentleman then gave several vivid illustrations of the influence of annuities in the case of a certain class of assurance societies, involving, as he contended, insecurity and even fraud. Taking up friendly societies, he contended that the bill would be of the first importance to the people, and in another 20,600. While deprecating the notion that he was opposed to the principle of the measure, he thought it would cost the Government management, and insecurity of the great bulk of the existing societies. He concluded by moving that the bill be committed that day six months. After a long and able debate the measure was proposed.

Mr. W. E. FORSTER explained himself opposed to the measure, considering that it was an invasion of the province of the legitimate business of life insurance.

Lord STANLEY of Alderley said that he was not to be justified in voting against the bill, which, as it was framed, was not to be justified in voting against the bill, which, as it was framed, was not to be justified in voting against the bill, which, as it was framed, towards the Baltic, and take our sentence from the Government that, in the event of the Austrian navy entering that sea, a British squadron would go to assist them.

The Earl of ELLESMERE could not answer to some more decisive declaration of the intentions of the Government upon this important question before the Easter recess.

Earl GREY confirmed the conduct of the Government in the GERMAN-DANISH question, as shown by the published despatches.

The Earl of HARDWICKE was anxious that Parliament should have the opportunity of reviewing such an opinion upon the question as would strengthen the hands of the Executive.

The Earl of CLARENDON said that the Government had negotiated, they had had to negotiate in a delicate way to use every means in their power not to make matters worse than they were, if it became necessary, to vindicate the honour and interest of this country. He could not consent to lay before the House the course of the diplomatic conduct of the Government by a vote of want of confidence; or, if he thought they should be justified in communicating it into a war, to take the sense of the House upon a resolution expressing that view. The Government could not make war when it was possible that the integrity and independence of Denmark could be secured by other means; neither would they engage in anything by which their own just independence could be maintained. With regard to the movements of the British fleet, the Channel fleet would not have been ordered to sea but for the necessity of its readiness to receive any orders which should be deemed necessary, and it would not be necessary to call out the reserves unless it were certain to be consider the equipment of the Queen's ships.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

Lord Palmerston announced that it was his intention to propose that the House do go into committee on Friday, the 18th inst., should nothing occur to hinder it, until the following Monday fortnight.

Mr. George Cave moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the expediency and practicability of abolishing turnpike trusts. After a short discussion this proposition was also agreed to.

Lord Palmerston, in reply to Mr. Bicknell, said that negotiations for a conference were in progress, and when they were concluded the papers would be laid before the House.

The business bill, and the Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes (Ireland) Bill, were also read a third time and passed.

The Lord Advocate moved that the report of the united Committee on metropolitan railways should not be received, but that the matter should again be considered by a Select Committee.

The Land Drainage (Provisional Orders) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Watching of Towns (Ireland) Bill was, after some discussion, withdrawn by Sir Hervey Bruce, M.P., for the present session, in order to be well consider the suggestions which were thrown out by the Irish members, with the view of making the establishment of watches more suitable for the purpose aimed at by the measure.

THE METRIC SYSTEM OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

Mr. W. HARVEY moved the second reading of the Weights and Measures (Metric System) Bill, the promoters, perceiving that the time had not arrived, into this country of the metric system, which had, he said, been universally approved in the Continental countries, had been content with a Committee (on whose report the measure was founded), and was framed by the Chairman of that Committee, Mr. Ewart, M.P. The Committee had, he said, taken the most liberal and professional evidence that could be procured, and the result was to demonstrate that, after a few years' experience of it, the measure would be converted from a mere system into a supersystem.

Mr. LUSH, in seconding the motion, dwelt on the defects of the present system of weights and measures, and the difficulties it put in the way of scientific classes. He thought that if this bill were adopted a decimal system of coinage would soon follow.

Mr. M. GIBSON deprecated such a radical change as the measure now proposed, and, after having sneered at the decimal system of coinage, moved that the House, by declaring its unfavourable recognition of the evidence that exist between English and foreign weights, measures, and coins, and the great advantage derived by using our own standards, and those connected with our own coins, which would fulfil the requirements of foreign trade. He should not oppose the second reading, but hoped his hon. friend would be content with some more moderate bill than that proposed.

Mr. HERBERT pointed out some of the disadvantages which would arise from having two systems in use, and expressed his opinion that the subject was one which could only be dealt with by the Executive Government.

Mr. ARDERSLEY thought the Government ought to facilitate the introduction of the metric system, and he should support the second reading of the bill, though it was somewhat crude in its present condition.

Mr. T. BAZLEY considered that Government should bring in a compulsory measure, but at present a permissive bill would be the most practicable course.

Mr. WALTER objected to the bill, on the ground that the use of weights and measures of a particular kind ought not to be made a matter of compulsory. He therefore moved that the bill be read that day six months.

Mr. J. B. SMITH supported the measure, and Colonel SYKES, on the ground that it was a recognition of a principle which he hoped to see adopted.

After a few words from Mr. BOUVERIE, and Colonel DUNNE and Mr. Sir Fairfax in favour of the measure, the House divided—For the second reading, 39; against it, 74.

The bill was then read second time.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The Chief Secretary (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee.

The Local Mortgage Bank of India Bill and the Indian Roads Bill were read a second time.

Sir John Lawrence's Salary Bill was read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

The CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER AND THE ASSURANCE COMPANIES.—Mr. BUTLER-JOHNSTONE made a question as to the two charges which had been brought against him by the Chancellor on account of his connection with the insurance company in which he was a director.—The CHANCELLOR said he would again refer to the documents from which he had made his statement, and he would not withdraw from the position he had taken on that subject, and, if he were in error, whether he was in the form or in substance.

THE STATE OF OUR NAVY.

Mr. LAIRD called the attention to what he considered the defective state of our Navy. The British Navy was the largest and most powerful in any of the world, and was, relatively speaking, as large as ever it had been, for none of those we were behind other nations, especially America, which was devoted to peaceful pursuits, though lighter than they ought to be.

Lord C. PAGET differed in opinion with the hon. gentleman, believing the British Navy to be in a most satisfactory condition. He was sure that the American guns were very useful in their "smashing effects," for which the American people had a taste; but the principle of rifling was more interesting and steady velocity our guns were infinitely superior to them. He confessed the Admiralty had been slow in introducing iron-plated ships, but that was to be accounted for in the circumstance mentioned, that we had to board our ships and other ships of the Egyptian affair, and whilst it was necessary to assimilate to the others of our vessels, he was strongly condemned by those of another.

SUPPLY.

The House having afterwards gone into Committee of Supply, £175,000, the half of the money for the purchase redemption of the Danish Sound dues, calculated upon twenty years' purchase, taking the average of the last ten years, was voted.

Several supplementary Army votes for the crews in some of the Military Exchanges of last year were also agreed to.

Mr. Edward Murray, acting manager of the Royal English Opera, has been engaged by Mr. Willert Beale for the management of a concert tour, commencing on the 28th instant.

Mdlle. Carlotta Patti (in conjunction with Herr Jaell, Herr Lasch, and Signor Marchesi), is giving, under the direction of Mr. B. Ullman, a series of concerts in the principal towns of Italy. The first concert took place at Verona on October after the completion of a short professional engagement in Germany.

The weekly returns of the Poor-law Board show that, at the end of January, the number of paupers in receipt of relief in England was 19 per cent less than at the end of January, 1863. The decrease was slight in the Northern districts, but in the Midland counties it was 20 per cent, and in the Western district, but the ratio was raised to 9 per cent by the decrease of 21 per cent on the south-western division, consisting of Lancashire and Cheshire.

Mr. C. Forster has laid before the House of Commons a bill notable for its brevity. The formal preliminary clause is inserted by Act, a certain of the following thirty-four words:—"From and after the passing of this Act no person or corporation shall cause a bonfire to be made or any person or corporation shall cause a bonfire to be made or any squib or other firework to be thrown or fired in any public street or thoroughfare."

THE DISTRESS IN LANCASHIRE.

The monthly meeting of the Central Relief Fund was held in the Manchester Townhall on Monday.—the Mayor (Mr. J. E. Bennett) in the chair. The report of the executive committee, which was unanimously adopted, stated that, during the month of the preceding month, there were in the last week of January 34,864 factory operatives working short time, and 34,764 entirely out of work; whereas in January, 1863, the numbers were 9,000 and 4,000 respectively. The committee had been compelled to close the operations of the executive committee to meet once a fortnight instead of once a week for the present. Mr. Bennett, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the general meeting should now meet once in two months instead of monthly as before. The resolution was unanimously agreed to. Mr. Alderman Heywood, in reply to Dr. Watts, stated that in Ashtyridge there were in the week ending 5th inst. 2,000 persons out of work, 1,000 on short time, 1,000 full work, and fifty-four men on piecework, averaging 10s. 6d. per week.

The Rev. Canon Stowell, in moving a vote of thanks, said he was also told that Mr. Alderman Heywood had stated that the Manchester committee expected that £200 had been received during the week, and that there was a balance at the bankers of £1,600. He was sorry to say that there was not that sum. Mr. Farnall presented his weekly report, which stated that in twenty towns unions there had been relieved 21,227 persons receiving out-door relief in the week ending Feb. 27, as compared with the previous week. The draught of the monthly report to the Poor-law Board showed that on the 27th ult. 19,000 Lancashire reported as the progress of operations in the cotton-manufacturing districts under the Relief Act, 1863. The Mansion House Committee of the Relief Fund met yesterday week.—the Mayor in the chair. The total amount received up to Thursday was £623,950, of which £474,653 had been received from the cotton districts in Lancashire. £310 had been received during the last fortnight.

The widow of Consul Hanson has been granted £100, "as of her Majesty's Civil Service," by the Treasury, on the recommendation of Viscount Palmerston. Mr. Hanson perished, in 1861, in attempting to swim to the Royal Alfred Aid-de-Camp, which was lying off, at the mouth of the Bistreno river, West Africa.

Mr. Thomas Hood, the son of the poet, and Punch contributor, is the following copy of a letter recently written by a solicitor to the Mayor of a village not 100 miles from Leicester on a point which is not stated:—"Sir, I beg leave to inform you that I am a candidate for the office of Mayor for my father's death. It is a little accident that I am not a member of the Town Council, but I hope to remedy that defect with which I have the honour to salute you."

The Board of Trade returns of exports for January, 1864, show that during the month 2974 vessels, with a tonnage of 725,275 tons, entered with cargo, and 2,115, with 1,000,000 tons, cleared with cargo. The tonnage in the corresponding month of 1863 was, inward, 619,881; and outward, 956,251. The value of the exports in January, 1864, was £7,195,109; cotton yarn, 1,748,854 lb., value £630,211; cotton manufactures to the value of £2,305,254. The exports of cotton piece goods were 91,639 cwt.; tea, 7,694,310 lb.; sugar (unrefined), 633,145 cwt.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

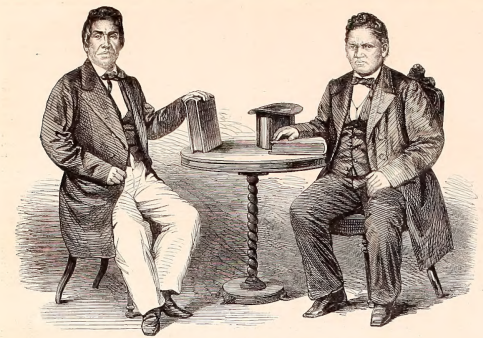
Very confluences of business is followed by proportionate ease in money feeling in the market for Exchequer Securities. The purchases of stock have been on a very moderate scale, and the prices of the leading descriptions have undergone no material alteration. Consols, for account, have ranged between 90¼ and 90¾, and the present quotation is 90¾. The applications for accommodation at the Bank of England have on no occasion been numerous, and the total amount of the week's advances, £1,000,000, is the smallest on record. The interest allowed by the Bank on deposits is as follows:—

Thirty days' bills ..... 2½ per cent. | Four months' bills ..... 3½ per cent.
Two months' bills ..... 3 " | Six months' bills ..... 4 "
Three months' bills ..... 3½ "

The amount in the Bank Exchequer for short periods is about 1 per cent.

On the Continent no change of importance has taken place in the quotations for money. The following are the present rates:—

Paris	3 per cent.	Amsterdam	3 "
Hamburg	4 "	Brussels	3 "
Vienna	6 "	Rotterdam	3 "
Berlin	4 "	Frankfort	3 "
Frankfort	4 "	Madrid	6 "



Most of the Continental as well as the American exchanges continue in favour of this country.

The imports of produce and metals have been on a moderate scale, but several quarters of the week have been marked by a fair demand. The following are the imports into the port of London during the week ending Feb. 27:—

The sources of the Board of Trade for January are very favourable. They show an increase of £1,000,000 in the value of the exports, compared with the corresponding month of last year, and of £2,000,000 in the imports.

The stock of bullion in the New York banks still continues to decline; but we notice that the Bank of England has received considerable supplies of gold from the interior of the United States.

On Monday Canada, for Money, were done at 91 to 91½; Bills, for Account, 91½ to 91¾; Ditto, for Money, 91¾ to 92; Ditto, for Account, 92 to 92¼. On Tuesday Bills, for Account, 91½ to 91¾; Ditto, for Money, 91¾ to 92; Ditto, for Account, 92 to 92¼. On Wednesday Bills, for Account, 91½ to 91¾; Ditto, for Money, 91¾ to 92; Ditto, for Account, 92 to 92¼. On Thursday Bills, for Account, 91½ to 91¾; Ditto, for Money, 91¾ to 92; Ditto, for Account, 92 to 92¼. On Friday Bills, for Account, 91½ to 91¾; Ditto, for Money, 91¾ to 92; Ditto, for Account, 92 to 92¼. New Three per Cents, 1865, Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 73; Red Six Per Cents, 1868, 101; Ditto, 1870, 101; Ditto, 1871, 101; Ditto, 1872, 101; Ditto, 1873, 101; Ditto, 1874, 101; Ditto, 1875, 101; Ditto, 1876, 101; Ditto, 1877, 101; Ditto, 1878, 101; Ditto, 1879, 101; Ditto, 1880, 101; Ditto, 1881, 101; Ditto, 1882, 101; Ditto, swords and revolvers. The following is an index to the different styles of uniform represented in our Engraving, which are arranged from left to right:—1. Full dress, with helmet. 2. Uniform worn on board ship. 3. Summer uniform (mid-day). 4. Mounted winter uniform (without cloak). 5. Full dress, with forage-cap. 6. Patrol uniform (morning and evening). 7. Winter uniform (dismounted).

THE AMBASSADORS FROM MADAGASCAR.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

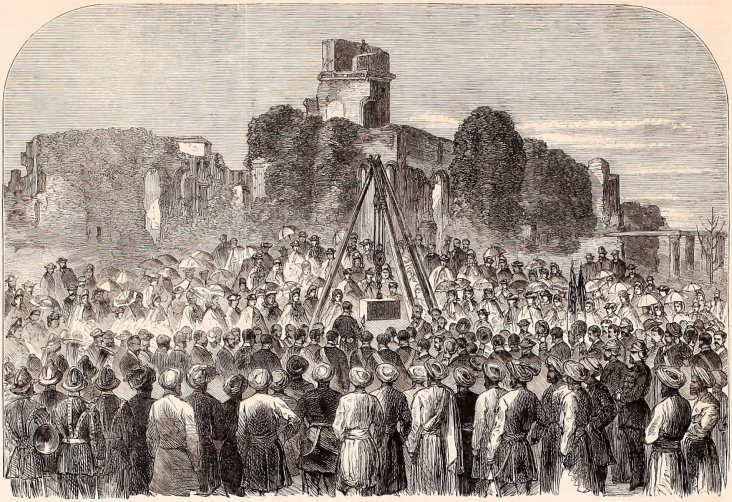
LAYING THE FOUNDATION OF THE LUCKNOW MEMORIAL.



On the opposite page will be found two Engravings, from photographs taken at Lucknow and sent us by the last Indian mail. One of them is a View of the Burial-ground in the Baley Guard; the other represents the scene which took place there on Saturday, the 2nd of January, when the first stone of a monument was laid to commemorate the sufferings and death of those English men, women, and children, who perished during the siege of the Residency, from the 30th of June, 1857, to its first relief by Outram and Havelock on the 22nd of November in that year. The two great names, however, of Sir Henry Lawrence and Sir Henry Havelock, with those of many another good and gallant soldier, are fairly to be included in this list. The subscription to defray the cost of this monument was first started in 1860, but has not been very rapidly pushed forward: it has been chiefly raised among the English residents in that province, though some few contributions were received from members of the civil and military services in other parts of India. No subscriptions were asked in England, and none were even accepted from the natives of India. The Maharajah of Jeypoor, for instance, had generously subscribed, but was induced to transfer his donation to the Lawrence Asylum. The Freemasons' lodges in the province made some grants of money, and undertook the arrangements for laying the foundation-stone. This ceremony was performed by Sir George Couper, Bart., C.B., Judicial Commissioner of Oude; Mr. Wingfield, the chief of the provincial administration, being absent; Sir George was assisted by the Worshipful Master of the Freemasons' Lodge, with certain brothers of the craft, who bore the mystic symbols of their commission—the square, the column, the standard, the corn, wine, and oil, the book of constitutions, and volume of the sacred law. The clergy, represented by the Rev. M. R. Burge and five others, Captain Fenwerton and the members of the memorial committee, the civil and military officers of Government, and other residents at Lucknow, or visitors, held their due places in the procession; and among the ladies, on a platform erected for their use, were fifteen or sixteen who had themselves been shut up in the siege of Lucknow, in 1857, and had shared the trials and dangers of those who died before the day of relief. Sir George and Lady Couper were indeed of this number, as well as Colonel and Mrs. Barwell, Major and Mrs. Aitken, and others present at the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone. General M'Duff, C.B., commanding the garrison at Lucknow, with his Staff, and Colonel Patton, commanding a guard of about five hundred of the 107th, 5th Lancers and Artillery, represented the Army on this occasion. A special religious service was read by the Rev. Mr. Burge; the stone was laid and lowered with due masonic formalities; and Sir George Couper delivered a feeling and impressive speech. The proceedings closed with prayer. The intended monument is a column forty feet high, ornamented with scroll sculpture, and surmounted by an Iconic cross. The design, originally intended for Cawnpore, is by Mr. Gilbert Scott. Its cost is estimated at about £1200. It was selected by Mr. Thornhill, Commissioner of Allahabad. We engrave it on the preceding page from a lithograph supplement to the Oudh Gazette of Jan. 5.

DESIGN FOR THE LUCKNOW MEMORIAL.

FOREIGN GUARD OF THE BRITISH LEGATION AT PEKIN.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

LAYING THE FIRST STONE OF THE LUCKNOW MEMORIAL.

THE BURIAL-GROUND AT LUCKNOW.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On Jan. 30, at Buenos Ayres, South America, the wife of Edward Hammond Gregory, Esq., of a daughter.

On the 4th inst., at Church Lawford Rectory, near Rugby, the wife of the Rev. Charles Bree, of a daughter.

On the 5th inst., at Famham, Surrey, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Patrick L. C. Fagan, late Scots Fusilier Guards, of a daughter.

On the 5th inst., at 45, Pentonville-road, N., the wife of Walter Smith, Esq., of a son.

On the 1st inst., at 11, Millbank-street, the wife of Mr. R. W. Page, of a son.

On the 3rd inst., at No. 7, Eaton-place South, the wife of Henry Pownall, Esq., Madras Civil Service, of a daughter.

On the 5th inst., at 48, Bryanston-square, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Hall, of a daughter.

On the 7th inst., at 27, Cumberland-square, Hyde-park, Mrs. George Hooper, of a son.

On the 7th inst., at 4, Belgrave-square, the Lady Boston, of a daughter.

On the 8th ult., at Bellary, India, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel A. Loftus Steele, Madras Staff Corps, of a daughter.

On the 9th ult., at New Park, in the county of Kilkenny, the wife of Lieutenant Colonel Frederick Bell, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 4th ult., at St. James's Cathedral, Toronto, Canada West, by the Lord Bishop of Toronto, assisted by the Rev. H. Grasett, Edward Gurney Howell, Esq., Clarkston Rural Dean, second son of Colonel John Howell, of the Royal Mills, Ipsley, Leicestershire, to Isabella Catherine Mary, eldest daughter of the late Major Vincent Eyre, Royal Regiment, of Hodnet, in the county of Salop.

On the 8th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square, by the Rev. Charles Wodehouse, Rector of Hardwick, Norfolk, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Alexander Duff, Bart., Coldstream Guards, to Mary Jane, eldest daughter of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Keith Stewart, C.B.

On Dec. 28, 1863, at Tynabad, Oude, by the Rev. E. Tandy, Robert Thomas Boyce, Esq., Bengal Civil Service, Regiment, to Georgiana Ellen Hunter, second daughter of the late Major-General H. Carnegy, C.B., of Lucknow.

DEATHS.

On the 5th inst., at Canterbury, after a few hours' illness, Francis Keller, eldest daughter of Edward Rawson, Esq., Advocate-General, Natal Bridge.

On the 4th ult. at Bellary, India, Martha, wife of Lieutenant-General J. Lindsay Steele, Madras Army, and eldest surviving daughter of Captain R. Litchfield, R.A., of Cheltenham.

On the 4th inst., at her residence, the Manor House, Great Bedwyn-road, Bath, Lavinia Margaret, the beloved wife of the late Archd. Campbell, Esq., of Lochnell, Argyleshire, and of Upper Harley-street, London.

On the 5th inst., at her residence, 12, Gay-street, Bath, Mrs. Admiral Farrington.

On the 6th inst., at 45, Upper Gloucester-street, James Mause, Esq., aged 73.

On the 6th inst., suddenly, the Hon. Thomas Hutton George Farmer, aged 51.

On the 7th inst., at Knightsbridge, Mr. Daniel Thos. Lowndes, in the 76th year of his age.

On the 8th inst., at Leverton, Blackheath, Margaret, widow of William Bridges, Esq., aged 73.

On the 8th inst., at Bromsberrow, universally beloved and lamented, Ann Spencer, wife of the Rev. Thomas Hughes, and daughter of the late Lord Sondes.

On the 9th ult., Thomas Arthur Cotton, Esq., M.D., youngest son of the Rev. Nathaniel Cotton, formerly Rector of Sandringham, Norfolk, aged 29 years.

On the 8th inst., at No. 3, Halkin-street West, Belgravesquare, the Right Hon. Frederick Temple Hamilton, in the county of Wexford, aged 75.

On the 9th inst., at No. 20, Montagu-square, W., London, Leonard Horner, Esq., F.R.S., aged 79.

ROYAL ENGLISH OPERA, COVENT-GARDEN.—Last Nights of Balfe at 8 o'clock. Every Royal English Opera at Seven-quarters of Nine LOUISA PYNE and HARRY CORBETT. Every Evening at 7 o'clock, the Grand Ballet, in Two Acts, entitled LA FILLE DE MARBRE, by Mdlle. DIAMOND, and Grand Act of THE PUNJAUB'S DAUGHTER. Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at 7 o'clock, the Grand Allegorical Spectacle Opera of THE ROSE OF CASTILLE. Balfe by Special Command. Wednesday, at 7 o'clock, the Grand Opera of BALFE'S Irish melodies, with Tyrolese, Swedish, Hungarian, and Polish Airs, by Operatic Artists. Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the Operatic of ZANETTO (Balfe). Last Nights.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.—Mr. Sheridan Mann, HENRY HASLEHURST, Sole Lessee and Manager.—Patron of Lord Rivers's Choral Society of 300 Voices.—Every Evening at Seven-quarters past Seven, the Grand Opera of THE ROSE OF CASTILLE. SUNDAY, and during the Week, the Performances will commence with a Drama of importance, in which Miss FOUR MONTGOMERY will appear. The Rose Story is still unsung. To be followed by Lord Byron's Choral Drama of CAIN, with Mr. Charles Dillon, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Stuart, Mr. Ashmore, Mr. Wright, Mr. Lee, Mr. Hall, Mr. Aynsley, Mr. Ashcroft, Mr. Ackmore, Murray, H. Leclercq, Healy, and Mrs. E. Falconer. To conclude with the Farce of ALADDIN. Mr. Charles Dillon, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Stuart, Mr. G. Bel

NEW MUSIC.

HENRY FARMER'S JERUSALEM THE GOLDEN. CHOIR. The celebrated Hymn, for the Choir. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S DANISH NATIONAL HYMN. Price 3s. "One of the most effective and best sounding pieces of the sacred composer." London: J. WILLIAMS, 11 Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S LIGHT NEW PIECES. Rosalia, the Prairie Flower. Price 3s. Myrtle Leaf, waltz for the piano. Price 3s. "If choice to be a daisy." Price 2s. 6d. London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW VIOLIN SOLOS, with Accompaniments for Pianoforte. Price 2s. each. No. 1. Love's Journey. No. 2. La Jeune Fille. No. 3. Rosalia, the Prairie Flower. No. 4. Myrtle Leaf, waltz for the piano. No. 5. Bring me a thistling tale. "If choice to be a daisy." Price 2s. 6d. London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC. Price 3s. each. "The Rosebud Polka," the most useful and best performing piece the Publishers have seen. London: J. WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S GEORGIANA VALSE. Illustrated by J. BRANDARD. Price 2s. Side and Duet. Solo, Duet, and Orchestra. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

HENRY FARMER'S CHRISTMAS QUADRILLE. Price, Solo, 2s.; Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Orchestra, 4s. (Postage). This beautiful Quadrille Sounds as unrivalled popularity.—London: WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S IDA VALSE. Beautifully illustrated by J. BRANDARD. Price 4s. Duet, 4s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S REAPER VALSE. Beautifully illustrated by J. BRANDARD. Price 4s. Duet, 4s. Orchestra, 2s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S ABERDEEN QUADRILLE. Illustrated by BRANDARD. Price, Solo, 2s.; Duet, 3s.; Orchestra, 2s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

C. H. MARRIOTT'S TOPSY-TURVY GALOP. Price 3s.; Duet, 3s.; Orchestra, 2s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S FANTAISIE DE CONCERT for the Pianoforte, on "Home, sweet home." Price 4s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11 Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S MY LODGING IS ON THE COLD GROUND. For the Piano. Price 4s. Brilliant and Easy. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S THE CAPTIVE GREEK. 6s. Brilliant and effective for Pianoforte. Price 6s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE FRIEND'S GIFT.—A Collection of the most Popular Tunes arranged in a very easy and simple manner for the Pianoforte. Price 1s. 6d. Boards, 2s. Books (forty-eight pages in each). Price 3s. each. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 123, Cheapside; and Holborn-bars.

THE SPIRIT OF THE OCEAN, No. 1, "In the track of the waters," for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. "Equals Kuhe's Reverie." Reading, 'at.' St. Neots' Lane; Music by JOHN SMALLWOOD, Organist of St. Mary's Church, Reading. Sold by all Music-sellers.

HANDICAP GALOP by ERNEST LEYBACH. The highly-popular Galop is now performed by all the military bands in the United Kingdom. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

THE PICKET OF THE POTOMAC. Sung by H. RUSSELL. The beautiful and touching words of this song were found in the pocket of one of the Confederate soldiers who fell in the battle of the Potomac from a rifle-ball several months ago. Price 24 stamps. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S BELL DEMONIO GALOP. Price 3s. Orchestra, 2s. 6d. Performed at the Theatre Royal, Lyceum. London: JEWELL, WILLIAMS, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE BOLD MARCO. Sung by M. Faulkner in the Grand Scena "Del Pericolo Gelo Mi Punge." J. BLOCKHAM, Music by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Price 3s. 6d. London: JEWELL WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S SABRA VALSE. Price 4s. Splendidly played at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden. London: JEWELL WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S BOLD MARCO. Sung by M. Faulkner in "Del Pericolo." Transcribed for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. London: JEWELL WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S YE BANKS AND BRAES. Price 4s. This is a most brilliant arrangement for the Pianoforte, and far from being difficult of execution. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars, and 123, Cheapside.

"WAITAWHILE," and "THE LISP OF LOVE." Spanish paradise song. "Very low, honeyed and go to." Price 2s. London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS.

THE INFANT FOUNDLING.—SIR JULIUS BENEDICT'S WALTZ, with the new verse in honour of the infant Prince, by CHARLES JEFFERYS. Price 4s. Solo and Duet. THE MARRIAGE BELLS OF ARDENCOURT. Piano Solo, 3s. 6d.; Duet, 5s. THE NIGHT AND GLOWING: Aria, By T. Alt. Price 3s. THE READING GIRL. Sacred Song. By W. Vincent Wallace. Illustrated. 3s. THE SLEEP OF SORROW. Song. By W. Vincent Wallace. 3s. 6d. THE LAST WORDS OF CHRIST. Sacred Song. By W. V. Wallace. 3s. THEY ARE THE HOURS OF HEAVEN. Sacred Song. By W. V. Wallace. (Unlocked.) Sacred Song. By Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. W. Hilton). Price 3s. 6d. THE HOME OF MORALS AND HOPE. Sacred Song. By Miss M. Lindsay (Mrs. J. W. Hilton). 3s. ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS (just issued) greatly and universally admired.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S PIANOFORTES, elegant and durable, in Rosewood and Walnut cases, from 25 guineas.

London: ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, W. Where may be had, by the same Composer, the Opera, "The Enemy Conquered; or, Love and Duty." Agents for Leibnitz Edition of Mozart, Peters, and Co., Cologne.

NEW SONGS.—THE RULER OF THE QUEEN. SUNSHINE LOVE, and THE SWALLOWS' NEST. Words by S. REDDALL. Music by E. SOUTHWELL. 3s. Hugh Holmes, London, W.

K U H E.—B A C H A N A L E, 4s. KUHE.—As Sad in Its Mien. 3s. SOUTH RED.—Prelude, 4s. CLARK.—Fantasia, Op. 1, 4s. CLARK, SOUTHWELL.—Gavotte, 3s. CLARK, SOUTHWELL.—Fan des Nymphes, 3s. AUDLEY, SOUTHWELL.—Fantasia on Favorite Airs. Very interesting and popular. Progressive pieces.

SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN NATIONAL SONG.
THE TWO FLAGS. NATIONAL SONG.
THE ENGLISH NATIONAL ANTHEM.
THE GREEK NATIONAL HYMN.
Arranged for the Pianoforte by Arthur Glazey. Just published. Each free on receipt of 12 stamps each.
London: AWDRY and CO., 37, Regent-street.

HARRIS'S CHEAP MUSIC LIBRARY, 170, Oxford-street, 2 doors from Regent-circus, Pianos, Harmoniums, Concertinas, Violins, Flutes, Guitars, Harps, Drums, Cornets, Trombones, Violoncellos, Double Basses, &c. Lists free.

NEW MUSIC.

HYMN for EASTER, "JESUS CHRIST IS RISEN TO-DAY." The music composed and most respectfully dedicated to the Lord Bishop of Oxford, Chancellor of the Order of the Garter, by JOSEPH THOMAS GOODE. Price 2s. London: NOVELLO and CO. The clergy in charge of churches and the musical profession is specially invited to the publication of this hymn.

PROFESSOR KINGSLEY'S "WATER DANCES." "WHEN ALL THE WORLD IS YOUNG, LAD." Words and Music. Price 2s. Just published by Professor Kingsley. By MARY REBECCA WILSON. Printed. London: ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street.

CHISHOLME and SONS (from Duff, Stewart, and Co.), Pianoforte Manufacturers, 27, Hanover-square, W. Every Instrument warranted. Pianos, 16 to 80 guineas. Cheap action double Pianos, in solid cases, 50 guineas. Harmoniums, 10 to 50 guineas.

PIANOFORTES.—H. TOLKIEN'S EXHIBITION MODEL COTTAGE PIANO, fine-toned, elegant, and compact, 7 octaves, 30 guineas. Also a Pianoforte having the full compass of 7 octaves, with the trichord system, in fine figure, in rich ground, from four of drawing-room brass mounting to the keys, and fine tone, 40 guineas. Also a Pianoforte, in handsome walnut case, with fine tone, 25 guineas. Drawings free. Tolkien, 37, King William-street, London Bridge.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPÔT, 32, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey. Large Musical Boxes, 4s. 4½ per Air; 8s.; 12s.; 16s.; 20s. Catalogues of tunes sent free. Musical Boxes exchanged or repaired. Country orders executed with punctuality and dispatch.

MUSICAL BOX DÉPÔT for the Sale of NICOLE'S celebrated Musical Instruments is REMOVED from 20, Regent-street, Piccadilly, to 14, large warehouse at adjoining from Grosvenor has arrived. Lists of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free.

TO be SOLD for £24 (cost £50), a SECTORIAL GOLD DOUBLE-BARRELLED WATCH, perfect in condition and warranted. May be seen at WALKER'S, 29, Ludgate-hill, City.

DENT'S CHRONOMETERS, WATCHES, and CLOCKS.—W. F. DENT, Chronometer, Watch, Clock, and Compass Maker by special appointment to the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 33, Strand (adjoining Coutts's Bank), and 61 and 34, Royal Exchange.

DENT, Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by royal special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and Maker of the Great Clock for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand (adjoining Coutts's Bank), and 34 and 61, Royal Exchange.

GOLD CHAINS and FINE JEWELLERY. Best 18-carat Gold Guard Chains, with the new fastening, from 16s. to £10 10s. Best 18-carat Gold Albert Chains, 12s. to £10 10s. Best 18-carat Gold Lever Watches, 5 guineas to £50. Best 18-carat Gold Hunting Lever Watches, 7 guineas to £50. Best 18-carat Gold Keyless Watches, 10 guineas to £50. Best Gold Pins, 1s. to £10 10s. Wedding Rings, 10s. to 30s.; Gem Rings, 5s. to £10 10s. Best Silver Watches, 2 guineas to £10 10s. Best Silver Hunting Watches, 3 guineas to £10 10s. Illustrated catalogues by post. Free.—FREDERICK KAVANAGH, 31, Cornhill, London.

THE GREAT ROSSE TELESCOPE.—Dr. Lee, the Vice-President of the Royal Institution, has a very satisfactory statement of his opinion with reference to the Great Telescope, which will be found in the Athenæum of this week. The Committee of the Royal Institution, at a meeting on WEDNESDAY, have the kindness to forward one of their by-laws to strangers at their earliest convenience, and the Secretary will be happy to forward a ticket to the Lectures, to Members and Inventors of the £5 Entrance, to Members-elect, and Subscribers.

POCKET BAROMETER, COMPASS, and THERMOMETER, 25s. and upwards, all warranted correct, and of the best quality. The Pocket Barometer is the most reliable weather guide ever invented, and is indispensable to sportsmen, travellers, and others. Sold by the sole maker, SOLOMONS, Optician, 39, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey.

SPECTACLES.—The Patent Newly-invented Spectacles, which have given such universal satisfaction during the season of the nobility, including Viscount Palmerston. They give extraordinary clearness of vision, and are recommended for all defects of sight. SOLOMONS, Optician, 39, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey.

DEAFNESS.—THE SOUND MAGNIFIER and IMPROVED VOICE CONDUCTOR, or Deafness, in all cases of the most extreme character, entirely relieved by the use of these instruments, which are invisible when in use, and are confirmed by numerous testimonials from the Nobility, Clergy, Gentry, Physicians, &c. Sold by the inventor, SOLOMONS, Optician, 39, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey.

NEW ACHROMATIC MAGIC and DISSOLVING LANTERNS, of the highest character, LENT OUT on HIRE, with Slides for Parties, Schools, Lectures, &c. Slides by first-class artists.—SOLOMONS, Optician, 39, Ludgate-hill, corner of Old Bailey.

"RECONNOITERER" GLASS, 9s. 6d.; best, 21s., in case, all Explorer's Stores, &c., to distinguish objects at a distance, and to read the time of day on a watch-dial, &c., at any reasonable. "I found the Reconnoiterer very good."—The Marquis of Breadalbane. "Your Glass is very good."—Lord Ashburton. "Your Glass is very good."—Lord Ashburton. "Your Glass is very good."—Lord Clive. "Surpassing the glasses supplied by Dixon, Solaa, I can only say that your Reconnoiterer is the best glass I have ever had."—Captain Lyon, R.N. "The accuracy of the Reconnoiterer is perfect, and the test of efficiency. Workers carefully tried it at an 800-yard rifle-range, and found it to command the whole of the targets and marks."—Volunteer Service Gazette. "The Reconnoiterer is the best glass I have had since its price."—The Field. Post-free, 9s. 6d. The Union Glass, 12s. 6d. Opera and Race Glasses, 21s. to £10 10s. Glasses are only to be had direct from SALOM and CO., 91, Prince-street, Bedford-square, London.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price £5 5s., in mahogany case, with Condenser, Live Box, 11, Cornhill, &c. (late 6, Coleman-street). Catalogues sent on receipt of a postage-stamp.

CAUTION.—THE CELEBRATED LORD ELCHO SHOOTING COAT may be had of J. H. STEVENS, 24a, Maddox-street, Regent-street, W., the Sole Maker, and his Agents. Will read the name of a shilling on a target at 200 yards. Recommended by Volunteer Service Gazette, Field, Bell's Life, Sporting Gazette, &c.

SCIENTIFIC PRESENTS.—Elementary Collections of Minerals, Rocks, and Fossils, in Glass-top Cabinets, containing from 50 to 1,000 specimens, from 10s. 6d. to 10, 20, to 100 guineas each. of J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, W.C. Mineral Specimens, Geological Models, Diagrams, &c.

FOUNTAINS, STATUES, JARDINIÈRES, and VASES, in Stone and Terra-cotta, of the Choicest Richness, at Old Prices, Reduced, at Old Prices, Reduced, at Old Prices, Reduced

NEW MUSIC.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS, from Gounod's celebrated Opera of "Faust." Arranged for the Pianoforte, Price 1s.; Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MARCH from FAUST. (Soldiers' Chorus.) Arranged as a Duet for the Pianoforte. By BENJAMIN GODARD. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of this celebrated Opera as Pianoforte Duets is now ready, containing selected airs not before published in any Duet form. Price 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST, with ENGLISH WORDS. This popular Opera is now ready, complete, with Italian, French, or English words. Price 6s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Pianist. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon pour le Piano, sur les Motifs favoris de l'Opéra de Gounod. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GOUNOD'S FAUST VALSE, the celebrated Waltz, from "Faust," arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera, performed by Mr. Hallé. Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 6s.; Full Orchestra, 8s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Performed by Mr. Hallé. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Performed by Mr. Hallé. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 2s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLENSTEIN. Just Published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s., Orchestra, 2s., Septet, 1s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR SONGS.
No. 1. Home, sweet Home. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. British Grenadiers. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Rule Britannia. Arranged with Variations. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 4. The Standard of St. George. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR IRISH AIRS.
No. 1. St. Patrick's Day. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Fly to the misty mazes. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. The Harp that once. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' POPULAR SCOTCH AIRS.
No. 1. The blue bells of Scotland. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Auld lang syne. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Auld lang syne. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just published, Artist's new Valse, easy by Miller. Thirteen each Violins with Accompaniments, 1s. Pianoforte Solo, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed on all the popular tunes of the day. By J. C. CHRISTIAN. Price 4s., Orchestra, 3s., Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. The Pianoforte Arrangement given to the Private Bands of the Guards, as well as Julien's Concerts, with numerous encores. Just published, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASSIDY, Composer of the Burlesque Galops. Just Published by CASSELL'S Company, price 3s. Orchestra, 2s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTEN-SELTER GALOP.—Just out, the New Galop by CASSELL'S Composer—the Harum-Scarum Galop. Cassell Illustrated. Price 4s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 3s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Baynor Ardith; Illustrated with Portrait of Mr. Santley. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS. Just out. New Song, sung by Mr. W. H. Cummings, composed by GEORGE RUSSELL. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASON. By the late CHARLES MITCHELL MAGAZINE. Edited and Revised by Henry Smart, published this day for the first time. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DIBDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 61, contains twenty-four of Dibdin's Sea Songs, with Memoir and Critical Remarks. Edited with Piano Accompaniments, Price 1s., post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LA FAVORITA.—A remarkably effective Brilliant piece on the most favourite melodies in Donizetti's beautiful opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GANZ'S I FURITANI.—A new and most effective Arrangement as a Duet from the popular opera of Bellini. Price 6s.—ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA SONNAMBULA.—An elegant, and not difficult Arrangement of the most favourite melodies in the melodious and ever admirable opera. Price 6s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A beautiful and graceful melody, combined with remarkable grace and musician-like skill. A very favourite piece. Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. A charming Dance Tune, and thoroughly effective piece, in the style of the "Tarentelle." Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. A very spirited and brilliant Waltz, on the most popular airs in the celebrated opera of "Il Trovatore." Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU. Played by the Composer at his Pianoforte recitals with unbounded success. A charming piece, full of novelty and musical expression. Price 4s.—ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. Fifteenth Edition. One of the most popular and permanently successful pianoforte pieces. Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season."—Illustrated London News. Price 4s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mille. Parepa at the Crystal Palace and other fashionable concerts, with great success. 2s.
ADDISON and PARRY, 28, Hanover-square.

NEW MUSIC.

HALF PRICE.—Music sent post-free at half the published price.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Opera. By G. A. MACFARREN.
"If sweet summer morning." Vocal Duet. .. .. .. 3s. 6d.
"Tho' I'm not to the manner." Song .. .. 3s. 6d.
"The exercise old fire." Song, with Chorus .. .. 3s. 6d.
"The good old days of the country squire." Song .. 3s.
"Oh, Lubin, I'm true." Song .. .. 3s.
"The early rose." Ballad .. .. 3s. 6d.
"Am I not a pretty hotmaid?" Song .. .. 3s.
"Tho' I'm not to the manner born" (composed addition) .. 3s.
"I and her fate!" Recitative in B flat and F .. .. 2s. 6d.
"Hence, hence, ye fiends!" Recitative in C .. .. 2s. 6d.
"Fiends, fiends, fiends!" Recitative in C .. .. .. 2s. 6d.
"My head of May." Ballad in D and E flat .. .. .. 3s. 6d.
"Sweet Lucy Neville." Ballad in E flat and G flat .. .. 3s. 6d.
"Sorrow." Ballad in B flat and D .. .. 3s. 6d.
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
"Hark! who comes here?" Fantasia .. .. 3s. 6d.
Fantasia on the "Overture" .. .. 3s. 6d.
"I can't for love," Romance in B flat and F .. .. 3s. 6d.
"Sweet Lucy Neville." Romance .. .. 3s. 6d.
The Overture, for Pianoforte .. .. 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

Quadrilles on the favourite Airs in "Le Coeur .. .. 4s. 6d.
Waltzes on the Favourite Airs by C. Coote .. .. .. 4s. 6d.
Galop, "Le Carnaval," by Julien .. .. 4s. 6d.
Arrangements for Military Bands, Francesco Berger, Boisier, Coote, &c., in the press.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. ASCHER'S "LE CHANT DES NAIADES" (played by Miles. Goddard). 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BISHOP'S MELODIES. 3s. each, Duet, 4s.
No. 1. Bid me Discourse.
No. 2. Should he upbraid.
3. Tell me my Heart.
4. Home, sweet Home.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' DANISH NATIONAL AIR (the Sarpy Lauderdale). Sung by the Children with the "Times" Testimonial. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

W. C. SELLE.—SYMPHONY OF SPRING. Just published. Price 4s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. F. CLARKE'S LAST SET.
SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s., Orchestra, 2s., Septet, 1s. This Set contains favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. L. HATTON'S NEW SONG.
I DREAMT I WAS A CHILD AGAIN, 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

AT VENICE. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S Last Set. A Grand and Original pianoforte accompaniment. Price 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL'S IN THE HOUSE. By CHARLES LINDSAY. The Song that will steal in popularity Mr. Lindsay's well-known ballad, "Little Nell."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL GUIDE. By RENÉ FAVARGER. Price 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BREEZE AND THE HARP. By MISS LINDSAY. Another Song by the Author of the best that Miss Gabriel has ever written."—Review.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

EAR'S SONG. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Beautifully Illustrated with Portrait of Miss Rosina Bennett in her great character of Lesbi in "Lesbia Brigands Married." Universally encored nightly at the Royalty Theatre.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

PET MARJORIE. Ballad, By F. ABT. Latest Song of the Composer of "Good Night, Beloved." Sung by Miss Dolby. Price 2s. 6d. The best Song in his new opera, "La Colombe."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOUNOD, FAIRER THAN THE MORNING. In 4d. The best Song in his new opera, "La Colombe."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF-PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage stamps or Post Office order.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

KUHE'S SEE THE CONQUERING HERO COMES. Price 4s. (Brilliant but not difficult.)
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

The position drawing-room pieces in GANZ'S SOUVENIR DE TONI. Middle staccato. Price 4s. 6d.
A most pleasing and effective Valse on the old elegant."—Illustrated News.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEW SONG BY MR. SIMS REEVES.
SENTIMENT POÉTIQUE. By IUCHO. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEW GERMAN VALSE.
STRAUSS' LIFE GUARDS. Price 4s. With a beautiful floral Illustration.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE QUADRILLE, arranged expressly for the Promenade Festival and to be performed nightly. Price 4s. Orchestra, 3s. Septet, 2s. Just published, price 4s., "Where lies the mind," sung by Mr. Sims Reeves, encored. "'Tis I! your faithful Ariel by." Without chorus, "Blest as the immortal gods." Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. Price 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S EXTRAVAGANZA GALOP. Price 3s. Second Edition.
Introducing the Scotch National Air, "Auld Lang Syne."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S RINGLETS.—ALEXANDRA VALSES. Price 4s. Illustrated with a splendid Portrait in Colours, representing the Hair Dress of the Period.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Fairies' Dance," "The Fairy Queen," "A Fairy in the Morning," "The Cure," and other popular Airs. A real Fairy Dance, and most effective. Orchestra, 3s. Septet, 2s. Also the extremely popular Set of A FEW COPIES ONLY ARE TO BE HAD OF
COOTE'S ALBUM OF Dance Music, elegantly bound. Price 10s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S RATE KEAKE WALTZES, on Popular Nursery Airs. Introducing "Oranges and Lemons," "Sing a Song of Sixpence," "Hickory, Dickory, Dock." Solo or Duet, 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 3s. "It has the very best qualities to ensure its popularity the orchestra."—Grand Review, by the same Composer,
COOTE'S LA CHASSE. Price 3s.
ENCORED FIVE TIMES NIGHTLY AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.
POLLY PERKINS. Song. By HARRY CLIFTON. 2s. 6d.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

MERRY SONGS.
Have you seen the Ghost? .. .. 2s. 6d.
Jemima Parsons, Governess Daintie .. .. 2s. 6d.
Jemima Parsons, Governess .. .. 2s. 6d.
Granny Dance .. .. 2s. 6d.
Mr. Jones the Hobby-ist .. .. 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW.—A new Weekly Journal of Music and the Drama, 2½ pages, six prize Gee Pieces. No. 1 published this day. To be obtained of Booksellers and Wholesalers in town and country, at KENT and CO.'s, Paternoster-row, and Booosey and Sons, Holles-street, Cavendish-square.

SUSAN'S STORY, by CLARIBEL, new Ballad, published this day, will equal in popularity any of the previous productions of this favourite writer. Among the list of the following may be mentioned, which are all just ready:—Already the day he sware so long, 3s.; Mountain Maid, 3s.; I heard not of your coming, 3s.; Lilies of the Valley, 3s.; Lost Love, 3s.; Mountain Sweet, 3s.; Fourth Edition of Yes and I, 3s.; Twentieth Edition of Ever of Thee, 3s.; Fifteenth Edition of Thou art so near and yet so far, 3s.; Twelfth Edition of Won't you call me, my Mary, 3s.; Eighth Thousand, Dreamland (Eighth Thousand), The Mariner's Farthing, and many others.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Tenth Edition of
FLYE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. By CLARIBEL. Twenty-four pages of Music post-free.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

HER'S PERFECTION. By CLARIBEL. Price 3s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE FORGET-ME-NOT WALTZES, on Popular Airs from Balfe's Opera, "The Rose of Castile." Price 4s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MR. FORBES'S RAPPELLE TOI. The most popular song of the day. Sixth Edition. Post-free, 1s. 1d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MR. FORBES'S STRING OF PEARLS. Twenty-fifth Edition. Post-free, 1s. 1d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MR GOLLMICK'S HAPPY THOUGHT. Author of "Stephen Heller's Last Thought," "Ole Man Tiare. By the Author of "Sebastopol." Post-free, 1s. 7d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS HAWLEY'S IVANHOE. New and Popular Arrangement of "Auld Robin Gray." By the Author of "Sebastopol." Post-free, 1s. 7d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MR. BRINLEY RICHARDS' JANET'S CHOICE. Sung, Encored, and Universally Admired by the celebrated Song, "Janet's Choice," By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 2s. 6d. Post-free, 1s. 7d.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MR. KUHE'S MAGGIE'S SECRET. Mr. Corbet's beautiful ballad, which Miss Salome has received such marked applause. Post-free, 1s. 7d.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT. New Sacred Song, by F. L. HATTON. Post-free, 1s. 7d.
Sung by F. L. HATTON. Post-free, 1s. 7d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

A SACRED SONG.—WHAT DOES IT MATTER TO-MORROW? By HENRY SMART. Composed for her Brother, Frederick Burgess. Price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 6d. This pleasing Ballad may be had of all Musicsellers.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' TWELVE ANTHEMS for the Use of Choirs and Schools. Edited by Dr. CROFT, Handel, and Haydn. Arranged by Novello. Price 1s. in cloth; 6d. in paper cover. Also, Boosey's Twelve Anthems, Nos. 1 to 12, 6d. each, or in cloth, 1s. each. Choral anthems, all of which are complete, and comprise nearly fifty movements.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MOZART'S 12TH MASS, for Pianoforte, by Dr. HENRY SMART. Complete, in Rossini's "Italian Master," No. 12. Price 2s. 6d. Also, Mozart's 12th Mass, complete, 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE HARMONIUM MUSEUM contains the most complete Collection for the Harmonium, with an instructive Introduction on playing the Instrument. By HENRY SMART. Price 1s. 6d. Also, Boosey's Musical Album, in two parts. Part I. Sacred, 2s.; Part II. Secular, 2s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE HOUSEHOLD BOOK OF PSALMS, HYMNS, and SPIRITUAL SONGS, in cloth, Original Psalm and Hymn Tunes for every kind of metre, and 36 Single and Double Chants. Price 1s. 6d. Also, Boosey's Hymn Book, in cloth, 1s. 6d.; in paper cover, 1s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' LIBRARY.—Two Guinea Subscribers have the use of twelve pieces of Music in town, or twenty-four in the country, and receive gratis a quarterly Album of the same amount of Music.—St. Holles-street.

OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, by the Author of "Light by the Lea."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CAPITAL SONG FOR BARITONE.
HERE, AMID THE VESSEL'S DECK!
By ELCOT. Price 2s. 6d. A most spirited composition.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

FROST FAIRY MAZURKA. Splendidly Illustrated. Price 4s. Post-free for 28 stamps, together with the Frost Fairy Waltzes, Illustrated, and Frost Fairy Polka.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, London: 33, Frith-street, Soho-square; and all Book and Music sellers.

SPRING TIME IS COMING. This Successful Song, by Miss Lindsay, beautifully Illustrated; can also be obtained with the "Musical Monthly" (March No.). Price (postage, 2d. extra) 2s. 6d.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W., and all Book and Music sellers.

"MARY, DEAR." SIMS REEVES'S New Song, by HOWARD GLOVER, enthusiastically encored at the Crystal Palace and Royalty. Mr. Sims Reeves's new published, price 1s., by DUNCAN DAVISON, 244, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY, 207 and 209, Regent-street, contains the largest and most varied selection of Pianofortes are to be found in the Country. Pianofortes for Hire, Purchase, and Exchange. Every Pianoforte is warranted, and kept in order free of charge. Pianofortes by all the most celebrated makers constantly selected from the stock. Every facility is afforded to exchange, without loss, the Pianoforte you may purchase, should another instrument of a higher class, or by a different maker, be desired at any future time.
A large and choice Stock of Second-hand Pianofortes will be found in the Gallery.

CRAMER'S SELECTION of SEMI-GRAND and ROUDOIR GRAND PIANOFORTES, by Broadwood, Collard, Kirkman, and Erard, suitable for Drawing-rooms, are complete to be found in this country. The very finest instruments by these eminent makers are constantly in stock, and Pianofortes can be obtained by the month to rent until they can be purchased, the entire hire being allowed in part payment for the instruments themselves.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.'S SELECTION of GRAND PIANOFORTES is by far the most extensive to be found in any establishment in the country. Every Grand Pianoforte by Broadwood and Co., Collard and Collard, and Erard, the three eminent makers to be found in this country. The very finest instruments by these eminent makers are constantly in stock, and Pianofortes can be obtained by the month to rent until they can be purchased, the entire hire being allowed in part payment for the instruments themselves.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER and CO.'S SELECTION of CHEAP PIANOFORTES is by far the most extensive to be found in any establishment in the country. Every description of Pianoforte by Cramer and Co., selected from the best instruments, by all the best makers. The greatest care is taken that every Pianoforte sent out from this house shall be a good instrument, and the prices at which Cramer and Co. sell are so moderate that in their hands an instrument of the very lightest quality that it is possible to make, and which is sold at a price which defies all competition elsewhere, cannot be obtained. Cramer and Co. offer the additional inducement that every instrument they hire can be found chargers, and the hire paid, should the Pianoforte be purchased.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE Best 50-GUINEA PIANOFORTE that is now made is CRAMER'S new Semi-Oblique, which stock contains every possible variety of Pianoforte, Grand, Semi-Grand, Cottage, and Upright, at 50, 60, and 70 guineas.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE Best CHEAP PIANOFORTE is CRAMER'S new Pianette, with short action, trichord treble and full scale. Price, in dark, 35 guineas; in Rosewood, 37 guineas. Cramer and Co.'s Cottage (the largest in Europe), 50 and 60 guineas.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THALBERG'S GRAND PIANOFORTE. This magnificent instrument, manufactured by Messrs. Erard, and selected by M. Thalberg for his last concert in this country, has been purchased by Messrs. Cramer, Wood, and Co., and may be seen at one of the most elegant Pianoforte Galleries in the world, where the most finished manufactures, combination in an extraordinary degree all the latest improvements, and the most elaborate finish, together with a charmingly vocal quality. Price 120 guineas.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S CHECK-ACTION COTTAGE. Price 45 guineas.—This beautiful instrument is of the medium size, and is the most complete Cottage in the Pianoforte Market. The touch is supreme, equal, and elastic; it is fitted with an organ of delight, quality of wood, and general workmanship, which has gained for it universal approbation. A better Pianoforte of this class can possibly be made.—307 and 309, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES by Broadwood, Collard, or Erard, for SALE or HIRE.—At CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY (the largest in Europe), 207 and 209, Regent-street.

EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO. have specially constructed a system of hire to pay for a PIANOFORTE by INSTALMENTS. Terms may be had on application personally or by letter.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUMS.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO. supply the best of this size that is manufactured. Cramer and Co.'s Harmonium, at 6 guineas, is a most delightful instrument, and is the cheapest and most remarkable power. Polished oak case.—201, Regent-street.

CRAMER, WOOD, and CO.'S GENERAL STOCK of HARMONIUMS is very extensive and varied to be found in London. Prices from £ to 100 guineas.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

CRAMER'S ARTIST'S CONCERTINA, manufactured under the immediate superintendence of Mr. Regondi, possesses a purity of tone, a delicacy of expression, facility of articulation, and general perfection of mechanism, these instruments are unrivalled. Cramer and Co. have a large stock, and retain their patent rights in their own hands. Prices 3 guineas, including case.—Cramer, Wood, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE is well known for its pure, sweet, and brilliant manufacture, with perfect check action, the full compass, and the best workmanship throughout. Every instrument is warranted, and the purchaser exchange it for another Pianoforte at or since the same price, whether new or second-hand.
50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, at 23 guineas, a new Cottage Piano, with the compass of six octaves, in handsome rosewood case, with fine full tone, and elastic touch. This Pianoforte may be had at a lower price than any other elegant pianoforte. The same instrument with 7 octaves, at 25 guineas.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S DRAWING-ROOM HARMONIUM, the full compass, 56 stops, from the manufactory of Alexandre and Fils, Paris, Inventors Gold Medallists of Pianoforeme and Harmoniums for application.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDRE, with five octaves, two footboards, and in oak case, recommended as the best low priced instrument in all elegant Drawing-rooms. Illustrative lists on application to
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

SECOND-HAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDRE, DEBAIN, and other makers, at greatly reduced prices, at CHAPPELL'S, 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDRE'S PRIZE EXHIBITION HARMONIUM, with 13 stops, 11 stops, 5 rows of vibrators, and Venetian swell, worked by the heel of the right foot. Price 70 guineas. A large assortment of second-hand organs on CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES. CHAPPELL and CO. have a large Stock of SECOND-HAND PIANOFORTES by BROADWOOD, COLLARD, COLLARD, ERARD, &c., &c., that have been hired for the season, at very reduced prices. 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest Stock in London, by Broadwood, Collard, Erard, &c., for Sale or Hire. 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANINO (the only Pianette to which the Prize Medal was awarded).—A Pianoforte of elegant appearance, with the full compass of seven octaves, and the best workmanship throughout. Price 25 guineas. Resolution &c. Warranted to keep in tune and to be the best and cheapest Pianoforte for the money ever sold. Packed and forwarded into the country.
Prize, in mahogany, rosewood, or walnut, 16 and 18 guineas. A large variety kept in stock.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S SMALL MODEL COTTAGE PIANOFORTE.—To announce pianoforte the most perfect instrument of its class. The Cottage Pianoforte in the English Model will be found the most perfectly satisfactory instrument, at the price, ever manufactured. The touch is elastic, the tone full and sympathetic, and the case elegant. Pianofortes exported to any country where the more complicated actions are objectionable to many of the English nobility and gentry who have left England for a time, on account of the economy in the first instance, and the facility with which they can be disposed of. Price 35 guineas, in handsome rosewood case.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE is constructed in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possesses a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 30 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 41 guineas in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 41 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 50 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 50 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 60 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 60 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 70 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 70 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 80 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 80 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 90 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 90 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 100 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 100 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 110 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 110 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

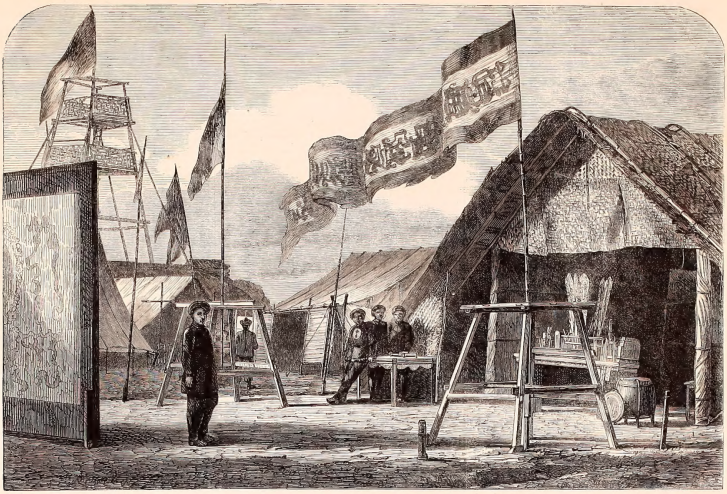
CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 120 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 120 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 130 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 130 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 140 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 140 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 150 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 150 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 160 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 160 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.



CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 170 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 170 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 180 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 180 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 190 guineas, in rosewood, or in walnut wood, with the full compass of seven octaves, and possessing a full, rich, and sympathetic tone, with a pure and elastic touch. The workmanship throughout is of the most perfect description, and the case is elegant in design. The Pianoforte is strongly recommended to the notice of the public, as it is the best instrument of its class that can be produced. Price 190 guineas.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIAN

THE TAEPING REBELLION IN CHINA.

ENTRANCE TO CHING-WANG'S TENT, SOO-CHOW.

INSIDE OF THE STOCKADE AT SOO-CHOW, WHERE CHING-WANG WAS BEHEADED.—SEE PAGE 265.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

In this nineteenth century people are debating whether those who seek an audience with his Holiness the Pope do verily and indeed kiss his Holiness's toe. A French paper having given an account of this ceremony, Sir George Bowyer, "our English knight"—ever like a new proselyte, ready to do battle for his adopted faith, stoutly denies it. It is useless that at Cologne and Antwerp we have seen Popes' slippers, with a jewelled hole for the protrusion of the great toe; it is useless, too, that we have heard of a number of rubles the price set upon a white satin slipper which great foreign jewellers have made for Holinesses to wear and subsequently to sell; Sir George is to be believed, it is the hand, and not the toe or slipper, that is kissed. So we thought on Monday, but on Tuesday we read that the Correspondent of the Pope established the truth of the first assertion; and another letter, from Alessandro Gavazzi, stated that kissing the sacred foot or slipper kissing is a comodo cue qui sono to approach his humblest of Holiness".* And why not? If his Holiness is, in the full belief of the devout, any title to the position he assumes, surely one should approach him with the utmost humiliation. Sir George Bowyer retires from the contest discomfited. An injudicious friend is worse than an enguy. When will he learn the wisdom contained in Talleyrand's maxim, "point de zèle"?

The Fenians, who have given rise to one or two Thackerayan imitations of Irish bulls, have also produced a Fenian Punch. "Who once raged like a line (lion) "on the "Shannon Shore," but who has taken the immediate advice in the most recent of passages to his Fenian or Finian friends. "Don't," says he in effect, "don't, my friends, exile, for the Northern Review [it is a Republican] way to free Ireland by getting kilt in America. The Federals only use you, and crush you; put you to the front in the fight, that they may, at this time, say, O Brien the King: and he calculates that upwards of 200,000 Irish have been cruelly "used up" on American soil. That this advice will affect Yankee recruiting to any great extent is not like words have done so is supposed from the fact that the recruiting sergeants have been shipping hordes of Germans and Scandinavians by the laws of the Yankee war. Is it not a pity that the German and the Celt did not slowly Emerson, and, in the meantime, cease from the coarse bodies of the German and Irish are made purposely to manure the soil for the American inoffensive and peaceful Yankee?

And how "do you keep your health?" as Mrs. Lincoln said to Mr. Sala, but which question we answer not, for it is a question which the Freedom itself, Really, Sir, not very well. The South is set in a state of disintegration, but although it is disintegrated it is not for a purpose. Charleston is not taken, and, indeed, not one firm step forward has been made by the Federals. Moreover, one of the Southern commissioners is here in London debating, or, rather, ready to debate with Lord Palmerston and Louis Napoleon the expediency of recognition. Surely this is a sign that Confederation must be alive now to the hopelessness of their dream of secession. Surely every blood has been spilt that can be spilt, every cruelty that have been vented and shed. In the mean time, too, the deterioration of American society must have been enormous, for the war has taught excess and corruption on the other; sudden fortunes by illicit dealings, bloody prizes, springing up on every side, and the rich and stalwart merchants of the old and honourable school falling quickly to decay; these are not sights which tend to purity. We, in the old Yankee at this last hour let their "wayward sisters go in peace," or we will they cannot be "bitter cast," as a sister of the South assuredly to themselves than to their opponents, who are already assuredly better under the "direct cost of adversity"? By-the-way, one ought to notice the clear photographic muniment and statistics of Mr. Sala's pen-pictures of "America in a state of war." Nothing has ever been done in this way in the past, and, assuredly, we have little about the war, and for two very good reasons, let us add. In the first place, the press has not had the free run of the camps of the people during its progression; and, in the second, it is absolutely at its standstill, as we may gather from the fact that Punch, in the Times, which specifically concern it.

So we are told there is to be a new Holy Alliance, and that the three eagles have put their double or single heads together and laid the deformities of the dove down" Lilienstolz and Schleswig, it is not Holstein this time. Prussia, Austria, and Russia form the combination of the first moment of Denmark, and, as matters go, seem quite ready to wipe her out of the map of Europe. Poor Scandinavia, she stands still. What will she move? We are not now witnessing the crushing of Poland: we are looking on at the fall of Denmark, which very like it. It is unpleasantly near home, too; even self-interest, if nothing else, should make us stir, should make us, at least, put on all its weight into the scale—" if not sided, then alone," to quote Lord Russell—in spite of the peace party and the sympathy for the Regio, upon whom the Germans count. Lords Derby, Shaftesbury, Ripon, Ellenborough, many foremost men in the House of Commons, some half dozen of the leading newspapers, bitterly feel England's present position, and, in turn, must have pretended that the body of the people feel with them.

So the Imperial treasury has to go on with the 18,000 for Colonel Crawley's trial! Was there ever money so wasted. No man pays for a luxury with any pleasure, and, assuredly, there is a fortune thereby: but to pay a vast sum for a process which everybody felt was, in the beginning, simply the clever invention of a scoundrel, and for one in which the actual question was avoided, must seem to every thinking mind something monstrous. Mr. Crawley is dead—broken by poor law, counsel for losing your cause, a jockey for selling the race, a painter for a picture which is a libel on the fair fame of young true health, or an apothecary for drugs which poison your wife, it is enough, but why not hold back and to pay £18,000 for that elaborate trial, which everybody felt to be a farce.

From literary and artistic echoes there are each faint sounds to be obtained that, unless we unite them into the form of answers to leading questions to them, we should obtain nothing. The reign of the pantomime is over, but Mr. Phelps' production of "Twelfth Night" that wonderful play which Lord Byron thanked Heaven could not be produced upon the stage. His Lordship, in his fear of the stage's spoiling the bards, and hence his reward, "Manfred" is worth seeing, not as the Times says, on account of the blank verse, which is by no means indeed, and whereas too frequently we may say with Pope, "And less her words than actions we can dull line excuse," on this occasion the illustration is "less because the declamation is powerful and earnest, the scenery correct, and Miss Cooper's Viola, under her sentence of one week in a tone so pure and so entrancing that, once heard, it can not easily be forgotten. Whilst about things theatrical we may notice that Mr. Boucicault has made a good hit in the character of Sir Adrian—"a Duke of Liverpool," that Miss Bateman will retire for a week during Passion Week, that Mr. Buckstone is "on" or "off" as he will, and that a very handsome present has been made to Mrs. Mountain, the actress, and Philip with his children and the "Little Sister" in church. The sad, stricken countenance of the young father, the rapt, earnest gaze of his little boy, the fervent and prayerful humiliation of the "Little Sister" before an Almighty Judge, were never better told upon paper, either in colour or in ink. We have seen that M. Delaroche can paint silence, and that to the subtle pencil of Holman Hunt an awakened conscience was laid bare; here, in this fine work the artist, taking inspiration from a few tender words, has placed before us by his wondrous skill Pentence, Repentance, and Prayer.

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF MULREADY'S COLLECTED WORKS.

TO-DAY (Saturday) such a collection of pictures, drawings, and sketches by the late patriarch of British Art, William Mulready, is opened to the public at the South Kensington galleries as will certainly prove to many admirers a surprise, and to many a revelation. The works have been brought together from every discoverable source, and perhaps no artist was ever so completely exemplified. In a collection so comprehensive and chronologically arranged almost every individual sequence is valuable and significance is could hardly possess when seen singly. Our chief duty in reviewing such a series is to point out how a long life's labours especially as we recently gave a biographical sketch of the painter) repute to the artist that instruction which comparison with such ample materials is so well calculated to impart.

We say the collection is almost complete. We could, however, have wished that the artist's own opinion had been taken as a criterion in high art with which Mulready, in common with many other artists, commenced his public career. Such works as "The Seven Ages," for example, "Polyphemus and Ulysses" and "The Disobedient Prodigal" were in the exhibition of the Society of Arts, and of the British Society of Arts in 1848. But at the date of our visit to South Kensington none of these were to be found. Mr. Mulready's miniature, which was left in a postage-label, which was laughed at by Mr. Punch. A single sample of the few fitness portraits executed by Mulready which had been sent to the exhibition it was proposed to reject. These works we would not, in free, show the artist's special powers, being out of the ordinary course of his practice and inclination. Moreover, such a room is instructive—his failures equally with his successes. If anyone will look at the "Giving Water" and "Bathers" in the first room we think it a mistake. Mulready himself was of so humble, honest, and genial a character that he would have been the first to wish, in a general exhibition of his works, to place his indifferent as well as his best works.

It is not easy to go back in imagination to the date of a painter's earliest pictures, and to realise the influences that characterise his genius and even gaiety, mixing in society and cheerily labouring day by day with his contemporaries. Mulready, for instance, we recollect that Mulready was only a year younger than Wilkie; and that the "Cut Finger" and "Idle Boy" the earliest picture in this collection, was exhibited by the young Irish artist at the rooms of the Royal Academy the same year (1804) that the Scotch artist painted his "Village Politicians." It is in the contrast of such facts and the dates of Mulready's early works and the state of contemporary art in Ireland that we can appreciate the merit of the Irish painter's early efforts reflect the characteristics and indicate the tendencies of contemporary art. He was a child of his time, and, while also studying and imitating what had already been done that time two great artists were engaged on their respective styles, Wilkie in the direction of landscape the other to figures, which will, we believe, by the future historian of British Art be considered the founder of an original and genius. In Mulready's early works there is a lingering reminiscence of the old manner of an almost uniform impasto, or body of paint, which was introduced by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and carried to excess by his imitators. After 1810, and, probably, chiefly owing, to the influence of Wilkie, we find a more thin and free method of painting is apt to produce is diminished by a more general adoption of the principles of colour. The subject is first painted in light and shade with a full brush, and the colours are afterwards glazed in, preserved in the shadows as pure as possible from any admixture of opaque colour. This is the true method, instead of an artificial, colourless character. And, as the browns used by English painters are, for the most part, transparent preparations of asphaltum, cracks are the necessary consequences. If the visitor wishes to see in this respect a remarkable instance, the nodes of painting just described, he will find them in the "Cryps" and "Bathers" in the first room, and "The Wolf and the Lamb," on the one hand, and in "The Origin of a Fancy Ball" and "The Sonnet" on the other. The Dutch painters—Ostade, Jan Steen, &c., in figure-subjects; Hobbema, Paul Potter, &c., in landscape—were the models which were adopted in most of the works produced by Mulready during the first twenty years of his career. The "Bathers" and "Cryps" above cited, do not appear to aim at the luminousness of De Hooghe or the magic and much subtler quality of Cuyp, but they struggle hard to do so. It seems seldom to have sought the airy and suggestive touch which, in the works of Wilkie, Etty, and, later, of Mr. Frith, and brilliancy of Rubens, Velasquez, and other great masters. Mulready's touch is generally hard, searching, especially, all is carefully touched, often "stippled," precise, and sometimes laboured. Such qualities crowded rather than relied upon for effect. In this respect there is a marked difference in the "Idle Boy."

What we have said of Mulready's early practice will we think, be found to be borne out by a comparison of the following interesting examples:—A little piece of still-life, "A Pitcher and Bottle" (1806?), "The Sleeping Fisherman" (1809), and the two pictures of "The Battle" (1809), and sketch for the same; "The Music Lesson," with the figures of Lord Kitchener and Lady Sarah Lennox, portraits of the Regency, leaning over a young and beautiful lady at a piano,—the "Sonnet" (1810), and "Boys Playing Leap-frog" (1810)—are important in the series. Dutch-looking little picture. During this early period (in 1809) Mulready exhibited "Returning Fishermen from the Alehouse," the picture which, with a new landscape background, reappeared in the exhibition of 1842, and is here in the national collection. The majority of the works of this period are, however, unfinished. "The Interior of a Stable," "St. Alban's Hampstead Heath; two or three of Kensington Gravel Pits, one of which is figures, and the other, a landscape, are full of power and effect, solidity, delicacy, and fidelity to nature; another very admirable work is "The Fight Interrupted" (1815), the painter—always remembering that he was a colourist—has here given more than are qualities equal to some of the finest and purest in the works of Lely and Kneller. Another picture of the same year is that of his work, we have the "Punch" (1812), picture and study, the original of which, we believe, is in the "Boys Fishing," beautiful in composition and many points of execution, and "The Sale of a Horse" (1814), remarkable as indicating not only a looser manner of handling, in which he did not long afterwards indulge, but a greater freedom in colouring, and an occasionally unpleasant opposition of red and green, and other complementary colours, which, however, never produced a disagreeable excess. In "The Fight Interrupted" (1815), the painter—always remembering that he was a colourist—has

MUSIC.

The lessee of the Royal Italian Opera has put forth his prospectus of the season about to begin. The following are the particulars especially interesting to the public. Mdlle. Adelina Patti will return with fresh laurels, gathered during the recess at Madrid, at Frankfort (during the late Congress of Sovereigns), and at Paris, in addition to the characters in which she has already performed, she will appear in Susanna in "Le Nozze di Figaro," and in Margherita in Gounod's "Faust." Mdlle. Pauline Lucca, who appeared a few times at the end of last season with great eclat, will reappear and will perform the part of Selika in "L'Africaine," Margherita in "Faust," Cherubino in the "Nozze di Figaro," Ma. Fund in Spanish (new to this country), and Azucena in "Il Trovatore." Mdlle. Titiens is "L'Etoile du Nord." Mdlle. Emilia Lagrua will make her first appearance, early in the season, in "Norma." Among other great parts she will perform the principal character in Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," which was specially composed for her during her engagement at St. Petersburg. The following performers of note will also appear for the first time in the course of the season:—Mdlle. Gordini (from Milan), Mdlle. Lali (from Lisbon), Mdlle. Garulli (from Milan), Signor Scalese (from Paris), Signor Attri (from Florence), and Herr Michael Costa (from Berlin). The latter, who appeared a few times last season, will engage and perform Maestro in the "Provinciali," Arnoldo in "Guglielmo Tell," and John of Leyden in the "Prophete." In addition to these new engagements the principal members of the company in former seasons—Mdlle. Marie Battu, Mdlle. Antonietta Fricci, Mdme. Dalile, Signor Ronconi, Signor Graziani, Signor Neri Baraldi, Signor Tagliafico, Signor Mario, Signor and Mdme. Tagliafico, Mdme. Rodersdorff, Signor Lorodan, and Signor Neri-Baraldi—will be retained. Mr. Costa (we need scarcely add) retains his post at the head of the orchestra. The season will commence on Tuesday, March 22nd. The subscription will consist of forty nights. The performance will be four times a week—on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

At Her Majesty's Theatre the lessee of Her Majesty's Theatre, has also published the prospectus of the arrangements for his season, which commences on Saturday, April 2. The company, as announced in the list of engagements, will include the established favourites of last season, together with other performers of European celebrity. Of the last three not hitherto appeared in England. Of the number of the first two Mdlle. Artot and Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, the latter, a young lady of extraordinary promise, who has studied under Signor Garcia, Meyerbeer, Marco, Signor and Mdme. Tagliafico, Mdme. Rodersdorff, Signor Lorodan, and Signor Neri-Baraldi—will be retained. Mr. Costa (we need scarcely add) retains his post at the head of the orchestra. The season will commence on Tuesday, March 22nd. The subscription will consist of forty nights. The performance will be four times a week—on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

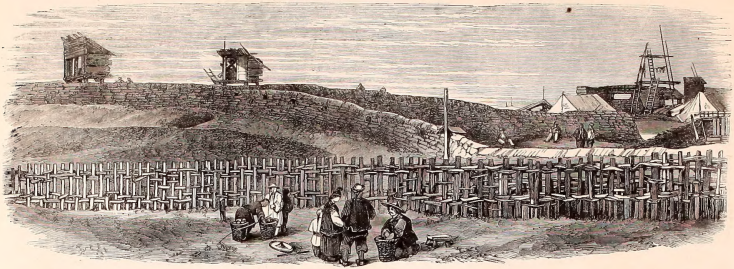
At the Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, the lessee has also published the prospectus of the arrangements for his season, which commences on Saturday, April 2. The company, as announced in the list of engagements, will include the established favourites of last season, together with other performers of European celebrity. Of the last three not hitherto appeared in England. Of the number of the first two Mdlle. Artot and Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, the latter, a young lady of extraordinary promise, who has studied under Signor Garcia, Meyerbeer, Marco, Signor and Mdme. Tagliafico, Mdme. Rodersdorff, Signor Lorodan, and Signor Neri-Baraldi—will be retained. Mr. Costa (we need scarcely add) retains his post at the head of the orchestra. The season will commence on Tuesday, March 22nd. The subscription will consist of forty nights. The performance will be four times a week—on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

At Drury Lane, the lessee of Her Majesty's Theatre, has also published the prospectus of the arrangements for his season, which commences on Saturday, April 2. The company, as announced in the list of engagements, will include the established favourites of last season, together with other performers of European celebrity. Of the last three not hitherto appeared in England. Of the number of the first two Mdlle. Artot and Mdme. Lemmens-Sherrington, the latter, a young lady of extraordinary promise, who has studied under Signor Garcia, Meyerbeer, Marco, Signor and Mdme. Tagliafico, Mdme. Rodersdorff, Signor Lorodan, and Signor Neri-Baraldi—will be retained. Mr. Costa (we need scarcely add) retains his post at the head of the orchestra. The season will commence on Tuesday, March 22nd. The subscription will consist of forty nights. The performance will be four times a week—on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays.

THE MAGAZINES.

THE eyes of all magazine readers will this month be turned to the commencement of Mr. Thackeray's new story in the Cornhill Magazine. Expectation will this time be surpassed rather than disappointed. We cannot, indeed, concur with Mr. Dickens in the comparative rank he has just chosen to accord his fragment among its author's works; compared with "Vanity Fair" or "Pendennis," it is as a delicate miniature to a crowded historical picture. But it is a pattern of quiet masterly handling—clear, incisive, and powerful, without aggravation of effect. The style is essential, speaking, in its carelessness, many grace, of the consummate care attained by long practice. None of the characters seem to have yet emerged from the first chapters into Hogarthian notoriety, but they are all drawn with a firm and vivid touch. The description of the old Colonel, with his gentlemanly and yet rough manners, all must rejoice to see Thackeray taking leave of Art with a work in a new way so worthy of it. The scene is evidently before him as a picture, and the style of that novel was doubtless better suited to the amusing reader than the present, which has the exuberant vivacity of his earlier works. "The Small House at Allington" has those manifold indications of a wind-up. One chapter of the three must needs be occupied, for the sake of the reader, with the fortunes of the Lady Alexandra, after ten weeks' trial of her. The magic of Mr. Trollope has almost deserted him in the present instance. The interest in the real life would have abandoned his great experiment so easily. Pride, we think, would have submitted to the humiliation of Polly. But no such objection can be urged against the little episode of Mr. Palliser and Lady Dumbello, which is terminated by two letters written at the parties concerned would certainly have written, but which no one but Mr. Trollope could have written so well. The most remarkable new sentimental chapter, Mr. Trollope's really excellent talent for the pathetic has hitherto been shown chiefly in reference to the female character. Of the magnanime are below the usual mark, the only ones in any degree noticeable being the continuation of "Margaret Denzil" and the smart reference to Agamemnon's daughter. The latter has much of truth in the latter. Furniture is generally uninteresting, often heavy, matching the subject. Ornamental accessories are sparingly pretentious, all are more or less the victims of conventionalities. Still, many of the pictures are remarkably good, and the artist is always agree with him on matters of taste. Cheap secondhand furniture is not necessarily bad, and there is a great deal of art with in drawing-room chair that threatened to break down beneath the weight. The "Cornhill" is, on the whole, a remarkably good number, partially carpeted, unless the carpet be in stripe; and that there is much good reason for a difference of opinion as to the merit of a drawing-room, and the furniture a general more substantial.

Macmillan proffers a varied and interesting, if not a very striking, number. Mr. Kingsley's paper on Westward Ho! is a most excellent narrative and dislocated interest that marred "Ravenshoe." It is, however, very much in the style of "Hypatia," and the description of the Allingham contributes an exceedingly clever eclogue, in which Master Greenacre, the "Poetical Publisher," is the most amusing of one William Shakspeare, a.b. 1597—a capital bit of rustic painting in singularly pure English. Mr. Hughes's "Memoir of Alexander Ressels's "Sit Down in the Lowest Room"—a piece full of that quaint humour in a dissenting minister's composition, whose responsive influence of external circumstances which constitutes the vital principle of wit. Mr. Hughes has also a delightful "Commentary on a mere essay and feeling. "The Competition Wallah" vindicates Sir Charles Wood, and the Government policy from the charges of the Indian and the sinew of India as so much raw material to be worked up by her conquerors. We are indebted to Mr. Macleren for a very amusable paper on "Contemporary Literature of Germany," and to an anonymous writer for a lucid exposition of the recent judgment of the Privy Council.



Fraser has also a quiet and useful number. The most remarkable article in that is a discussion on the position of the French Emperor for a European congress, where the disingenuousness of the attempt to make Napoleon III. the champion of the Pope, while Austria, Prussia, Russia, and Prussia all declined to take part in it, is admirably shown. "The Commentaries of Julius Cæsar," which Fraser has determined should not be the case. Miss Cobbe has brought together some very interesting facts relative to women's wrongs really belong to Louis Napoleon himself. The naval contributor seems to be "Nauticus," and his paper on the Navy is "Nauticus" that the controversy will soon be decided by experiment. The "Letter from a Conservative Reformer" is very able, but we suppose that the very essence of the dispute between Denmark and the Confederation is that the former will not reform. The Diet has once useless and iniquitous to persist in forcing upon a million of intelligent men a system of government which they do not approve of.

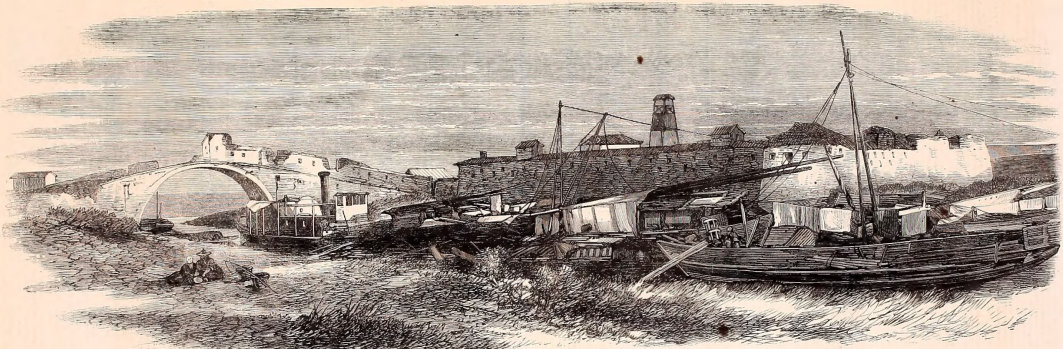
The only marvel is how such enlightened views ever found their way into Blackwood, the habitual scaffer at the claims of nationalities and the usual humourist at the expense of the Poles. Even the quarrel between Denmark and the German Powers, constitute quite another question, and is not to be settled by a single article. The "Tory Butler," though the writer has chosen to represent his principal personage as a Radical, is very amusing. The saying of the Tory butler must inevitably disappoint expectation.

The Victoria Magazine is a feeling poetical tribute to its late ornament, the lamented Miss Procter. A tasty records her experiences of "Life in the Far Country." "Famine in Connaught Chase" improves considerably, and might be made a very tolerable novel-length without extension. Miss Rogers' "Lucy Rogers" contributes a pretty epilogue from Syria, and Miss Pfeiffer supplies remarks on the "Present Subject of Female Emigration." The "Egyptian Journal is continued, with no symptoms of a termination; nor are we in any hurry for the completion of a work so replete with useful information and so pleasantly written. The monthly article which presents us with every variety of opinion, and the caution which is the result of experience, is very good in its way this month.

Temple Bar is sufficiently agreeable; the two novels are ably conducted, and the "Memoirs of a Stage Manager" is a very interesting contribution to the serial literature of its class. There are several good miscellaneous papers, and the "Literature of Germany" is a remarkably French manner and its detection, and "A Winter at Rome." "The Lady's Mile" is in the light and airy style of the Cornhill and the London Journal style of fiction, and will surely be an immense success for that periodical. "Lucy Rogers" is a remarkable one. "A Curious Public Character" is a well-told anecdote of a lunatic, and

THE TAEPING REBELLION IN CHINA.

OUTSIDE OF THE STOCKADE WHERE CHING-WANG WAS BEHEADED.



INTERIOR OF THE WALLS OF SOO-CHOW.

TROOPS OF THE QUINSAN GARRISON, UNDER MAJOR GORDON, FORMING SQUARE.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE TAEPING REBELLION IN CHINA.

FORTIFIED BRIDGE, SOO-CHOW.

We present this week a series of eight photographic views, engraved on the accompanying pages, illustrative of the capture of the Chinese town of Soo-Chow by the Imperialist troops, under Major Gordon; and the subsequent destruction of the Taeping or rebel leaders, at the end of November last. The photographs were sent us by Mr. W. Saunders, of Shanghai; and, since the debate in the House of Commons on Friday evening last has again called attention to these events, we may briefly relate how they took place. For some years past the whole country south and east of the Yang-Tse-Kiang river, and even within a short distance of the port of Shanghai, has been overrun by armed bands of the Taeping faction; and, had it not been protected by European troops, Shanghai itself would at one time have fallen a prey to their rapacious fury. The British forces, commanded by Major-General Brown, have latterly been stationed in such a position as to cover Shanghai and prevent the civil war from approaching too near that important colony of English merchants. At the same time, a number of British officers, both of the Army and Navy, have been allowed to enter the service of the Chinese Government for the purpose of aiding in suppressing the rebellion. By the exertions of Major Gordon, an officer of the Royal Engineers, a small but well-organised force of native troops has been collected and trained with European discipline, its head-quarters being in the town of Quinsan, where the photograph engraved on the opposite page was taken last December. Here we see a body of these Chinese regular infantry going through their evolutions and preparing to form square. The garrison of Quinsan musters about 3000. Beyond their barracks, in the background of our View, rises a regularly-shaped hill, above 600 ft. high, consisting of solid rock, from which the town of Quinsan, or "Marvellous Mountain," derives its name. The streets, however, like those of Soo-Kiong, another town some fifty miles nearer to Shanghai, are now uninhabited; in fact, they are a mass of ruins, no attempt having been made to rebuild them since they were destroyed by the rebels, two or three years ago. Still less have the open plains, which were then laid waste, been restored to cultivation in the neighbourhood of Quinsan. They are now entirely overgrown with rank grass and brushwood, affording cover to pheasants and other game, where formerly an industrious population sowed and reaped the food of man. The villages are deserted along the Grand Canal; its bridges are broken down, and its banks are in some places damaged, so that the water spreads into large pools and lakes. The town of Soo-Chow, about twenty miles to the south-west of Quinsan, was recently the stronghold of the Taeping rebels in that province, ruled by their Wangs, or vice-regal delegates of the Prophet, whose divine sovereignty they have proclaimed. Four or five of these Wangs, it appears, exercised jointly the governing authority at Soo-Chow; there was the Na-Wang, Ching-Wang, the Mo-Wang, and one or two more. Between Quinsan and Soo-Chow there is a water communication by a creek which joins the Grand Canal, and several other creeks enter into it; but the Taepings had thrown dams across the creeks, and erected mud forts and stockades upon the bank at frequent intervals, and also fortified the bridges, so that the Imperialists had to go through much labour and some fighting as they advanced. In one part Major Gordon had avoided these obstacles by constructing a military road for the passage of his troops. His march was supported by the Taeiloe steamer, under the command of Captain Jones, with some gunboats upon the Grand Canal. Their fire, coming in aid of the field artillery, soon drove the enemy out of the stockades, with very few killed or wounded on either side, up to the very gates of Soo-Chow. The Imperialists, comprising, besides Major Gordon's force, a numerous host brought up by the Footai, or Governor of the province, then surrounded the town. The steamer lay in the canal amidst the suburbs just outside the ENTRANCE TO CHING-WANG'S PALACE, SOO-CHOW.

ENTRANCE TO THE HALL OF JUSTICE, CHING-WANG'S PALACE, SOO-CHOW.

western gate, while the gun-boats watched every creek or inlet. During the night on the evening of the 27th of October an attack was made by the men of the 3rd and 4th Regiments, under Major Kirkham, upon the four stockades and breastwork in front of the north-eastern gate. It was believed, from false information, that the Taepings were in the habit of hearing these works unoccupied in the night-time and retiring beneath the walls. This proved to be a mistake: they repulsed the attack with a destructive fire, killing Captains Wylie, Christie, and Hodson, Lieutenants King, Trivett, and Cadell, and severely wounding four officers and sixty men; while Major Kirkham himself was most dangerously wounded in the head. This little success was retrieved next day, when Major Gordon brought up nearly all his available force, and, with the men supported by the artillery, and carried, with a sharp struggle, first the breastwork, and then the first and second stockades, at the bayonet's point; the other two stockades and the space before the gate were then cleared. Two 24-pounders and a number of smaller guns were captured from the rebels. The loss of the Imperialists was thirteen officers wounded, including Colonel Brennan and Major Tapp, besides 230 Chinese killed or wounded. Our Engravings on pages 261 and 264 may give some notion of these stockades, although taken from those of a similar kind erected in the opposite quarter of the town, where the Wangs were finally put to death. Within the stockade we see the tents of the Taeping soldiery. The aspect of the town walls, overlooking the water, is shown by an Engraving on page 265. After the conflict of Nov. 30 the Taeping fled eastward, and dissensions broke out amongst them. The authority of the Wangs was destroyed by a party within the town, who opened negotiations with the Footai, or Imperial Governor. On the 5th of December, accordingly, they surrendered to the Footai, upon his promise, given through Major Gordon, that there should be no unnecessary bloodshed. It is deeply to be regretted that this promise, unauthorised by his office, was basely violated by the Footai. Not satisfied with the punishment of the Wangs, who were seized and beheaded—the Mo-Wang, certainly, by some of their own people—the Chinese Governor let loose his army upon the defenceless townsfolk, pillaged the houses, and massacred hundreds of men, women, and children. Major Gordon could still outside the city walls, powerless to command. As soon as he heard of it he gathered some of his own soldiers together, and, accompanied by Count Wittgenstein and other Europeans, hastened in to put a stop to the carnage. The Footai had by this time succeeded in flight to the palace just vacated by the Chung-Wang. Our Engraving on page 261 shows the entrance to this palace, and in another Engraving we see the Hall of Justice, where Ching-Wang used to sit in state, and to which now sits the deputy presiding over the administration of the law. But it was well for the Footai that his first order to the honorable Imperialist army for the pillage of the infamous Englishmen on the day when they entered Soo-Chow; for if Major Gordon had then been able to get at him, there is reason to believe that his cruelty and treachery would have been justly and most severely chastised. The opinion of all our countrymen in China is that Major Gordon would have done perfectly right in hanging the Chinese Governor of the province then and there. When the news reached Shanghai, a meeting of the foreign Consuls was held at the British Consulate, the United States Consul in the chair, and Major-General Brown being present. Resolutions were passed, almost condemning the atrocious conduct of the Footai, and declaring that it was calculated to destroy the Imperialists' most decided sympathy of European and civilised nations. It is not improbable that this affair, and the consequent excitement in many minds, may lead to the withdrawal of the British officers from the Chinese service. Major Gordon, with his regular troops, has gone back to Quinsan, but refuses to co-operate any longer with the Footai. This quarrel alone, it is thought, prevents the Taepings from being conquered at Hang-Chow; and the light in which our Ministers regard

TWO-STOREY THIRD-CLASS CARRIAGE ON THE BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

TWO-STOREY THIRD-CLASS RAILWAY CARRIAGES.

We give below an Engraving of the new two-storey third-class carriage in use upon the Bombay, Baroda, and Central India Railway. It was first tried in the early part of the year 1857, and has been found to be most popular with the natives as well as economical for the Company. The carriage, indeed, is usually better filled than the ordinary ones, for the passengers like them better. They are constructed each to carry 120 passengers—viz., 70 in the lower story and 50 in the upper; whilst the ordinary carriages only carry 70 persons each. It may be observed, therefore, that seven of the two-storied carriages will convey the same number of passengers as twelve of the ordinary kind. The importance of this will be understood by railway managers, especially for the traffic of a country where large crowds have to be conveyed at once, and where more than 80 per cent of the travellers are third-class passengers. By the mode of construction which has been adopted the weight of most of the double carriage are less than of the ordinary carriage. The roof of the first story serves as the floor of the second. The second story consists instead of transverse, so that the sides of the carriage serve as backs to the seats; but there are certain side doors for the convenience. The two-storey carriages stand about 21in. higher than the one-story carriage. This, of course, would involve some increase of the atmospheric resistance; but, on the other hand, the train of two-story carriages is little more than half the length of an ordinary train; so that the aggregate amount of such resistance is much reduced. With regard to the stability of the trials, it is to be remarked that the centre of gravity is placed very little higher than that of the ordinary train, since the main weight of the substantial part of the carriage is but from the rail to the second floor, and not to the ceiling. Well-built roofs, covered over the heads of the upper-story passengers to protect them from sun and rain. These carriages were first suggested by Lieut.-Col. J. P. Kennedy, but designed by Mr. G. N. Anderson, the company's locomotive and carriage superintendent, and constructed at their works at Jarakhur, near Surat.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

NITROUS OXIDE (LAUGHING GAS) AS AN ANÆSTHETIC.—Professor Piorry recently submitted to the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, a new apparatus for the cheap and speedy preparation of this gas in great purity, the invention of M. F. Ruschkamp, of Berlin. He stated that as this gas could be obtained in abundance, and at little cost, it was important to possess direct when properly administered, was less cause for fear of life, and must be preferable to the anæsthetics now in use—chloroform and ether, as frequently fatal. A detailed description of the apparatus is given in the Journal of the Franklin Institute.

A FREE PUBLIC CHEMICAL LABORATORY, in connection with the Museum, is about to be opened in Paris. The proposal has been favourably received by the Minister of Public Instruction, the Prefect of the Seine, and Baron Haussmann, and has received his approbation and encouragement. The pupils who attend will form the first students and workers in the new laboratory, and will thus be supplied with the principles they imbibe in the lectures they hear. The special object of that laboratory will be the application of the science to the arts, culture and the natural sciences. We learn from Les Mondes that many chemists and manufacturers, by donations of apparatus and reagents, have energetically supported the disinterested zeal of the illustrious Professors, under whose auspices has been founded the new institution.

THE SUN'S ATMOSPHERE.—From the second part of Kirchoff's "Researches on the Solar Spectrum and the Spectra of the Chemical Elements" (a translation of which, by Professor Roscoe, has just appeared), we learn that the evidence of the existence of sodium, iron, and other atmosphere has broken down under closer examination; but that additional evidence has been obtained of the existence of magnesium, nickel, calcium, chromium, copper, zinc, strontium, cadmium, &c.; and that no additional elements have been discovered. The method of observation employed by Kirchoff is described, but has been carefully weakened by Ångström's researches, which have proved that he has been compelled to consult the greatest observation to his pupil, Mr. G. Heimann.

THE LIMIT OF PERSISTENT SNOW has been examined by several philosophers. Humboldt considered it to be reached in a zone somewhat more than equal to 10°; De Buch and Hausselle endeavoured to ascertain it by approximated rather a mean temperature of summer equal to zero. M. Bravais, a Professor recently held before the Academy of Sciences at Paris, expresses his dissent from these views, referring for his own opinion to observations of Parrot giving the mean temperature of the year at the equator as 1·5 cent., of the Alps 1·6 of the Polar circle, Norway, 0·6, and the mean temperature of the summer at the same places as 7, 6, 9, concludes that a summer of other local and general conditions affect the limit, independently of the temperature. We have not space for the reasons which have led M. Bravais to conclude that he has discovered the following law:—"At the limit of perpetual snow the mean of the coldest month of the year is that of the hottest half of the year has a constant relation to the latitude of melting ice." He gives the results of numerous tests with regard to mountains in all parts of the world in Comptes Rendus, xlviii. 8.

THE SIZE OF A DROP OF LIQUID is often spoken of. A paper on this subject by Mr. Tate in the Philosophical Magazine points out that not only the size but the weight varies with the nature of the tube, and the density, temperature, and chemical composition of the liquid itself. He gives the weight of a drop of water, and compares it with other things being the same the weight of a drop of liquid is proportional to the diameter of the tube in which it is formed. 2. With regard to capillarity, the weight of the drop is in proportion to the weight of water which would be raised in that tube by capillary action. 3. The augmentations of weight are in proportion to the diameter of the surface on which the drops are formed. 4. The weight of a drop is diminished by an augmentation of temperature. 5. Independent of density the chemical composition of a liquid affects the weight of its drop in a remarkable manner. 6. In different solutions of the same salt and different salts the augmentation in the weight of the drop is in proportion to the weight of dry salt in solution. The foregoing principles are deduced from numerous experiments.

INDIUM.—A paper, giving further particulars regarding this new metal, by its discoverers, MM. Reich and Richter, is inserted in the new number of the Philosophical Magazine. It derives its name from certain blue lines seen in its spectrum, and is now established, if a similar indium can be brought into the flame of a Bunsen's lamp, the flame becomes tinged a bright violet, in the spectrum of which are seen the characteristic blue lines of the said of the spectroscope. The fact of the reduction of the oxide with carbonate of soda, and the production of a button of metallic indium, which has formed a sort of double bead, which appears ductile to pass on rubbing, and possesses a colour lighter than that of lead, being nearer that of silver. The specific gravity was found to be 7·42. Like zinc and cadmium, it is not evolution of hydrogen; and a platinum wire moistened with the solution exhibits in the spectroscope the blue line very strongly, although but for a few seconds. MM. Reich and Richter give an account of various reactions of the new metal, and they have also succeeded in what mineral it occurs. By passing chlorine over the pure sinc-blende, acidulated pyrites, and iron pyrites contained in the mixed ore from which the indium had been separated, it was found that the indium was the only one of the minerals which contained indium. The chloride of indium volatilises at a gentle heat, and by the action of water on the vapour a solution is obtained from which, by means of chlorine and ammonia, the oxide is thrown down. They have likewise found indium in the distilled zinc prepared from the same blende, and they have indicated a method for its separation.

A FUNCTION OF ROOTS OF PLANTS.—Plants not unfrequently send roots into wells, cisterns, drain-pipes, &c., and sometimes are greatly inconvenienced thereby. Mr. Hunter, of Kelso, has recently designed a plan for collecting drainage and drain-water, and has well succeeded by conducting the water from the inland for the plant's use, and for this purpose devised the following method, through which the roots are to pass:—Take a large cask, the uncalcined spirits rapidly in the water of the pot. From this time forward the soil was not watered any more, but care was taken to maintain the supply in the jar. The plant continued to develop slowly; in March, however, it began to grow rapidly. The flowers were of a deeper pale and yellowish; they did not wither until the usual time, late in autumn. The roots continued to grow in the water for a year and more. At the end of December the plant had from seven to eight leaves and a stem 2ft. high. The roots were then examined, and found to be very numerous and fibrous, forming a dense mass, which presented a perfect tissue of roots. In the dry earth of the funnel the roots were less numerous, and the fibres were wanting. The roots in the stem and the upper solution were also full of cap. The water-roots being cut away, the plant was put into ordinary soil, and placed in a conservatory, where it grew vigorously, and in May bore two offshoots.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR MARSHALL'S second lecture "On Animal Life," delivered on Thursday, the 3rd inst., was devoted to the chemistry of digestion. He began with remarks on the refractory character of the proximate constituents of food, soluble and insoluble—viz., albumen, fibrin (in the muscles and blood), fat, and starch. Out of the body, albumen, starch, and fat can be dissolved only by the action of heat, acids, or alkalies; but in the body they are acted upon by the secondary for a digestive process to adapt them for assimilation. For this purpose certain juices are secreted from the blood, the chemical nature and function of which were described. The first of these was the saliva (page 1). The saliva, which transforms starch (its bread, potatoes, &c.) into dextrine and sugar; 2. The gastric juice, containing hydrochloric and other acids, which dissolves albumen, fibrin, gluten, and other nitrogenous compounds; 3. The bile, which emulsifies fats, and, by the latter, their conversion of a soapy character, fitting them for absorption. 4. The pancreatic juice, which generates them into fatty acid and glycerine. This, the most complex article of food, by chemical agency derived from the blood, was reduced to a condition in which they become absorbable and adapted to renew the organic tissues of the body. Professor Marshall finally remarked on vegetable digestion due to the presence of diastase in combination with starch in the seed. At the proper time, when heat and moisture are present as in malting, the starch is transformed into sugar, carbonic acid is absorbed, and the plumule of the plant appears and grows. These plants, although they have no stomach, yet digest in the early stage of their lives, when they very much resemble the lower classes of animals.

PROFESSOR G. G. STOKES, Sec. R.S., gave the Friday evening discourse on the 4th inst., on the "Application of the Prism to Chemical and Optical Purposes," especially by means of the apparatus of Kirchhoff and Bunsen, whereby the spectrum of any substance may be produced with the greatest facility—thus affording a test for the presence of certain substances in compounds, showing their chemical identity, &c. By means of the electric lamp and the large apparatus of the institution the Professor was enabled to exhibit the results of his delicate experiments to a large audience. He referred to the relation of all substances to light, and to their different refractive and dispersive powers, as manifested in mixtures, pointing out how exceedingly available colour is for detecting the presence of a character of a body. He first exhibited by way of contrast, as the spectrum produced by the introduction of common salt into the flame of a spirit-lamp, the well-known yellow line of the lamp itself. He then showed the varied action of the different pairs of lines upon spectrum, caused by putting in the flame a peculiar salt of copper—the yellow light of coal and others rendered opaque. He next took two bodies very alike in colour—diluted port wine and diluted blood—and exhibited their totally different spectra. In the spectrum of the latter the rays were cut off as observed, while two distinct red bands were manifest—these last appeared in the spectrum of the mixture of the coloured blood, and were seen in luminous, an extract from that fluid. By examining the spectrum of salts of iron it was found that the oxide of iron in the blood was of the peroxide of that metal. It was observed that in a portion of arterial blood the same phenomena exists. Professor Stokes stated that he had selected these instances to illustrate the value of colour as a test of a peculiar character of bodies, and by their relations to light, and concluded his lecture by some experiments showing the additional amount of heat produced by the reflected or transmitted light, and the optical phenomenon termed fluorescence (a peculiar power of certain substances, as exhibited by a solution of the sulphate of quinine, the detection of horse-chestnut bark, uranium glass, &c.), and expressed his views in regard to the nature of light, which he considered to be the subject of his lecture. Sir Henry Holland, Bart., M.D., F.R.S., Vice-President, was in the chair.

The Professor's lecture on the fourth lecture "On the Chemical Elements" on Saturday last, the 5th inst., the greater part of it being devoted to the consideration of the nature of the physical evidence of the constituents of the solar atmosphere and the probable constitution of the sun itself. He began by referring to the dark lines in the solar spectrum observed by Wollaston, especially examined by Fraunhofer, from whom they have been named, and who discovered 600 of them, a number greatly enlarged by Brewster, Gladstone, and still more by Kirchhoff. The last-named philosopher has recently published a map of the solar spectrum, containing 2,000 lines, and has proved by a vast amount of experiment by various gases and vapours (containing hydrogen, iron, sodium, magnesium, &c.), as well as by comparing them with the solar spectrum, that the sun's atmosphere contains, not the action of Angstrom, that the sun was a cold body and probably habitable, but that it was surrounded with a luminous envelope, chiefly solid. He also referred to Mr. Nasmyth's interesting discovery (on July 29, 1859) that the whole luminous surface of the sun was covered with bright objects resembling willow-leaves, which had since been observed by De la Rue, Pritchard, himself, and others. The rudiments of these phenomena were shown upon photographs of the sun. Professor Faraday then gave the opinion of Kirchhoff that the sun's nucleus consisted of a molten mass, and that the luminous envelope was the chief source of solar light. These luminous rays are dark, and when analysed away they disclose a comparatively dark sun. The sun's light, analysed by reflected light, and, though probably from ice to twenty times less brilliant than the luminous surface, yet the very darkest part of them would be inappreciable in comparison with the light of the sun, and thus appear as a black spot in their centre. In regard to stellar chemistry, it was stated that Fraunhofer had examined a few stars and had found their spectra differ more trially from that of the sun; but the researches of Secchi, Miller, Huggins, and others, had led to the determination in the case of many stars of the character of their spectra. The interesting photograph of Sirius was exhibited, displaying the chemical action of light which had required twenty-one years to travel to our globe. In the latter part of the lecture Professor Frankland dwelt upon the relations of the metals to electricity, in which they present a more uniform deportment than towards any other force. When an electric current is passed through the solution of a metallic compound the metal is always carried to the negative pole or electrode, as was beautifully shown on a screen with salts of tin and lead. The processes of electro-metallurgy and electro-plating and gilding are founded upon this fact, and many beautiful specimens of the application were exhibited by Messrs. Elkington. The lecture was concluded with the statement of some of the details of the extensive discoveries which had conducted Professor Frankland to the views he had brought before us.

PROFESSOR MACMILLAN'S second lecture on "Physiology and Animal Life" was given on Tuesday last, the 8th inst. In reference to the solution of the food in the stomach, he exhibited the digestive power of the juice of the glazed for twenty-four hours in a solution of hydro-chloric acid and had undergone little change but soaking, and was then mixed with a little fresh gastric juice, together with a piece of a sheep's stomach, by the pepsine of which it was nearly all dissolved in a few hours only the gristle remaining. The chief difficulty lies in dissolving the food, seems to act the part of a ferment, although the process is not one of fermentation, and does not take place in a temperature of 212 deg. warm and cold blood animals. Of commercial pepsine, that of pigs is found to be the most powerful. The following is the composition of the juice of the human stomach, agreed on, digestion, since it has been found to contain from 2 to 3 pints in saliva, 11 pints in gastric juice, 1½ pint in bile, and 5 pints in pancreatic juice, so that there are only about 20 pints in all. Of this quantity about 6 pints in all, weighing about 11 lb.; this water must be used over and over again in the processes of digestion and absorption. Water, as the chief result of digestion, about 6 lb. are produced daily. Its composition in 100 parts water, 30 albuminoids, 7 fats, 3 salts, 60 carbo-hydrates, 3 salts of potash, soda, and lime. By the mysterious vital action of the tissues the food is changed into the substance of the tissues, and the waste of the tissues is carried off in the form of carbonic dust and transpired water, while the fat is reserved for the purposes of respiration. The blood resembles chyle, but has very important additions—viz., the corpuscles (the colouring matter), substitute for the action of which on the corpuscles Schmidt attributes the coagulation of blood, and its separation into its supposed chemical constituents, fibrine, albuminogenous bodies resulting from decay, and a saccharine body, inosite. Besides these, the blood contains phosphorised substances, extractives, coloured matters, salts, potash, and lime. The Professor referred finally to the blood not coagulating in the living body by reason of the vessels from membranes of certain circumstances, and to benefits of its coagulating outside the body on the surface of wounds, so promoting the healing process.

Professor Tyndall will give the Friday evening discourse (being "Contributions to Molecular Physics") on the 18th inst.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

SIR WILLIAM BROWN, BART.

Sir William Brown, Bart., of Richmond Hall, in the county of Lancaster, one of the most eminent of the merchant princes of Liverpool, died on the 3rd inst. Sir William Brown, Esq., a merchant at Baltimore, in the United States, by his wife, Grace, daughter of John Beeston, Esq., of Dromenagh, co. Cork, was born at Ballymena, in the county of Antrim, May 8, 1784. He was for a short time at a school in Canterbury, in Yorkshire; but at the age of sixteen went with his parents to New York, and became an assistant to his father, who had embarked in the linen trade. In 1810, he founded the new firm of Brown, Shipley, and Co., in Liverpool and London, and in 1825 established a branch house at Philadelphia, in a very cautious way. In 1826 he was connected with the late Mr. Huskisson in the scheme of the Canada Land Estate. He was also for a long time, until some years ago, an Alderman of Liverpool. In 1834 Mr. Brown was returned without opposition to Parliament for the Borough of Liverpool, on the principles of Lancaster, on Whig principles, and he consistently voted himself to be a timid, timid to free trade, and to most reforming measures of national importance. He continued to represent Liverpool in Parliament from 1841 to 1847, but voluntarily, and not, unfortunately, at the request of his constituency, declined re-election. Mr. Brown may be said to have risen with Liverpool from the obscurity of a mercantile appliance and power, and he greatly himself well with its advancement. He was a merchant of a high and noble spirit, of untiring energy, and boundless munificence. He was devoted to working with the prosperity of Liverpool; and he could boast that he remembered there when the tonnage in its docks was 150,000, and that he saw it at 1,100,000. He remembered the receipts from the dock rates £93,782, and he lived to see them £1,000,000. He accepted was the town of Liverpool; there he had accumulated his own immense fortune; and his deep affection for the place led him to found, at a cost of £40,000, the magnificent Free Library, which stands as a liberal memorial of the day. A great deal more was but a general desire to the establishment of a public library in Liverpool, but the Public Libraries Act of Parliament was passed (the Liberal Member for the town was one of which received the Royal assent on May 5, 1852. To the museum and library Mr. Brown had given £5000, and to the former institution was made over by him, furnishing the remaining funds to pave the whole of the requisite amount. Besides these gifts, Mr. Brown, in 1857, gave £5000 to the Royal Infirmary, £5000 to the Blue Coat Hospital, £5000 to the Institution of commercial electricity, when his firm was somewhat hardly pressed, the Bank of England refused to grant a draw on them for two millions sterling, which was promptly issued in a few minutes. Mr. Brown was the author of "Letters on the Actual State of Trade in the United States," published in 1837, and "Observations on the Currency of America in 1844 and 1845. He was created a Baronet on June 24, 1863. Sir William married, on Jan. 1, 1806, Jane, daughter of Alexander Brown, of Ballymena, and by her had four sons and five daughters, all of whom died before himself. His second daughter, Grace, was married, in 1834, to the late John Hargreave, Esq., of Broad Oak, in the county of Lancaster, and Hall in the county of York, and died in 1859. His eldest son, the late William's eldest son, Alexander Brown, Esq., M.A., of Belfry Grange, Yorkshire, married, on Dec. 19, 1838, Mary Anne, eldest daughter of James Brown, Esq., of New York, and died in 1859, leaving William, Richmond (successor to his grandfather), two other sons, Alexander, of London, and Frederick, of Lancaster, and four daughters. The second son died at his seat, Richmond Hill, near Liverpool, on the 2nd inst., and is succeeded by his grandson, now Sir William Brown's eldest son, Alexander Brown, who was born on Jan. 10, 1840, and is Lieutenant-Colonel of the first brigade of Lancashire Artillery Volunteers. The present Lady Brown is the second daughter of Colonel William T. B. Nonnitmore, late of the 76th Regiment.

ROBERT HEDDUPP, Esq.

Robert Heddupp, Esq., F.S.G.S., of Cockermouth, the lead partner of the great mining firm of Messrs. Heddupp, Cocks, and Co., of 48, Charing-cross, and proprietors of the Middleton Lead Mines, in Weardale, in the county of Westmoreland, died, and was buried on the 3rd inst. Mr. Robert Heddupp, Esq., of Lethbury. He was born in 1801, and was educated at the Quaker school at Brecon-on-College, Oxford. He at one time was a partner in the firm of Hurford in Parliament, and was High Sheriff of Herefordshire in 1837. He married, in 1828, daughter and Deputy Lieutenant for that county. He married, first, in 1839, Elizabeth, daughter of the late George Palmer, Esq., of Nacing Park, Essex, and secondly, Mr. Heddupp, who died in 1861, leaves a son and two daughters, Belgrave-square.

ADMIRAL THOMPSON.

Admiral John Thompson, senior retired Admiral, R.N., who died recently at the advanced age of eighty-eight, entered the Royal Navy in December, 1787; and, after serving on the Jamaica station, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in 1793, and was promoted to be Lieutenant and Commander, and received at the blockade of Toulon; took part in Hotham's action on March 13, and in December, 1796, was wrecked in the Gulf of Lyons. He was present in the North Sea and in the West Indies, and assisted in the capture of a large number of vessels. He was promoted to the rank of post-captain in 1799, and on returning to this country, in 1803, was next employed in the Sea Fencible service. He obtained command of the Ariadne, in 1804; and, after again visiting the West Indies and cruising on the coast of North America, was appointed to the Cyane and Levant, in 1809, in the Baltic, where he took charge of the flotilla destined to co-operate in the unfortunate attack upon Bomarsund. He was subsequently employed in the Channel and Mediterranean. Admiral Thompson was a strict disciplinarian, and during the enemy's ports along the coast of France; and in the course of the year 1812 he assisted at the capture of the Basilic frigate, and the Admiral Thompson retired to post rank Oct. 21, 1810; accepted the rank of retired Rear-Admiral Oct. 4, 1841; became Vice-Admiral, July 9, 1851; and Admiral, June 9, 1860. The gallant Admiral was great uncle to Miss Thomson, the talented and pleasing popular magazine "The Rose, Shamrock, and Thistle."

Professor Ramsay has retired from the presidency of the Geological Society, in which he has been succeeded by Mr. J. W. Hendon.

The first locomotive engine was landed last month at Ceylon from the ship Palmerston. It was landed on a bamboo raft, and was drawn to the railway station by a team of three elephants.

It is reported that the Comte de Chambord has attached to each regiment of his new command a negro barber, for the purpose of shaving the beards of all Federal officers whom he may capture, in retaliation for a similar indignity practised upon him in Ohio.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

L. E. C., Dedbrook, and Cohen.—In Mate Kling's Knight's Move, No. 1624, clearly, if one Knight's move fails of his obvious mistake in two moves, by 1. P to K 5th, 2. P to Q 6th, &c.

R. C. Maclean.—We decide in your solution of Problem No. 1612 was correctly done for. In Problem No. 1741 you say 1. P to Q 4, which is wrong; but you probably intended to write 1. Q to K 4th.

Alpha.—We shall be glad to have set-still.

Solvers of Problem No. 1741.—J. K., &c., Alpha.

C. Bridger.—Your friend's solution of Problem No. 1641 is correct.

Solvers of Problem No. 1642.—Numbers 1 and 2 solutions can be solved in less than the specified number of moves, and are consequently worthless. 3. Problem No. 1641 cannot be solved in the way you propose.

Brunswick.—In Problem No. 1643, if 1. B to K 4th, Black can play to White Kt on the board. We must have mistaken the situation of the diagram.

Solvers of Problem No. 1643.—Alpha, who correctly by given in less than the prescribed number of moves in the case of a solution.

J. M., of Thornton.—We have received the same solution of Problem No. 1643, beginning 1. P to Q 4th, which is incorrect.

Correct Solutions of Problem No. 1643 have been received from Rev. Wm. Wilkinson, Rev. J. Owen, Rev. J. Wayte, Rev. J. Mitchell, Rev. J. Hunt, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Hall, Rev. J. Hall

NEW MUSIC.

REMINISCENCES OF SHAKESPEARE, for the Pianoforte. By C. W. GLOVER.
No. 1. ROMEO AND JULIET.
No. 2. THE FOUR AGES OF THE DRAMA.
3. HAMLET.
4. THE TEMPEST.
With highly finished Chromolithographs. Price 3s. each.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE AVON QUADRILLE, by F. WALLERSTEIN, on the most favourable Airs introduced in Shakespeare's Plays; with beautifully illustrated titlepage, by BRANDARD, after a design by GILBERT.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FOR THE DRAWING-ROOM.
NEWEST COMIC SONGS.
"The legend hints," Song by Mrs. Alfred A. Gill. 2s. 6d.
"The mystical pit shafts out," Song by Miss Adams. 2s. 6d.
"Jumbo's lament," Song by G. W. Bottomley. 2s. 6d.
All sung encored by J. L. Hatton.
All with effective and novel illustrations.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS OF
THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS.
Mother, dear mother ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Beneath the weeping willow ... ... 2s. 6d.
Carrie Lee ... ... 2s. 6d.
Wandering and lonely ... ... 2s. 6d.
Brother's looking at the window ... ... 2s. 6d.
And a New Edition of the popular
Trifles ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS by POPULAR COMPOSERS.
"Lucy." Virginia Gabriel ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
"When Sparrows Build." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"The Rose and the Lily." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh, Happy Day." Balfe ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Springtime of the Heart." F. Wallerstein ... ... 2s. 6d.
"I Wonder Whether I May." H. W. Goodban ... ... 2s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S CELEBRATED QUADRILLES.
Pyramus. Transcription for the Piano, of modern dance music.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S LE NOZZE DI FIGARO and DON GIOVANNI. Transcription for the Pianoforte. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S QUI LA VOCE. Transcription (ballet of the favourite Opera) for the Pianoforte. Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Third Edition. With Portrait and Autograph. Price 1s.
THE NEW TENOR.
LEARN SONG.
METZLER and Co., 37, 38, 39, and 56, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BEL DEMONIO QUADRILLE, introducing the melody of Mr. Balfe's new and other favourite airs from "Il Talismano," composed by W. H. HOLMES'ORCHESTRA. Price 4s. net.
DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-street.

BEL DEMONIO VALSE (performed every evening at Her Royal Highness the Princess Beatrice's ball by the band of the Coldstream Guards) on the "Bel Demonio." Composed by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Price 4s.
DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-street.

NEW SONG, THE OAK AND THE ASH, by HENRY SMART. Price 3s. net.
"Mr. Henry Smart's new song, 'The Oak and the Ash,' is one of the sweetest, if not the most admired, compositions he has lately produced."—Vide Times.
DITTY and HODGSON, 29, Oxford-street.

LANGTON WILLIAMS' Sacred Songs, "Thy Will be done," "Rock of Ages," "Abide with me," and "Lead, kindly Light." Price 2s. each.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 276, Tottenham-court-road.

LANGTON WILLIAMS' SING ME A CRADLE SONG. Composed for MISS EDITH WYNNE. Sung at the Monday Popular Concerts, St. Ed. (with Portrait of Miss Edith Wynne). Price 2s. 6d.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 276, Tottenham-court-road.

LANGTON WILLIAMS' SPARKLING LANCASHIRE. Just published. Price 2s. 6d. Illustrated. Brilliants will revel in popularity the celebrated "Fairy Footsteps," by the same Author.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 276, Tottenham-court-road.

LANGTON WILLIAMS' SPIRIT OF SPRING. Sung by Mdlle. Parepa. Fourth Edition. Price 2s. 6d. Net. Fourth Edition now Sung. Price 2s.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 276, Tottenham-court-road.

LANGTON WILLIAMS' FAIRY FOOTSTEPS. The tenth Edition of this admired Mazurka Brilliante. Illustrated. Price 2s.
W. WILLIAMS and Co., 276, Tottenham-court-road.

CHARLES E. DEANE'S BEAUFORT VALSE. Played by the celebrated Band of the Coldstream Guards. Orchestra for 14.—WARD and Co., Publishers, Row-terrace, Queen's Elm, Brompton.

COME, MY PRETTY MAIDEN. Annette's Song. Price 2s. 6d.
ADDISON and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street, W.

A CHRISTMAS SONG, by HORACE de LISLE. Price 2s. 6d.
"COME ON THE HOLLAND-TIDE." Price 2s. 6d.
These successful songs can be obtained at ADDISON and LUCAS, 210, Regent-street, W., and 60, New Burlington-street; and of all Musicsellers.

MUSIC HALF PRICE and Post-free. The High Price of Music, all Publishers Music at every Exhibition forwarded to any part of the World, Post-free, at Half-price.—CUTHBERT and CO., 37, Baker-st., Portman-square, London W.

MUSIC CATALOGUE. Just published, Gratis, New and Valuable Catalogue of Music, with the most popular Music of every Composer and Publisher. Post-free, 6d., or gratis to Purchasers.—CUTHBERT and CO., 37, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

PIANOFORTE MANUFACTURERS, CUTHBERT and CO., 37, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W., Manufacturers of Patent Pianofortes ... ... 25 to 50 Guineas.
Bedside Pianofortes ... ... 40 to 60 ,,
Drawing-room Pianofortes ... ... 60 to 80 ,,
CUTHBERT and CO., 37, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

OUTDOOR PLEYEL.
MESSRS. ADDISON and LUCAS, Musical Instrument Makers to her Majesty, direct the attention of Amateurs to their new Model of the Pleyel Piano, which will fold up into a portable form, in no. of, 2 guineas; or with sliding sheet keys on all the holes, 10 guineas; entirely silver, with oil or new Patent Leather Case, 12 guineas. Also the Pleyel Piano in other pattern, upright cabinet sheet keys, 42 gs.; full compass, 7 octaves, 25 gs. to 50 gs. 18s. All examined and proved by Mr. Benjamin Wells, who guarantee safety and to give instruction upon the new Piano. Instruction books for the finished Cythelier Piano, 10s. 6d. each.
Addison and Lucas, 210, Regent-street, W., and 60, New Burlington-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. PLUMES new PIANETTES at trade prices, replete with every improvement. Drawings and Lists free by post.—Nos. 27, 28, and 29, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

OETZMANN and PLUME'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in elegant walnut cases, 25 to 35 guineas; plain wood cheaper. Warranted.—27, Baker-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUME'S GRAND COTTAGE, seven octaves, new regis-tered check action, trichord throughout, and every improvement applied to touch and quality of tone, and check to tingle. Warranted.
181, Regent-street.

PIANOFORTES of all descriptions on HIRE, and the Instruments sold by Exchange. Repairing and Tuning to moderate terms.—181, Regent-street.

THE ENGLISH OPERA ASSOCIATION (Limited), Capital, £50,000, in Shares of £5 per share to be paid up on allotment; the remaining £1 per share will not be called up except in case of Temporary Offices—69, Regent-street, W.
DIRECTORS.
The Right Honourable the Earl of Westmoreland, C.B., Apsley-house, Hyde-park-corner, and Mount-street, Grosvenor-square.
J. R. Ashcroft, Esq., Lloyd's, and Bedford-row, W.C.
The Honourable F. F. C. Bouverie, M.P., 11, Whitehall-place, S.W.
Frederic Davison, Esq., 24, Fitzroy-square, W.
Sir Thomas Fermor-Hesketh, Bart., Easton Neston, Towcester.
The Honourable Spencer H. Egerton, 7, Chesham-place, S.W.
The Viscount Hamilton, M.P., 10, Hertford-street, Mayfair, W.
Sir Henry Hawkins, Knt., Judge of the Queen's Bench.
Henry Russell, Esq., 9, Hanover-street, W.
R. B. Sheridan, Esq., 76, Kensington Gardens-square, W.
Sir Sydney H. Waterlow, Bart., M.P., 6, Pall-mall East, S.W.
SOLICITORS—Messrs. Parke and Pollock, 32, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
BANKERS—The London and County Bank, 21, Lombard-street.
BANKERS—The London and Westminster Bank, St. James's-square, W.
BROKERS—Messrs. Sykes and Co., 3, Lombard-street, and 23, Pall-mall.
AUDITORS—Messrs. Turquand, Youngs, and Co., Basinghall-street, W.
Robert Addison Addison, Esq., 219, Regent-street, W.
George Wood, Esq. (Messrs. Wood and Co.), 181, Regent-street, W.
SECRETARY—Mr. Frederick Beale, 69, Regent-street, W.

The Directors have the gratification of stating that they have secured the services of Mr. Sims Reeves, the proprietor of the Royal Italian Opera, Covent-garden.
Under this arrangement that will become the leisure of the Queen Mr. Reeves will be in retirement, and will appear in the Provinces commencing on the first Monday in October next. The Directors have also secured the services of Mr. Charles Santley, who has a most valuable property in the Provinces, and who will appear in the principal towns in their fortnight, and has allowed the amount of his rental to deposit with the Company, to be returned to him at the end of the year, if not required by the Company. The Directors will also have the advantage of the considerably expanded staff of Mr. Gye's theatre, who have kindly consented to place their services at the disposal of Mr. Alfred Mellon will be the musical conductor; Mr. Augustus Harris, manager; Mr. Telbin, scenic artist; and Mr. Nicholson, machinist.
The prospectus of the Company, with the names of the Directors, and all information, will be received at the Office, 69, Regent-street.
Prospectuses and forms of application for Shares may be obtained at the Offices of the Company, 69, Regent-street, W., and of the Secretary, Mr. Frederick Beale, at the Offices of the Company.

BANK of NEW ZEALAND, INCORPORATED BY ACT OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY.
Bankers to the Government of New Zealand.
CAPITAL, £1,000,000. RESERVED FUND, £80,000.
Head Office—Wellington.
Branches and Agencies in New Zealand:
Auckland ... Dunedin ... Hokitika ... Invercargill
New Plymouth ... Grahamtown ... Nelson ... Picton
Napier ... Akaroa ... Wellington ... Waitahi
Christchurch ... Lyttelton ... Timaru ... Wanganui
Onehunga ... Kaipoi ... Westport ... Greymouth
Napier ... Timaru ... Moutohorita ... Bogham
Christchurch ... Lyttelton ...
The Bank grants Drafts on any of the above places, receives Deposits, and transacts every description of Banking business connected with New Zealand, on terms which may be ascertained on application at the London Office.
THE Bank opens Accounts with Private Individuals.
F. LARKWORTHY,
Chief Manager in London.

NORTH DEVON.—FREEHOLD FAMILY RESIDENCE, with Pleasure-Grounds, Kitchen and Fruit Gardens, Stabling, Coach-house, &c., and about 16 acres of rich Meadow Land, in the parish of Braunton, about seven miles from Barnstaple, and nine miles of a railway station, to be SOLD by AUCTION early in the ensuing month of April, by Messrs. DEBENHAM and TEWSON, at the house of Mr. Miller, Braunton.

MONEY ADVANCED, on Personal Security, by Robinson or Gentlemen, Have to Rescind Estates; 37 years' purchase, in repayments, or upwards. Apply to Mr. Chancery Barrister, &c.—Apply to or address Mr. MORRIS, 11, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane.

ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE.—MAPPIN BROTHERS, and CO., Manufacturers, guarantee their Electro-Silver Plate to be of the highest quality, and not approved on
Table spoons or forks, per doz. ... £1 16 0 ... £3 0 0 ... £4 0 0
Dessert spoons ... ... 1 10 0 ... 2 10 0 ... 3 0 0
Dessert forks ... ... 1 10 0 ... 2 10 0 ... 3 0 0
Tea Spoons and covers, per set ... 0 18 0 ... 1 10 0 ... 2 0 0
Fiddle pattern, per doz. ... ... 1 10 0 ... 2 10 0 ... 3 0 0
Dessert knives, per pair ... ... 0 10 0 ... 0 15 0 ... 0 18 0
12 table dessert knives and forks ... 3 0 0 ... 5 0 0 ... 5 0 0
12 tea knives and forks ... ... 1 10 0 ... 2 0 0 ... 2 10 0
Cruet-frames, 4, 5, and 6 bottles ... 1 5 0 ... 3 0 0 ... 3 15 0
Cruet-frames, 4, 5, and 6 bottles ... 1 15 0 ... 3 10 0 ... 4 0 0
Cruet-frames, 4, 5, and 6 bottles ... 2 0 0 ... 4 0 0 ... 5 0 0
Salvers in all sizes, each ... ... 1 4 0 ... 1 10 0 ... 2 0 0
Salvers in all sizes, each ... ... 1 4 0 ... 1 10 0 ... 2 0 0
Tea and Coffee Services ... ... 3 0 0 ... 5 0 0 ... 6 0 0
The London Showrooms, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, West-end, and 4, Mansion-house-buildings, City. Manufactory, Queen's-road, Sheffield. Mappin Brothers, Queen's-road, Sheffield, the largest and best assorted stocks in the United Kingdom. Cutlery and Electro-Silver Plate Warehouses, 77 and 78, Oxford-street, West; and 77 and 78, Cornhill, City.

DINERS à la RUSSE.—A variety of New SILVER PLATE for the above SERVICE for the Season 1864 may be seen at MAPPIN BROTHERS',
Silversmiths, London-bridge; and 220, Regent-street, W.
Sheffield Manufactory, Queen's-road.
Second-hand Plate Purchased or Exchanged.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for Dwelling-houses, Halls, Churches, Public Buildings, Ships, Camps, in Bronze, Ormolu, China, and Glass. Statuettes in Parian and Bronze. Lustres in Cut and Coloured Glass.
OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and Table Glass, at 45, Oxford-street, London.
Show Dinner Services for 12 persons, from £7 15s.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £2 10s.
All articles marked in plain figures.
Ornamental Glass Shades for Gas Chandeliers for pressing Rose, Engine, and Fluted Glasses for Dining-room Chandeliers.
London—Showroom, 45, Oxford-street, W.
Birmingham—Manufactory and Show-room, 20, Broad-street.
Established 1807.

GARDNERS' LAMPS ARE THE BEST. Moderator and Paraffin Table-lamps, from 4s. 6d. each. Illustrated Price-list gratis and post-free.—GARDNER and Co., New Oxford (four doors from Tottenham-court), London. Established 1784.

PIANOFORTE.—Cottage, in a beautiful Rosewood Case, 7 octaves, with Trichord Treble, to be SOLD, for £32 (half its value).—At 9, GREEK and OGLE, 84, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W.

WALNUT SUITE OF DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, 7 chairs, settee, and two easy chairs, all of the best quality, and in the most elegant style, covered in 46 guineas, half its value; consisting of a fine oval loo-table; handsome chiffonier, with plate-glass back; a very elegant cabinet, with ebonised shafts, covered in rich silk brocatelle; and chairs to match, covered in rich silk brocatelle, and similar to the SPANISH MAHOGANY DINING-ROOM SUITE, in guineas, at 9, GREEK and OGLE, 84, Berners-street, Oxford-street, W. Established 1807.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S BEDSTEADS, Bedding, Bed-hangings, Mattresses, and bedding complete. Pall-mall-place, Trafalgar-square.
Illustrated Catalogues sent free by application.

J. MAPLE and CO.'S FIRST-CLASS FURNITURE.
The Turquoise Couch ... ... 15 guineas.
The Prince of Wales Couch ... ... 20 ,,
The Princess Royal Couch ... ... 25 ,,
The Queen's Easy Chair ... ... 30s.
The Prince Easy Chair ... ... 40s.
Extensive, 146, Tottenham-court-road.

FURNITURE CARRIAGE-FREE to any Railway Station.
Dressing-tables, with Glass complete £3 10 0
Dining-room Suites, complete 24 0 0
Bedroom Suites, ditto 12 0 0
Illustrated Catalogue gratis and post-free on application.
F. and S. BEVAN, 141, Oxford-street.

EVANS'S PRIZE KITCHENER. — This first medallion Kitchener obtained a Prize at the Exhibition of 1862, and is manufactured by EVANS and GLASPOOL, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, largest size for Hotels, Taverns, Private and Public Schools, Clubhouses, Hospitals, Unions, &c., with Steam Apparatus, from £10 to £100 and upwards.
Showroom, 32 and 33, King William-street, London-bridge.
Manufactory, 10, Arthur-street West, adjoining.

CHUBBS' LOCKS, FIREPROOF SAFES, and DOOR LEVERS CASH and DESPATCH Illustrated Price Lists sent free.—57, St. Paul's-churchyard, London; 16, Lord-street, Liverpool; 16, Market-street Manchester; and 28, Wolverhampton.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS post-free, at half-price.—Catalogues, hardy annuals, 1s.; 50 kinds, 5s.; 50 stove, 5s.6d.; 12 Ferns, 5s. 6d. Catalogues, with sample packets, 2d. each.—T. THOMPSON, Florist to H.R.H. the Prince, Ipswich.

HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, London, W., and 26, King's-road, Brighton, invite attention to their varied Stock of WINES, amongst which will be found—
Sherry ... at 30s., 36s., 42s., 48s., 54s., 60s., to 84s. per Dozen.
Port ... at 30s., 36s., 42s., 48s., 54s., 60s., to 84s. ,, Champagne ... at 30s., 42s., 48s., 54s., 60s., 72s. ,,
Lists and Prices of all other Wines on Application.

CHEAP and GOOD WINES.—OFFLEY'S Pale and Golden SHERRY, 20s. per dozen.—SHERRIES, 24s. to 42s.—PORTS, from 24s. To be obtained Pure and Cheap of the DOMESTIC WINE COMPANY, 26, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross, and 4, Princes-street, Cavendish-square.
Cellars—Northcross Courthouse, W.; Stone and Offley—Ida, Portugal; Domestic Wine Company, Limited, Cockspur-street, Charing-cross.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE.—The October Brewings of the above Ale are now being supplied in the finest condition by the Trade generally, and by HEDGES and BUTLER, 155, Regent-street, and 26, King's-road, Brighton.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE, IN STICKS and DROPS, for EATING,
DELICIOUS, NUTRITIOUS, AND DIGESTIBLE.
J. S. FRY and SONS, Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE and COCOA.
The Superiority of J. S. Fry and Sons' articles has been acknowledged by the highest public approbation during a century.

2280 AGENTS—Chemists, Confectioners, Grocers, and others, WANTED, to SELL COCOA PASTILLES. It is clean and strong, moderate in price, and wholesome. Three advantageous terms.—Apply to the Manufacturer,
OSWEGO PREPARED CORN,
for
Publicans, Cocktail Manufacturers, &c.
Manufactured and Patented by
THE OSWEGO STARCH FACTORY,
Oswego, New York, U.S.
It is the original preparation from the Native of maize established 1848, extensively used in the manufacture of the finest brands, and known in the trade to be unrivalled.
It is 50 per cent stronger than any of the imitations, has a finer flavour, and is more delicate.
The Oswego has the natural golden tinge, and not the chalk white produced by other manufacturers.
SOLE AGENTS for GREAT BRITAIN, DUNVILLE, and CO., Granite-hall, London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD.
Those are many imitations of mustard sold in London, but KEEN'S is the only genuine article. Purity is guaranteed.
KEEN, ROBINSON, and CO., LIMITED.
Sold by most Grocers from the Cask, and by 1 lb. and 2 lb. Canisters.
KEEN, ROBINSON, and CO., LIMITED, 54, Basinghall-street, London.

LETTERS PATENT 1863. PRIZE MEDAL 1862.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GOATS is the most valuable Food for Infants and Invalids. The Analytical Chemist Hassall has shown that this food is easy of digestion and highly nutritious.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding, and is the best thickening for soups and broths. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, and Oilmen, in packets, 6d., 1s., and 2s. each; and for medicine nursing, and has long been used with great success in the Hospitals.
ROBINSON, PATENT BARLEY MILLS, and 57, Aldermanbury, London.

FIELD'S CELEBRATED UNITED SERVICE SOAP TABLETS, 4d. and 6d. each, sold by all Chandlers and Grocers throughout the United Kingdom. Ask for Field's, and see the name of J. C. and J. FIELD on the Wrapper. Sold Wholesale by J. C. and J. FIELD, Lambeth, London S., where also may be obtained their Price-current Pamphlet Candles.

CRYSTALLISED LAUNDRY SOAP, cut, 1d. stamped 2d. Sold by all Grocers. It is the best, most useful, and safest necessity for use of soda or washing-powder in the Laundry. Manufactured by J. C. and J. FIELD, Lambeth, London S. WILLIAM FIELD, Manager.

HOUSEHOLD SOAPS CARRIAGE FREE and NO CHARGE for the CASE if 1 Cwt. or upwards as one Order.—Primrose, 1s. 2d.; Brown Windsor, 1s. 2d.; Yellow, 1s. 2d.; Primrose, 4lb. per 112lb. Curds; Mottled, 4lb.; Finest made 4lb. per 112lb. Curds; Honey, 4lb. per 112lb. Curds and Castile Depôt, 91, Bishopsgate-street, London.

BEDROOM CANDLES.
PRICE'S CANDLES, which will not drop or gutter, burn with a bright, even flame, and last a long time. Sold by grocers and oilmen all the world over.
PRICE'S PATENT CANDLE COMPANY, 14, and 15, Belmont-row, Lambeth-road, London S.E., and 23, Hanover-street, Liverpool.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
and awarded the Prize Medal, 1862.

COALS.—COCKERELL'S COALS, price 26s., cash. Central Office, No. 13, Cornhill, E.C.

INDIGESTION. — MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE and LOZENGES are strongly recommended by the profession as the most effective remedy for Dyspepsia. Manufactured by T. MORSON and SON, 31, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W.C., in bottles at 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. Pepsine Lozenges, in boxes, at 2s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. each.

Q U I N I N E.
WATKINS and DONES WINE
sold by all Chemists and Grocers.

FOR BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, HOT CONSTITUTION, SUMMER'S COUGH and VOICE LOZENGES are strongly recommended by the profession, and used by Jenny Lind, Madame Sontag, Madame Catalani, Madame Vestris, Mr. Braham, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Lablache, &c. Sold by all Druggists, in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each, by appointment to the Queen and Prince of Wales, Dr. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.—Sir Charles Locock, Bart., M.D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen, has extended many years' experience in the use of these Wafers, and can confidently say they give relief in the most distressing cases of asthma, coughs, colds, consumption, and all disorders of the breath, throat, and lungs. Sold by all Druggists.

CURE OF ASTHMA THIS WEEK BY DR. LOCOCK'S PULMONIC WAFERS.—Extract of a letter from Mr. Hall, chemist, Bridport:—"During the last winter Mrs. Hall, of this town, had the most distressing attack of asthma and advice without benefit, one box of your Wafers relieved her immediately, and a few more cured her entirely."—Sold by all Druggists. Price 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s. per box. Sold by all Druggists.

PHYSICIANS' PRESCRIPTIONS promptly and accurately dispensed by experienced assistants, prepared according to the directions of the NEW BRITISH PHARMACOPŒIA, by DUNVILLE and CO., Pharmaceutical Chemists, 174, New Bond-street, London.

DINNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an effervescing remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, and Indigestion, and as a safe aperient for delicate constitutions.—172, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

ALL afflicted with WEAK EYES may obtain immediate relief by using the WARNER'S EYE WATER, which removes all inflammation arising from cold, dust, or exposure to the sun. Sold by Barclay, 95, Farringdon-street; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Hannay, 63, Oxford-street; Hooper, London-bridge.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—ARTIST in HAIR. Mr. HOOPER has removed to better premises than he formerly occupied, and elegantly mounts in Gold, Rich Enamels, Chains, Lockets, Brooches, Rings, Studs, Bracelets, Necklaces, Guards, &c., at the usual charges. A beautiful collection of specimens, handsomely mounted, kept for inspection. An Illustrated book sent post-free.—Beverley, 172, Fenchurch-street, London.

HAIR JEWELLERY.—G. HOOPER, Artist in Hair, Gold Gold Lockets for Hair, from 8s. each; Hair Bracelets, from 12s. each; Brooches, Rings, Studs, Chains, Necklaces, and Guards, from £1. Illustrated Book sent free.—172, Fenchurch-street, London.

JENNER and KNEWSTUB, to the Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, beg to call attention to their Improved Spring Steel Trusses, Abdominal Belts, and Moving Bandages, Suspensory Bandages, and Elastic Stockings, together with their unequalled specimens of Hernial and Surgical Instruments. Established 1807.—JENNER and KNEWSTUB, 33, St. James's-street, and 62, Jermyn-street.

D. NICHOLSON and CO., Silkmercers, &c., 50, 51, and 52, St. Paul's-churchyard, beg to announce that they have just purchased a large quantity of the Spring Silk, comprising 50,000 yards of choice and elegant fancy Checks, Stripes, and Plaids, which they have much pleasure in offering to a part—about half their original price.
50 Patterns post-paid.
NICHOLSON'S, 50, 51, and 52,
corner of Cheapside, London.
Patterns sent to the country in connection with any of the Houses.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS COLOURED GLACÉS, all Silk, 19 inches wide, 1s. 6d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS NEW CHECKED and STRIPED SILKS, from 1 guinea a Dress.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS NEW BROCHÉ and GLACÉ SILKS, from 1 guinea a Dress.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS MOIRE ANTIQUES and BLACK GROS GRAINS, from 1 guinea a Dress.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS BLACK BROCHÉ SILKS; from 2s. 6d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS BLACK GLACÉS and GROS GRAINS.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

EARLY SPRING SILKS.
Patterns Free.
New Checked and Striped Glacés,
New Broché Glacés,
New Plain Glacés,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, 4, Ludgate-hill.

EARLY SPRING DOUBLE MOHAIRS,
Patterns free,
JOHN HARVEY and SON, Ludgate-hill.

MOIRES ANTIQUES.—SEWELL and CO. have the largest Selection of Splendid Moire Antiques in White, Black, and Coloured, at 2½ guineas the Full Dress. 72, CHEAPSIDE.
COMPTON HOUSE.
Print-street and Old Change, London, Sole, W.

REAL IRISH LINENS, direct from Belfast, Purveyors free.—Shirts and Collars—Samuel Talbot's, with the Improved Long Cuff, 40s. the half-dozen; Gentlemen's Linen Cambric Pocket-handkerchiefs, 2s. 3d. the half-dozen; Ladies' and Children's Ditto, 1s. 6d. the half-dozen; and Huckaback Towels, Kitchen and Fancy Towels, Glass Cloths, Diapers, Damasks, Quilts, Sheetings, Shirtings, Dress Linens, Cambrics, Lawns, Tapes, Threads, and every description of Linen Goods manufactured. Samples free.—JAMES LINDSAY and CO., Belfast.

SHIRTS.—Morning and Evening Shirts of the very best quality, fine fronts, three linen collars, 40s. the half-dozen; patterns for self-measurement and patterns post on application.—R. FORD and CO., 67, Strand, corner of Bedford-street.

W. B. SHUTE, YOUTHS' TAILOR AND OUTFITTER, 10, Old Cavendish-street, Oxford-street.
Juvenile Costumes in every variety.
All the materials thoroughly shrunk before cutting.

EVERY LADY SHOULD POSSESS H QUEEN DAGMAR'S CROSS, worn by H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, and given by her to the Ladies of her Bed-chamber. It is made with an exceedingly neat, and at the same time elegant, appearance, and is a most becoming ornament. Price 2s. 6d. Sent free by post for 30 stamps.
H. C. and M. HOWARD, 4, Conduit-street, Regent-street, W.

DESTACHIO-NUT TOILET-POWDER imparts to the skin a natural whiteness, youthful delicacy, and healthful appearance. Sold by all the trade. Sole Proprietor, HENRY WEBER.—PIESSE and LUBIN, 2, New Bond-street, London.

PIESSE and LUBIN'S SWEET SCENTS. Handkerchief Perfumes, Cosmetics, Fine Soaps, Perfumery, New Scent, New-mown Hay, and 1000 others. 2s. 6d. each, Sold everywhere.—PIESSE and LUBIN, 2, New Bond-street.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR.—CHURCHER'S ELIXIR is the most effectual preparation for Restoring and preserving the Hair in long, handsome Curls Pamphlet, 1s. Sold by all Perfumers.—CHURCHER'S ELIXIR DEPOT, 5, HOUNDSDITCH and 308A, 3, Great Marlborough-street, W., and 95 Cornhill, E.C.

MDME. RACHEL'S CIRCASSIAN WASH and ALMANDINE, a beautiful fair ever. 4s., New Bond-street.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR.
This Speedy preparation for Sunburn, Freckles, Tan, Redness, Roughness, Spots, Pimples, and a Sallowness and Delicacy of Skin, produces a Clear Complexion, Soft Hands, and Delicate Arms. Unrivalled for Infants and Children. Rowlands' Kalydor and Odonto, or Pearl Dentifrice. Price 4s. 6d. each; 8s. 6d. per bottle. Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by Chemists and Perfumers.

TREITH.—Mr. ESKELL, Surgeon Dentist, has introduced a new material for Mounting Sets of Teeth which are made and fixed in a few hours without giving any pain or inconvenience in stopping or extracting. Decayed Teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. Terms moderate.—Dental Surgery "free for" stamps. Discovered teeth restored, &c. 3, Grafton-street, Bond-street.

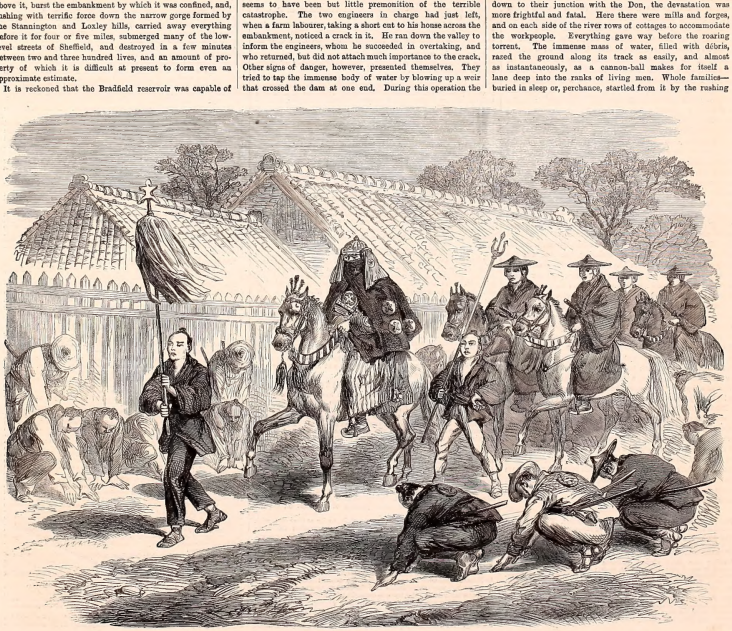
TEETH.—OSTEO-BIDON, Messrs. GABRIEL'S Patent Mineral Substitute for Ivory, as used on certain parts of materials, economy, and freedom from pain, are the principal recommendations of this invention. "Perfect as the Teeth," just published, free by post, or gratis on application.—GABRIEL, Dentists, 56, Ludgate-hill, 134, Duke-street, Liverpool, and London Establishment, 34, New Bond-street; and Birmingham, 65, New-street. Diploma, Paris.

WANTED TO PURCHASE, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms, Jewellery, Plate, Miscellaneous Property, &c. Ladies and Gentlemen waited upon at their own residences, Telegram, Yellow, W.C. Ladies and Gentlemen waited on; 1st, Sarah-row, Fort Office orders immediately attended to.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms Furniture, Miscellaneous Property, &c. The highest price given. Ladies and Gentlemen waited upon at their own residences by Mr. and Mrs. ETAM, 13, Great-castle, Regent-street, W., or Letter Box Office, Rupert-street, the utmost value in cash immediately remitted. Established 1830.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by HENRY GEORGE HINDMARCH, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1864.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.



No. 1250.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE SHEFFIELD CALAMITY.

On Friday last, shortly before midnight, Sheffield was suddenly swept by an inundation similar in its origin, but more destructive in its effects, than the great Holmfirth flood of Feb. 5, 1852, by which, it will be remembered, ninety persons lost their lives, property to the extent of from £500,000 to £800,000 was laid waste, and 7000 workpeople were thrown out of employment. In that case the calamity was occasioned by the giving way, after a continuous wet season, of the banks of the Bilbury reservoir, from which the town of Huddersfield drew its supplies of water. In the present instance, the Bradfield reservoir of the Sheffield Water Company, situated between five and six miles from the town, and at several hundred feet above it, burst the embankment by which it was confined, and, rushing with terrific force down the narrow gorge formed by the Stannington and Loxley hills, carried away everything before it for four or five miles, submerged many of the low-level streets of Sheffield, and destroyed in a few minutes between two and three hundred lives, and an amount of property of which it is difficult at present to form even an approximate estimate.

It is reckoned that the Bradfield reservoir was capable of holding 114,000,000 cubic feet of water, and that at the time of the accident it contained a little over 100,000,000. It covered an area of seventy-six acres, and filled a narrow basin formed by the junction of the two ranges of hills just named, and by an embankment crossing the end of the valley looking towards the town of Sheffield. This magnificent piece of earthwork, 300 yards in length, 40 ft. in thickness, and 85 ft. in height, was considered quite strong enough to bear any pressure with which the water within the reservoir would ever be likely to test its solidity. From this embankment the gorge slopes rapidly down towards the town, carrying the waters of the Loxley, which unite lower down with the Revelin, and after their confluence flow into the Don. There seems to have been but little premonition of the terrible catastrophe. The two engineers in charge had just left, when a farm labourer, taking a short cut to his house across the embankment, noticed a crack in it. He ran down the valley to inform the engineers, whom he succeeded in overtaking, and who returned, but did not attach much importance to the crack. Other signs of danger, however, presented themselves. They tried to tap the immense body of water by blowing up a weir that crossed the dam at one end. During this operation the two engineers walked again across the embankment, but had scarcely got on the other side of the fissure before it suddenly yawned, and a portion of the embankment, 110 yards in length and 75 ft. in depth, gave way, and the water demon leaped with a voice of thunder from his ooze bed, and rushed with headlong fury down the gorge below.

The destruction of life and property in the gorge itself was less appalling in extent than below the point at which it debouches into a wider valley; but whatever came within reach of the flood—cutlers' huts, with their inmates; stone inclosures and fences, cattle, trees, and part even of the soil itself—was borne away with irresistible might, leaving scarcely a vestige behind. From the confluence of the two little streams down to their junction with the Don, the devastation was more frightful and fatal. Here there were mills and forges, and on each side of the river rows of cottages to accommodate the workpeople. Everything gave way before the roaring torrent. The immense mass of water, filled with débris, razed the ground along its track as easily, and almost as instantaneously, as a cannon-ball makes for itself a lane deep into the ranks of living men. Whole families—buried in sleep or, perchance, startled from it by the rushing year—were literally hurled into eternity. In the morning, the very foundations of their humble and hitherto peaceful abodes were undermining, and their bodies were lodged, some of them miles off, in the most unheard-of nooks and corners—here and there singly, elsewhere in heaps of ten, a dozen, or fourteen. Almost all were in their night-dresses—from some even these had been torn off by the violence of the flood. Several were shockingly mangled, and all, of course, covered with slime and mud. Let us draw a veil over this part of the picture; it is too heartrending to allow of our taking more than a general and hasty glance at it. But, as the correspondent of the Times has remarked, "it needs only to be known that at the deal of the night a great dark flood flowed through a densely-populated part of the town, rousing the sleepers from their beds, and only receding in the morning thus to reveal to us the horrors that of Friday night are known in the hearts of thousands, but can never be told."

SCENES IN JAPAN: THE GOVERNOR OF KANAGAWA AND SUITE GOING TO A FIRE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 272.

The destruction of property, as may readily be imagined, has been immense. Bridges, hotels, mills, farm-premises, factories, houses, stables, have been either swept away entirely or left standing in a state of ruin. Shutters of shops were torn down and the contents of the windows carried away—no one knows where. Cellars containing large stocks of goods were flooded. Thousands of acres along the banks of the Don were laid under water, and incalculable injury has been inflicted upon the growing crops. Numerous gardens, upon which the owners had bestowed considerable labour and expense, and in which they took great pride, have been all but obliterated. The inhabitants of the submerged districts have in many instances lost all that they possessed, and there are those who will be left for a time to eat nothing their own but the night-dresses in which they were fortunate enough to escape. "At Lady's Bridge," says the Sheffield Telegraph, "dwarfed beams of timber mixed with straw and other debris were piled up by the flood against the arches of the work of the bridge. The immense quantity of rafters, flooring, joists, planks, and miscellaneous articles heaped to within a few feet of the top of the bridge told the destruction of scores of buildings without doubt. . . . There seemed wood enough to build a village."

Two accidents of the same nature within a dozen years, both of them signalised by frightfully fatal and destructive results, suggest the inquiry whether there is not in the system of nearly radically defective principle of computation relied upon by engineers in the construction of our great water reservoirs. It is said, we know not with what truth, that a considerable number of the manufacturing companies of the town are also liable to sudden devastation from precisely the same cause as that to which Sheffield owes the calamity of Friday night. Mr. Fernand, on Tuesday evening, called the attention of the Home Secretary for a second time to the state of the reservoir of years, to the leaky condition of the Dee Park reservoir, from which the populous town of Bradford draws its water supplies. Another catastrophe of this kind will be a disgrace to the public authorities. It is not enough that we have laws for legislation; but periodical Government inspection is loudly called for. Experience has shown that in two instances erroneous calculations have been made as to the strength and solidity of embankments built for the purpose of resisting the lateral pressure of an enormous body of water. For aught the public know to the contrary, the same mistake may have been made in regard to all the large reservoirs of the water companies in the kingdom. We trust a rigid investigation will be promptly set afoot; that measures will be either voluntarily taken, or sternly enforced, to prevent the possibility of any similar accident in future; and that the owners of manufactories and town authorities will heartily concur in acting, as in a serious a business they are bound to act, upon the common sense maxim that "prevention is better than cure."

Recalling our thoughts from the horrors of the present, we ask what can be done to mitigate the suffering, the loss, and the anxiety which this inundation has left behind it? Some of its disastrous effects will require years to repair; and for some, alas! there is no remedy whatever. Many will be unable to sigh over the dead, recover their bodies, and give them decent sepulture. But there are hundreds who have lost everything but life—all the little property which they had earned by years of honest toil—all the various articles of comfort or even ornament which contributed to minister contentment and delectation to their humble lot. The wealthy in Sheffield have not suffered very severely; but the few who have suffered are those who have felt themselves. For the most part, this terrible visitation has fallen upon the poor, and upon a most industrious and thriving section of the poor. To restore them to such comfort as they previously enjoyed will, no doubt, be the generous resolution of the British people. It would be mere impertinence to apply any stimulus to their liberality. The heartrending facts have sufficiently moved them. They will give spontaneously, give promptly, and it is only necessary to say that they will give as we feel no mistrust. Their deepest cause of sorrow will be that to give back the lives which have been taken is beyond their power; but their very helplessness in this respect will dispose them, we hope, to insist that such steps shall be taken as will prevent their being ever again exposed by a like cause to this unavailing anguish of heart.

The Hersegovina appears to be again disturbed. The Christian inhabitants refuse to pay the taxes, and great agitation prevails.

The Swiss Minister at Vienna has officially informed the Federal Council that the Japanese Government will send from Ambassador to Europe for the purpose of determining the Powers to ratify the treaties.

During the first eleven months of 1863 there arrived emigrants at New York:—From Ireland, 86,891; Germany, 32,861; England, 26,871; Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Russia, 5,000; Italy, 1,981; Switzerland, 1611; Sweden, 1,058; Italy, 600; Holland, 511; Belgium, 436; West Indies, 314; Spain, 102; various others, 671: total, 180,915.

The Prussian Government has contracted a loan of six millions of thalers (about half a million sterling, bearing 4 per cent interest, at the rate of 79, with the Royal Bank, the Seehandlung, and the house of Raphael Rüsenger. This loan was previously voted by the Chambers for the construction of railways.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Duke of Saxe-Coburg has paid a visit to Paris. He has had an audience of the Emperor. The belief in Paris is that the Duke has addressed himself to the Emperor, with the assent of some others of the minor rulers of Germany, in order to induce Napoleon III. to recognise the right of the Schleswig and Holstein duchies to govern their own government and government.

The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop left their Imperial host on Saturday last for England. About the time they were leaving, the French steamer Lyonnais was moving at St. Raizare, after a rapid voyage from their new dominions. She brings recent favourable accounts of the state of things in Mexico. Forey at Orizaba had returned to the capital after two months' absence, during which he seems to have been busy in the organisation of the provinces of further resistance. Juarez was in full flight towards the United States, and 4000 soldiers of the Republic were to be surrendered en masse to General Mejia. The news of the final submission of the town by the Juarez chief had been received with great enthusiasm. The Moniteur states that the new Mexican loan of 200,000,000 francs would be recalled in entirely unfounded. The Memorial Diplomatique of Paris states that the Emperor Maximilian of Mexico declines the draught of a treaty was agreed on to be concluded between him and the Emperor of Austria, for the settlement of the Austrian succession in Mexico. This treaty is intended to settle the period of French occupation and to provide a rule for the liquidation of the claims of France upon the Mexican Government. The French troops are to be withdrawn from Mexico by the end of 1867, and by that time the Mexican army are filled up. The debt is to be paid by fourteen annual instalments, each probably amounting to twenty-five million francs, or one million sterling.

The Moniteur publishes an extensive military promotion made on the occasion of the Prince Imperial's birthday. Among the promotions General of Brigade Viscount Leon de Villiers is raised to the rank of General of Division. Colonels Count Colonna Walewski, Count de Mortier, D'Ourrier de Villegly, Susane, and Dacasse to that of Generals of Brigade. The Count de Flahault de la Billarderie receives the brevet of Colonel. Twenty-four Captains to the rank of Colonel, and eighteen to that of Lieutenant-Colonel.

The Government has resorted to one of those strong measures which in the country of the Revolution are necessary to crush that which they were intended to frustrate. While a few friends of M. Garnier Pagès were at the house of that gentleman in the Champs Elysées at Paris, were discussing in that gentleman's residence the prospects of his success, the police, headed by the commissaries of police, and all those present commanded to turn out. The police refused, and M. Garnier Pagès' domicile by the police is the subject of necessarily bad comment in the Paris and provincial press. The Moniteur, however, without explaining the conduct of the authorities in this particular case, says that the Government is determined to put an end to the determination of the Government to enforce the law. But it is stated that M. Garnier Pagès complained to the Minister of the Prefect of Police, and that the meeting at his house was composed exclusively of friends of his family.

The Nation has received a second warning, on account of an article signed by M. Jules Favre, which appeared in its columns.

One of the oldest of French papers, Le Nouvelliste, which had existed more than a hundred years, having been founded in the reign of Louis XV., has ceased to appear.

Mr. J. Church has been appointed unpaid Vice-Consul at Pau, in the room of Mr. Edward Church.

An Imperial decree fixes the amount to be paid for exemption from military service for the year 1864 at 2,500 francs. The Moniteur announces the extension of the furlough of a portion of the army till the 1st of May.

M. Cordoven, the Procureur-Général who conducted the prosecution of Orsini and his accomplices, is dead. He was 74 years of age, after a very short illness.

The famous Orsini diamond necklace has given rise to a lawsuit. The parties are M. Millaud, the proprietor of the Petit Journal, who has recently published as an account of the original trial, and MM. Lebrun and Co., editors of the Causes Célèbres, who say that M. Millaud has ingeded his publication as a violation of their rights. The plaintiff contended that the publication of the Petit Journal was a literary piracy. Delzet, editor, and Serrieyt, printer of the journal, jointly and severally to pay 2000f. damages.

ITALY.

A bill to tax landed property on the same basis in all Italian provinces is being debated by the Turin Chamber. It is described by the Finance Minister as intended to do away with the last traces of territorial and political divisions.

Fresh conflicts are reported to have occurred between the French and Papal troops at Rome. The general health of the troops in the city is in a state of great agitation.

The Pope's health is improving. His physicians have insisted upon his avoiding all fatigue and keeping perfectly quiet.

Sentence of death has been passed by a court at Santa Maria, in the province of Terra di Lavora, on the brigand chiefs seized at Genza. Cardillo, Fuoco, and Mastrangelo, municipal functionaries of the kingdom should continue their functions until he may decide otherwise. In his address to the Council, he promises that he will govern in accordance with the principles which inspired safety by a desire for the country's good.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

A note from Austria and Prussia, which has found its way into print, explains the grounds on which these Powers justify the invasion of Schleswig. The Duchies, it is stated, are not to be dismembered the character of their original policy, that they are even still willing to propose to accept the proposal for a conference as an armistice so far as the essential points are concerned. They decline however to part of the conditions attached to the armistice. These are, the withdrawal of the troops of occupation, the retreat of the Danish force on the island only consisted of one hundred men, who appear to have been taken by surprise, and who were made prisoners. The Prussian batteries and the Dolppel intrenchments have been exchanging fire.

The Austrians, after driving the Danes from Velle, pursued them to Horsens, and even to Aarhuus; but the pursuit does not seem to have caused any considerable loss to the retreating troops. At Aarhuus the Danish infantry was embarked for Fredericia and Alsen, and the cavalry continued its march towards Viborg. The Austrians seem to have relinquished any intention of occupying the whole of Jutland; for their commander-in-chief, General von Gablenz, has arrived at Kolding. At Velle the population has been disarmed by the allied commanders, as several attempts had been made to murder Austrian soldiers.

Field Marshal von Wrangel has issued a proclamation prohibiting the export of horses, cattle, and grain from Schleswig, on the penalty of confiscation. It is asserted that the allies are about to impose a tax of a thaler per ton on the corn of the landed proprietors of Jutland.

All the members elected belong to the National Party, which wishes for the continuation of the war. M. Hall, the ex-Premier, was elected unanimously. Bishop Monrad, the President of the Council, who expressed himself favourable to pursuing the war, was elected by a large majority. The votes given to Count Reventlow, the Upper House will probably meet upon the 26th. The portion of following are the numbers of the Austro-Prussian troops at present quartered by three members. It is not expected that the session will continue more than a week.

Reports have been received by the Danish Minister of War from head-quarters giving a list of the losses in the Danish house in killed, wounded, and missing from the commencement of the war until the 1st of February, but before Düppel, up to the 18th, it shows a total of 43 officers, two regimental surgeons, and 1024 men.

According to a handbill issued from the printing-office of Gyon and Hämmerle, Vienna, the Austrian Admiral of Archduke Max found dead in his bed at Kiel on Thursday morning. The rumour, however, requires confirmation.

A silly piece of revenge has been done at Flensburg. The house lion (of whom there is a figure on the engraving at page 249) and memorial on the grave of the Danish soldiers killed in the war of 1848-50 and buried in the churchyard of that town has been thrown from its pedestal, broken up, and destroyed. Its head and tail were paraded triumphantly, it is reported, about the streets of Altona and Hamburg.

OPENING OF THE NORWEGIAN STORTHING.

We learn by telegraph from Christiania, through Mr. Reuter's office, that the Norwegian Storthing was opened on Tuesday, King Karl in his speech from the throne announced that a bill would be laid before the Chamber granting an extraordinary credit of one million and a half of dollars for the defence of Norway in order to enable it to give active aid to Denmark in certain emergencies.

AMERICA.

As far as can be gathered from the latest accounts from New York, the Federal movements in Virginia and the neighbourhood have been failures. General Sherman had been obliged to return to Vicksburg without effecting a junction with the army of the Red River. General Thomas's advance upon Dalton and Atlanta had been checked by General Joseph Johnston. General Kilpatrick, who had been engaged in a cavalry raid in the rear of Lee's army, had found it impossible to penetrate the lines of the enemy and had fallen back again. A forward movement had been made by General Meade, to divert attention from Kilpatrick's unsuccessful raid, but by this movement the army of the Potomac was at its old position at Brandy Station, down Rappahannock, and communicating by Washington to consult with Lincoln and the War Department. The Federal loss was generally reputed in Florida. In an engagement beyond Jacksonville, on the 20th ult. the Federals had had a loss of 2000 men and seven guns. At Charleston the Federal sloop of war Housatonic was destroyed on the 17th ult. by a submarine torpedo. Her boat's crew, with the exception of two officers and three men, were rescued by boats from another vessel. Lieutenant Dana, commanding officer, Colonel Richardson, has been captured by Federal cavalry.

President Lincoln has issued a decree the nomination of Major-General Grant to be Lieutenant-General, in accordance with the provisions of the Act of Congress, which has made the rank and appointment has been confirmed.

On the 15th ult. Congress passed the House bill providing for the issue of 200,000,000 dols. in forty-five bonds; and also a joint resolution of thanks to re-enlisted veterans.

In the House of Representatives, on the 29th ult., the bill to authorise the transfer of 200,000,000 dols. from the 900,000,000 dols. loan to the Treasury for war purposes was passed. It also authorises the issue of 11,000,000 dols. additional five-twenties to supply the surplus of subscriptions to the 7 3-10 day loan now closed.

The draught in New York has been postponed. Bounties will be continued until the 1st of April.

The Confederate Congress has adjourned, after having issued various declaring that it will make no overtures for peace until the Federal Cabinet shall announce them to be acceptable, and that the Confederate Government would submit to a European protectorate rather than to Yankee domination.

A bill has passed the Senate to establish a volunteer navy. It authorises the Secretary of the Navy to commission vessels either in or out of the waters of the Confederate States.

General Beauregard has issued General-in-Chief of the Confederate armies.

Richmond papers contain the following address of General Beauregard to his troops:—

Soldiers!—The new year's service of some of you is about to expire. You must have seen from the newspapers that your brethren in arms of the veteran armies of Northern Virginia and Tennessee have re-enrolled, so as to be expected of such men, by entire companies, battalions, regiments, and brigades, already organised and disciplined under which they have so nobly fought. All the men who have defended Sumter and Moultrie fail to follow these examples of soldierly patriotism.

The population of Wisconsin appears to be of a polyglot character, the Governor's message having been printed, by order, in English, German, Norwegian, Irish, Welsh, Dutch, and French languages.

The following correspondence, from the Times writer, under date of the 15th ult.:—"A gentleman arrived in this city from Idaho on the 10th inst. He says that in Idaho it was estimated there were 15,000,000 dols. in gold in the hands of the miners, awaiting the means of transportation to the States."

OPENING OF THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

The second Session of the eighth Parliament of the province of Canada was opened at Quebec on the 12th ult. The Speech from the Throne contained the following passages:—

I have taken steps for carrying into effect the Acts passed during the last Session for the establishment of a Militia, and force of the character, and I will continue my best efforts for the attainment of so important an object.

I have given directions for the communication to you of the papers of recent correspondence between Her Majesty and the United States of America, relative to the termination of the Reciprocity Treaty of 1854, on the application of either party. I have no reason to believe that this step has been taken from any want of the great interests affected by it.

Your attention will be invited to measures designed, by the improvement of our existing system of inland water communication, to attract to the channel of the St. Lawrence the trade which seems to have heretofore sought for it the rapidly growing commerce of the western lakes. You will also be invited to consider the propriety of the adoption of such improvements in the canals constructed to obviate the natural impediments to the navigation of the Ottawa as may render that route more available for the purposes of general commerce, the development of the extensive mineral resources of the region, and the establishment of a certain and speedy communication between the lower provinces and the great valley of the Canadas. Overtures have been made to me by Her Majesty's Government, and by the Governments of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Arrangements are however, now in progress which, it is hoped, will lead to the execution of this preliminary work, the result of which will enable all parties to form a more satisfactory estimate than is possible at present of the expense and practicability of the proposed undertaking. The condition of the vast region that lies north-west of Lake Superior, and the valley of the province is daily becoming a question of greater interest. I have considered it advisable to direct a survey to be made of the territory in question, and to place it under the charge of a person competent to report on the geographical boundaries of Canada in that direction. Such a definition of boundary is a desirable preliminary to further proceedings with regard to the vast tracts of land in that country belonging to Canada, but not yet brought under the action of our political and municipal system.

The construction of the public buildings at Ottawa, since the resumption of the work last spring, has been prosecuted with so much diligence as to justify me in announcing to the citizens of the civil service the intended early removal of the Legislature and the Departments of the Government of her Majesty's selection of that city as the future capital of Canada.

The discoveries of gold and other valuable ores within the province which have recently been made, and which have attracted very general attention, appear to call for legislation, both as regards the more systematic and perfect development of our mineral wealth and the rights as well of the public as of private individuals connected with it.

I would also suggest to you the expediency of making legislative provision for carrying a more effective system of investigation into the cause of ship-tracts occurring on or near the sea coasts of the province, as well as of similar disasters which, occurring elsewhere, may from the nature of the attendant circumstances seem calculated to affect the interests of our marine service.

A fresh contract for our Ocean Mail Steam-ship Service has been entered into on terms which will be submitted for your consideration, and will, I believe, be found to combine efficiency, economy, and safety.

I rejoice that I am enabled to inform you that the revenue of the past year considerably exceeded the estimate submitted to you last Session, while the aggregate expenditure for the public service of the year was less than the estimated amount. The progress of the public revenue and trade, however, in the present year cannot be satisfactorily inferred from the returns already received, as many sources is clearly inadequate to meet the increased commercial demands of the public treasury. Measures will be submitted to you for the consideration of this subject to regulate the annual income with the annual expenditure of the country.

AUSTRALIA.

We have received from our Correspondent at Melbourne news to Jan. 30 :—

VICTORIA.

"The news of the month centres in cricket; in fact, we have had quite a cricket carnival. In my last you were informed of the safe arrival of Lillywhite's team to Melbourne, via Adelaide. Then was the time appreciated for the trial of skill between them and the Victorians, public excitement was intense, and the Melbourne Cricketers were the heroes of the hour. They were everywhere treated with the most lavish hospitality; in a word, they were nearly 'killed with kindness;' and, if they had not been made of iron, they must have had a sorry memories" of the golden land and its people, I shall be much mistaken. The first game was at which our visitors were engaged was on the ground of the Melbourne club—an fine a piece of turf, Tare declared, as ever they had seen—between the two—between three and a twenty-two of Victoria, embracing the best professional and amateur talent. The match, which was a three-day one, commenced on the 1st of January and ended on the following Tuesday, nominally in a 'draw,' but virtually in a victory for the Victorian Cricketers. At six o'clock, the time appointed for drawing the stumps, the Englishmen, who had scored wickets for their first innings, were only one to win. The scores were as follow :—In the first innings the Twenty-two made 145 to their opponents' 85; in their second innings the Twenty-two scored 140 to 106. (We reserve the details until a future Number, when we shall give an engraving of the match.)

Mr. Mendelssohn, managing director of the Bank, and his companions were indebted to pay us this friendly visit, informed me that during the stay on the Melbourne ground no less a sum than 3,000 persons paid at the gates; and, as 2s. 6d. was the charge for admission, with an additional 2s. 6d. for the use of a seat, the receipts were very handsome indeed, not to say anything about the sum realised by the sale of books to the curious. It will be seen that the Victorians, in the present day speculation, has been an eminently successful one. The New Zealand team, which left Sydney on the 1st instant and which all expected paid, will cover all the outlay. So that the proceeds of all the matches in Victoria, New South Wales, as well as those of the whole Australia—to which the Eleven have also the prospect of going—will be clear gain. They landed yesterday for New Zealand, where they will remain a week or so. We intend to have a play match between them in Melbourne and one in Castlemaine; then proceed to New South Wales, where they will remain a week or so, and then return to Melbourne, where they will probably visit Adelaide. While at Sandhurst Parr was retired with illness, the attack of which was so severe as to confine to his friends. On sailing yesterday for New Zealand he seemed quite himself again.

After the match on the Melbourne ground the Eleven proceeded to Sandhurst, where they played against the twenty-two of that district. In their first innings they only made 85; in their second, 178. The local men made 96 and 140 respectively.

The next match was at Ballarat, the principal gold-field town-ship, where the attendance was very large. The Eleven made 188 in one innings, and the local men 74 and 71 in their two innings, thus winning by one innings and twelve runs. As the game was over earlier than was anticipated, a subscription was got up, and a match between Grace and Tarrant on one side and eight of the best of the Twenty-two on the other. The betting was heavy, however, and the only record eleven between them, while Grace alone made that number.

Armed with the knowledge that the Twenty-two could not arrive here till the 22nd inst., a delay of nearly a fortnight having thus taken place. The delay was occasioned by an accident to the steamer in the Red Sea. Now that there is the prospect of a visit to New Zealand, and, subsequently New South Wales and New Zealand more than Victoria, it is to be hoped that the Twenty-two will be getting fortnightly mail by junction with England by Suez.

The returns for the year ending Dec. 31 have been published. As was anticipated, a considerable falling off, as compared with the revenue of 1862, is apparent. The diminution, however, has occurred owing to the different phases assumed by the land question during the last Parliamentary Session. The total revenue for the year was £2,722,229, against £3,131,429 as the revenue of 1862. On looking down the items, it will be seen that the reduction is felt with the utmost on the net decrease for the year amounts to £426,451.

The Grand Trunk Railway was by no means idle on the 19th inst., has been detained until to-morrow, when she sails with a large number of passengers and a valuable cargo.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

Parliament has been prorogued till the 11th of March.

The total revenue for 1863 is 603,136, the expenditure, £522,205.

The exports for the year are of the value of £2,005,000. The population is 141,000. The amount in savings banks, £201,000.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

As none of the Estimates for 1864 have yet passed the Government has obtained a vote of three months' supply—that is, £100,000 has been obtained leave to issue £400,000 of Treasury Bills, payable in two years, to meet the liabilities of the last and previous year.

The new land bill has passed the Assembly, but is opposed upon many important articles, such as rum, whisky, porter, candles, rice, tamarinds, bacon, sandalwood, &c. Much dissatisfaction is felt with the tariff, which is now being discussed in the Lower House.

The revenue for 1863 was £1,256,000, being a decrease of £63,691 on the previous year.

Mr. and Mrs. Keen have terminated a very successful engagement here. At its close, and while they were about to embark for Melbourne, Mr. Keen was seized with a sudden and alarming illness. He is now better, but it will be some time—probably three weeks—before he is able to appear in public.

QUEENSLAND.

The revenue for the year just ended is £309,112, against £375,286 for 1862—being an increase of £16,826.

The quantity of wool shipping direct to England this season nearly doubles that of the previous year's shipments.

NEW ZEALAND.

No event of importance has transpired since last mail. Everything tends to show that the war is at an end; but General Cameron is maintaining in his activity. New lines of redoubts are being constructed across the country, as well as roads, and the former act of military enlistment is being proceeded with.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams have been received through Mr. Reuter's office :—

BUCHAREST, March 16.—The Russian Consul in this city has addressed a note to Prince Couza, in which he protests against the stay of numerous Poles in the Danubian Principalities. He also receives the Minister Ghyka's declaration acting against Russia and Austria, and insists upon his dismissal. Sixty thousand Russian troops are stationed on the Bessarabian frontier.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN DENMARK AND PRUSSIAN VESSELS.—Bergen (Hogen Island), March 17, Evening.—A sharp naval engagement was observed from Hogen this afternoon between five Danish steamers and two Prussian men-of-war and several gunboats. At four o'clock the action was continued in the rear of Granin, on the eastern side of the Island.

THE PROPOSED CONFERENCE.—Berlin, March 17.—The semi-official Nord Deutsche Zeitung of this evening says :—"While despatches from Vienna announce that Denmark has agreed to the basis of a conference, the Danish Minister in London declares that nothing whatever is known in that city of Denmark's acceptance of the proposal for an armistice."

JAPAN.

(From our Special Artist and Correspondent.)

YOKOHAMA, Jan. 17.

Stolzhandi is dead. Such is the latest news from Minkn. He was murdered by the friends of Hamonosuke, the leader of the samurai-mission, instigated by this same Stolzhandi, took place at Yedo about three years ago. Nearly all the shops in the main street of Yokohama are closed, as the Tycoon commences his journey from Yedo to-day in Jeddo; but, as no one believes in these said outlaws, it is generally supposed that the Tycoon's journey is a mere feint. A Japanese Embassy is going to Europe next month to insist on the ports of Hiogo and Osaka being opened to trade. The Tycoon has bought the steamer Yanpto for 145,000 dols. She steamed out the other day and gained a speed of 13 knots. The Japanese men-of-war is harbour. She is the best vessel the Government has got. There is talking of three more steamers which are on the construction to arrive. Sir Frederick Bruce is expected here next mail, and he will then proceed to Jeddo. The Russians are there now, getting their treaty ratified. The Dutch are also there with a men-of-war in three waters before the spring. The weather continues fine. We have had a little rain yesterday, but not enough to powder the place. To-day is bright as usual.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON'S FUND.

The following letter has been written to the Bishop of London by command of her Majesty the Queen :—

"Windsor Castle, March 7, 1864.

"My Lord Bishop of London,—I have had the honour to receive from her Majesty the Queen your letter of the 8th inst., together with the accompanying papers, relative to the Bishop of London's Fund. I am to express to your lordship, of the deep interest which the Queen takes in the good work which you have undertaken. Her Majesty commands me to say that she considers it to be her duty to give her support and assistance to a plan for remedying the evils which have been brought to light by the inquiry, and she therefore desires to contribute towards measures which, under your Lordship's control, her Majesty has no doubt will be productive of the most beneficial results. Her Majesty has commanded me to inform you that it is her Majesty's intention to contribute £1,000 towards the Bishop of London's Fund, and I am to request that you can therefore place that sum to her Majesty's account three years, making a sum total of three thousand pounds (£3000). Believe me, my Lord Bishop, your faithful servant, (Signed) C. B. PHIPPS."

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has also intimated his intention to contribute one thousand pounds (£1000) to the general purposes of the fund.

MR. HANNAH NEWTON, of Ashton, has left the sum of £400 to the Ashton-under-Lyne Church Missionary Society.

St. Mary Magdalen Church, Wiggenhall, Norfolk, has just received an addition to its endowment of £200 left by will.

The monthly meeting of the Additional Curates Society was held on Tuesday last, at the Jerusalem Coffee-house, Sir T. Bernard in the chair.

The Bishop of Lichfield has issued a circular, dated on behalf of the Diocesan Church Extension Society. The Staffordshire Advertiser says the Bishop's appeal has been responded to very liberally in his diocese.

The confirmation of the election of the Bishop Elect to the See of Ely is appointed to take place in the parish church, St. Mary-le-bow on Saturday morning next (the 19th), and the consecration will, it is expected, take place in Westminster Abbey on Sunday, the 20th inst.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has deemed it necessary to issue a task to be accomplished by the Convocation of Canterbury on the subject of "eternal punishment," in the case of the Rev. H. B. Wilson, on the ground that the Rev. H. B. Wilson has denied the doctrine in question, and that the eternity of blessedness "must both stand or fall together," and that the Church of England "teaches both the one doctrine and the other" and doubtless.

The Rector, churchwardens, and congregation of St. John's, Broughton, have presented the Rev. Cecil Jervis Clarke with a handsome timepiece and salver. The presentation was made previous to the morning service on Saturday morning next (the 19th), and the occasion will, it is expected, be one of much interest to the parishioners of St. John's, Broughton.

His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin was, on Tuesday week, enthroned in the Cathedral of St. Patrick, Dublin. The Archbishop of Cashel, Church of St. Brigid, Kildare, a venerable edifice erected about 1244 not having been used for Divine Service for upwards of two centuries. No similar ceremony has taken place since the installation of Bishop Lindsay, in 1667. The Archbishop of Dublin was enthroned by the Archbishop of Cashel, by Act of Parliament declared Bishop of Kildare without further installation.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. J. M. Rowland, Vicar of Bishop's Castle, Shropshire, to be Rural Dean of Clun, Salop.—The Rev. T. Bowdler, Rector of Broughton, Salop, to be Rural Dean.—The Rev. Gilbert to Chrigual Staveley, Essex; Rev. R. O'Brien to Hesketh-with-Becconsall, Lancashire; Rev. R. Bateson to Wrightington, Lancashire; Rev. W. H. Rock to Rottingdean-Seaford, Sussex; Rev. G. E. D. De Vitre to Wotton, Surrey; Rev. T. Hutchinson to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Hodgson to Bishop Wearmouth; Rev. J. Bell to Rectory, Rector to St. Thomas's Church, Preston; Rev. J. Sutton to Wickford, Essex; Rev. J. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Hodgson to Bishop Wearmouth; Stephen to Rectory, Rector to St. Thomas's Church, Preston; Rev. M. C. O'Neil, Army Chaplain of the third class; Rev. S. G. Reid, Army Chaplain of the third class.—Appointments.—Rev. Alexander Forbes, Perpetual Curate; Rev. D. M. Alexander to Hanover Chapel, Regent-street; Rev. W. Hogan to St. Peter's, Wolverhampton; Rev. J. Hodgson to Bishop Wearmouth.—Curates: Rev. W. H. Awdry to Annesley, Leicestershire; Rev. G. C. Bell to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Bell to Rectory, Rector to St. Thomas's Church, Preston; Rev. W. G. Gilchrist to Shilbottle, Yorkshire; Rev. T. Hardie to St. Peter's, Wolverhampton; Rev. J. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Hodgson to Bishop Wearmouth; Rev. A. Hutchinson to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. A. Phillipps to Long Preston, Yorkshire; Rev. W. H. Ratcliff to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Sutton to Wickford, Essex; Rev. G. Smith to Kirkby Fleetham, Yorkshire; Rev. W. Tuthin to Yeadon, Yorkshire; Rev. J. Wilson to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. A. Wrangham to Bishop Wearmouth; Rev. Rev. F. F. Fleming to be Organising Clerical Secretary to the Scottish Church Society.—Ordinations.—The Bishop of Lichfield has ordained in Lichfield Church, Edinburgh, to be Joint Clerical Secretary of the Scottish Episcopal Church Society.—Gazette.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—In a Convocation held at Oxford, on Tuesday, it was agreed that the University seal to a humble petition to the House of Commons against a bill entitled "A Bill to provide for the Abolition of certain Tests in connection with Academical Degrees in the University of Oxford" was carried by 138 against 11 votes. The new statute for abridging the necessary of conferring degrees was carried unanimously; also a form of statute enabling the Vice-Chancellor to appoint a preacher on Ascension-day instead of the Bishop of Oxford, if necessary. Another new statute was promulgated repealing an obsolete provision in the examination statute. Another statute was also promulgated regulating the duties and the salary of the teacher of Hindustanee.—The Warden of New College was appointed Curator of the Market.

The Oxford Term closed for the Easter holidays on Thursday. The holidays will terminate on the 12th of April, when the lower boys return, the fifth and sixth forms following within the next two days.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

MR. G. J. GÖSCHEN, M.P. for the City, has consented to preside at the anniversary festival of the Metropolitan Free Hospital, on May 5.

The Musical Society of London gave their second orchestral concert of the season on Wednesday at St. James's Hall. The hall was crowded.

The National Portrait Gallery, 29, Great George-street, Westminster, will be open to the public on Easter Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, from ten to four.

The President of the Royal Society gave a conversazione, on Saturday last, at Burlington House, London, the first of that learned and scientific body. All the apartments were thrown open on the occasion.

The museum of Economic Botany, United Service Institution, Whitehall-yard, is now closed to visitors, but will be reopened on Saturday, 26th inst. The library and museum are open to members as usual.

The Holborn Board of Works have resolved to petition the House of Lords for the insertion of a clause in the Holborn Valley Improvement Bill making the returns of the locale of buildings known as Hatton-row, Holborn, compulsory.

Mary Cook, a maiden lady of independent circumstances, died on Tuesday week, at her residence, Flint Cottage, Lee-road, Blackheath, aged 70 years. She had retained all her faculties to the last, and attended church regularly until within a few weeks of her death.

A lodger exploded a quantity of gas in a sawing and turning mill in Spitalfields. The workmen were thrown into ruins, and several workmen and residents in the neighbourhood injured more or less severely, but the only life known to be lost is that of Mr. R. Saunders, brother of the proprietor of the mill, who was found lying under the ruins.

The thirtieth anniversary meeting of the Statistical Society was held on Tuesday. The usually annual report for the session was read, held on the same day at night, when the following papers were read :—1, Sir Rowland Hill, "Statistics of Postage Reform." 2, Mr. H. Hawkins, "Statistics relating to Shipping Casualties ;" 3, Mr. W. B. Hodge, "Shipwrecks in the Bay of Biscay."

On Wednesday the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress (Mr. and Mrs. Sidney) entertained the Judges, the Deputies, and the members of the Court of Common Council for the wards of Castle Baynard, Cheap, Coleman-street, Cordwainer, Farringdon Within, Farringdon Without, Langbourn, and Farringdon Within and Without, at a banquet at the Mansion House. The company, about 200 in number, also included many members of the House of Commons, officers in the Army and Navy and Volunteers, and the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex.

Last week the births of 1062 children—1013 boys and 949 girls—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1854-63 the average number (corrected) is 1076.—The number of deaths registered in the week was 1017, of which 502 were males and 515 of the previous week. The average number of deaths for the tenth week of the first three years of the decade was 1016. The increase of population in the two quarters died in the week ; also a baby who is registered as having died on the 7th inst. is returned as 107 years old.

A notice, signed by Sir Richard Mayne, has been issued by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners, in which it is announced that the Secretary has sanctioned an increase of pay to some of the men of this force. At present the annual remuneration of a police-man, 1st class, is £80, and the number 100 are to be raised to 120, or per week. The other sanctions are :—To 90s. 6d., 100 men; to 90s., 100 men; to receive 21s. per week, 120; 21s., 700; 20s., 800; and 19s. per week. The sergeants who are to be raised the 1s. per week are to be selected from the 1st class men who have served the most unexceptionable time.

The annual meeting of the friends and supporters of the Clare-market Ragged Schools took place on Monday evening at the Whittington Club—the Hon. and Rev. Baronet Sir S. Hesketh-Smythe presiding. The object in raising the value and importance of the ragged-school movement, of which the Clare-market schools were a most remarkable exemplification, was explained for an increase of subscriptions as indispensable to the continuance of its labours. The meeting was addressed by several gentlemen, and a most interesting narrative, pointing out the practical and voluntary state of subject as essential element in the prosperity of the school.

On Tuesday the twelfth and last caisson of the new bridge of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, at Blackfriars, was sunk into its place. The workmen engaged in the sinking of the caisson, which is the largest ever sunk in connection with any bridge in the world, had to contend with the most severe tide known for twenty-six years before. Mr. Thomas, who was united to the chair, made a speech appropriate to the occasion, and proposed the health of "Success to the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company." It is expected that the bridge will be opened for traffic in the autumn of 1865, from the side of the metropolis.

The annual distribution of prizes to ragged-school children took place on Wednesday evening at the Mansion-house, in the presence of good conduct and 76 4d. in money, given to each of those boys and girls whose regular attendance was 90 per cent, and 46 boys certificates of merit, of that number 342 had retained their situations under two years, 117 under three, 69 under four, and 33 under five years, and 21 above five years. Mr. Joseph Payne, the chairman, distributed the prizes; after which tea and other good things were provided.

THE SHAKSPEARIAN COMMEMORATION.

At the meeting of the Stratford-on-Avon Committee, on Wednesday, the 9th inst. (Mr. R. J. Fellowes in the chair), it was announced that the Queen had accepted the office of vice-president. The Mayor stated that, a communication having been received from the Shakspeare Birthplace Trust, accompanied by a copy of the report of the Monumental Memorial Committee, the Council of Stratford-on-Avon had resolved that, as the property of the corporation, should be removed, and the memorial be allowed to be erected on its site. The proposed plan was that the bust should be removed by a short distance, the festival for a base, exclusively devoted to objects of Shakspearean interest, and the statue be placed upon the base. The report stated that the Committee had, in accordance with the resolution passed that the statue had been inspected and approved by a competent engineer, and would be first examined by the external engineer, and would be first examined by the external engineer next.

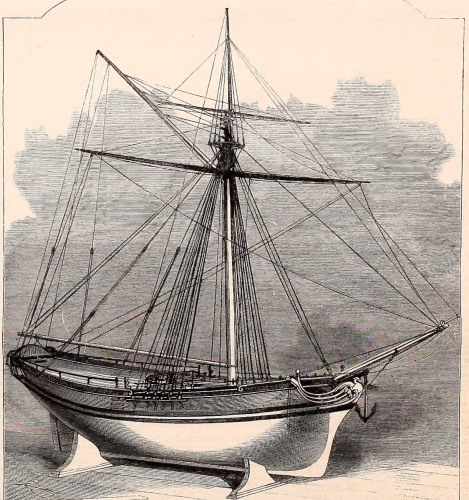
A numerous gathering of the managers of the London theatres took place at the rooms of the National Shakspeare Committee, 120, Pall-mall, on Saturday last, when it was agreed that the performances should be given in aid of the Monument Fund. Mr. Benjamin Webster (Adelphi and Haymarket) was in the chair. It was resolved, on circular, pecuniary aid for the ensuing gentlemen, amongst others, were present :—Mr. J. B. Buckstone (Haymarket), Mr. F. Robson (Olympic), Mr. Alfred Wigan (Queen's), Mr. Charles Mathews, Mr. Charles Kean (Princess's), Mr. Phelps (Sadler's Wells), Mr. Wrangwell (Strand), Messrs. Frampton and Fenton (Victoria), and Mr. Charles Dillon (Grecian). Letters were read from Messrs. E. Falconer, E. L. Chatterton (Drury Lane), and Mr. G. Fechter (Lyceum), would gladly concur in any decision arrived at. The arrangements were discussed at length, and ultimately settled that the best time for such performances to take place would be during the week commencing on Monday, April 18, and ending Saturday, April 23, and that they should take place accordingly. It was understood that the performances would be given at the various metropolitan theatres, commencing not in one or two cases, where they will be given on or very near the night of the 18th, special and appropriate arrangements to be imparted later.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—COMMITTEE FOR PRIVILEGES.—On Tuesday the claims of the newly created Peer, Lord Athlumney, and of Lord Wrottesley, to vote as Peers of Ireland, and the Peers of Ireland, Lord Ashtown and Viscount Bangor having the consent for the claimants to vote cases, and the Attorney-General and Mr. C. Clarke appeared for the claimants, and Mr. Bovill and Mr. Serjeant Byles for the consent for the claimants to vote cases. Mr. Bovill and Mr. Serjeant Byles for the consent for the claimants to vote cases. Lushington being the counsel for the claimant, and the Attorney-General and Mr. C. Clarke appeared for the claimants to vote cases.—The Standard.

MODEL OF QUEEN ELIZABETH'S YACHT.

OUR Engraving on the next page represents a model of the Royal yacht built for Queen Elizabeth, now in the possession of Mr. Charles Bayon, of Sir Richard Bayon, Bart., of Bromley, Kent, England. It is in length, and was modelled in 1588. It is cut out from the solid timber, the ornamental carving, which are excellent both in their design and execution, being left in relief. Below the gunwale, on a blue streak or ribbon, are painted several groups of small figures, representing various subjects of classical mythology; and on the stern is an exquisite carving, which represents the introduction of Sir Walter Raleigh to Queen Elizabeth. The arrangement of the spars and of the standing and running rigging differs but slightly from that of the present day. The model is in an excellent state of preservation, and would be a valuable addition to the naval museum at Greenwich Hospital, or to that of the United Service Institution. It was purchased by Mr. Bruce, at the sale of the effects of a deceased naval officer, and very long ago.

SCENES IN JAPAN.—JAPANESE WARRIORS IN FIGHTING DRESS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.



SCENES IN JAPAN.

We Engrave this week on our front page a Sketch by Mr. Wirgman, our Special Artist and Correspondent in Japan, which depicts rather an amusing scene. The Governor of Kanagawa, a suburb of Jeddo, has been summoned from his obiman cum digestate by the accident of a house on fire between that place and Yokohama, the foreigners' town, which is only a few miles distant. We see him riding forth in great state, and at a very leisurely pace, with a servant before him, holding up the banner of his official rank, and another servant behind him, wielding a sort of trident, which is not likely to be used for any such practical purpose as that of helping to extinguish the fire. On the right hand and on the left, wherever this Japanese magnate passes, the people crouch before him, as is shown in the Engraving. Several of his retainers, on horseback, bring up the rear. Another sketch, by the same artist, engraved on this page, represents three Japanese soldiers in their fighting equipment. We shall probably give some more of this series of illustrations of Japanese life.

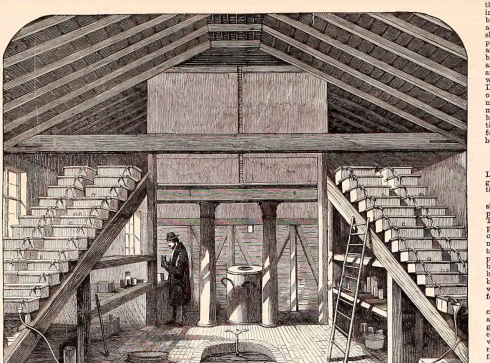
ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK.

KOLDING, IN JUTLAND, THE HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ALLIED GERMAN ARMIES.

OUR Special Artist accompanying the allied Prussian and Austrian armies in Denmark has made a sketch of the town of Kolding, where their head-quarters are now placed. It is engraved on page 276. This small town, which has but four thousand inhabitants, stands upon the frontier of Jutland and Schleswig, at the mouth of a river, the Kong's Aa, which there enters an inlet of the Baltic Sea. The view taken by our Artist is from the south of Schleswig road. The large building with a square tower, at the head of the town, is Kolding Castle, which is a mere ruin, since the conflagration that befel it some fifty or sixty years ago, during its occupation by the Spanish troops, under the Marquis de Romana, on behalf of Napoleon I. To the right we see a range of low buildings, which form the Royal stables, the breeding of horses for the Danish army having been chiefly carried on here. These buildings, as well as the other houses in the town, are of a dingy red colour. The high-road passes through Kolding eastward fourteen or fifteen miles to Fredericia, the fortress which commands the strait called the Little Belt, separating Jutland from the island of Funen; whilst another road from Kolding, northwards, leads, in about the same distance, to Veile, the scene of the last fight.

MODEL OF QUEEN ELIZABETH'S YACHT.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

FIELD MARSHAL VON WRANGEL AND HIS AIDE-DE-CAMP AT HADERSLEBEN.



The Sketch, engraved on page 276 was taken by our Special Artist one day while the Prussian Commander-in-Chief was riding through the North Market-place of Hadersleben, attended by Lieutenant von Wrangel, his Aide-de-Camp. It is a characteristic portrait of the veteran Field Marshal, who sits his horse bravely for eleven or twelve hours at a time; and, spite of his great age, endures fatigue and rough weather much better than some younger men.

THE DANISH LION AT FLENSBURG: MONUMENT OF THE BATTLE OF ISTEDT.

The Engraving on page 281 represents the colossal bronze lion erected in the cemetery at Flensburg as a monument of the Danish soldiers killed in the important battle of Idstedt, in 1850, when 28,000 Danes met and defeated the German army of nearly equal numbers, and put an end to the Schleswig-Holstein war of that time. The monument was designed by Professor Bissen, of Copenhagen, himself a native of Schleswig. It was finished and publicly erected in 1862. The lion, with the shield of Schleswig, is supported on a massive granite pedestal, with suitable inscription and designs in bas-relief on its sides. Since the Austrians and Prussians entered Flensburg, in February last, more than one attempt has been clandestinely made by the partisans of Germany to destroy this monument; and a party of workmen from Altona contrived one night to push the lion several feet from its proper place, but they were not strong enough to remove him altogether from the pedestal. It is understood, however, that the Prussian military authorities have promised that this shall be done.

THE FISH-REARING HOUSE AT TWICKENHAM.

IN the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS of Feb. 20 were engraved two Views of the Fisciultural Establishment at Huningue, near Strasburg, in France; and we this week give an additional Illustration of the same kind of apparatus, constructed by Mr. Francis Francis, at Twickenham, for a committee of gentlemen, who had subscribed £100 or £200 for this purpose. The edifice consists merely of a brick-and-plaster building, 26 ft. long by 18 ft. wide, covered with thatch—the best roof against both heat and cold. At one end is a huge slate cistern, supplied from the main, and which contains 2500 gallons of water. The cistern is raised some 6 ft. from the ground; and from each end of this double rows of trays, containing the ova, are carried down, one below the other, in regular gradation to the ground, upon timber supports. Some sixty-six of these are now in use, and the apparatus contains at this time about ninety thousand eggs of salmon, salmon trout, great lake trout, common trout, and charr, some forty or fifty thousand eggs, &c., having already been distributed. The plan adopted is that invented by M. Coste, and employed so successfully at Huningue. The eggs are placed upon a grille composed of fine glass rods, the grille being supported in an earthenware tray. As soon as the eggs are hatched the fry fall between the bars, and are extracted by drawing a cork from a hole near the bottom of the tray, when they are carefully placed on gravelled trays of larger dimensions. In the centre of the building is a brick tank about 12 ft. long by 2½ ft. broad; this is divided into three compartments by slides of perforated zinc, and is for the accommodation of the fry when they require to be enlarged. Outside the building is a small pond, about 20 ft. long and 10 ft. wide, full of beautifully clear limpid water, destined for any desirable foreign species at present in our fauna, which the society may be able to import. Cut off from a portion of the Colne, which runs through Mr. Francis's property, is an artificial stream grated off at each end, and through which the stream flows unrestrictedly (about 60 yards long) for the holding of stock-fish or the further rearing of the young fry. Altogether, the arrangements are very complete, and the society have every reason to be satisfied with the manner in which they have been carried out by Mr. Francis.

FISH-REARING HOUSE AT TWICKENHAM.

THE IRON-CLAD DANISH FRIGATE BUILT AT GLASGOW.

WE present below an Engraving from a sketch of the new armour-clad frigate built for the Danish Government by Messrs J. and G. Thomson, of Govan, in the Clyde, and launched on the 24th of February with great success. She is a handsome-looking ship, of the same length as the Hector, which was launched on the Clyde in 1862, but her shape is more elegant, as the bows are not so straight as those of the Hector, but made with a graceful curve. Her length is 280 ft., her tonnage 3500 tons register, and her engines of 500-horse power. She is the first armour-clad vessel that has been launched with all her armour-plates on. Having been designed for use as a "ram," her bows are formed so as to project like a swan's breast about the water-line, where she would strike an enemy. She is not furnished with a beak or projecting point under water like the English ships which are made for use as "rams." Her frame is enormously strong. She has besides an external keel, also an inner girder or kelson from stem to stern, and the massive iron ribs are bolted to it. Internally the structure is fortified by the numerous iron partitions, and by the wrought-iron beams on which the decks are supported—the main and upper decks being themselves of iron. The armour-plates along the whole length of the ship are 4½ in. thick, on a teak backing and inner iron skin—the whole surface being as smooth as glass. Both the bows and stern are so shaped that a shot would glance off without doing any damage. They are separated, however, by waterproof and shotproof partitions, from the middle part of the ship; so that, even if the bows and stern were destroyed, the fighting-deck would remain intact, and the crew, defended by these partitions, might remain at their guns. The pilot-house is shotproof, and the rudder itself protected by a steel casing. The armament will consist of twenty broadside guns on the main deck, and twenty on the upper deck; and there is plenty of room to work them. Altogether, this new Danish frigate is likely to prove one of the best designed and most completely furnished of modern ships of war. It is to be hoped that she will be ready in time to defend the seaward fortresses of Denmark against her present foes.

ARMOUR-CLAD FRIGATE BUILT IN THE CLYDE FOR THE DANISH GOVERNMENT.

FREDERICIA, JUTLAND,

LETTERS received from Jutland give the following description of the position of Fredericia:—

"Fredericia, like Düppel, consists of two parts, the fortress proper and the island of Funen. The fortress is situated upon a peninsula, close to the Little Belt, only separated from Funen by a narrow arm of the sea. The distance between the westernmost point of Funen and the fortress is between 2400 and 3000 paces. The harbour of the town, the Mollebucht, averages twelve feet of water, and is therefore available for small craft.

"Until '48, the fortifications consisted, towards the land, of an arc, one mile and a quarter (English) in length, furnished with eight faces, two stages of earthworks, nine bastions, and three ravelins; towards the sea, two faces, each three quarters of a mile long, meet at the extremity of a peninsula. The citadel occupies the extreme point, and consists, like the rest of the fortifications, of an earthwork with irregularly traced lines and several inner works; it is separated from the town by a broad glacis. Up to the above-mentioned date the main rampart of the fortress was very weak, and no outworks were the fighting-deck would remain

intact, and the crew, defended by these partitions, might remain at their guns. The pilot-house is shotproof, and the rudder itself protected by a steel casing. The armament will consist of twenty broadside guns on the main deck, and twenty on the upper deck; and there is plenty of room to work them. Altogether, this new Danish frigate is likely to prove one of the best designed and most completely furnished of modern ships of war. It is to be hoped that she will be ready in time to defend the seaward fortresses of Denmark against her present foes.

important points, to render it capable of withstanding the fire of rifled guns; the curtains are furnished with guns, which hitherto only the bastions could be armed. An extent of marshy ground, intersected by numerous ditches, sweeps in a semicircle round the fortress. Arrangements have now been made for speedily laying this under water. In addition, a series of outworks have been thrown up in advance of the main rampart, at a distance of from one and a quarter to two and a half miles (English), which render Fredericia a strong fortified camp.

"Between the road leading to Veile and Kolding and the coast, at the spot where the Holstein camp was set up in 1849, are five strong works, furnished with palisades and moats. The right wing of the fortress, which secures the communication with Funen, is covered by several independent strong works, mounting about twenty guns each, commanding the ground between this spot and the coast, which is particularly well calculated for the camp of an army. These outworks, therefore, cover the eastern main faces of the fortress and flank the centre, while inundation works (as in 1849) protect the west. A strong position has thus been created, affording ample room for an army of 20,000 men."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 26.

SUNDAY, March 20.—Palm Sunday. Publication of Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin;" cancer laticus established, 1855. Great earthquake at Mendoza, South America, 7000 persons perish, 1861. The sun enters Aries, and spring begins.

MONDAY, 21.—Benedict, Abbot, founder of western Monachism, died, 543. Sir Ralph Abercrombie killed, after the victory over the French at Alexandria, 1801. Treaty of union between the States of Central America, 1847.

TUESDAY, 22.—Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, chief of the Barons (defeated by Edward II.), executed, 1322. Lord Bacon died, 1626.

WEDNESDAY, 23.—England and King John's other dominions placed under an interdict by Pope Innocent III., 1208. Full moon, 10h. 24m. a.m.

THURSDAY, 24.—General Sessions from Lent Chandlers' Hall (Michaelmas). Great Cromond-street, the day before the opening of Parliament, 1784. The death of the great Danish sculptor Thorwaldsen, 1844.

FRIDAY, 25.—Lady Day; the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Good Friday. The Parliament sanctions the slave trade, 1807.

SATURDAY, 26.—A whale, 56 ft. long, killed in the Thames" (Evelyn), 1658. Birth of the Duke of Cambridge, 1819.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 25.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
5	30	6	0	6	30	7	0	7	30	8	0	8	30
5	50	6	20	7	0	7	30	8	0	8	30	9	0

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE NEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 29' 6". Long. 0° 10' 9" W. Height above sea 24 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF							THERMOMETER.			WIND.
	Barometer corrected and reduced to 32°.	Direction of Wind.	Force of Wind.	Amount of Cloud.	Amount of Rain in inches.	Temperature of Evaporation.	Elastic Force of Vapour.	Dryness.	Highest.	Lowest.	General Direction.	Mean Velocity in miles per hour.	Pressure on square foot.
	Inches											Miles	lbs.
11	29·865	28·1	·05	9·0	·010	43·9	0·247	·91	47°	41°	N.	11·0	0·247
12	29·912	29·7	·03	9·5	1·0	43·9	0·247	·91	47°	41°	NW.-SW.	13·7	0·384
13	29·605	68·6	27·0	·27	4	38·3	0·209	·89	NW.-WSW.			18·7	0·565
14	29·586	59·1	28·1	·27	4	38·3	0·209	·89	NW.-WSW.			18·7	0·565
15	...	...	...	...	...	35·3	0·173	·...	WSW.			24·1	0·756
16	29·775	65·6	·...	·...	...	36·3	0·183	·...	WSW.			30·3	0·930
17	29·821	47·7	44·7	10·0	0·170	41·8	0·248	·...	WSW.			33·0	0·930
18	29·821	47·7	44·7	10·0	0·170	41·8	0·248	·...	WSW.-N.			33·1	0·930

* Rain and melted snow.

† The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, in order, at half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer ... Attached ... Detached ... Thermometer ... Dew-point ... Suspension of Evaporation ... Direction of Wind ... ...

LARGE VIEW OF GLASGOW, AND COLOURED ENGRAVINGS.

A DOUBLE NUMBER of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be issued on SATURDAY NEXT, MARCH 25, comprising Two Pictures printed in Colours,

THE PET,
FROM A PAINTING BY F. G. CHESTER; AND
THE BIRD'S-NEST,
FROM A PAINTING BY W. GODDALL; &

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF GLASGOW
(16 inches by 21½ inches)
FROM THE SOUTH SIDE OF THE CLYDE.

And a Sheet of Illustrations, among which will be the following:—

THE SHEFFIELD INUNDATION.
View of the Brailsford Reservoir, showing the Broken Dam.
Views of Malin Bridge and of Hillsborough, after the Flood.
Scene on the High Bank—Drowned Cattle.
Searching for Bodies in the Cellar of a House.

THE WAR IN DENMARK.
Engagement at Yale.
Artillery Baggage-Waggons Encamped near Kolding.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE SHAKSPEARE FESTIVAL.
The Stratford Pavilion: Exterior and Interior Views.

The Number will also contain Original Articles and the News of the Week carefully Compiled and arranged.

Price of the whole, Tenpence; Stamped Copies Twopence extra.

Office, 198, Strand, W.C.

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—The terms for Advertisements not exceeding four lines (about thirty-four words) in this Double Number will be 12s., and every additional line (averaging ten words) will be charged 3s.

No Advertisements for the Double Number can be received after Wednesday evening next, the 22nd inst.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, MARCH 19, 1854.

THERE is a French proverb of which the French are good enough to say that nous autres Anglais do not know the value. It enforces the expediency of not employing out-of-door washerwomen. We admit that the proverb is not apt up to its spirit whenever they can, and that their linge sale, if it is washed at all, is washed at home. Scandals, public and private, are most decently suppressed in France. All the Crimean disasters that arose from mismanagement on the part of the authorities were kept a profound secret from France and from the world, while every British newspaper proclaimed British shortcomings in the loudest manner. In other cases, in which our journals invariably publish every detail that can be obtained touching everybody—the accused, the injured, the witnesses, and all concerned—the reticent French journalist tells of Monsieur X. or Madame Y. Each system has its advantage. Paris, of course, believes in nothing good; but the unintructed and non-cynical millions of Frenchmen preserve an almost childlike, not to say childish, faith in the virtues and wisdom of their rulers; while every oracle of an English village taproom is prepared, at the shortest notice, to show why the majority of public men ought to be impeached before Parliament. On the other hand, a good deal of linge sale would never be cleansed at all if our people were not taught to demand very frequent washing-days; and, to revert to the instance with which we began, we believe that the British Army is enormously in debt to the British journalist for the Crimean exposures; while we have yet to learn that the French army, which is known in England, if not in France, to have been, equally with our own, a victim to red tape, has derived corresponding advantage. This, however, is the business of our neighbours.

But there is every Parliamentary Session a washing process taken in hand, touching which we are not quite so clear that the French rule might not be observed without much detriment to our institutions or to our national character. We refer to the election expenses. These certainly do not tend to anybody's edification, and we have the gravest doubts of any efficacy as a reformatory process. At least it will be admitted that there is afforded every year new and ample matter of the same kind, and that the proceedings of the Legislature of one constituency works small terror in the minds of other electoral bodies. We have the same dirty, scandalous story year after year; the same reckless perjury; the same evidence of the inability of candidates to understand that bribery, treating, and intimidation are crimes, just as burglary, thieving, and assassination are crimes, only in different degrees. There is a mass of shameless folks who seem to think the proceedings in the committee-rooms exactly on a level with the kind of degradation in the roars of laughter at their own confessions of guilt.

The dramatis personæ are alike, to a wearying and monotonous degree. We have always the same types of rascality. Take up what case you will, and you are sure to find yourself reading just what you have been reading for the preceding twenty years. The vulgar agents of more culpable men crop up Session after Session at John Doe's trial for bribery at elections—to testify, under more or less compulsion, to the same violence or stratagems; and then come their wretched quarrels and treacheries, and their confessions. The witness has been served up for a week or a fortnight, the Committees usually come to the same stereotype resolution—namely, that bribery, treating, and intimidation were practised at the last election for the borough, but that there has come in them no evidence to connect the sitting member therewith. The dirty witnesses are remitted to their borough, to recount the wrangles of the contest in London, the sights they saw and the dinners they ate, and the sovereigns they received by way of treat; and the counsel gains and their hopes of an early renewal of the scenes they have had the pleasure of describing to the gentlemen of the committee-room; and the member, with an unsullied character, comes into the House in time to vote in favour of the last attempt at botching the bribery and treating laws. Is not this the history of every Session? We, of course, make no reference to any pending inquiries; but at the end of this Session there will have to be held? And after the approaching general election will it not have to be told in reference to scores of inquiries instead of a few?

Theoretically, so direct a mocking to no more proper or logical than that, where an election is protested against, an investigation should take place, and the only witnesses who can be got at should be examined. But, in practice, est bonus? We must go a good deal further, if we really want to prevent the influence of money at an English election. Although, of course, it is in the highest degree irregular and indecorous to say so, parties are wonderfully in accord touching the matter. We are aware that it is almost talking scandal to speak thus. So was Alexander Pope—

P. The bribing contriver—
P. The bribed elector—
There
Now too high you go.
Now you stoop too low.

Pope, who was thus cautioned by his friend, has been dead one hundred and twenty years; but has the system which he was reproved for assailing become obsolete? Alas! we have, if we are to believe what people say. Upright and honourable men, whose services are indisputably a gain to the public, will rise in hundreds and declare that they come into the house with perfectly clean hands, and that they never spend a penny in their life. And we would and do cheerfully leave the honour of England in such hands. Yet why are elections so expensive, and why, except in very few cases, is it impossible for a man with only a fortune in the green fields, to get into the house? The money must go somewhere. You may call the outlay "necessary expense," or what you please; and necessary enough the expenses are, but what do they prove. You may not be able, you very well are able to find out the corruptionist who receives a cheque on a certain bank and the independent elector who is dead drunk in the cellar of the Black Boy and Stomach-ache, but it is obvious that somebody is in the case. Then, for the poor man, he has avowedly his own code. He hates hard words, and will very likely give you hard knocks if you call him a bribed rascal; but he very properly regards his vote as a trust, only with less propriety than the Times regards patronat as well as the trustee. He believes that he has a right to accept the compliment that rewards his vote, and his wife believes it with a far more fervent faith than his own. There is second interest in the 'lection, and that is the new and prouder than Pope, nor less ready to be warned against indecorum, we own that we do not think the election tribunal a successful preacher against improper practices, and that we do think its revelations are simply offensive scandals.

The Times publishes a letter from Marzial stating that, in consequence of his letters being stopped abroad, among other friends Mr. Bradford was in the habit of receiving them under cover for him, but denying that he ever gave the name of "Flower," or any other name, to Grace the compositor. He also denies that Mr. Stansfeld was the London agent for a Tibaldi Conspiracy Fund, as such fund never existed.

THE COURT.

The Queen continues at Windsor Castle, in the enjoyment of good health.

Yesterday (Sunday) evening Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, and Princess Louisa arrived at the castle from Marlborough House.

On Saturday last the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the castle grounds. Later in the day her Majesty drove out. Prince Alfred, attended by Major Cowell, went to London and attended the Levée at St. James's Palace, returning to the castle in the afternoon.

On Sunday the Queen, Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Prince Leiningen, and Prince Leopold attended Divine service in the private chapel at the castle. The Rev. Mr. Hall, M.A., is Chaplain of Windsor officiated.

On Monday the Queen, accompanied by Prince Alfred and Princess Helena and attended by Lady Churchill, Lord Charles Fitzroy, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. C. Grey, went to London. Her Majesty drove to South Kensington and inspected the Mulready Collection of pictures. The Queen returned to the castle with Prince Alfred from Marlborough House, and remained to luncheon. After luncheon, her Majesty received Prince Napoleon Jerome, and there received the Archduke and Archduchess Maximilian of Austria. The Queen, Princess Helena, and Princess Louisa proceeded to Windsor Great Park Fortunetein, Chamberlain to the Crown Princess of Prussia, arrived at the castle and had the honour of dining with her Majesty.

On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the grounds of the castle. Lady Fanny Howard arrived at the castle, and had the honour of dining with the Queen.

Yesterday was the sixteenth anniversary of the birthday of Princess Louisa.

The Queen, with the Royal family, takes daily walking and driving exercise in the grounds of Windsor Castle.

The Court will go into mourning for three weeks, commencing on Sunday, the 26th inst., for the late Majesty the Queen Dowager.

The Countess of Caledon has succeeded Lady Churchill as Lady in Waiting. Earl Cowley succeeds Lord Bloomfield as Minister to Berlin. Lord Odo Russell has succeeded Lord de Tabley and Lieut.-General Sir H. Bentinck as Lord and Groom in Waiting.

THE LEVÉE.

By command of the Queen, a Levée was held on Saturday last at St. James's Palace, on behalf of Prince of Wales, on behalf of Her Majesty. The Prince, attended by his gentlemen in waiting, arrived from Marlborough House at two o'clock, and was received by the great officers of State of the Queen's household.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred, the Duke of Cambridge, and Prince Leiningen attended the Levée in Uniform. The Duke of Wales entered the Throne-room, accompanied by Prince Alfred, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Leiningen, Chickering, and attended by the great officers of State.

The diplomatic circle was attended by the Austrian Ambassador, the Turkish Ambassador, the Russian Ambassador, the Prussian Ambassador and Minister Plenipotentiary, the French Ambassador, the Persian Ambassador, the Belgian Minister, the Italian Minister, the Netherlands Minister, the Portuguese Minister, the Saxon Minister, the Danish Minister, the Swedish Minister, the Bavarian Minister, the Spanish Minister, the Secretaries of Embassies, Chargé-d'Affaires, Ambassadors and Ministers, the Ministers Plenipotentiary from Montenegro; Earl Russell, K.G.; Lieutenant-General the Earl of Rosslyn, K.C.B., and Lord Clarendon was attended by Viscount Palmerston, Earl Granville, Sir George Grey, the Duke of Newcastle, the Duke of Argyll, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, &c. The presentations amounted to about 220. The following were among the most remarkable in the grand circle:—

The Duke of Cleveland, on coming to the title, by the Lord Chamberlain.
The Earl of Lichfield, on succeeding to the title, by the Lord Chamberlain.
The Earl of Stafford, by Viscount Palmerston.
Lord Ashburnham, on his succession to the Barony, by Viscount Palmerston.
Lord Hogarton, on being created a Peer, by Viscount Palmerston.
Lord Wharncliffe, on succeeding to the title, by the Earl of Lichfield.
Lord Inchiquin, on succeeding to his title, by Viscount Sidney.
Sir James Hope Grant, on his return from being appointed Lieutenant of Presidentiary, by Viscount Palmerston.
Sir Thomas Wyse, on his appointment, on appointment, by Viscount Palmerston.
Mr. Maurice Holmesma, on appointment as Librarian to the Prince of Wales, by Lieutenant-General Bentinck.
Sir James Watts, on his appointment as Judge of the Probate and Divorce Courts, by the Lord Chamberlain.

THE KING OF THE BELGIANS.

The King of the Belgians arrived at Buckingham Palace, on Saturday last his Majesty visited the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House.

On Sunday the King attended Divine service in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. His Majesty dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House.

On Monday the King visited the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, and remained to luncheon.

THE ARCHDUKE AND ARCHDUCHESS MAXIMILIAN OF AUSTRIA.

The Archduke Maximilian of Austria (the Emperor Elect of Mexico), with the Archduchess and a numerous suite, arrived at the Charlemont Hotel, Grosvenor-place, on Saturday last, about seven o'clock, in a special train provided by the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, arriving at the Victoria station at ten minutes to six. At an early hour their Imperial Highnesses proceeded to Marlborough House to visit the King of the Belgians. Later in the day the Archduke Maximilian drove out in the carriage of Wales. Their Imperial Highnesses dined with the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House.

On Monday the Archduke and Archduchess visited the King of the Belgians at Buckingham Palace. The Imperial Highnesses also visited the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, and afterwards drove in the parks. The Prince and Princess of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, the Duke de Nemours, the Duchesse de Joinville, the Duke d'Aumale, the Duchess Augustus of Saxe-Coburg, and the Duke de Chartres visited their Imperial Highnesses at the Charlemont Hotel. The Archduke and Archduchess dined with the King of the Belgians at Buckingham Palace.

On Tuesday the Archduke and Archduchess left Clarendon Hotel at a quarter to nine o'clock en route for Brussels. The Archduke and Archduchess were met at the Victoria station by the Austrian Ambassador and the various members of the Embassy. Their Imperial Highnesses were met at the Dover station by Mr. Forbes, London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company. Upon reaching Dover, the Archduke and Archduchess proceeded to the Lord Ships Hotel and partook of luncheon. Their Imperial Highnesses embarked at twelve o'clock on board the steam-packet Brenne for Ostend, and arrive at Brussels on Tuesday evening.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales continue at Marlborough House. The Princess and the infant Prince Albert Victor are in good health.

Yesterday se'nnight the Prince of Wales gave an luncheon to the King of the Belgians at Buckingham Palace. Later in the day his Royal Highness, accompanied by Prince John of Glücksburg, drove to the Zoological Gardens. The Princess attended by the Countess de Grey, drove out. The King of the Belgians visited their Royal Highnesses at Marlborough House. A deputation, to present a Bible, Prayer-book, and lectern, from 8292 gentlemen of the United Kingdom, waited upon the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. The deputation consisted of the Earl of Dalhousie, G.C.B.; the Earl of Shaftesbury; Lord Ashley, M.P.; Lieutenant-General Lord Bernard, Lord Calthorpe, &c. The Mayor of Kidderminster, with a deputation, also attended at Marlborough House to present to their Royal Highnesses the offering from the town of Kidderminster.

On Saturday last the Prince held a Levée at St. James's Palace, on behalf of the Queen. Subsequently the Prince of Orange, accompanied by Prince John of Glücksburg, drove out. Their Royal Highnesses visited the Duchess of Inverness, at Kensington Palace. In the evening the Prince and Princess gave a dinner for the King of the Belgians. The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Princess Mary, and a distinguished circle were invited to meet his Majesty.

On Sunday the Prince and Princess and Prince John of Glücksburg attended Divine service at the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The service was performed by the Rev. A. R. Hibbert, the Rev. A. Helmore, the Rev. C. M. Arnold, and the Bishop of Ripon. The Archbishop of Canterbury and Archdeacon Manning preached before the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House.

On Monday the Queen, Princess Helena, and Prince Alfred arrived from Windsor and took luncheon with the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. The King of the Belgians visited their Royal Highnesses and lunched with them. The Prince accompanied his royal father-in-law, who left Victoria Station at three o'clock. Sir Dudley Coutts Marjoribanks received the King of the Belgians on his arrival at Dover, and the Duke of Richmond, Gordon, and Lennox, K.G., Lord Lieutenant of Sussex, received his royal visitor at Chichester. The Duke of Cambridge, Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, and Lieutenant-General Sir J. L. Pennefather, K.C.B., Colonel Simmons, C.B., and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. H. R. Brand, A.D.C., M.P., were also accompanied him to Clayesit Ridge, where the troops had assembled. The troops marched past the Prince with the usual salute, and a series of interesting manœuvres were performed, principally by the Royal Engineers.

The Duke and Duchess of Manchester left Great Stanhope-street on Monday for Kimbolton Castle, Huntingdonshire.

The Duchess of Hamilton has returned to town from Easington.

The Marquis of Abercorn left Chesterfield House on Monday for Beaudesert, Staffordshire.

The Marquis of Clanricarde has returned to town from visiting the Earl and Countess of Wilton at Melton Mowbray.

Earl and Lady Constance Grosvenor left Melton Mowbray on Tuesday for their seat in Cheshire.

The Earl and Countess of Westmoreland have arrived at their residence in South Audley-street from visiting the Earl and Countess of Wilton at Melton Mowbray.

The Earl and Countess of Verulam have arrived at their residence in Great Stanhope-street from Gorhambury.

MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The marriage of Miss Gore, daughter of General the Hon. Sir Charles Gore and Lady Gore, to Mr. Inverness, with Lieutenant-Colonel G. W. Birch (71st Highlanders) was solemnised, on Thursday se'nnight, at the parish church of St. Mary Abbots, Kensington Gore.—A marriage is arranged to take place early next month between Lieutenant Lord de Vesci and the youngest daughter of Captain Dalrymple, R.N.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Duchess of Inverness entertained the Prince and Princess of Wales and a select circle at dinner, on Thursday evening, at Kensington Palace.

The Duchess of St. Albans and Viscount Falkland received a select circle at dinner, on Monday evening, in Great Cumberland-place.

The Marchioness of Ely received at dinner, on Monday evening, the Duchess of Cambridge, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, Princess Mary, and a select circle at her residence in Prince's-gate.

The Duke of Cambridge gave a domestic evening party, on Monday evening, at the family mansion in Piccadilly.

The Marquis of Bristol entertained a select party at dinner, on Saturday evening last, at his family mansion in Portman-square.

The Countess of Malmesbury had a reception, on Wednesday evening, at her residence in Grosvenor-gardens.

The Countess of Kroll gave a morning concert, on Thursday, at the family residence in Bruton-street.

The Earl of St. Germans entertained a select party at dinner, on Monday evening, at his residence in Dover-street.

Prince Gustave of Wolfegrave had an assembly on Wednesday evening, at No. 3, Hamilton-place, Piccadilly. He entertained every evening last, at his residence in Hamilton-place.

Viscountess Falmouth had a reception, on Saturday evening last, at Combridge House, which was attended by the Duke of Cambridge and upwards five hundred members of the Corps Diplomatique and the aristocracy. Her Ladyship gave a ball, on Wednesday evening, at her residence.

The Right Hon. the Speaker gave his seventh Parliamentary full-dress dinner on Wednesday evening.

The Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli gave a Parliamentary dinner, on Saturday evening last, at his residence, Grosvenor-gate.

The Solicitor-General gave a Parliamentary dinner, on Wednesday evening, at his residence in Connaught-place.

The Freeman's Journal states that the vacant ribbon of the Order of St. Patrick has been conferred on Lord Lurgan.

The West African mail-steamer has brought us the news that seven more have been murdered by the natives of the Gambia and Senegambia, but less blown up in the New Calabar River—a few having broken out in that locality, but so feeble as to be soon extinguished by the energetic valour of Admiral Hand, so as to seem to have been destroyed by the explosion.

The subscribers and friends of the Rev. Thomas Binney, of the Weigh House Independent Chapel, Fish-street-hill, have presented a silver salver and a purse of a thousand guineas to Dr. Binney, of Hitchin (on his resigning the office of minister and not being appointed honorary physician to the infirmary), in recognition of his long and valuable services and to the rich and suffering poor of the town and neighbourhood for more than forty years.

Sir Rowland Hill retires from the Post Office on his full salary of £2000 a year. This fact is announced in a Treasury minute, in which "my Lords" state that in this case the great public services of Sir Rowland demand a departure from the usual scale of superannuation allowances. Sir Rowland Hill has been connected with the Post Office for forty-one years. The secondary post, or General Post Office has been bestowed on Mr. John Tilley, Senior Assistant Secretary, who has been thirty-five years in the service of the department.

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

It money could relieve sorrow, trouble, and woe; if bruised hearts could be cured by plasters made of £5 notes, and lost parents and children brought back to life through the agency of a pile of gold, then, indeed, would England be the happiest nation in the world. A great sorrow, an awful calamity touches us all, and the only balm which on an Englishman, distant though the moment may be from him as easily as from the trees "their medicinal gum." So we are not surprised to hear that in response to the Council Relief Fund at Sheffield, £2000 were subscribed for the sufferers from the inundation; nor that everywhere subscriptions are pouring in, and the "poor man's penny and the rich man's pound" are finding their distribution at the freely forthcoming. Would that some one could give us a little more thoroughly-useful hint, by which prevention might be secured. Would that the pain, the terror, the distraught agony, and the choking words of fear, could be spared us, and replaced with a hymn, a text, or might avoid a like disaster in the years to come! This, however, is not very likely. Like the Americans, who, with characteristic energy and domestic, to look into matters which concern the lives of the lieges; or else—and this is more probable—to make a new law against the stored gunpowder in cities and in ships, liquid fire by the bagshead and the ton, passengers packed in cabins like monstrosities bogut of civilisation and the hurry to get rich—we have omitted to take any step but to pay subscriptions.

By the side of so many deaths by water it is well to notice that of a young wife by fire. Like the future bride in Tennyson's great poem, she had two lovers, and, as in the case of poetry, the fate of poetry fame, standing before her glass, had "turned to set it right," when she caught fire, the muslin falling over a candle-shade. The muslin, the "crinoline" (odious, ignominy made, unmeaning word), had been the cause of this death, and therefore, as making the most direct and attachment to the instrument of her death which this poor young lady had. She had been "over-dressed" in simply common. Two serious warnings failed to make her wise; the third time fire came and slew her. Can nothing be done to put an end to this ridiculous and cruel fashion? A correspondent, of scientific repute, in a letter to a leading paper the other day, recommended that the muslin should be first been burnt to death in Christendom because the introduction of steam that is to say, 500 more than perished at Santiago, and by a more cruel death. Let the Germans set the example. The muslin should be soaked and crushed to speedy oblivion; these poor victims of folly, burnt to death by the fire of their own vanity, would be the last of their kind, more intensely painful, and longer two or three days in torment.

Dr. Parkhurst, in the course of a lecture, has delivered a bold attack by John Arthur Roebuck upon the foreign policy of Earl Russell, and the latter's connection with the Civil War in the United Minister. Mr. Roebuck said that the spasmodic utterings of our Foreign Minister were the sayings of an old woman or the "screamings of a cockatoo. It is not often that we get such good mots in Parliament; but Roebuck was invited and enlightened. Earl Russell, he declared, was not just in the past, in passing complimented Ireland as a "blighted, benighted, and unhappy country," and the absence of any such phrase from Ireland will probably not forget. As attack, on the same evening, on Earl Russell by Mr. Greenwood was equally severe. "Unpatriotic!" and, indeed, that patriot" got rather more than he gave—Mr. Count Bull meaning John Bull, he was so generously ready for assassination in Italy, he was the principal advocate of a movement which ruled in the Southern States, while Secession was ruled, in Poland; and he added, "a assassination only to be justified by that cause which is dearest to the heart of Barabbas." This is a pretty sparring; but if our M.P.s were made to pass a small examination in Mr. Herbert Spencer's "Essay on Representative Government" they would be able to "spar" with more effect about foreign matters? Why meddle with what does not concern us? Why not confine ourselves to matters which we do understand? Why not? Will any thinker publish a small handbook on the duties of M.P.s? In a few days we shall have the holidays, in a few weeks the dog days recess; and then we shall be all calling out about hot time.

Amongst other curiosities which will be found in the writings of the eccentric Manhattan we gather that Mr. George Washington, a descendant of the first President, has come over. He is now neglected by his party, has arrived in New York, and has been received by the Democratic party as the representative of Liberal democracy in England, and the true friend of America." Mr. Thompson did not like the attack of America on the expense of John Bull, and said that millions of hearts in England would respond to that. Surely, this is a poor ruse for a man to take up in his old age who has done good service in the past. But it is one of the ills of life that we hear that for the sake of "making the President popular" we are to have Indian Princes and Japanese Princes. Let the reason for the presidency are cropping up like mushrooms. There is not a negro leader in New York who is not a candidate and aspirant for power. It is not an aspirant for the presidency, and who does not think he has a good chance. Why, even Barnum has been talked of as "if he will buy my Tinker publish a small handbook on the duties of M.Ps? In a few days we shall have the holidays, in a few weeks the dog days recess; and then we shall be all calling out about hot time.

Amongst other curiosities which will be found in the writings of the eccentric Manhattan we gather that Mr. George Washington, a descendant of the first President, has come over. He is now neglected by his party, has arrived in New York, and has been received by the Democratic party as the representative of Liberal democracy in England, and the true friend of America." Mr. Thompson did not like the attack of America on the expense of John Bull, and said that millions of hearts in England would respond to that. Surely, this is a poor ruse for a man to take up in his old age who has done good service in the past. But it is one of the ills of life that we hear that for the sake of "making the President popular" we are to have Indian Princes and Japanese Princes. Let the reason for the presidency are cropping up like mushrooms. There is not a negro leader in New York who is not a candidate and aspirant for power. It is not an aspirant for the presidency, and who does not think he has a good chance. Why, even Barnum has been talked of as "if he will buy my Tinker publish a small handbook on the duties of M.Ps? In a few days we shall have the holidays, in a few weeks the dog days recess; and then we shall be all calling out about hot time.

On Wednesday, the effects" and "contents of the house" of the late William Makepeace Thackeray were brought to the hammer. Many people went to see, many went to buy and to carry away a memento of the great writer. The Kensington Museum is comprehensive enough—does not every house look so when one has a rule?—and the books, and pictures, and drawings, and sketches will appear in due and solemn. The library was poor, selected at hap-hazard, and representing no particular taste. The pictures were unimportant, many of it works, notably those of the author of "Jane Eyre," who, as we have always understood, was a personal friend of Thackeray, and some few of the essayists, and a copy or so of Addison, the fascinator of Thackeray, and the author of "Esmond" and "Pendennis." The dummy books on the library doors were soberly and incongruously lettered, not because much dignity was required in a library, but because "every member there so wittily suggested by Hood—" Lamb on Sheepskin," "Canary Remarks on Swearing," and others? Thackeray, however, had a fine collection of Hogarth's engravings, and a fine Boydell, another "Addison's Works;" and placing, oh, ye Nine! Homeric Nine! on the shelves of the author of "Vanity Fair" and "Esmond." Nor did it please one to see a dummy "Virgilii Opera" in the bookroom of a scholar. Why, the bookroom of Thackeray was a study, and to turn over the utter loss of Shakspeare's silver-gilt bowl, left by him to a friend, it struck us that the Virgil was unnecessary. The sale was a luncheon, engraved, "From the publishers to the author of 'Vanity Fair' and 'Pendennis,'" and the bookroom of Thackeray was a study, which, no doubt, "Peg of Limavady" and the "Battle of Limerick" had been confided to the author of "Jane Eyre," who, as we believe to-day, not sundry vexations the monolith of Burns, and Paddy the Cope-ballad of Moore, and the Irish Melodies of the latter author, but also as an almost unique instance of the gratitude of a publisher.

Could there possibly have been a more generous and immediate response to the appeal of the Lord Mayor of London than appeared in the Times of Thursday? The Queen and Prince of Wales head the list of donations, each of £3000 and £1000 respectively; and Dukes, Earls, Prelates, and large commercial firms rival each other in contributing sums ranging from £500 to £50. Perhaps a subscription list never was printed; and if the spiritual destitution and ignorance of the metropolis are to be relieved as systematically applied, there is little doubt but that such an army of labourers may be found as will be the envy of the civilised world. Perhaps, after all, as Jean Jacques Rousseau said—we may quote him on the subject, for he was a philosopher—the best way to do a thing is how to set it. Stub it up in one place, it crops out in another; if we watch it, we are said to pet it: if we neglect it, it shoots forward with a force which appals us.

A minute from the Treasury explains the cause of the retirement of Sir Rowland Hill, Secretary of the Post Office, and we here observe that he is to be succeeded by his efficient coadjutor, Mr. John Tilley. Sir Rowland is to be rewarded with a retiring pension of £2000 a year for life, and "My Lords" absolutely grow eloquent on the services of him whom Mr. Punch calls "Sir Rowland To Award." There can be little doubt of these; our postal system is the wonder of the world, and Sir Rowland is universally acknowledged to have thrown over many an efficient officer besides Sir Rowland; whilst its success had added, directly and indirectly, millions to the revenue.

FINE ARTS.

EVERYTHING seemed curiously calculated to give a deep and saddening interest to the sale (which terminates to-day) of the contents of the late Mr. Thackeray's house, Palace-green, Kensington, the neighbourhood of Kensington Palace, the style of the red-bricked newly-built house, the pictures, the Swives, Dresden, Chelsea, and other china, and the books and drawings and sketches, for to have been the property of such a collector; the old cabinets, chairs, and other furniture; the plate, the selection of books, even the ill-appropriateness of their use in the sale—all seemed to remind one of the great humourist, who took for his models the scenes of the every-day world, and the every-day men and women, vividly-conceived characters to belong to that quaint and old-fashioned but most interesting part of London, which Thackeray himself not only intellectually but also in his personal tastes with the Queen Anne period, with Addison and the Georges. The books, of course, though not perhaps so numerous and important as might from Thackeray's well-known studies and his excellent taste have been expected, were yet (some of them) strikingly illustrative of these predilections. Among them, the outer hall, for instance, almost the first thing which struck the eye was a large picture of Queen Anne seated on a throne attended by Peace, Plenty, Justice, and Religion, a fresco being implemented by war, painted by De Troye in commemoration of the Treaty of Utrecht. Then there was "Kneller Redivivus," a circular centre for a ceiling, by Boucher; and a "Conversation Chapitre," by Watteau; a painting by Van Loo; a view of Rotterdam, by Stark; a portrait group of two children, by J. Mytens (a capital example, by-the-way); and a curious portrait of Mary Queen of Scots, by Zucchero, who, to the Low Countries, with a grand encampment of Spanish troops and a General's Staff on the rising ground in front. The back of room, still more directly indicate the period and the class of literature with which Thackeray studied; but it would be out of place here to enter into particulars respecting them. On looking over them, however, we have noted a book which shows Thackeray's taste and knowledge of art, but which had escaped our observation, as it was not in the we are aware, been noticed by his biographers. This is a series of sketches by J. Mynde, in Indian ink, of landscapes, after the short notices by Thackeray; published by Bogue. The notices are rather descriptive than critical, and they are exactly calculated to excite peaceful style. His most recent essays in art-criticism were his very entertaining and valuable reviews of Mr. Ruskin's edition of the Egyptian Hall, and Cruickshanks's at Exeter Hall, which, we regret to say, we have not seen. This is two years, or thereabout. We may remark that the sketch by Mr. E. M. Ward of Thackeray in his study is photogenic, and that it has been brought out by Hering, of Regent-street, represents a room, not in the new house in Palace-green, but in Thackeray's former residence, Onslow-square. Like many other literary celebrities, Thackeray was fond of writing in his bedroom, or in a room with a bed in it, as represented in the sketch. The bed has had a peculiar construction, which he could place to his lap, and so cross his legs in an easy-chair, might have given a comfortable sitting at a table.

A slab, with a new water-glass painting by Mr. Cope, R.A., has been placed in the lobby of the House of Commons, in the New Palace of Westminster. The subject is "The Expulsion of the Fellows of a College in Oxford, for refusing to sign the Solemn League." Mr. Ward, R.A., has also just finished a water-glass painting which will in a week or so be placed in the new House of Commons Refreshment Corridor. The subject of this last is "The Landing of Charles II. at Dover." We hope shortly to give a detailed description of these new stereochrome pictures.

Two new stained-glass windows have just been placed in the new parish church of Kensington, Middlesex, by Messrs. Lavers and Barraud. The subjects are Aaron, Miriam, Joshua, and Deborah, with angels playing crotals in the tracery above. Another window, in the chancel of these windows is M. Franz Eves, a pupil of Raulbach. As we have before observed, we should not be sorry to see more of any other foreign artists for designs for our Protestant churches would also have to go abroad for their designers and artists, and that, as long as we do so, we cannot expect to establish a national school of art. The German style of this class of glass is imposing, but of all forms of Academicism it is the last we should wish to see introduced into England.

The Select Committee on Schools of Art (the nominal list of which we give in another page) commenced its labours on Tuesday last. It was, perhaps, not possible to get a larger number of members with professional or otherwise assured knowledge of art and design.

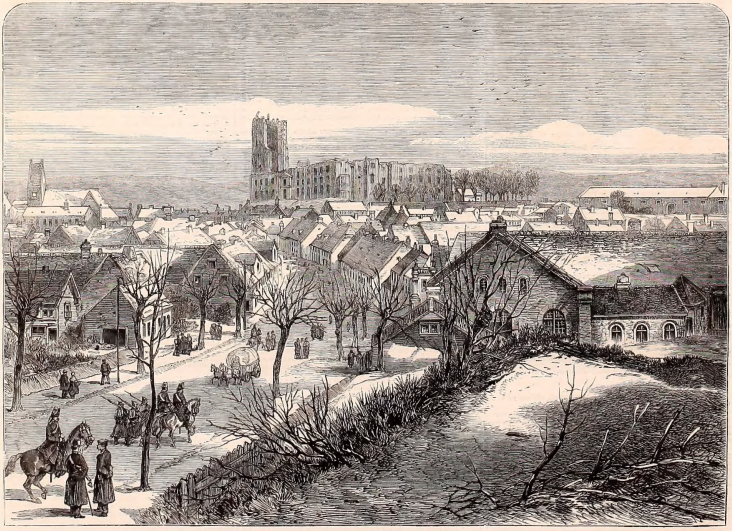
To the eye of the artist the rigid sharpness and stark precision of photography produces a painful and pervades result. In the photograph is its greatest artistic defect. It is true that if we regard the photograph as a work of art, it possesses a certain mechanical science, definiteness of detail throughout is the measure of success. But this is not the highest quality which art has to offer. It is to require in most cases, especially in representations of the face and figure, photographers are skilful in giving to the whole a certain stiffness and a universal distinctness beyond the power of revered visions to realise. Photographers generally aim to get everything into an "artificial focus," which is widely different from that of the human eye,—or, rather, eyes, for it is owing to the phenomena of binocular vision that the human eye does not suffer the same double an impression from Nature than photography gives us. Everyone many photographs, and the same unpleasant quality is found in many amateurs. Well, this is because of what professional photographers call their "focus," which is simply a point at which everything thing consonant with certain eternal laws, both of nature and art, is sacrificed to sharpness. It should be the aim of the skilful in photography upon such principles as we have indicated. And at least we should like to see the Royal Academy take it into consideration, as set photographs which are intentionally and confessedly "out of focus," and attempt to paint in photography. Perhaps we may be much mistaken that, if they do not, they ought to revolutionise photographs portraiture, if not other departments of the art. Photographers have produced a certain portraits of popular artists, such as Phillip, Faed, Calderon, &c.; and each artist is dressed after the manner of the painter whose name he has assumed. Many, Italian and Frenchmen. The result is a set of photographs which resemble copies from very choice engravings by Taylor, and which, in fact, are not photographs but which possess greater softness, likewise animation, apparent power of movement, and breadth of light and shade. Many of the photographic copies of pictures or studies from life we have ever seen, are those executed by Messrs. Herring, of Messrs. Herring of Regent-street.

The next annual dinner of the Artists' General Benevolent Institution will take place at Freemasons' Hall on April 16. The Bishop of Oxford is to preside on the occasion.

The antique architectural casts belonging to the national collection, at South Kensington, are being arranged in a temporary structure built on the side of the North Court of the Museum and in the adjoining cloister.

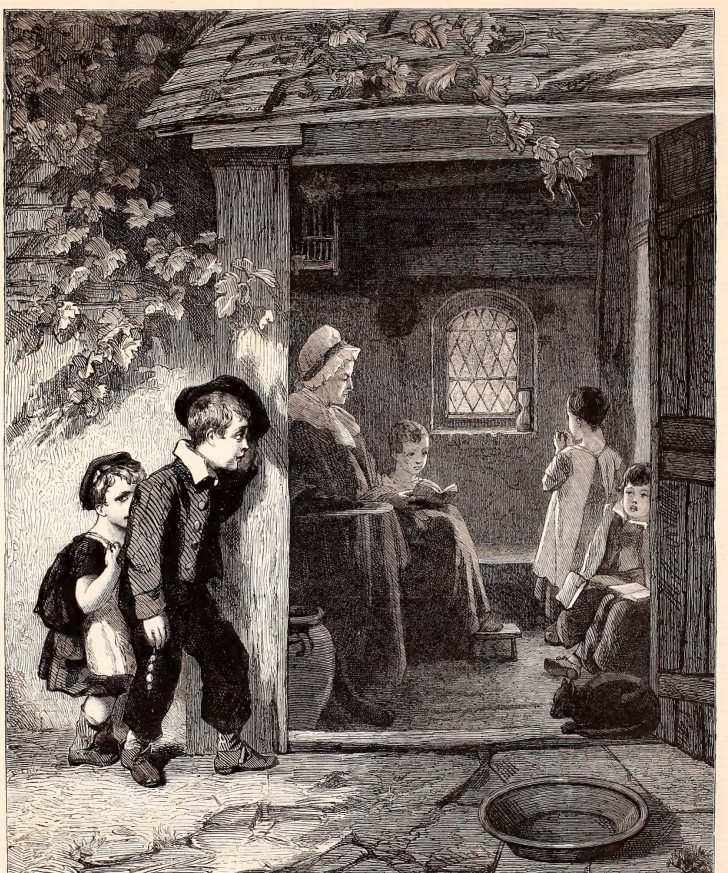
The series of lectures "On Fine Art Applied to Industry," in course of being delivered by Mr. Burges, in the great room of the Society of Arts, are to be continued on April 5.

Mr. Cosvick has undertaken to paint for Mr. Gambart the following subjects, illustrative of the neighbourhood of Stratford-on-Avon associated with Shakspeare's life:—Charlcote Park, the Forest of Arden, the Church and Grammar School, Anne Hathaway's Cottage, the Town from the River, and the Town from the Church. The views will be taken from Shakspearian localities.



A National Gallery is about to be erected in Berlin, in the neighbourhood of the new museum.

The publications of the Arundel Society for 1864 will consist of two fine-engravings and two chromo-lithographs. "The Conversion of St. Paul," taken from the fresco under the superintendence of Professor Raphael, is being engraved in line-engraving by



THE WAR IN DENMARK.

MARSHAL VON WRANGEL, THE PRUSSIAN COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF, AT HADERSLEBEN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

KOLDING, JUTLAND, THE HEAD-QUARTERS OF THE ALLIED ARMIES.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 272.

"GOING TO SCHOOL," BY T. WEBSTER, R.A., IN THE NATIONAL GALLERY (BRITISH SCHOOL), SOUTH KENSINGTON.

THE little work we have herewith engraved is one of that numerous series of cabinet pictures which, by their simplicity of subject and humorousness of treatment, have won for Mr. Webster a large share of popularity; while, by their artistic excellence, they have also earned him a place among the Royal Academicians. Many of these pictures, and perhaps all the best known of them, have dealt with the innocent, though sometimes furtively enjoyed, pleasures or the droll distresses of village schoolchildren. The example now engraved is much less elaborate as a composition than many by the same painter. It is an early specimen, having been exhibited at the Royal Academy as far back as 1836, and may therefore have been executed before Mr. Webster was fully aware of his own strength. There are, unfortunately, some slight traces of the picture's age visible in the minute cracks of the bituminous pigments used in the preparatory painting. His treatment, however, of this unpretending and often-repeated subject is amusing enough. Two boys are "creeping, like snail, unwillingly to school." The elder, shirking irresolutely at the door of the school, long after the opening hour, is in the act of doffing his cap in order to make his entrance in a submissive and deprecating manner; and we have no doubt that he will try to put the best face upon his late appearance. But the younger boy, perhaps his brother, who may have been a half-unwilling accomplice, cannot conceal his guilty terror. Indeed, the elder one, simple urchin as he is, and but little practised in the art of deceiving, forgets that terribly criminating evidence of his truant wickedness—the stalk strung with birds' eggs, which he carries in his hand. "So it's birds'-nesting has kept you from school, you cruel, idle, vagabond!" we fancy the good dame, in her anger, will presently exclaim. Meantime a scholar inside, who has caught a sight of the truant, seems, boylike, already to anticipate the fun of seeing his fellow's punishment; but the little girl, threading her needle to proceed with her sampler, will be more likely to cry. As for the old dame, who, sitting near her hour-glass (which runs ominously low), is teaching a little one to read, she reminds us of the lines of Shenstone:—

> A matron old, whom we schoolmistress name,
> Who boasts unbounded sway in learning's realm,
> Thy grievous sway, in piteous durance pent,
> Awed by the power of this relentless dame,
> And ofttimes on vagrancy idly bent,
> For unkempt hair, or task unconned, are sorely shent.

This picture was in the collection presented by the late Mr. Vernon to the National Gallery (British School), and is now at South Kensington. We have engraved it as one of the series from the national collection of pictures, which we present from time to time.

DISCOVERIES AT POMPEII.—Five new rooms have recently been brought to light, between the Via Abundantiæ and the Via Augusti, not far from the Forum. In one of them a great many pieces of bread wrapped up in napkins have been found, most of the napkins being still in a good state of preservation. Among the other articles found there is a beautiful little seal, with the syllables ARI. SO engraved upon it. M. Fiorelli considers them to be the abbreviation of a proper name—"Ariadne Modestus." A clever and patient artist, M. Felix Patighone, has assumed the task of constructing a model of Pompeii in cork, and has already made considerable progress in this work, which may be seen in the small museum composed of what might be called the refuse of Pompeii, containing all those articles which have not been considered good enough for the Museum of Naples.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

A GOVERNMENT which does not fully occupy the House of Commons with great measures, and which shows fight principally on the question of its existence, is, in a manner, forces an Opposition, which desires to seem vigorous, into personalities. Accordingly, just now nearly all the discussions in Parliament, and in the Lower House especially, half the discussions in Parliament, and in the Lower House especially, half the discussions in Parliament, and in the Lower House especially, half against him.—Sir M. Fangusson moved as an amendment to the Chancellor of the Exchequer's motion that the bill be referred to a Select Committee.

After much discussion, the debate was adjourned until the next day (Friday).

THE LATE CONSPIRACY TO ASSASSINATE THE EMPEROR OF THE FRENCH.—Sir H. Stracey rose at eleven o'clock to move "That the statement of the Prussian General on the trial of Greco, implicating a member of this House not of her Majesty's Government in the plot for the assassination of our ally the Emperor of the French, deserves the serious consideration of the House."

A debate ensued, which was continued long after midnight.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

The rat and calamity which had but just swept over the valley of the Don had given even the most inveterate Yorkshire ratcatchers something more to think about than a mere match. Even the Sheffield ratcatchers also held out counter-attractions to the Ring, and neither Jacko nor cudgel-like nicknames were to be found there very great. About eighty horses—more than attended the autumn meeting, when it had a mob so large below Vellapeer's grave—were in the town, and the sport was pretty good. The great handicap produced a tremendous finish between Anglo-Saxon and Fortuney, which the former won by a head: and The Hopeful, with its fifteen starters, had four out of fifteen nearly as close as its hairdresser's bill. The Selling Stakes, at one time, got rather shut out from the distance; and Mossy Spinner scored the stake to the credit of Lobster, with his long lines, but still in very high in the favour of Mr. Blenkinsop, who bred the winner. The starters for the steeplechase were reduced by the fear of Lichfeldian to the sixth of the number which were very early and very cloverly throughout, and refused once, and only finished fourth. The Tyke-ring Gazette states that Bellfounder's jockey had to ride that big brook: which sold her to Lord Coventry shortly before the last Liverpool Steeplechase. During a visit to Bellfounder Jackdaw was so much struck with her action through the mud that, although he knew what a bad top-weight she was from having ridden her in the town, and the spurs were

THE QUEEN'S GIFT TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

THE gift of her Majesty the Queen to the Princess of Wales is a very admirable piece of workmanship. It consists of a silver centrepiece, of tazza form, richly chased and partially gilt. On the base of the tazza is a group of figures representing Edward I. presenting his infant son, born at Caernarvon Castle, April 25, 1284, to the Welsh chieftains. Near the King is seen the Queen, who holds the child in her arms, with two Welsh chieftains, one of whom, kneeling, is about to kiss the Prince's hand. The Chancellor of the King, Burnell, Bishop of Bath and Wells, a page, a herald, and a knight, form the remainder of the group. On the base of the tazza are four female figures bearing the arms of his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Beneath the tazza are portraits of the following Princes of Wales:—Edward, afterwards Edward II.; Edward the Black Prince; Henry, afterwards Henry V.; Edward, son of Henry VI.; Arthur, son of Henry VII.; Charles, afterwards Charles I.; George Augustus, George II.; George, afterwards George III. The tazza, which is intended for flowers, is surmounted by a figure of St. David. The value of this magnificent centrepiece alone is £1000.

The side ornaments to accompany this piece are vases of Etruscan form, and bear on the foot of each a shield, on which are the Royal arms and monograms of her Majesty and of the late Prince Consort; and on the cover of the vase is a figure of a Welsh bard holding the harp of his country. The plate has been designed by A. J. Barrett, and executed for her Majesty with their usual care and excellence, by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell.

It was a graceful thought of her Majesty to embody in her wedding present to the wife of her son the history of the illustrious title which he bears. The Princes of Wales number amongst many illustrious by their deeds and remarkable from their promise. It is, indeed, following the dictates of true art when we illustrate in the precious metals deeds which render noble the family of the owner, and which shed a lustre on the possessor of the work of art. Such was the opinion of great poets and artists. Virgil recounts the glories of the shield of Achilles, and commemorates the chased and gilded plate of

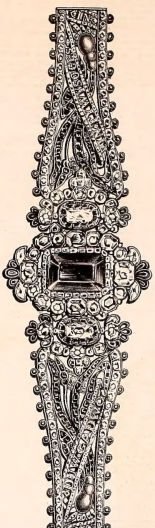
SILVER VASE TO ACCOMPANY THE CENTREPIECE.

SILVER TAZZA FOR CENTREPIECE.

WEDDING PRESENTS FROM THE QUEEN TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

King Priam and Queen Dido. The greatest artist that Italy has produced in this peculiar form of art, Benvenuto Cellini, has recorded the deeds of the ancestors of Lorenzo the Magnificent, and has symbolised the virtues of Prelate and Pope.

It was perhaps difficult to choose between the many subjects fit for illustration which History offers regarding the ancient Principality; but this difficulty has been very happily and appropriately surmounted by the artist in seizing for the principal group the happy occasion on which the conquering King knits together the hearts of two brave nations by conferring on them a Prince who, if not actually of the ancient British blood, had yet the merit, great in the eyes of all true Welshmen, of having been born in their country. The manner in which this is executed leaves nothing to be desired. The figures are characteristic and bold; the expression of the Monarch and of the Welsh chieftains is well defined; and the tender grace in the figure of the Queen and the innocence of the helpless child which she presents to wear the coronet of a wild and restless Principality are well contrasted with the rough strength of the armed and mailed figures which surround them. Although, therefore, the warlike deeds of Edward the Black Prince and the piety and learning of Edward VI. afford excellent subjects for illustration, yet the chief interest rests in the picturesque and romantic creation of the title.



THE SOUTH WALES TOKEN PRESENTED TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

THE Engravings on the next page represent the badge or token of South Wales and the accompanying bracelet, which were presented to the Princess of Wales, at Marlborough House, on St. David's Day, March 1, by a deputation of ladies from the several counties of Brecknock, Cardigan, Monmouth, Glamorgan, Radnor, Pembroke, and Carmarthen. The Dowager Countess of Dunraven led the deputation and acted as spokeswoman, with the assistance of Lady Llanover as interpreter of the Welsh mottoes inscribed on the badge and its casket. The beautiful ornament, manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskell, merits a particular description. The upper part of it, composed of emeralds, diamonds, and pearls, is shaped like a bouquet, of sprigs of trefoil and oak in flower, ears of wheat, and mistletoe with berries, the bardic emblems of the four seasons, united by a bow of dark blue enamel, on which is the following motto in diamonds:—

Duw Gadwo ein Tywysoges ni.
(May God preserve our own Princess.)

The centre of the bow is transfixed with a diamond pin, from which the lock (the badge of Wales) is suspended by a gold chain. The lock is mounted on a ground of diamonds thrown out in high relief, and the leaves and bud are formed of emeralds of various tints. The bulb is of pearl, with gold fibres sprinkled with brilliants. The whole is inclosed in a richly-wrought frame of gold and enamel in cinque-cento style, studded with diamonds and emeralds, to which there are three pendants with enamel pictures, in frames enriched with emeralds and diamonds. The centre pendant represents St. David, Archbishop of Caerleon, the patron saint of the Principality, standing in front of a British stone cross. The right-hand pendant represents the dragon of Wales, the banner and crest of the Principality; which dragon of Wales was foremost in the battle of Bosworth Field, and was borne by Henry VII., Henry VIII., and Queen Elizabeth, and was also a supporter of the Royal arms till James I. introduced the unicorn in its place. The pendant on the left side contains the arms of Wales in enamel—viz., four lions, counterchanged gules and or, which were borne as the quartering for Wales on Queen Elizabeth's seal. Our second Engraving represents the bracelet, in the centre of which is a fine emerald surrounded by diamonds, the circlet formed of leeks entwined with a scroll bearing the following motto in diamonds :—

NATIONAL TOKEN FROM SOUTH WALES TO THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

O Ddechreuir Cymro ildeo Tywysogeo.
(From South Wales to their Princes.)

The leaves and buds of the leeks are composed of emeralds, the bulbs of pearls, the fibres of gold set with fine brilliants. The prevalent colours of the precious stones of the bouquet, badge, and bracelet are those of Wales borne by the Tudor Sovereigns—white and green. The casket containing these jewels is of an octagon form, and covered with crimson velvet, edged with solid gold. The corners of the lid are ornamented with gold scrolls, and on the top, in gold, the coronet and cypher "A," the latter being in the form used in the time of the Tudor Sovereigns. The lock, highly ornamented, is also of solid gold, with a gold key of the most elaborate workmanship, after the model of a key in the time of Henry VIII. A gold plate over the lock bears the following inscription :—

Tystèn Cenedlsethol Ddeheudir Cymru, I'w Huchelder Breninol (National Token from South Wales, Tywysoges Cymru, to her Royal Highness
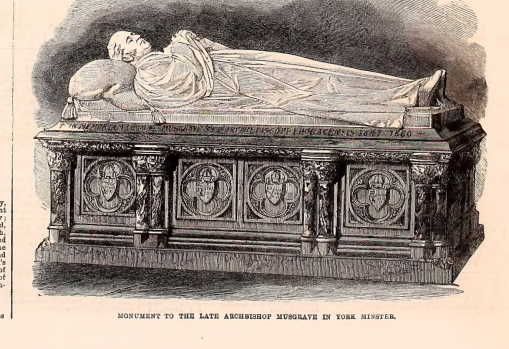
the Princess of Wales.)

1863

Stroodd Comisiwn	Aberteifi, (Cardigan),	Brycheiniog, (Brecon),	Caerfyrddin, (Carmarthen),	Mynwy, (Monmouth),
	Morgannwg, (Glamorgan),	Maesyfed, (Radnor),	Penfro, (Pembroke),

TANKARD PRESENTED TO CAPTAIN HALL, OF THE 3RD (RAMSEY) ISLE OF MAN RIFLE VOLUNTEERS.

TESTIMONIAL TO CAPTAIN HALL, OF THE ISLE OF MAN VOLUNTEERS.



We have engraved below a handsome silver tankard, which was lately presented by the members of the 3rd (Ramsey) Isle of Man Rifle Volunteers to Captain Hall, one of their officers, who has just resigned his commission. It bears an inscription stating that it is meant as a testimony of their esteem for his social virtues, and especially as an acknowledgment of his patriotic and unremitting exertions in the formation of that corps.

THE ISTEDT LION AT FLENSBURG, MONUMENT OF THE SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN-WAR OF 1850.—SEE PAGE 272.

TOMB OF THE LATE ARCHBISHOP MUSGRAVE, IN YORK MINSTER.

Our Engraving, from a photograph by Mr. John Draffin, of York, represents the monumental tomb of Dr. Musgrave, the late Archbishop, which has just been erected in the centre of the Ladye Chapel of York Minster, between the tombs of Archbishop Matthews and Archbishop Markham. The sculptor is Mr. Noble. This structure consists of a base of carved Caen stone, surmounted with a recumbent figure of the late Archbishop in Carrara marble. The stonework, which is 8 ft. 10 in. by 3 ft. 6 in., is surrounded with sixteen columns of alabaster, between each of which are shields bearing the arms of the see of York and the family of the late Archbishop, surmounted by the mitre. The heads of the columns are elaborately carved in the floriated style, representing the honeysuckle, ivy, thorn-leaf, and vine. The thorn-leaf carving is also inserted round a projecting moulding, which supports the figure. Each corner of the base is also carved with a flowing leaf, and the angle of the cusps in the quatrefoils is also similarly carved. The figure, which is 7 ft. 6 in. long, is represented as reclining on its back upon a mattress in tinted marble, the head and upper part of the shoulders resting upon a cushion, at each of the four corners of which hange a tassel. The Bible, pressed with both hands, lies upon the breast of the deceased Archbishop, who is attired in the full canonical costume of his office. The face is considered to be a very good likeness of Dr. Musgrave; but its position, with the glare of daylight on the upturned features, will not show this to the best advantage. The inscription upon the moulding along one side of the tomb is simply this :—"In Memoriam Thomæ Musgrave, S.T.P., Archiepiscopi Eboracensis, 1847-60."

MONUMENT TO THE LATE ARCHBISHOP MUSGRAVE IN YORK MINSTER.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 11th inst., at Mount Charles, Tyrone, the wife of Edward J. Carson-Wilmer, Esq., of a daughter.

At Hereford-street, the Marchioness of Carmarthen, of a son.

At Dublin, Lady Molyneux, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 9th ult., at the Catholic Cathedral, Plymouth, by the Right Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Baron Caraffino Francisco, eldest daughter of the late Admiral Francis Temple, of Exmet, in the county of Cornwall, to Lieut.-Colonel Le Cour, of the Chelsea-on Verger, near Richelieu, in Touraine.

DEATHS.

On Sunday, the 13th inst., at the residence of her nephew, Henry Hall, Esq., of Bryn Celyn, Denbigh, Miss Elizabeth Jones, of St. Martin's-lane, in her 91th year.

At Shrewsley, near Newcastle, Mr. Edmund Dore, in the advanced age of 107 years.

At Leominster, Mrs. Flora Macleod, aged 103.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—Manager—Mr. E. FALCONER and F. B. CHATTERTON. On Saturday next, March 19, will be produced a new and original Shakespearian Drama, entitled HENRY THE FIFTH; or, THE FIRST PART OF HENRY THE FOURTH. The scenery, dresses, and appointments will be entirely new. The music will be selected from the most popular airs, it may be said, most representative English drama of the period. The cast will include the names of the most eminent of the present and succeeding generations of the British Drama; and will include impersonations by those eminent artists Mr. Phelps, Mr. Ryder, Mr. Vandenhoff, Mr. Falconer, Mr. Creswick, Mr. Barrett, Mr. Chippendale, Mr. Bartrum, Mr. C. Dillon, Mr. Meadows, Mr. H. Vandenhoff, Mr. G. Belmore, Mr. Ellerton, Mr. Plumstead, Mr. Neville, Mr. Ryan, Mr. Lambert, and Mr. Chatterton; supported by all the members of the Drury Lane company. The cast will include the names of Miss Heath, Miss Fanny Huddart, Miss Rosina Wright, Miss Emma Heraud, Miss Pitt, and Miss Cathcart. The dresses have been designed by A. W. Keene, Esq., taken from Illustrated MSS. of the period, and will be entirely new. The scenery will be entirely new, painted by Mr. Grieve, Mr. Telbin, Mr. Beverley, Mr. Hodgkinson, and Mr. G. Belmore. Act I.—Rebellion. Act II.—Love. Act III.—Reconciliation. Act IV.—Reformation and Act V.—Triumph. Commencement at Seven o'clock.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Mr. BENJAMIN WEBSTER, Sole Lessee and Manager.—This present Saturday, March 19, and Monday, March 21, will be performed, for the last two nights, the new and original Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled TOM TAYLOR'S NEW COMEDY, entitled THE FIRST WARNING. Characters by Mr. Buckstone, Mr. Compton, Mr. Howe, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Clarke, Mr. Robert Roxby, Mr. Chippendale, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Braid, Mr. Vandenhoff, Mr. G. Belmore, Mr. Ellerton, Mr. Plumstead, Mr. Neville, Mr. Ryan, Mr. Lambert, and Mr. Chatterton; Miss Fanny Huddart, Miss Rosina Wright, Miss Emma Heraud, Miss Pitt, and Miss Cathcart. The new and original Comedy, in Three Acts, entitled THE FIRST WARNING, by Tom Taylor, Esq., will be produced on Saturday next, March 19, and will be performed every evening during the week. The dresses have been designed by A. W. Keene, Esq., taken from Illustrated MSS. of the period, and will be entirely new. The scenery will be entirely new, painted by Mr. Grieve, Mr. Telbin, Mr. Beverley, Mr. Hodgkinson, and Mr. G. Belmore. Act I.—Rebellion. Act II.—Love. Act III.—Reconciliation. Act IV.—Reformation and Act V.—Triumph. Commencement at Seven o'clock.

ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. FREDERICK BEVERLEY. On MONDAY, MARCH 21, and during the Week, THE DAY AFTER THE WEDDING, by Mrs. Gore; THE LOAN OF A LOVER, by Planché; THE MAGIC OF LOVE, by Mrs. Gore; and A LOVE STORY, by Charles Selby. Principal Characters, Mrs. Stirling, Miss Fanny Wyndham, Miss Marie Wilton, Miss Rosina Wright, Miss Bromley, Miss Rosina Rowland, Miss Kate Terry, Lewston, Rae, Lee, and Miss Ellesmere. Box-office open daily from Ten till Five. No fees of any description.

STANDARD THEATRE, Shoreditch.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. ALFRED DAY. On SATURDAY, WEDNESDAY, and THURSDAY, March 19, 23, 24, and 25, Mr. and Mrs. ALFRED FAUCIT will perform in their popular ENTERTAINMENT. Conducted, Mr. Basile Bogue. Commencement at Seven. No orders can be given.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GOOD FRIDAY. CONCERT AT HALF-PAST TWO.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GOOD FRIDAY. On MARCH 25, 1864.—GRAND SACRED CONCERT on GREAT ORGAN, commencing at Half-past Two o'clock. Mr. Willing, Mr. Weist Hill, Mr. Lazarus, Mr. Sam Reay, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Winn, Sole Organist, Mr. Hayes. The Orchestra will comprise the Crystal Palace Band, a portion of the Gentlemen's and Sacred Harmonic Societies, and the Choir of the Handel Festival Choristers. The full Chorus of Messiah, Israel in Egypt, and Sacred Anthem will be performed, the chorus being joined in by the tens of thousands of visitors. Conductor of Mid-day Concert, Mr. Manns.

NOTICE.—The Crystal Palace Company, Limited, Proprietors of Fifty-three Pictures, illustrating the use of Harcourt's cloth worn by the Volunteers, which were exhibited in the Crystal Palace during the Grand Review, and by the Queen's Bodyguard, have decided to sell the whole collection, having been purchased by Henry Nelson Harcourt, Esq., the inventor and manufacturer of the cloth. This is consequently the last opportunity the public can have of viewing these valuable and interesting pictures. No other copies are known to be existing.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GOOD FRIDAY. On MARCH 25, 1864.—Modern Ode Shilling—The Palace Choir, Mr. Willing, Mr. Weist Hill, Mr. Lazarus, Mr. Sam Reay, Mr. Lawler, Mr. Winn, Sole Organist, Mr. Hayes. Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, and Mendelssohn—last, second, and third close—two the Allegretto and Chorus and Recit. and Chorus from Beethoven's Mount of Olives, and Recit. and Air from Mendelssohn's Elijah.

MR. SIMS REEVES will Sing "Comfort ye, my people" ("Messiah"), "If woe all your heart" ("Elijah"), and "Sound an alarm" ("Judas Maccabæus"). CRYSTAL PALACE.—Open to Non-Season Ticket-holders at Half-past Nine.

MUSICAL UNION.—Tickets have been sent to the Subscribers of numbers and names not claimed. Subscribers who have not received their Tickets will please apply at the Box-office. NOTICE.—Will take place on TUESDAY, APRIL 5, Members, Subscribers, Visitors, and Strangers, and will announce only half the usual number of Tickets. The Concert will accordingly be half and the best pianoforte soloists and finest violinists will be engaged at greater cost. Subscription, Three Guineas. Subscribers' Tickets, to be paid at Cramer, Wood, and Co.'s, Chappell and Co.'s, and Ella's, 6, Princes-street, Hanover-square, W.

ST. JAMES'S HALL.—GRACE EGERTON, Mrs. Guy Carleton, accompanied by the science of her short season of Vocal Illustrations, will have the honour to announce that the Concert will take place in the above Hall, on the afternoon of the approximation, even-ing TUESDAY NEXT, MARCH 22, when the following Vocalists and Instrumentalists will appear:—Madame Sainton-Dolby, Miss Arabella Goddard, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, and Mr. Joseph Ascher. Conductor, Mr. Benedict.

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—EXHIBITION NOW OPEN, the ANNUAL WINTER EXHIBITION of SPECIMENS of the Works of Deceased Members, their Gallery, 5, Pall-mall East, from Nine till Dusk. JOS. J. JENNER, Secretary.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.—EXETER HALL.—Conductor, Mr. COSTA.—MESSIAH THIS EVENING, the Thirty-second Annual Performance of Handel's MESSIAH. Principal Vocal Performers—Miss Lascelles, Madame Sainton-Dolby, Mr. Sims Reeves, and Mr. Weiss. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Area and Gallery—the centre seats numbered and reserved, 5s.; Unreserved Seats, 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets to be had at Exeter Hall—including unsold reserved seats, number reserved for the Rehearsal on Saturday, March 19, at Eleven o'clock, 2s. 6d.; and at Mr. Mitchell's, 33, Royal Library, Old Bond-street.

EXETER HALL.—MESSIAH. NATIONAL CHORAL SOCIETY. Conductor, Mr. G. W. Martin.—First Performance this Season, on MONDAY, MARCH 21, Sixth Time. Principal Vocalists, Miss Lascelles, Miss Palmer, Mr. Lawler, and Mr. Thomas. Band and Chorus of 1,000 Performers. Tickets, 10s. 6d., 5s., and 2s. 6d.; Gallery, 1s. Tickets, for which immediate application is necessary. To be Numbered Stalls, 10s. 6d., 7s., 5s.; Unreserved Seats, 2s. 6d. Tickets and Programmes at Chatelin's, 39, Bond-street, and Cramer's, 201, Regent-street.

MR. W. S. WOODIN'S ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY—and BACHELORS BOY.—On account of the ENTERTAINMENT at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, being Wednesday, March 23, at Three and Eight o'clock. Charles Dickens, Esq., TUESDAY EVENING, March 22, at Eight o'clock. Tickets, Stalls, 3s.; Admission, 1s. Mr. Woodin's Entertainment, Wednesday, March 23, at Three.

ROYAL GALLERY OF ILLUSTRATION, 14, Regent-street.—Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight, and Wednesday and Saturday Afternoons at Three, Mr. BEVERLEY'S Entertainment, "The PYRAMID" and Mrs. ROUCLAUT'S CHILD'S PARTY. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Private Boxes, 10s. 6d., 21s., and £2 2s.

GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY. EASTER HOLIDAYS. RETURN TICKETS issued from SATURDAY, MARCH 26, and following days, will be available up to TUESDAY, MARCH 29 inclusive.

CHEAP EXCURSION TO YORK AND BACK, on THURSDAY, MARCH 24.

CHEAP EXCURSION TO WEST OF ENGLAND. On Thursday, March 24, a Special Train will leave King's-cross at 8.30 a.m., and Finsbury at 8.40 a.m., for Weston-super-Mare, Middlesex, Bridgwater, Taunton, Exeter, Plymouth, Devonport, Stonehouse, Dorset, Tiverton, Exeter, Honiton, Seaton, Tidgemouth, Newton, Teignmouth, Dawlish, Starcross, Torquay, Paignton, Brixham, and Kingsbridge. Fares for the Double Journey—First Class, 30s.; Second Class, 24s.; Third Class, 18s.

EXCURSION TO THE SEASIDE.—On THURSDAY, MARCH 24, and following days, 9th, 10th, and 11th, Trains will leave King's-cross and Finsbury at 1.30 p.m., for Wentworth, Scotter-end, and Mablethorpe, Louth, Grimsby, Cleethorpes, Barnetby, Brigg, Gainsborough, Retford, Doncaster, Shaftholme Junction, Askern, Thorne, and Crowle. Fares, 10s., 7s., and 5s. 6d. Return 3rd December, 1863.

EXCURSION TO GLOUCESTER AND CHELTENHAM.—On THURSDAY, MARCH 24, and following days, 9th, 10th, and 11th, Trains will leave King's-cross and Finsbury at 1.30 p.m., for Peterborough, Wansford, Essendine, Stamford, Little Bytham, Grantham, Barkston, Newark, Retford, Doncaster, and Crowle (and 11th and 12th), Gloucester and Cheltenham (11th, 12th, and 13th). Fares, 15s., 10s., and 7s. 6d.

EXCURSION TO BRISTOL.—On SATURDAY, MARCH 26, an EXCURSION TRAIN will leave King's-cross and Finsbury at 2.30 p.m., for Bristol (Temple Meads), and Clifton (11th and 7th), Gloucester and Cheltenham (11th, 12th, and 13th). Fares, 15s., 10s., and 7s. 6d.

EXCURSION TO STROUD, BRISTOL, CHELTENHAM, &c.—On SATURDAY, MARCH 26, a Special Train will leave King's-cross and Finsbury at 2.30 p.m., for Peterborough, Wansford, Essendine, Stamford, Little Bytham, Grantham, Barkston, Newark, Retford, Doncaster, Shaftholme Junction, Askern, Thorne, and Crowle. Fares, 15s., 10s., and 7s. 6d.

EXCURSION TO PENLEY-ON-THAMES, HUNGERFORD, &c.—On SATURDAY, MARCH 26, a Special Train will leave King's-cross and Finsbury at 2.30 p.m., for Henley-on-Thames and Reading (Southcote Junction), Pangbourne, Goring, Streatley, Moulsford, Cholsey, Wallingford, Crowmarsh, Benson, Shillingford, Chalgrove, Watlington, Princes Risborough, Aylesbury, Wendover, Tring, Berkhamsted, Hemel Hempstead, Harpenden, and Hatfield. Fares, 15s., 10s., and 7s. 6d. Return 3rd December, 1863.

For further particulars of each excursion see Time Bills, obtainable at the Company's Stations.

J. CONACHER, General Manager.

DRIGHT'S DISEASE and DIABETES.—Dr. PEREIRA'S FARINACEOUS FOOD and MONDAY, from London Bridge at 9.30 a.m., and 2.30 p.m. Fare, 1s. 6d. Return, 2s. 6d.

ART-UNION OF LONDON.—Subscription One Guinea. Prizeholders select from the Public Exhibitions. Every Subscriber has a Chance of a Prize. Prizes, 1864, now ready for delivery. Subscriptions received by the Secretary, at the ARTISTS' AMATEUR MAGAZINE, Illustrated by Twenty Plates, Enclosed Engravings of Recent Art Publications, and Subscription Lists, 1s. 6d. Post-free, 1s. 8d.

GEORGE SCHARF, 1 Hon. Sec. 444, West Strand, 1 Hon. Sec. Charing-cross.

THE ALEXANDRA HOTEL, Hyde Park-corner, London, overlooking Hyde Park, Buckingham-gate, and the Queen's Private Road, is now open for the reception of Visitors and Families. Every comfort and convenience combined with moderate charges. It is close to the Palace, to the Parks, Theatres, and Public Institutions, and to the Railway Stations. Address, Alexandra Hotel Company, Limited, Hyde Park-corner.

PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE, No. 50, REGENT-STREET, LONDON, Established 1840. Capital, £500,000. Annual Income, £300,000. Claims paid since the establishment of the office, £1,650,197. PRESIDENT—The Right Hon. the Earl of Ellesmere. VICE-PRESIDENT—The Right Hon. Lord Wrottesley. DEPUTY CHAIRMAN—George Burns, Esq. TRUSTEES—The Right Hon. the Earl of Ellesmere. The Right Hon. Lord Wrottesley. The Hon. Colonel Anson. The Hon. Colonel Bouverie. The Hon. Colonel Grey. Sir Claudius Stephen Hunter, Bart. Sir Peter Laurie, Knt. Alderman. Sir John Musgrave, Bart. Sir Thomas Phillips, Knt. Sir Thomas Fowell Buxton, Bart. Sir Edward Colebrooke, Bart. Sir Walter Stirling, Bart. George Burns, Esq. John Gladstone, Esq. William Gladstone, Esq. M.P. Robert Gladstone, Esq. Thomas Farmer, Esq. Henry Hulbert, Esq. Charles Hulbert, Esq. Thomas Kemble, Esq. Thomas Kemble, Esq. Jun. Charles Lushington, Esq. Q.C. Samuel Morley, Esq. Thomas Newman, Esq. Thomas Pocock, Esq. Thomas Pocock, Esq. Jun. Thomas Thornton, Esq. Thomas Thornton, Esq. Jun. Henry Wilkinson, Esq. Henry Wilkinson, Esq. Jun. Henry Wilkinson, Esq. Jun. Henry Wilkinson, Esq. Jun

THOMAS v. THOMAS.—Pursuant to an Order of the High Court of Chancery made in a cause of Thomas Prescott John Savage Thomas, of some place not known, and wife Jessie Thomas, the testator in this cause, who died on the 6th day of May, 1865, at Bombay, in the East Indies, and the said wife of the said John Savage Thomas, and of the said John Savage Thomas died in the testator of the said testator, then the issue, if any, of the said wife Jessie Thomas, who died in the lifetime of the said testator, have been ascertained, also by their solicitors, on or before the second day of November, 1865, to come to and prove his or their claim in a share of the residuary estate of the said testator, Jessie Thomas, under his will, at the chambers of Mr. Manisty Vine, Solicitor, 6, Old Jewry, London, the Solicitor of the Plaintiff herein, or, in default thereof, the said share will be paid or such portion as the Court may consider entitled thereto.

Dated this 15th day of January, 1866, in the name of the said testator, Jessie Thomas, late of Allahabad, in the North-west Provinces, in the country of Hindostan, and of Fowke's-buildings, in the City of London, but who died at Bombay, both in the East Indies.

Dated this 15th day of January, 1866.

A. BRIGHT, Chief Clerk.

WILSON and CO., 57, College-hill, Plaintiff's Solicitors.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.—The Reader Printing Press, only £2 10s. A child of 12 can print Cards, Circulars, or 24 lines of Address, &c. Sent Free. Engravers and Stamp Maker to her Majesty's Post Office, 88, High Holborn, London, W.C.

FOR SALE—THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the earliest number in the year 1842 to the end of the year 1865, in 24 vols., half-bound. Address to Mr. Leonard, Auctioneer and Agent, Ashford, Kent.

BUREAU SPÉCIAL D'ABONNEMENTS pour L'ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, pour la Continent, la Grèce, l'Egypte, la Turquie, l'Inde, la Chine, le Japon, l'Australie, l'Afrique, l'Amérique, le Canada, les Indes Occidentales. Nouveau service mensuel entre Paris et Londres par publications périodiques à l'Angleterre et l'Amérique. Envoi des numéros aussitôt la mise en publication. Agence de S. KIRKLAND and CO., Paris, Rue de Richelieu, 60. Bureau à Londres, 5, Leicester-square.

ONE HUNDRED and SIXTY-EIGHT real GOOD SCARFS, all different, sent post-free for 12s. 6d. in stamps. This series of truly inexhaustible gems, forming a most unusual and attractive present, will be found invaluable to the drawing-room table, as specimens of the highest class of Berlin wool work. Address—JOHN JEREMIAH, 171, Fleet-street, London, E.C. N.B.—Every prize is better than a blank.

CARTES DE VISITE, 12 for 2s. 6d. Forward your carte de visite and 32 stamps, with address, to the Photographic Establishment, 9, Compton-street, Brunswick-square, London, W.C., and you will receive back the carte size and copy of original, which will be returned. A carte sent to any address on receipt of remittance. Address 9, Compton-street.

PENCILS, Black Lead and Coloured Chalks, in W. P. RUDGE'S
POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS,
sold by all Stationers and Artists' Colourmen.
Agents—Rowney and Rudgeon, 5, Friday-street, London, E.C.

FIELD'S Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, and Maker of Long Ben (1857), for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand (adjoining Gaiety Bank), and 31 and 32, Royal Exchange.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDK. DENT, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange, by appointment to the Queen, and Maker to the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and the Board of Trade. Every watch is skilfully examined by his late Deputy, George Hy. Bayley, and timed to the Greenwich time. Price £2 to £100. Chronometers, Pocket Chronometers, and Clocks for all parts of the world. Every watch is also sent out rigid or original, which will be returned. A carte sent to any address on receipt of remittance. Address 61, Strand, London.

PENCILS, Black Lead and Coloured Chalks, in W. P. RUDGE'S
POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS,
sold by all Stationers and Artists' Colourmen.
Agents—Rowney and Rudgeon, 5, Friday-street, London, E.C.

FIELD'S Chronometer, Watch, and Clock Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, and Maker of Long Ben (1857), for the Houses of Parliament, 61, Strand (adjoining Gaiety Bank), and 31 and 32, Royal Exchange.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDK. DENT, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange, by appointment to the Queen, and Maker to the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and the Board of Trade. Every watch is skilfully examined by his late Deputy, George Hy. Bayley, and timed to the Greenwich time. Price £2 to £100. Chronometers, Pocket Chronometers, and Clocks for all parts of the world. Every watch is also sent out rigid or original, which will be returned. A carte sent to any address on receipt of remittance. Address 61, Strand, London.

FOUNTAINS, STATUES, JARDINIÈRES, &c.—A choice assortment of Elizabethan Terrace Vases of Stone, Hardcourt, of Val d'Osnes, France. Price Medal, 1862.—A. DEVLEY and CO. have in stock a large assortment of the above, suitable and elegant for the above terrace, which, combining utility with ornament, are strongly recommended for gardens. CHILD'S STATUES, VASES, SUNDIALS, FOUNTAINS, GARDEN SEATS, STATUES for Conservatories, Gardens, Parks, &c. All Parts prices, cost of import only added. Illustrated Catalogues sent free by post. A. DEVLEY and CO., Upholsterers, Cabinetmakers, and Patentees of the Elizabethan Chairs, &c., 210, Regent-street, London, W.

PLATE.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 5, Cornhill, and 14, Regent-street, W., Gold and Silversmiths, invite the Nobility and Gentry to INSPECT their STOCK of Fiddle pattern, fn. 8d. per ounce. Queen pattern, fn. 9d. per ounce. Queen (very massive), fn. 10d. per ounce. Brunswick, fn. 11d. per ounce.

Fiddle Pattern.	£ s. d.	Queen's Pattern.	£ s. d.
12 Table Forks	2 10 0	12 Table Forks	3 0 0
12 Dessert Forks	1 16 0	12 Dessert Forks	2 8 0
12 Table Spoons	2 10 0	12 Table Spoons	3 0 0
12 Dessert Spoons	1 16 0	12 Dessert Spoons	2 8 0
2 Gravy Ladles	0 12 0	2 Gravy Ladles	0 16 0
2 Soup Ladles	0 12 0	2 Soup Ladles	0 16 0
2 Sauce Ladles	0 6 0	2 Sauce Ladles	0 8 0
1 Fish Slice (pierced)	0 6 0	1 Fish Slice (pierced)	0 8 0
1 Fish Slice (plain)	0 6 0	1 Fish Slice (plain)	0 8 0
1 Pair Sugar Tongs	0 2 6	1 Pair Sugar Tongs	0 3 0
1 Pair Sugar Scissors	0 3 6	1 Pair Sugar Scissors	0 4 0

Any article can be had of corresponding pattern. Also a large Illustrated Catalogue of Electro-plate and Cutlery, with Prices, sent free by post. Orders per post carefully executed. Every article is warranted. Cheques and Post-office Orders payable to A. B. SAVORY and SONS, 5, Cornhill, and 14, Regent-street, W.

DISH-COVERS in BRITANNIA METAL, and SILVER, &c.—The greatest variety of these articles on view, at their manufactory for the sale of same, Dish Covers Patentees, Nos. 22 and 23, Cornhill, and 76, Regent-street, London.

SLACK'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, containing Engravings and Prices of Papier Mâché Ornamental and Tray of Fenders, Fenders, Furnishing Ironmongery, Sheet Metal Goods, Baths, Lamps, Tea Trays, &c.
S. and J. SLACK, 336, Strand, W.C.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the best articles at DEANE'S Ironmongery and Furnishing Warehouse, where may be had DEANE'S Illustrated Furnishing and Priced Furniture List gratis and post-free.
Deane and Co., 754 Monument, London-bridge.

DISH-COVERS and HOT-WATER DISHES in Tin, Copper, Japan, and Silver, in great variety, and of the most recherché patterns, are on show at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S Show-rooms. Tin Dish-covers, 6s. 6d. the set of six; Block Tin, the set of six; elegant modern patterns, 18s. 6d. to 24s. the set; Britannia Metal, with or without silver-plated handles, £2 12s. to £4 4s. the set; Sheffield Plate, £3 3s. to £6 6s. the set; Silver, £10 10s. to £20 the set. Hot-water Dishes, with wells for gravy, 3s. 6d. to 20s. Britannia Metal, 20s. to 70s. Electro-plated on Nickel, full size, £3. Sheffield Plate, £3 10s. to £6 6s. Silver, £10 10s. to £20.

39, Gerrard-street, W.; 1, Newman-street, 4, 5, and 6, Perry's-place; and 1, Newman-yard, London.

FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING.—Purchasers are invited to inspect the Stock of Messrs. Perry and Co., Bankrupts, at their Warehouses, 347 and 348, Oxford-street, and 72, Newman-street, Londonderry.

ANTIQUE FURNITURE, for Dining-room and Library, and also in good preservation, for other choice character, suitable for residence decoration; the carvings are boldly executed in the finest Spanish walnut-wood, and the high-back chairs, a pair of chess-chairs and table, a pair of easy-chairs (sofa with extra loose), sharp-cutter, &c., truly beautiful specimens of the period. Also a pair of Italian cabinets, of elaborate design, the finish choice and unique. Apply to Mr. Bell, 20, Gilbert-street, Oxford-street, W.

SILVER FIR BEDROOM FURNITURE, beautifully inlaid in imitation mosaicwork, to suppress the dull monotony. WARWICK FURNISHING COMPANY, 19, Pentonville-road, Islington, manufacturers of every description of furniture, enjoy the unique position of being able to supply the most elegant and unique furniture at the most moderate remunerative prices. Illustrations forwarded on application to J. READ, Manager.

SOFAS and CHAIRS.—HOWARD and SONS' Sole Registered HATTOCKS and SOFAS to every aspect, at their Warehouse, 26 and 27, Berners-street, Oxford-street. Illustrated Catalogues on application.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS post-free, at the nearest price:—10 Pkts. finely mixed, 1s.; 30 Pkts. 2s.; 40 do., 3s.; 100 do., 5s. 10s., and upwards. Catalogues free. JAMES EPPS and SON, Seedsmen, Hornsey, Middlesex, and 170, Fore-street, London, E.C.

GREAT FAILURES.—KING and CO., Silkmercers, &c., Regent-street, will commence SELLING OFF the Stock and fixtures on Monday next.
£17,000 of Rich Goods, Silks, &c., at less than half prices.
Also, £15,000 worth of Old Stock,
Which must be cleared.
All Goods will be marked in plain figures.
No discounts in the windows.
Address, KING and CO., 243, Regent-street, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5000 WORTH of SHEPHERD'S PLAIDS at 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£8350 WORTH of PLAIN SILKS, at 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£4500 WORTH of MOIRE ANTIQUES, at 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£7350 WORTH of FANCY SILKS, at 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5000 WORTH of FOULÉ DE SOIES, at 1s. 6½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£3700 WORTH of BLACK SILKS, at 1s. 6d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5700 WORTH of MOIRE ANTIQUES, Gros Grain, and Pearl de Soies, at 2s. 9½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
SWISS FETES, a large Lot, 6s. 6d. each.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS SENT POST-FREE.
SPRING CAMBRICS, 5s. 6d. a Dress.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
SPRING CAMLETS, 10s. 6d. a Dress.
Commodious, fin. ed.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
NEW MOHAIRS, 10s. 6d. a Dress.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street, London.

EARLY SPRING SILKS.
Patterns free.
New Checked and Striped Silks, Good,
£1 10s. 6d. for 12 yards.
Rich Glacé Checks, Good,
£1 19s. 6d. for 12 yards.
JOHN HARVEY and SONS, 5, Ludgate-hill.

EARLY SPRING DOUBLE MOHAIRS, and a variety of useful dresses.
Patterns free.
JOHN HARVEY and SONS, 5, Ludgate-hill.

D. NICHOLSON and CO., Silkmercers, &c., 50, 51, and 52, Rupert-street, Haymarket, and 50, Regent-street, London, have just received their Stock of New Spring Silks, consisting of Rich Glacés, Checks, Stripes, and Fancies, suitable for the various ball and half-year's patterns, from 1s. 1d. to 2s. 9d. per yard. Half their selling prices.

Patterns free.
D. NICHOLSON and CO.
Corner of Rupert-street, Haymarket.
No connection with any other firm.

20 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS of NEW CHECKED and STRIPED SILKS, from 1s. 6d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, 50, Rupert-street, Haymarket.

20 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS NEW BROCHÉ and FANCY SILKS, from 1s. 6d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, 50, Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

20 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS BLACK GLACÉS and ALL SILKS, from 1s. 6d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, 50, Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

INDIA SHAWLS.—Just received, direct from India, a Parcel of Cashmere Shawls, comprising long and square Cashmere Shawls, Barege corded Shawls, Silk Bali Shawls, Silk Bali Scarfs, Cashmere Scarfs, Cashmere Dress Pieces, Cashmere Dress Pieces, Cashmere Dress Pieces of Indian Shawl, from 6s. to 20s. guineas. Amongst these are several fine specimens of the Old Indian Shawl, which are now becoming very valuable, and are recommended to purchasers as a good investment. Also a Parcel of Real Indian Shawls, Purchased by Her Majesty the Queen, at Wedding Visit, 1863.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Late Hodges, Lowman, and Gothard,
Of Regent-street and Cheapside,
£17,000, at a large discount off.
PETER ROBINSON, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK
PETER ROBINSON
will offer this Stock for Sale, on Monday next and following days, at Five Hundred, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
Of Large Drapery Houses in the Country.
A large portion at less than half price.
At Seven Hundred, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
bought by PETER ROBINSON,
Bristol Drapery Establishment, of Black and Fancy Silks
Purchased at very considerable discount.
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
Many Hundred Silk, Cloth, and Velvet Mantles,
And Costumes, Shawls, &c.,
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
Manchester Warehouse, Hemstitched, Fancy, and Furnishing Linens, for every purpose, marked at a considerably under present value.
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
Bibless, Lace, Bonjay, Gloves, a great portion ordered for the present season.
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
The whole of the Stock of Messrs. Jay, Lace Manufacturers in price.
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK,
Bought by PETER ROBINSON,
comprises every article of a first-rate Stock of Wool and Drapery Goods.
At Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

JNO. ORCHARD'S STOCK
bought by PETER ROBINSON,
will be sold on Monday next, and following days, at Price Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

COURT DRESS and CHOICE SILKS, &c.—GRAY and SON, Dressmakers, Milliners, and Silkmercers, beg to announce that they have received Private Orders to Sell by Auction, in all Colours, POUT COUT SATINS, CRYSTALLISES, SATINS ANTIQUES, and Rich Embroidered Velvets.
Also, a quantity of Rupert CHECK SILK ROBES, manufactured expressly for Messrs. GRAY and SON, at their Sale, on Monday next.
The Premises, 2, Conduit-street, Regent-street, Hanover-square.
Carriage Mantles, Cashmere, Paris, Velvet Cloths from 12½d. per yard. Court Trains, Flounced Skirts, Tulle Veils, Court Head-dresses, Court Plumes, Fans, Gloves, Court Morning &c., made up on the premises by experienced dressmakers on Cashmere notice.
2, Conduit-street, Regent-street.
2, 3, and 4, Wells-street, London.

IMPORTANT SALE of SILKS, Velvets, and Dresses.
GRAY and SON
commenced the following sale of very cheap SILKS in the central Show-room, on Monday last, and the Patterns will be sent free by post to any part of the country.
Several hundred Pieces of New Fancy Silks, in a great variety of Checks, Stripes, and Figures, at 1s. 6d. per yard.
Rich Glacé and Cross de Soie, in all the New Colours, at 1s. 6d. per yard.
A large and choice Stock of the Richest Silks, from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard, extremely cheap.
The richest Plain Moire Antique, in all Colours, at 2s. 6d. per yard.
Many of these Silks are 24 inches wide.
Plain Black Glacé Silks, from 1s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
Rich Black Figured Velvets, from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. per yard.
Recommended for wear.
Handsome Dresses made and trimmed, from 1½ guinea.
Size 58, 36, 60, 61, and 62, 2s. 6d. each.
2, 3, and 4, Wells-street, London.

HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE—SCOTT ADIE, Repeat-street, has now 12 new Shades in the Tartan Plaid Shawls, and the Scotch Plaid DETAIL WAREHOUSE, 16, New Bond-street. Also 50 new Patterns, comprising the whole of the Highland Clans and Fancy Tartans, for Ladies' Dresses, Scarfs, Ties, &c. Patterns sent free. Established A.D. 1815.

FINE BRITISH LINENS, direct from Belfast.—By carriage free.—Bright and durable Cambric Pocket Handkerchiefs, with Illustrations of Flowers, Fruits, Birds, &c., manufactured by Henry Lindsay; Nursery Diapers, Linen Sheetings, Pillow Linens, Diaper Cloths, Huckaback, Glass Cloths, Dusters, Towels, Damasks, Table Linens for the best, Every width made. Lustre and continuous Cambric Handkerchiefs. Patterns and Price-lists free.—HENRY LINDSAY, Belfast.

FIDEDOWN PETTICOATS.—These Petticoats, now for many years honoured by Royal and distinguished patronage, are manufactured by the Proprietors only, and can be had of all the principal Drapers and Outfitters in every city and colony.
W. and J. SLY and CO., 1, Maddox-street, Regent-street.

SANSFLECTUM CRINOLINE,
Supplies and Improves Whalebone.
"Worn universally."—Court Journal.
"Perfect."—LADY.
"Graceful."—Queen.

INDINA, or WAVED JUPONS.
10s. 6d., 15s., and 21s.
"Harmonious in colour."—Morning Post.
"Perfect."—LADY.
"Graceful."—Queen.

GEMMA, or JEWELLED JUPONS.
5s. 6d., 7s. 6d., and 10s. 6d.
"A very graceful adaptation."—Court Circular.
"Perfect."—LADY.

PUFFED HORSEHAIR JUPONS.
"Admirable."—Queen.
"Perfect."—LADY.

LADIES' MANTLE CLOTHS.
Elastic Cloths, Velvet Cloths, Silks, Satins, Diagonals, Cheviots, Cloth for other materials for the present season, from 2s. 6d. per yard. Patterns and Illustrations free. Also Cloths for Gentlemen's Overcoats, Trousers, and Vests, from 2s. 6d. per yard, or from three quarters, equally cheap. Patterns free.
W. and J. SLY and CO., 1, Maddox-street, Regent-street.

45 PER CENT UNDER COST PRICES.
ON MONDAY, MARCH 12, and during the Week, Messrs. PERRY and CO., Bankrupts, will Commence SELLING the Stock of Linen Drapery, Hosiery, and Haberdashery Business will be found in Silks, Shawls, Drapery, Cloths, Dresses, Mantles, Flannels, Calicoes, Linens, Sheetings, Quilts, Counterpanes, Lace, Ribbons, and Smallwares, Gloves, Hosiery, Carpets, Oil-cloths, Rugs, Blankets, and Sheets, Counterpanes, Curtains, Bedding, Feather Goods, &c.
Perry's Warehouses,
347 and 348, Oxford-street, and 72, Newman-street, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
BLACK SILKS, All Wool, Full Dress, 1s. 6d.
originally Four Guineas.
Rich Black Glacé Silks, Full Dress, with 44 gussets, for 2l. 15s.
Jeeper, Velvet, Satin, and Silk Trimmings, and Silk Gros-Grain Imperial Silks,
Of the Richest Quality.
The Dress of Duchess of Leeds, Lace, now selling at NICHOLSON and ALLHUSEN'S WAREHOUSE, 50, Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS!
FIRST DELIVERY of NEW SPRING SILKS, FOREIGN and BRITISH.
Several very cheap lots in every colour and structure.
Wide-width STRIPED and CHECKED SILKS, 2s. 6d. per yard, worth 3s. 6d.
Wide-width STRIPE and CHECK in newest shades, 3s. 11d., worth 5s. 6d.
Wide-width plain GLACÉS in the new shades, from 3s. 6d.
BLACK GLACÉS, ORGANDIE, RINGLE, MOIRE ANTIQUE, and MILLINERY SILKS in the Newest Colours, SATINS, CREPE VELVETS, &c.
Cut Lengths of Mantle Silks, Velvets, Plushes, &c.
JAMES SPENCER and CO., 54, 55, and 56, Wells-street, Oxford-street, W.
All materials thoroughly shrunk. Patterns free.

BAKER and CRISP'S
New Royal Silk Goods, at 1s. 6d. the Full Dress.
The New Checked and Striped Silks, at 1s. 6d.
The New Frolics and Fantasies, from 1 guinea.
The New Spring Dress Materials, at 6½d.
The New Patternettes, at 1s. 6d. each.
Patterns post-free.
Baker and Crisp, Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS, GRENADINES, MOHAIRS, SILKS, &c., at half the original Cost.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

SLIGHTLY SOILED.—French Cambric Handkerchiefs, from the late half sale, Ladies', Gentlemen's, Children's, or Boxhead, now selling for 3s. 6d., 5s., 6s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 8s. 6d.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

BLACK SILKS! BLACK SILKS!
Rich, Bright, Wide, and Durable,
Full Dress, 1s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns free.—BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

THE NEW HEADDRESS.
Velvet Bands, Fancy Bonnet Ribbons, Velvet Flowers, 1s. 6d. and 1s. 11d. Post free, for stamps.
Patterns free. Orders executed to 198, Regent-street.

HUNWICKE and SHARPE,
Twenty-five years with
HENRY POOLE and CO.,
respectfully announce that they have entered into Partnership with
WILLIAM SHARPE,
63 and 64, Chancery-lane, W.C.,
SELLING OFF THE ENTIRE STOCK, consisting of Silks, Velvets, Mantles, Dresses, Irish and Dublin Linens, Sheetings, Prints, Calicoes, Hosiery, Gloves, Ribbons, Haberdashery, &c.,
AT A LARGE REDUCTION IN PRICE.
Commencing on MONDAY, MARCH 12, and during the Week, at LESS THAN HALF THE COST of THAN A CHARGES at Mr. Sharpe's Private Residence, Bedford-park, Chiswick.
Doors conducted by a limited portion of the Stock.
Carriages to meet the 9.30 a.m. train from Waterloo-bridge.

TO LADIES.—STAYS, Skirts, Hosiery, and Ready-made Linens, at moderate prices. Private list free by post. C. BENNETT, 105, Oxford-street, London, W.; and at Hampton Street, Bath.

LADIES' WATERPROOF TWEED CLOAKS and MANTLES, Quite New Designs, for the present season, at the Manufacturers' Prices only, carriage free.
J. B. and W. PHILLIPS, 17, Cheapside, Manchester.

SEWELL and CO.'S MOIRE ANTIQUES; 11, Ludgate-hill, extending through to Stationers'-hall-court.
COMPTON HOUSE,
Fetch-court, and Old Change-court, Sales, W.

FREE by FURNITURE CHINTZES, 1s. 6½d. per yard, 50 inches wide, in a variety of new and elegant designs, suitable for the present season, and of the most genuine print before Free to 5s. 3d. per yard.—Grosvenor House, Old Change-court, Sales, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE, 77, WARDOUR and SOHO, 2 and 4, Goodge-street; and 63 and 64, Tottenham-court-road, 2, 4, and 6, Whitfield-street, Sales of first-class manufactures, for every style of decoration.

A. TRELOAR and CO., CARPETMAKERS, 69, 70, and 71, Ludgate-hill, London, E.C., Manufacturers to the Queen, Royal Family, and Royal Courts of Europe, SUPPLY the BEST and CHEAPEST CARPETS, OIL-CLOTHS, BEDDING, and HOUSE FURNITURE.
A WARNING.—BEWARE of SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.
TRELOAR'S GRAVING-ROOM SUITES, elegant and moderate in price.
DINING-ROOM SUITS in Oak and Mahogany.
TRELOAR'S PATENT STAIR CARPET, Stretched Furniture and Mattresses for Bedrooms.
TRELOAR'S Illustrations of the Premises and especial care in prices to the Country and Abroad.
ATKINSON and CO. are selling the newest patterns of CARPETS at 2s. 3d. per yard, Kidderminster Brussels at 2s. 6d., Tapestry at 2s. 6d., Axminsters, Moquettes, Brussels, and Velvets at proportionate prices. Manufactures since the new year. The usual Saving Show of CARPETS, Rich Colours, Handsome Patterns, Cheap Prices. Purchasers of which may feel assured will wear equally respectable. Also a Stock of Rich Tapestry Carpets, at 2s. 6d. per yard. Rich Velvets for Stair Carpets, Linoleums, Floor Cloths, Cocoa Matting, Tarpaulins, and most valuable stock to choose from. ATKINSON and CO., 30, Oxford-street, 1, 2, and 3, Newman-street, and 4, Perry's-place.

TO LADIES.—GREEN TISANE IVY LEAVES, for ornamenting Chimney-Glasses, 16 stamps per box. Sold by all Perfumers, Chemists, &c. Depôt, 24, Poland-street, W.

TO MOTHERS and INVALIDS.—ELAM'S ARTIFICIAL SUPPORTERS, for Corpulency, Pregnancy, Weakness, Rupture, Prolapsus, Spinal Curvature, Deformity, and Sea Sickness. Illustrations forwarded free.—96, Oxford-street.

JAMES LEWIS'S MARROW OIL, prepared for the use of Gentlemen. Sold by all Perfumers. Depôt for Canada, 56, Old Bailey-hill, London. Price 1s. 6d.
Manufactory, 5, Berkley's-buildings, Chelsea.

DR. DE JONGH'S
(Knight of the Order of Leopold of Belgium)
LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL
Is pronounced by the Profession and Public throughout the world as the safest, speediest, and most effectual
REMEDY for CONSUMPTION, CHRONIC COUGHS, RHEUMATISM, GOUT, GENERAL DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE SKIN, GLANDULAR AFFECTIONS, RICKETS, and all SCROFULOUS AFFECTIONS,
Is incomparably superior to every other variety.
SPECIFIC MEDICAL OPINIONS.
"Dr. de Jongh's Oil."—Dr. Granville.
"Dr. de Jongh's Oil."—Dr. Hassall.
"I consider Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil to be a very great boon."—Dr. Hunter, Physician to the Queen's Household.
"Dr. de Jongh's Oil."—Dr. Scudamore.
Dr. de Jongh's Light-brown Cod-liver Oil is sold in Imperial Measures only, at 3s. 6d., 4s. 9d., 9s., 18s., and 36s. each.
DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD-LIVER OIL is sold only in capsuled bottles, with his stamp and signature, WITHOUT WHOM NONE ARE GENUINE, by respectable Chemists throughout the kingdom.
ANSAR, HARFORD, and CO., 77, Strand, London, W.C.

GALVANISM v. NERVOUS PAINS, DEBILITY, and RHEUMATISM.—The most improved Galvanic Apparatus ever invented for the relief of Nervous Pains, Debility, Rheumatism, Spasms, Indigestion, &c. Pamphlets, with Testimonials, free by post. Sold by PULVERMACHER'S Galvanic Establishment, 194, Regent-street, W. The Chain Bands, Belts, &c., may be had of Chemists and Surgical Instrument Makers. Consultation as before, personally or by letter, daily, at 10 to 4. Pulvermacher's Galvanic Chain Bands, Belts, &c., are the only effectual, safe, and permanent remedy in all cases of nervousness, debility, or rheumatism, in the principal members of the body, and are strongly recommended by the faculty as the most powerful curative agent ever discovered

NEW MUSIC.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as performed in the Opera. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS. Fifth Edition. Price 3s. 6d. net. "Faust" Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Duet, 4s. net.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MARCH from FAUST. (Soldiers' Chorus.) Arranged as a Duet for the Pianoforte. By BERALDI BILSAC. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BRAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of this acclaimed Opera as Pianoforte Duets is now ready, containing many admired subjects not before published as Duets. Price 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST, with ENGLISH and WORDS. This popular Opera is now ready, complete, with Italian, French, or English words, price 10s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the popular Airs from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon for the piano, on Motives Airs from Gounod's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GOUNOD'S FAUST VALSE, the celebrated Waltz of "Faust," arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 7s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 7s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 6s.; Full Orchestra, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just Published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' ENGLISH AIRS.
No. 1. Home, sweet home. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Bruton Steeples. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. The bonnie lass in the cool grove. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' IRISH AIRS.
No. 1. St. Patrick's Day. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Oft in the stilly night. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Fly not yet. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SCOTCH AIRS.
No. 1. The blue bells of Scotland. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 2. Scots wha hae. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
No. 3. Auld Robin Gray. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. Also as a Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Song arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on the favourite Bravura Airs from Rossini's Opera for the Pianoforte, in this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte, on Airs from this charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBILE. Just published, Kuhe's new Valzer, sung by Miller, Tietjens and Vaughan with immense success at the Royal Italian Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES. A Fantasia on Danish Melodies for the Pianoforte. By KUHE. Price 3s. Illustrated with a portrait of Her Royal Highness the Princess Alexandra, in Heritge.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE NONNE. Recently played by Miss Arabella Goddard.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S "THE ANGELS' HARP. Recently played by Miss Arabella Goddard.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING CORN BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

WHY THROBS THIS HEART WITH RAPTURE NEW? Song by Miss Louisa Pyne in Wallace's Opera "Lurline." Price 2s. 6d. Illustrated.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS. New Song, sung by Mr. Sims Reeves at the Monday Popular Concerts; composed by MICHAEL ROSENTHAL. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES OF DANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed on all the popular and favourite Airs of the day. By J. W. TURNER. Price 4s. Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

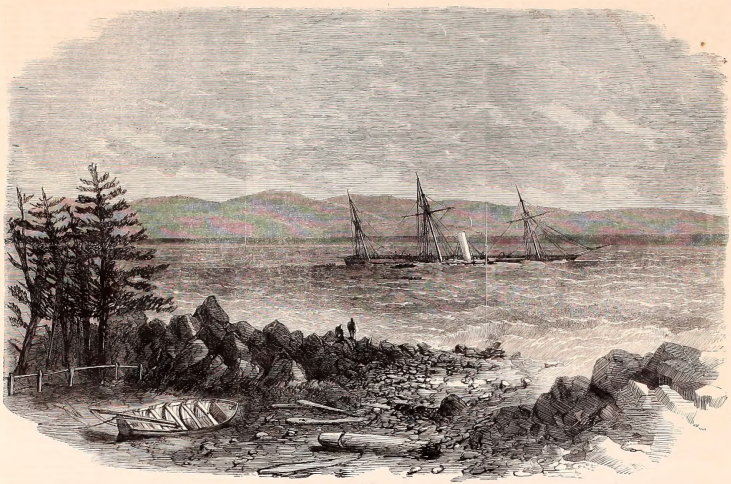
THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played by the Band of the Guards in the Palace and Princess of Wales, at Jullien's Concerts, and at the Royal Italian Opera. Illustrated, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CAUDY, Composer of the Burlesque Galop, Just Published, Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, Coote's Galop, Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Signor Arditi, and performed with great success at the Ancient Concerts.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASON. No. 47 of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE contains a collection of 70 new and beautiful original Hymn Tunes. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.



DIBDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE. No. 46, contains Twenty fine Songs, by Dibdin and other nautical favourites. All with Pianoforte Accompaniments. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

"MARY, DEAR," SIMS REEVES'S New Song, by RICHARD DUFFET, enharmonically entered in the Composer's Programme at the Monday Popular Concerts, price 3s., by DUNCAN DAVISON, 244, Regent-street.

NEW MUSIC.

HALF PRICE.—Music sent post-free at half the published price.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Opera. By C. A. MACFARREN.
"O sweet summer morning." Vocal Duet. ... ... 3s. 0d.
"What is there?" Soprano Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"The coming of fun." Song, with Chorus ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Ah! sure a pair." Soprano and Tenor Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Ah! is it sweet." Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Why early style?" Ballad ... ... 2s. 6d.
"As I am! I would not change." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Soft as an Angel." Soprano Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
Fantasia on the same subject, by Jaspar ... ... 4s. 0d.
"I feel for thee." Song, in C and E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Soft as an Angel." Soprano Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
Fantasia on the same subject, by Jaspar ... ... 4s. 0d.
"I feel for thee." Song, in C and E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! is it sweet." Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Why early style?" Ballad ... ... 2s. 6d.
"As I am! I would not change." Song ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"I got her fast." Romance in B flat and F ... ... 2s. 6d.
"I got her fast." Romance in B flat and F. Post-paid Song. 2s. 6d.
"My fair lady." Romance in B flat and F ... ... 2s. 6d.
"My fair lady." Ballad in D and G ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in E flat and B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh! mine sex." Ballad in B flat and E flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in E flat and B flat ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Hail! miss me." Ballad in B flat and E flat

THE WRECK OF THE BOHEMIAN, MONTREAL OCEAN COMPANY'S STEAM-PACKET, OFF THE COAST OF MAINE.

We are indebted to Mr. Bateman Smith, one of the cabin passengers who escaped from the wreck of the Bohemian, for a sketch of that vessel upon the rocks near Portland Harbour, on the coast of Maine, U.S., where she got aground on the 22nd of last month. The steamer, carrying nineteen cabin passengers and 199 steerage, besides the mails and cargo, with a crew of about one hundred men, left Liverpool on the 6th of February, and had been some days overdue at Portland when she met with this disaster. She was just rounding Cape Elizabeth, to enter the harbour from Casco Bay, when she struck upon a ledge called St. Alden's Rock, about three miles from land. It was about eight o'clock in the evening; the night was foggy, and the speed of the vessel was not more than two or two miles and a half an hour. It appears that the master, Captain Berland, had misjudged the distance of the lights visible on Cape Elizabeth. The vessel, having struck and passed over the rocks, found a large hole in her bottom, and began to fill rapidly. She was then turned towards the shore, with the intention of beaching her; but, when she got very near the land, her engine fires were put out, and she sank in four fathoms of water, in almost upright position, as shown in the Engraving. This was about an hour and a quarter after she struck. The weather was mild and calm, and there was not the usual groundswell. The deck, after the ship had settled down, was a foot or two above water at low tide, and not more than an eighth of a mile from the shore. Most of the passengers, however, had already left the ship, the first boat taking eighty of them in one trip and seventy in the next trip to the beach. The remainder, about a hundred, were thus cramped, and insistence or twenty-five were thus lost, all Irish steerage passengers, including several women and children. The other boats, with the remainder of the passengers, had left the ship before she struck. Captain Rowland, with some of the officers and crew, remained on board until such time as they managed to get off. At the time of the verdict of the Coroner's jury at the inquest held upon those drowned, it declared that, "after the vessel struck, the officers and crew worked with energy and good judgment, rarely equalled and never surpassed, to land the lives of the passengers and crew, and especially those dwelling near Cape Elizebeth, are much commended for their humane efforts to relieve and provide for the destitute passengers." The baby found in the steerage, whose name has still hopes of raising the vessel, which rests with her entire upon the rocks, but with her bow and stern in deep water.

THE VILLAGE OF BRADFIELD, NEAR SHEFFIELD, SCENE OF THE LATE FLOODS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of the Right Hon. George Viscount Midleton in Ireland, and Baron Brodrick in England, late of Pepper Harow, Surrey; Cahirmoyle, Limerick; and Bantry-place, Bolgrinion, Cork, was proved at Dublin, by Viscountess Middleton and the nephews, the Hon. and Rev. Charles Broderick Brodrick, Rector of Bromley, Kent, and the Hon. Alan, of Salem-place, Dublin. The personalty was sworn under £150,000. The Right Hon. Viscount Midleton, and sole Baron Brodrick, died on the 22nd of April, 1863. His Lordship died in December last, aged seventy-two. His Lordship bequeaths £1000 to the Protestant Orphan Society, Dublin; £500 to the Dublin hospitals; £500 to the Meath Hospital, Dublin; £500 to the Cork Institution; and £500 to the Limerick Institution. He bequeaths £1000 to his two daughters, who are also pecuniary residuary legatees. He gives one to his sisters and sister-in-law, and the Rev. Charles, one of each of his nephews who are executors, £200; and to the Church Missionary Society, Salisbury-square, £100. His Lordship appoints his wife and Brodrick, of Cashel. The first Peer was Alan Brodrick, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons and Lord High Chancellor.

The will of Arthur Saltmarshe, Esq., of Bill-hill, Berks, bearing date 15th of August, 1863, was proved on the 15th of February, by the executors being Thomas Fenkcaster, Esq., of Wotherton-grange, Hyde Park; and W. Saltmarshe, Esq., of Bill-hill, under the effects of the testator, of £500 is bequeathed. To his wife he leaves a sum of £20,000 and a life interest in the residue of his property. The residue of his property is also divided between his two nephews, Philip and Arthur, in certain proportions; and the personal estate and effects are given to the same two nephews and legatees and his nieces. All legacies to be paid free of duty.

The will of Lady Malcolm Douglas, late of No. 1, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, in the Tower of London, and late of Royal Crescent, Notting-hill, was proved (in the principal registry by the two executors, Sir John Malcolm, Bart., and Mr. Bockwith, the latter), Mr. Dickson and W. T. Bosworth, Esqrs., of No. 1, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, the executors named. The personalty was sworn under £60,000. The will was executed in 1858, and the testator died on the 23rd of January. Her ladyship bequeaths to her executors the testator died on the 23rd of January. Her ladyship bequeaths to her executors the residue, on trust to sell the same, and to invest the proceeds, and to pay the annual income to her husband, Sir John Malcolm, Bart., during his life, or until he shall marry again, and after his death or second marriage the capital is to be divided between his two nephews, Philip and Arthur, in certain proportions; and the personal estate and effects are given to the same two nephews and legatees and his nieces. All legacies to be paid free of duty.

The will of the Right Hon. Matthew Lord Aylmer, late of No. 1, Chesham-place, in the Tower of London, and late of Royal Crescent, Notting-hill, was proved (in the principal registry by the two executors, Lady Aylmer and Captain Aylmer, R.N.), Mr. Bockwith, the latter; W. Dickson and W. T. Bosworth, Esqrs., of No. 1, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, the executors named. The personalty was sworn under £60,000. The will was executed in 1858, and the testator died on the 23rd of January. His lordship bequeaths to his executors the residue, on trust to sell the same, and to invest the proceeds, and to pay the annual income to his wife, Lady Aylmer, during her life, or until she shall marry again, and after her death or second marriage the capital is to be divided between his two nephews, Philip and Arthur, in certain proportions; and the personal estate and effects are given to the same two nephews and legatees and his nieces. All legacies to be paid free of duty.

The will of Mr. Matthew Bell, late of No. 1, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, in the Tower of London, and late of Royal Crescent, Notting-hill, was proved (in the principal registry by the two executors, Lady Aylmer and Captain Aylmer, R.N.), Mr. Bockwith, the latter; W. Dickson and W. T. Bosworth, Esqrs., of No. 1, Cadogan-place, Chelsea, the executors named. The personalty was sworn under £60,000. The will was executed in 1858, and the testator died on the 23rd of January. Mr. Bell bequeaths to his executors the residue, on trust to sell the same, and to invest the proceeds, and to pay the annual income to his wife, Lady Aylmer, during her life, or until she shall marry again, and after her death or second marriage the capital is to be divided between his two nephews, Philip and Arthur, in certain proportions; and the personal estate and effects are given to the same two nephews and legatees and his nieces. All legacies to be paid free of duty.

THE NEW "TICKET OF LEAVE."—The Penal Servitude Bill now awaits only the formality of the Royal assent to become law. Should the old form gave license to the convict to be at large in the United Kingdom for the remainder of his sentence, unless sooner called upon by the Crown to resume the license; the new form adds, "or unless the said A B shall, before the expiration of the said term, be convicted of felony within the United Kingdom, in which case this license will be immediately forfeited by law." It also adds, "and the said A B shall, during the residue of the said term, carry his license at all times with him, and produce the same when required to do so by a constable or peace officer." The conditions of the license remain the same as before, with the addition that the holder shall not "be called upon to do so by a magistrate or police officer;" this condition is new. The third condition from my warrant is omitted, which is that he habitually associate with notoriously bad characters, such as reputed thieves and prostitutes. The fourth and last condition remains, which is that he must not frequent the public streets, highways, or places of public resort after certain hours, unless he can prove that he is following some lawful calling then and there then and there. This license is liable to be revoked in case of misconduct, and the holder is liable to be arrested without warrant and brought before a magistrate. The whole remains pretty much as it originally existed; the compulsory clause in the proposed new license

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Bella Donna. By Gilbert Dyce. (2 vols. Richard Bentley.) This romance has an alias, which is "The Cross before the Name," and which is far more comprehensible than the title to which it is supplementary. For the "beautiful lady" places a cross before the name of no enemy, as a sign of a score which is to be paid off. There is no allusion throughout the story to a preparation which is said to improve (until it destroys) the eyes: and no time wasted upon explanations with respect to "beautiful for ever" preparations will be forewarned. The principal lesson to be learned from the novel is that if you happen to be a pretty governess, happen to have two or three strings to your bow, and happen to correspond with one of the strings, you become a lady, and if you are not pretty and do not correspond, for, one of your strings may be your own employer, and you may write a letter dismissing upon your own account your employer, and a vulgar little boy (a child of your employer) may happen to light upon the stage of the story (and upon the stage above on second thoughts turn up), may gum them together, and may be the means of bringing to his assistance a policeman who tells you that you do not esteem him so highly as he fondly believed. If ever you write and you are in such a letter, be careful to remember and not throw them into a waste-paper basket. "Bella Donna," we presume, is Every Day, the governess mentioned above, and Mr. Gilbert Sharp, who plays an intricate game and loses. The tale is decidedly above the average, and is sufficiently pleasant reading. Beyond this we can say little; there is some originality in the character of Jenny Bell, but the originality stops there: nor is the language remarkable for purity of English composition. As far as we can make bad as novels go; but it is not noticeable for elegance, picturesqueness, or masterly vigour. It is say and appropriate to the scenes described, portrayed; and none is hardly desirable, certainly not necessary.

A Leaf for the Season. By Charles Clarke. (2 vols. Chapman and Hall.) The characteristics of this novel may be summed up in four classifiables, which are, heavy, dreary, dismal, and dull. The scene is the stables (by no means an unpleasant smell under certain circumstances) is established in order one's nose may be accustomed to the vegalias and other kinds of tobacco, with which mingle from time to time stray whiffs from the tumblers of spirits-and-water. The bet to which allusion is made in the title-page is a horse-race, which is very generally surmised—in open-box but a hunting-box. It is taken by a young "swell" (one of some fourteen or fifteen) and by the favourite Irishman of the novelist, full of spirits and kind-heartedness and (according to some persons) of whisky. The love of money, as easily as a broken bank: and these two personages occupy the foreground. The background has the usual number of "flats," horsedealers, stablemen, gentlemen-riders, adventurers, adventuresses, money-lenders, &c., &c., like. The book is not without a touch of certain smartness which borders upon wit, and of a certain drollery which borders upon humour: but the author's chief aim appears to be most aptly described by the slang word "look." There is no particular plot, but, such is, perhaps, a merit in a novel-reader, not a particular moral pointed. Upon the appropriateness of his epithets the author appears, it seems to us, to be always conscientious: for instance, the reader will find, at p. 1, the "sky" described as "a mass of lascivious tenebrae and amorous clearness," where the epithets are, in our humble opinion, not more happy than the sky would be were it the "seductive bagpipes," or the "solemn hurdy-gurdy": but as eyes differ in their appreciation of colour, so, perhaps, do ears in their appreciation of sound.

The Hidden Sin. By Dr. Sandwich. (2 vols. Smith, Elder, and Co.) The famous siege of Kars has not yet, it is to be hoped, died away from the memory of Englishmen: we would fain hope that there is closely connected, both as an actor and as a writer, with that remarkable siege, Dr. Hakim Beim, who, as we have already given the courtesy to all doctors in the service of the Sultan of Turkey, will, therefore, be a Turkish physician; he will be hailed by the reading throngs as an old friend. He professes to tell the story of the siege himself. Antonelli, a doctor in the Turkish service; but it may be presumed that there is at least a foundation of truth in statements which the literary fabric he has built up. Juvenal complains that in his day the torrent-volume of Xerxes and Cyrus and the long-haired kings had become, by frequent repetition, more familiar to him than his own hall, which is not improbable now that the siege of Kars, over which, devoted to shampooing, would remain a novice forcibly of a festive-disturbed and other Turkish dignitaries, and the long-haired accounts of travellers, have become similarly familiar to Englishmen; but we are bound to say that there is a freshness in the interesting matter—due partly, of course, to the semi-fictional form of the book—in Dr. Sandwich's work, which is perfectly new to us, and that, moreover, Dr. Sandwich may be reasonably supposed to have more than ordinary than many of his predecessors in Turkish portrait, landscape, harem, bazaar, and manner painting. The Doctor's remarks at p. 1 upon the mind is not nearly so favourable to the Turks as the Turkish Freaks of the present generation would expect, and we self-demand that it should be.

The Mysterious Shakspeare. Compiled by John B. Marsh. (1 vol. Simpkin, Marshall, and Co.) "The compilation and arrangement of the matter which I present in the ensuing pages," says the compiler, "occupied me four years, during which the whole of my spare time has been devoted to the work." So much industry in a good cause should command respect; and therefore, if we fail to see the full benefit which is to accrue to the reader of Shakspeare from Mr. Marsh's labours, we are quite willing to ascribe the fault rather to our own want of discernment than to his want of merit. The compiler announces that his object is "to be entirely impartial and Interpretative," but how that object is to be attained by referring the reader from one passage to another, we, with our limited powers of vision, cannot, but where (so far as our necessarily limited examination has gone), there is nothing in the one passage to refer to the other, we very often nothing which requires illumination in either, it is difficult to comprehend. However, let us not quarrel with the plan which Mr. Marsh has adopted. The book is numbered by columns (not, as is usual, by pages), and marginal references from column to column are made instead of letters and the number of the column, conveniently managed. Moreover, at the end of subjects of any length, such the number of passages in which any one of those subjects is handled are most easily found. The number of subjects, however, is only 372, which seems to us below the mark, for Shakspeare, as Mr. Marsh is the whole range of Shakspeare. As a proof wherein, it may be mentioned that we looked for the word "Gambling" (which may properly be considered a subject) and did not find it, though "Amusements" and Cowpland, p. 1," and "Cowper, p. 1," "let it alone; let us to billiards," and we have no hesitation in saying that such a reference is not worthy of the book of reference in the index. Again, at column 1380, we meet the phrase "I'm oneeyed, yes," and are referred to Column 1380, where we find "Cowper, p. 1." April's in her eyes." Now, though it is certain that tears in the eyes are alluded to in both instances, we cannot see how the one passage can be said to interpret one by the other. But it is far more easy to find defects (if they be defects) than innumerable merits, and we have no lively hundreds of excellent references and interpretations which our hasty construction is to overlook: and those who have not easy access to Mr. Cowden Clarke's "Concordance" will find in Mr. Marsh a work of great assistance.

The Poetical Works of Robert Browning. (3 vols. Chapman and Hall.) A third edition of the poems by the author of "Paracelsus" in a handier form than the last. Browning is a poet whom Englishmen, and is adding, we hope, to their number. To them the news will be welcome that there will have yet another edition of the complete works of their hero's noble contemporary.

The Poetry and Poetry of Burns. By Daniel Scrymgeour. (Edinburgh: Adam and Charles Black). This is a new edition, revised and enlarged, of a handy collection of poetical specimens, from Chaucer to Tennyson (including a few Americans), accompanied by explanatory notes, biographical sketches, portraits, and critical remarks. It is nicely printed and appointed; but the colour of the binding in the volume before us (there may be, of course, varieties) is unpleasantly suggestive of medicinal rhubarb.

Bertram's Dictionary of Universal Information. (1 vol. S. O. Beeton.) This is a very useful book of reference for all books of the kind. It contains a vast amount of information (with illustrations) on all manner of subjects, including etymology. But a facility seems to attend such works: if you try to test them by a particular crux of your own, you in case they fail either in the way of information or omission. Having our own reasons for the test, we applied to Beeton for the etymology of "podium," and, lo! the word is not to be found at all. No doubt, a book which professes to tell you everything labours under the disadvantage of attempting an impossibility, and can only approximately fulfil its promise; hence the disappointment with which we meet it is always (in the case of Beeton as well as its predecessors) liable to meet.

Punch. Vol. XXXVI. January to June, 1859. (Re-issue. Bradbury and Evans.) Another of the old half-yearly volumes of Punch is now republished, bringing up this edition to within five years of the present date. Before the whole series of volumes can have its overtaken, and the stereotyped series will be complete. The first half month of the year 1859 was the period of the Derby Administration and of the overthrow of Lord Derby's Government on the question of Parliamentary reform—was fertile in topics for our popular humourist.

MUSIC.

Covent-garden Theatre closes this evening, when the lease of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. Harrison as joint managers of the Royal English Opera comes to an end. To-morrow (Saturday) is a morning benefit on Saturday, and Miss Pyne on Monday last. On both nights the house was filled in every part, and the performances with which both of them was received showed that their efforts in behalf of our national opera had been duly appreciated by the public. We are informed that a testimonial is about to be presented to Miss Louisa Pyne, and that a subscription for that purpose has been set on foot under the management of a committee consisting of a number of the most eminent members of the dramatic and musical professions.

The second concert of the Philharmonic Society took place on Monday last, in St. James's Hall, before a large audience, and possessed features of interest. The two great symphonies were Mozart's in G, and Beethoven's in C minor. Herr Ernst, a chef-d'œuvre of the author. Stemdale Bennett's pianoforte concerto in F minor, and Mr. Sydney Smith, Mr. Harold Thomas, one of the most distinguished among our rising generation of pianists, played his concerto in Professor Bennett's "Op. 1;" it was written at the age of fifteen, and is a work which does great credit to the young author. A promise fully realised by the achievements of later years. It has a brilliant, spirited, and effective finale, which, we should think, would become a veteran artist. Mr. Thomas did full justice to its beauties, and the pianist was loudly applauded at the conclusion of it. Mr. Cleutenaus played a concerto of De Beriot, one of the most charming examples of that composer's style, which we have frequently been produced. His music, unfortunately, is beginning to fall into oblivion: but he was warmly encouraged on the occasion of many among the audience by the exquisite performance of Mr. Cleutenaus himself. Vocal music was largely played on the occasion, and his reception was such as to seldom given to a vocalist at the concerts of the Philharmonic audience. The vocal portion of the concert consisted of a pathetic song by Gounod, sung by Mr. Santley, and a fine chant in an innovation at the Philharmonic concerts; but the experiment was accomplished successfully. Mr. Santley also sang a number of other singers; and, as they sang some exquisite specimens of German and English part-music, they were greeted with the unanimous suffrages of the audience.

The Royal Society of Musicians of Great Britain held its anniversary festival (the 126th) at Freemasons' Hall on Tuesday last. The chair was occupied by Sir Francis H. Goldsmid, Bart., M.P., and was filled by a numerous and distinguished company. The Society is one of the oldest and most useful benevolent institutions in England. It appears from the report read yesterday that the Society's income (£3000) was applied to its charitable objects, subject only to the trifling deduction of £1000 for the cost of collection and management, an instance of economical administration worthy of the English press. The Society has now on its list of pensioners not of the highest eminence in their profession, who not only afford precarious aid but who have devoted their time to the affairs of the institution. At present the society supports ten widows, forty-two aged members, and there are six boys and girls apprenticed to respectable trades, with sums of £20 each, besides being supplied. The society, during the long period of its existence, has received many legacies and donations, and one of the most munificent was the greatest musician in Europe. Among the earliest was Handel, one of the founders of the Society, who bequeathed £1000 to its treasury, and the latest was Signor Begrez, who died last year, leaving to the property a sum of £1000. The Duke of Cambridge is one of the pleasantest that we remember. The honourable Baronet who filled the chair performed his duties with his usual tact and ability, and his speeches in proposing the various toasts were concise and in excellent taste. The usual musical entertainment on the evening were excellent. Among many other things, Mme. Arabella Goddard played no less than three times—the concerto in A minor, Op. 54, of Schumann, the "Carnaval," the famous "Kreutzer sonata." This was the last appearance of Signor Piatti, who, we believe, is about to leave England for Germany, taken leave of the Philharmonic audience at the Hanover-square Rooms. Mr. Sims Reeves, in England, having behind him a great desire for his return.

It is said that Richard Wagner is about to visit London, in order to direct in person the performance of his "Tannhäuser" at Her Majesty's Theatre.

Mille. Titiens is still at Naples. Her engagement at the San Carlo terminates at the end of this month, when she will forthwith return to London.

The new mass of Rossini, which has been long expected with interest by the Parisian public, was performed for the first time on Sunday last, at the Church of the Madeleine. Meyerbeer was present, and joined warmly in the applause bestowed on the work.

The first chief musical festival which has engaged at concerts in Brunswick, Magdeburg, and Dresden, as also at the principal towns in Holland. At the latter city it was presented with the "diploma of honour" by the society Semper Crescendo, at Leyden.

THE THEATRES.

Our different managements appear now to have made their arrangements for the Easter holidays, which begin on the evening of Monday. We have, therefore, no new plays to review, nor any novelty of any kind to record. DRURY LANE has contented itself with the two farces and "Manfred," which have been performed for the last few weeks. It is announced that immense preparations are being made for the production of Shakspeare's historical play of "The First Part of Henry the Fourth," on Easter Monday. At the HAYMARKET a new Easter piece is promised, and it is also announced that a new three-act comedy may be expected. Other theatres continue their old bills without alteration, or have not yet advertised their intention to change after Passion Week. The immensely-successful play of "Deborah" will be played every evening, except Good Friday, at the GREEIAN. The performances of "Leah," at the ADELPHI, will be suspended until Easter Monday.

The Select Committee to try and determine the Barnstaple borough election petition will be chosen on the 11th of April next.

THE FARM.

MR. HENRY SMITH'S shorthorn herd was brought to the hammer by Mr. Wetherall at Drax Abbey, on Tuesday last, and the thirty-six lots realised £3,112. The thirty-six cows, heifers, and heifer calves averaged £85 ; the ten bulls and bull calves £29 1s.; and the total average was £82 17s. 2d. The two highest priced lots were Greslenlime (125 gs.), bought by the Rev. John Stainforth, and Gaisy (100 gs.), bought by Mr. Tyas, of Sykehouse, Yorks, on April 1st, and also Noel Hill's, on April 21, have been just added by Mr. Strafford to his list of fixtures. The Highland and Agricultural Society have held a special meeting, and unanimously petitioned Parliament against the Cattle Disease Prevention Bill as to, on the ground that the provisions (11 and 12 Vict. cap. 107) is amply sufficient with respect to the foreign. The Mark Lane Express has also petitioned by stating that the Royal Cattle Shows will not be preserved with." Mr. Gibbett, the eminent cattle salesman, has also petitioned against the Cattle Disease clauses at a recent meeting of the London Farmers' Club. He said that he had the highest authority for stating that the foot and mouth complaint was not at all injurious to meat, and that it was not of foreign origin, but an epidemic which had frequently appeared before. He hoped that on the Thursday after the last great Christmas market there was a fair with 2000 cattle and about 2000 of them were affected by it. He also corrected the impression that foreign cattle are affected with the disease in England. The examination was most rigorous, perhaps at a loss of 25 per head, because two or three had tongue symptoms. It appears by the 1860 returns that the number of London Mail 270 horses, 4 calves, 691 sheep, and 220 pigs were destroyed in that year; or 1177 animals out of the 7226 which were produced for examination by the Government veterinary surgeons.

The Smithfield Club meeting has been attended upon some important changes. The society intend, at last, to follow the example which has been set by the Royal Agricultural (subject to the concurrence of the Agricultural Company) the members of the club and exhibitors to the Smithfield Show-yard. The Christmas Show was a great success last year, and intend presenting Mr. Gibbett, as the originator of the idea, with £100 in addition to his annual 200 of those were affected by public as well, at a handsome entrance-fee. Inter alia, it is proposed to allot the sum of £100 to be given to the herdsmen who have fed the first prize animals in the classes; and both in Smithfield and Islington. Further, there is to be a new class for steers under two years old. Rylands, Cheviot, and Dorset sheep, and any other pure breed not mentioned in the prize list, are at present, we do not know of their own; and six months is to be the limit of age instead of four months for the Shorthorn classes. The entry fee is to be 1 sovereign as not to such unpleasantness about precocious dentition as has been the case at Battersea. The Royal Agricultural Society has now upwards of 5000 paying members; but, considering the consequence of the annual meeting, it is little very much behind the Highland and Agricultural Society, which numbers 6000 subscribers.

Mr. H. Woods's well-known lecture on the breeding and management of sheep has been published by Messrs. Ridgway. He falls back as an illustration of the value of early good sheep, on the experience of Berwick Hill during the lamb or the longest season. "You see a group of people standing round a pen of sheep, and they are each a third group, but it is a rare circumstance. Why is this? There's a good deal of lambs in each pen, and everybody is anxious to be seen, showing that it is the exception, and not the rule, to have a good lot. There is a good deal of lambs in each pen, and every group of people all over Norwich Hill; and certainly, if the men of Berwick-upon-Tweed can bring a good flock into a present, and hold a front, as they have done of late at Smithfield and the Royal, he with such a flock as I have described. Thirty pages have pitched the least out of a very large subject, and prove, by the "Agricultural Magazine," how thoroughly the author understands it. In fact, he couches, without any circumlocution, the whole of the principal points in sheep management, from "the ewes to breed from" to "the wool." We will wager that the hints are lost upon that astonishing veteran near whom we sit at the Farmers' Club dinner annually, and accounts for it by saying, "Poor things, they know what's the best." Mr. Woods's "Lecture on Management can lay to rest the "overtrue" statement that too often sheep "shoulders are placed upon their backs, and their backs upon their shoulders," likewise—as if the body had been made first and the shoulders had been a mistake and had been stuck on after the body was not cold." Then, too, "the nice cherry hue of the skin, which is sometimes seen in sheep, and stock which will graze," the 25 per cent. those in the pink which had cake—the folly of making a ram so much of a favourite as to keep him constantly on corn—the hand upon the ewes by proper feeding—the importance of chaff with roots—the deleterious effects of too much cake both on ewes and the mutton—and, finally, "the burning remedy"—all form leading points in a judicious lecture which Lords Wilton and Walsingham lingered with delight, and forgot Sir Charles and Dowding-room Rose for a season.

We have to record the death of Mr. Beach, who was about years the land steward of the late and present Earl of Lonsdale. Since the days of Mr. Coke, Holkham, no one has done more for agriculture in Cumberland for reclaiming swamps, growing turnips, or choosing shorthorns. Mr. Beach's successor will look forward to "a tidy crop of Gainford bird-quarters." It was a great day at Penrith when it opened on the 15th. Mr. Beach had bought the son of Thorpe and Old Cherry for 100 gs. from Colonel Craddock, on purpose to cross the county cracks; and the owners of Sir William, Prian, and Wallace soon made up their minds to relinquish every hope for the five-guinea sweepstakes, and fully agreed with the late Mr. Blaine that "Lonsdale was the best bull in the county." Mr. Blaine, I think, used to say that there was at that moment a better bull in England." Mr. Beach retired from the management of the Lowther estates with a handsome £200 testimonial of plate. We are glad to hear that the Lowther Arms, Penrith, "Pretty Peggy" is to be succeeded by one with a similar token for services rendered during half a century to stock and agriculture generally.

The Confederate steamer Florida and the Federal sloop-of-war St. Louis have been ordered to leave the harbour of Bahia at once.

The Emperor of Russia has just sanctioned a decision of the Council of the Empire abolishing the import duty on raw cotton entering the country by the European frontier.

The Akbar of Algiers states that a sperm whale, 50 ft. long, was stranded on the coast of the Philippine archipelago on the 4th. A number of fishermen immediately attempted to secure the monster; but it got off with the loss of its tail, which was cut off and carried away by some fishermen. The whale died. At last, however, the men managed to kill it with axes and towed it to the shore. It was found to be full of ambergris, and the fishermen sold it for 1,000,000 piastres. This is looked upon as a specimen of good luck, and a proof that civilisation is making progress among the natives, that two young Arabs were caught in the crowd picking pockets with a dexterity scarcely surpassed by the light-fingered gentry of Paris and London.

The annual returns just presented to Parliament show that since 1817, when the first Savings-banks Act was passed, the sums deposited with the National Debt Commissioners by the trustees of the savings-banks and friendly societies of the United Kingdom, together with the interest thereon credited to the trustees, have amounted to more than £32,000,000. There was still remaining due to them for principal and interest at the close of the year 1863 the sum of £31,000,000. On December 31, £28,378,610. To meet this the National Debt Commissioners held at that date securities of the value of £28,000,000. The rest of the sum was paid in the price of Gold, there had been a fee of £1,000,000, which must fall upon the public purse.

THE BRADFIELD RESERVOIR, NEAR SHEFFIELD: THE GAP IN THE DALE DYKE EMBANKMENT.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 296.

THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT PERTH, WEST AUSTRALIA.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE, PERTH, WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA is now the only colony to which, by the express wish of its inhabitants, a limited number of term under sentence of penal servitude are sent. In Western Australia, after their term of punishment has expired, they have a fair chance, which in England is scarcely possible, of regaining their forfeited position, and of becoming once more useful members of the community at large. Fortunately, the Under-Secretary for the Colonies stated, in the late debate on penal servitude, that he believed Western Australia, hitherto the very best system of dealing with convicts that has ever yet been devised. The credit of this is due to Sir Geo. Grey, and the success which has hitherto attended it leads us to hope that Western Australia may continue for many years to be the only colony which has broken the laws of their country a land which offers them an opportunity of reformation. It is but to a comparatively limited extent that this colony has yet been settled. From its natural isolation it affords peculiar facilities for developing the convict's capital; and from the nature of its resources, which require a great amount of labour, it has peculiar need of the assistance which transportation may bring to a young and struggling community. Indeed, the vast unoccupied territory comprised within its limits, which include a country as large as Russia in Europe, must for many years offer an ample field for the employment of compulsory labour which is not required elsewhere. Since 1850 there have been sent to Western Australia 1791 convicts. The colony has made steady progress; and, while crime is comparatively rare, and life and property as safe as elsewhere, its resources are gradually developing themselves. The convicts, besides erecting their own prisons and other Government buildings, have already cleared and made some 800 miles of road, built 100 bridges, large and small, and constructed a great number of lesser but most useful works.

Our Engraving on the preceding page is a view of the Government House, which has been established at Perth, the capital of the colony. It has been almost entirely erected by convict labour. It was designed by Lieutenant-Colonel Henderson, Royal Engineers, now Inspector-General of Prisons, and was partially built under his auspices whilst holding the appointment of Comptroller-General in Western Australia. The first stone of the building, commencing to be made was taken on the 11th of December last, upon which occasion the troops, consisting of the combined pensioner force and the volunteers, were assembled for the purpose of witnessing the presentation of her Majesty's new colours, by Lady Barbara Hotham, Governess, to the officers of the West Australian Volunteers. These officers are—namely, Colonel Bruce, Commandant of the corps; Captain Lamb; Lieutenants Dyett and Brown, and Ensigns Roe and Francisco. The new regimentals of the volunteers are of the same pattern as the Hampshires are each about a hundred strong, and have attained great proficiency in their exercises. These rank and file, together with the regular forces on field-days, and go through their work in a manner that would do no discredit to their brother volunteers in England.

INCISED ROCK-MARKINGS OF UNKNOWN IMPORT IN NORTHUMBERLAND.

THERE have lately been discovered, upon some hard rocks in the flanks of the Cheviot hills various incised markings, which are supposed to belong to a very remote period of British history, before the Roman Conquest. These consist, for the most part, of a central depression round which one or more circles are drawn. The circles vary in diameter from five inches to a foot. Occasionally a number of dots are placed outside the outer circle. Sometimes a number of these circles form an imperfect concentric system by the union of the elongated lines which proceed from the centre of each, and sometimes several of them are inclosed by a regular line which embraces the cluster. Though the same general character pervades the whole, they show considerable difference of detail. The number of them is surprising. In the vicinity of Doddington, near Wooler, some hundreds of them exist, and, indeed, wherever the native rock is exposed one of them may usually be seen. The rock is sandstone. Owing to the hardness of the stone of the district, and the fact that in many instances the carved figures have long been protected by a covering of turf, the marks of the tool with which they have been carved are occasionally distinctly visible. Whether that tool was a sharpened stone or a metallic implement is as yet not generally known; but general opinion, however, is in favour of a tool formed of some hard metal. The district about Doddington, in which these circles abound, is characterized by the presence of Celtic remains—such as barrows, stone circles, and camps. These markings are not confined to Northumberland; they occur in several places in Scotland, particularly at Lochlephead, in Argyleshire; in this instance they are cut in the hard trap rock of the district. Some, of spiral character, are found in Ireland. Others, very like their form, are met with on the stone circles and cromlechs of Brittany. As yet they have been but sparingly noticed in the mainland and southern counties of England; and, when they do occur, they differ in character from those of the north. One very interesting fact connected with these enigmatical figures is, that in several instances they have been found upon metal covering Celtic interments. No satisfactory answer has yet been given to the question which naturally arises, What purpose were these strange devices intended to serve? That they have a meaning, and were not the casual product of an idle hour, is proved by their number and the general uniformity of their character. The fact that they occur on stones used for covering the graves of the dead seems to indicate that they have a religious significance in relation to the rites of sepulture. The Duke of Northumberland, who has already done so much to illustrate the history of his county, has taken measures for having accurate representations of the Northumbrian examples executed in lithography, together with the various other incised specimens which may be noticed elsewhere. Some wellknown antiquaries are actively engaged in this work; but the chiefs of the Duke, and these have appended Dr. Bruce, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, to collect their communications. Many new examples of these drawings has already been made. Our Engraving represents two of them; but, of course, on a reduced scale.

INCISED STONES ON THE CHEVIOT HILLS.

Works of art for exhibition at the Royal Academy this year must be sent in to Burlington-square not later than April 16.

Mynheer E. J. B. Cremers has been appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs at the Hague.

Liebig has just published an opinion that oidium in vines and hop-plants has not, as he once in the atmosphere, as many people suppose, but is a vent of vigorous and enthusiastic growth, which, however, becomes hoio-pherent and kills.

Her Majesty's Emigration Commissioners have chartered two ships for the conveyance of Government emigrants; one, the Wanata, 1000 tons burthen, Captain Cropley, belonging to Messrs. Jones Brothers and Co., Liverpool—G.4.1 is by her station letter), to sail about the 1st of May next, from Plymouth for Adelaide, South Australia; and the other, the Light of the Age, 800 tons, Mr. W. W. Mosher, master, belonging to Messrs. John Liddell and Sons, London, at 4.14.1., to sail on or about the 10th of May, from Plymouth for Adelaide, South Australia.——The ship Legion of Honour, 1218 tons burden, belonging to Messrs. T. H. Mackay and Co., sailed on the 12th inst. from Gravesend to Queensland, Captain Grimmer commander. The Legion of Honour is the thirty-eighth vessel that has sailed on the land order system of emigration, under the immediate direction of the Queensland Government. She contains 377 souls, divided into paying, assisted, and free passengers, and consisting of 112 members of families, 60 single men, and 12 single females.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

CHLOROPHYLL, the green colouring matter in plants, has been closely examined by Professor Stokes, Sec. R.S., by the spectroscope. In all cases he found a remarkable absorption-band in the red. He has succeeded in obtaining by means of four extractions of the green colouring matter of the leaf, possessing highly distinctive optical properties. The green substance yield solutions exhibiting a strong red fluorescence; the yellow substances do not. The four substances are soluble to the same solvents, and three of them are extracted very completely by alcohol or even acid salts—such as bicarbonate of potash; but, by proper treatment, each may be obtained in a state of very approximate isolation, so far, at least, as coloured substances are concerned. Professor Stokes also examined a specimen, prepared by Professor Harley, of blue-green, or cyanogen, in solution—obtained, as he supposed, by destruction of the chlorophyll with chlorophyll, and was thereby enabled to prove that the two are distinct substances.

THE STRENGTH OF WROUGHT-IRON GIRDERS has been critically examined by Mr. Wm. Fairbairn, F.R.S., who has printed the results in tables, &c., in the Proceedings of the Royal Society, No. 61. He says that in his experiments it is evident that very much greater deflecting or compressive strains are not safe when submitted to violent disturbances equivalent to those which would result from a moving load. Having, however, exhibited the total tenacity when subjected to the same treatment with one fourth the load of permanent deflection, he finds that a girder of 50 feet span, with a load of 12 tons per square foot, or 600 tons uniformly distributed, will not exceed 2½ tons at the rate of 100 changes per day before its security was affected. It would, therefore, require 20 years to reach a load of one third the breaking weight upon bridges of this description, as, according to the last experiment, the beam broke with 1800 changes; or, at the same rate as the same rate as before, would be sufficient to break it. It is more than probable that the beam had been injured by the previous 1000 changes to which it had been subjected; and, assuming this to be true, it would follow that the beam was undergoing a gradual deterioration which must, sooner or later, however small, have terminated in fracture.

FLINT IMPLEMENTS AND FOSSIL MAMMALIA have been recently discovered together by Mr. J. Wyatt, at Summerhouse Hill and Honey Hill, near Hitchin, Herts, in the drift gravel. Professor Busk, Sec. R.S., and by Dr. H. P. Blackmore, at Fisherton, near Salisbury. In a paper recently read before the Royal Society, Professor Busk, Sec. R.S., has described a certain number of specimens of flint implements, and has given his opinion respecting the formation of gravel-beds. In a paper on the other discoveries, at one time by the two gentlemen named, Dr. Blackmore has described a bed that their condition is identical with that of the materials composing the gravel capping the chalk-hills of Wilts. The specimens exhibited by Dr. Blackmore are of the high-level gravels (in which the implements were found) to the bone-caves of Kent's Hole, Torquay, and Brixham, Devonshire, and to the lowest feathers of the former deposits, and briefly described a list of the fossils (including the mammalia and the land and freshwater shells) being also given. Mr. Evans came to the conclusion that the fossils were evidence of the climate at the time when they were deposited, having been more rigorous, at any rate in the winter, than it now is; and to this cause he attributed the comparatively greater excavating power of the early post-pliocene rivers.

OPTICAL PROPERTIES OF THE METALS.—M. Quincke's paper on this subject, which appears in the Philosophical Magazine for March, is devoted to the transmission of light through thin films of metal, with especial relation to the researches of Faraday, who remarked the irregularity of the intensity and colour of the light in the same metal. This M. Quincke says, would have been attributed to the presence of holes in the plate if Faraday had not demonstrated the proper cause. M. Quincke shows, when plates of metal obliquely between two crossed Nicol's prisms, it illuminates the plate and sets "just like a glass plate." This property, M. Quincke thinks, was first observed by Mr. Warren De La Rue, in platinum, gold leaf, and afterwards by Faraday in thin transparent plates of platinum, gold, silver, and copper. Faraday found, on heat, that the colour changed, and, finally, that they also became strongly polarized light and an arrangement of sulphate of lime plates, either colourless or green, could be transmitted by the gold leaf. The details given by M. Quincke in regard to his own experiments on this subject are too profound for our pages, and we merely give a part of his results.—"Light," he says, "penetrates to an appreciable depth into the metal, and must also be reflected from different depths; for the great difference of phase of the components of reflected light seems to be only explicable on the supposition that the reflected ray has traversed a layer of appreciable thickness of the metal and the surface-layer." The author has made experiments to determine directly the velocity of light through metals, and obtained results which, in the case of thin gold-leaf, are in accordance with the undulatory theory. He says, finally, that he was unable to detect any difference of phase in the components of the light transmitted by differently placed thin transparent substances, such as plates of glass. "Therefore the analogy between metals and transparent bodies is not proved for reflection, and still less can it be established for reflected light."

THE ARCHERY AND MODERN HYÆNA.—We give a few points of an interesting paper, by M. A. Gaudry, on the relations between the fossil hyænas and those now living, which was abstract of which appears in the Journal of the Geological Society. He states that there are three recent species of hyæna, the striped, the brown, and the spotted, which are the most like the fossil hyæna of Pikermi, and, finally, the fossil and Pikermi hyænas existed before the beginning of the Quaternary epoch. The fossil hyæna of Pikermi is larger than the recent striped hyæna, and has a more powerful dentition. It had a large tuberculated carnassial, the lower has no rudiments of a denticule. The magnificent fossil of Hyæna neschersensis, described by Cuvier, by M. Gaudry, presents the same peculiarities in its dental arrangement as the Grecian species.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.

PROFESSOR MARSHALL'S fourth lecture "On the Chemistry of Animal Life" (given on Thursday, the 10th inst.) was devoted to the phenomena of nutrition and secretion. The following are the principal facts:—1. The nutritive process, in dealing with the chyle, consists of absorption, selection, and assimilation. 2. The chyle, as it enters the blood, is mixed with the matter liquid of the whole body, by the action of different constituents, forms of complex elements, is enabled to nourish a great variety of tissues through a mass of peripheral relations. 3. The blood contains molecules and corpuscles, all the "vascular" tissues (such as muscle, brain, bone, &c.), renewing them by progressive metamorphoses, while such parts of the cellular tissue, hair, and cast passes away with the refuse, as "regressive metamorphoses." In its nourishment each tissue manifests by peculiar "vital properties," acting upon, absorbing from the blood only what it specially requires. The "non-vascular" tissues (the epidermis or cuticle, hair, nails, cartilage, &c.) are also nourished by the blood by progressive metamorphosis, but do not return anything to the blood. 4. The blood, in its course, is subject to continual nutrition; its products are cast out, there is a progressive change, and a peculiar selective process. The seat of secretion is not in the blood, but in the tissues; but of this we are totally ignorant. 5. The chemical transformations of the blood in nutrition are very remarkable, and the constituents of the blood have been analysed by the help of the body. Albumen is changed into globulin by the act of the blood corpuscles themselves; there result in quantity in proportion to the energy of nutritive vessels is obtained from albumen; hæmatin has a relation with the colour of the blood itself, and probably with that of the hair, nails, &c. Fibrine is a leavened form of albumen; and the fat in the body is not wholly derived from blood, but also from the conversion of albumen into fatty matter, and fat. The organic chemical character of blood (albumen) and the juices of the muscles (acid) are also remarkable. 6. The mineral matters of the blood and tissues also have an important influence on nutrition and secretion, and the salts, also the phosphates, chlorides, together with the metals—iron, magnesium, and silicon, all found in various parts of the body are highly important part in the animal economy. Phosphoric acid is indispensable for the brain and muscle; and the phosphates are found in the blood and chloride of sodium (common salt) for the gastric juice, &c.

The Rev. W. H. Brookfield, Inspector of the Inspectors of Schools under the Committee of Council on Education) gave the Friday evening discourse, "On the Training of the Faculties," with reference to the real reading, both as means of instructing, elevating, and amusing the minds of the lower classes and as a means of training the faculties of the upper classes. In the first of these points, he stated from his own experience, that, of very many children leaving school when only between ten and twelve years of age, not a few can read with ease for entertainment, but are totally unable to refer to other reading. It is a great error to suppose, because the labouring classes are deficient in book-knowledge, that they are deficient in common sense. In the great book of nature, or deficient in intelligence and sagacity, or unable to appreciate well-selected proverbs from the "Book of Proverbs." Mr. Brookfield thought that might arise from the prevention of parochial readings. Mr. Brookfield advocated such reading for the upper classes, as an important means of maintaining the proper estimation of style in literature, since no style could be good which was not appreciated by readers. Style was much neglected, he said, in the present day, and literature suffered much thereby which dispense with sound. Who reads a mere newspaper paragraph a second time? How successful are those writers of the day who are terse sequidas; aquaintedors; authors; well-selected passages; and clear, articulate, unaffected reading. Of good readers of the present day, Mr. Brookfield stated that Macready, Mr. Brookfield stated that 37 per cent were females, and only 9 per cent males. He concluded his lecture by stating, in a few words, the principles of the well-known "Bury of Le Fens" in Sterne's "Tristram Shandy." Colonel Sir George Everest, C.B., F.R.S., was present at the lecture.

PROFESSOR FRANKLAND, in his fifth lecture "On the Metallic Elements," given on Saturday last, treated of the methods of obtaining the metals from their ores, and of their purification. The ores are usually oxides, and the more basic metals may be deposited by the means of the voltaic battery, but practically the reduction of the ores is effected by heating them to a high degree of heat and gilding. He exhibited specimens of the moulds employed, and explained that cohesion power of fluid metals. Electro-gilding, plating, and the various uses of the cyanides, which attach gold and silver more readily than the common metals. Gold and silver are also found in the native condition, and by means of potassium, becomes transferable, and the cyanide does not attain the metal to be coated. Platinum, which is a rare metal, is now obtained in Russia, and a German silver spoon was gilt. The specific gravity or weight of the metals was experimentally shown by the lecturer, and the fact that the heaviest metal, platinum, is twenty-one times heavier than water, and the lightest, potassium. Thus the heaviest known body and the lightest solid are metals. The different degrees of fusibility of the metals were strikingly shown by means of which the size of a pound of the metal. The remainder of the lecture was devoted to the chief properties of the metals. Mr. Frankland will have fully illustrated—viz., colouration, tenacity, hardness, and brittleness, in which the metals differ from each other, and which have important use in the arts depends. Titanium and rhodium will scratch glass, while sodium may be cut with a knife. Tenacity was illustrated by means of iron wire, which Iron and steel possess enormous tenacity, which was shown by testing apparatus. The ductility of the metals was shown by the wire-drawing machine, and the malleability by the hammering of different kinds of metals. The opposite properties were exhibited, and the possibility expressed of the process being carried to an indefinite extent. Conductivity for heat and electricity. An example of the malleability and ductility of the metals, Dr. Frankland returned to some of the metals and by the action of heat, which acts as a hardener, and stated that, at the Industrial Exhibition at Brenlau, in 1863, an album of lead-iron was shown, which was so malleable that it could be cut with a penknife, a number inch of the leaf weighing only three-quarters of a grain. Most malleable metals are also ductile, and the ductility of platinum cannot be doubted, as a slightly ductile metal may be pressed into wire, as was shown in the case of sodium. Tasks of the metals were then described, and the lecturer concluded his discourse.

In the sixth lecture, on Tuesday last, Professor Frankland, M.D., Brookfield read Dr. delivered on Tuesday last, the 15th inst., was especially devoted to the phenomena of respiration, and was introduced to the physical properties of the atmosphere, its weight, elasticity, expansion by heat, &c., and then to its chemical composition, which was shown to be a mixture, and especially proved the importance of certain bodies generally found in air in very small quantities—namely, carbonic acid, water vapour, and ammonia—and explained how overlooking with remarks on the modification of the oxygen termed ozone, which possesses powerful oxidising properties, and is produced by the action of the electric spark on oxygen, and by the slow oxidation of phosphorus. The lecturer also explained certain carbonic acid, and especially organic matters; and it is the deleterious presence of these last which renders ventilation so imperatively necessary for healthy life. The chemical action of oxygen is especially important in its action upon venous blood, uniting it for re-circulation in the arteries. The oxygen, it was said, does not touch oxydate the blood, but to the carbon and hydrogen of the tissues, which it converts into water and carbonic acid. Time and space for the details of this proof, afforded by the quicksilver respiration of the action of the great laws of physics and chemistry in the living body. In conclusion, Professor Marshall reminded his audience of the close relation of the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms through the influence of light and heat. From the earth, air, and water, by a slow-living process, vegetables produce albumen, fats, and hydro-carbons, which, as food, pass into animals, and so to other animals, ultimately returning to their original mineral form.

No lectures will be delivered during Passion and Easter weeks.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE KING OF BAVARIA.

Maximilian (Joseph) II., King of Bavaria, Count Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Upper and Lower Bavaria, of Franconia, and Suabia, was the eldest son of Louis I., King of Bavaria, by his consort, Therese Charlotte Louise Frederica Amelie, daughter of Maximilian Joseph, Duke of Saxe-Altenburg. He was born Nov. 28, 1811, and was educated for the clerical calling, and subsequently at the University of Gottingen.

He travelled in Italy and Greece, where he resided for a time at Athens, and visited six years later, extending his tour over three years. He succeeded his father, Louis I., as Prince Royal in the Bavarian army in 1830, and was nominated Councillor of State. His father would have abstained from any interference in political matters, and, in fact, to have kept altogether aloof from affairs of State till 1848, when serious events called him to the throne. His father, King Lovis, who is still alive, at the age of seventy-seven, an accomplished patron of the arts and literature, and a munificent benefactor, had incurred much unpopularity in consequence of the State intrigues in which he had engaged the too-famous Lola Montez, whom he had created Countess de Lansfeld, and who had obtained great influence over him. Consequently the Commander-in-Chief of the army, Wrede, and the Minister, Abel, resigned office, and were banished, the people crying out, Louis, must go!" Many of his Bavarian subjects, resigned, March 20, 1848, his crown, in favour of his son, remaining himself the title of "King Louis of Bavaria," and, as the subject of this notice, was a liberal Prince. He opposed the ultra-party, and endeavoured, though in vain, to maintain the peace in his dominions. In 1849 He was ever ready to advocate the independence of his country. One memorable night he declared at the Council of State, "I will be no Emperor of Prussia, and simple in domestic life, unostentatious, affable, and kindly, he and all his family became universally popular in Munich. He walked about the walk and drive about freely; and without any show of dignity. He was so very fond of social coffee-drinking, that he had a coffee-house established in the Royal Garden. He visited, in January, 1857, Paris. Like his father, he was a patron of science and art, and he succeeded Munich the greatest modern architect of Germany. Liebig was made professor of chemistry; Schobl, professor of physiology, anatomy, and zoology at the Munich School of Medicine; and among other great men whom King Maximilian patronised may be named Pfeiffer, Carriere, and Gubel, and the illustrious Ranke. He was also a "true patriarch" of the 2nd Regiment of Austrian Cuirassiers, and of a regiment of Russian Lancers; chief of the 1st Regiment of Prussian Dragoons; Colonel of Westphalia. His Majesty married by proxy, at Berlin, Oct. 5, and personally at Munich, Oct. 12, 1842, the Princess Marie Frederica Augusta Wilhelmina Marie Hedwidge, daughter of the late Prince Frederic William Charles, uncle of the King of Prussia, by whom (who survives him) he leaves issue two sons, Louis Otho Frederic William, Prince Royal, heir to the throne, and Prince Otho William Leopold, a Lieutenant in the regiment of the Guard, born April 27, 1848. His son Otho died at Munich in infancy, and he is succeeded by his eldest son, now Louis II., King of Bavaria, who was born at Nymphenburg, Aug. 25, 1845. The funeral took place on the 13th inst., and was celebrated by Prince Otho of Bavaria, who was born in 1815; was elected King of Greece in 1832; married, in 1836, Princess Amelia, daughter of the Duke Augustus Grand Duke of Oldenburg; and was deformed in 1862. The sovereignty of Bavaria now devolves on his son, Louis II., who, as he became an electoral Prince at his majority in 1864, will be the twenty-fifth Elector of Bavaria. The Bavarian Royal Family has also been deprived of its chief by the death of Princess Adelgunde Therese Marie Josephine, daughter of the late Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria, who was born in 1823, and married, in 1842, Archduke Ferdinand, brother of the late Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, and a cousin of the King of Bavaria. She died at Vienna, Feb. 8, 1864, and was buried in the Imperial Vault of the Capuchin Church in that city.

SIR T. H. ROBERTS, BART.

Sir Thomas Hesketh Roberts, Baronet, of Roughtondown, in the county of Cork, J.P., and marked for Sheriff of that county in 1857, who died on the 1st inst., was born in Dublin, in Barlington-road, St. Stephen's-square, and was interred in the family vault at St. Peter's Church, Cork, being the eldest son of Sir Walter Roberts, Bart., by his wife, Catharine, daughter of Thomas Hesketh, Esq., of Windsor House, Rochdale. He was born Nov. 1, 1804, and was educated at Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1827. He succeeded to the baronetcy on the death of his father, Dec. 31, 1833. He married, first, Oct. 30, 1834, Miss Sandes, second daughter of John Maitland, Esq., of Reden, Dumfriesshire, by whom (who died Oct. 3, 1835) he had issue one son, Rondal Rowland, his successor. Sir Thomas married, secondly, June 15, 1841, Anne Hamilton, daughter of William Langdon, Esq., R.N., of Inwood Lodge, Somersetshire, by whom he had seven sons (Thomas, born 1843, and Walworth Hesketh, born 1855) and two daughters (Florence Emily and Anne Catherine).

Rowland Roberts, who succeeds to the title, was born in 1835, and is the 3rd Bart. He married, in 1858, Ellen Cecil Colthurst, daughter of the Rev. Benjamin Colthurst, Rector of Templemartin, county Cork, and has issue Rondal Thomas, born 1859, and Walworth Hesketh, born 1861.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL THOMAS ROBERT SWINBURNE, F.R.S.

This gallant officer, who was in his sixty-eighth year, died at his residence, Capheaton, Northumberland, on the 1st inst. He was the 2nd son of Sir John, the 1st and present Baronet, by his marriage with Dorothy, only child of the late Sir Thomas Swinburne, Bart., of Capheaton, Northumberland, and the eldest son of the late Thomas Swinburne, Esq., of Pontop Hall, in the county of Durham (who died in 1805), and was born in 1796. He entered the Army on the 24th of June, 1813, and served as a subaltern with the 1st Guards in Holland, Belgium, and France during the campaigns in the Peninsula and South of France. He was also in the memorable campaign of 1815, and was present at the battles of Quatre Bras and Waterloo, the storming of Peronne (where he commanded the storming party), and capture of the city of Cambray, during the army of occupation in the north of France. He attained his captaincy in 1816, and retired from the Army in 1821. In 1826 he was appointed to a staff situation in the Army, but on exchanging into the 1st Guards he was restored to the grade of Lieutenant-General in 1863. Lieutenant-General Swinburne, who resided in the family mansion in Portland-place, on the north side of Northumberland, and the eldest son of the late Thomas Swinburne, Esq., of Pontop Hall, in the county of Durham (who died in 1805),

NEW MUSIC.

REMINISCENCES OF SHAKESPEARE, for the Pianoforte. By C. W. GLOVER.
No. 1. THE MERRY WIVES.
2. ROMEO AND JULIET.
3. HAMLET.
4. MACBETH.
With highly finished Chromolithographs. Price 3s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE AVON QUADRILLE, by F. WALLERSTEIN, on the most favourite Airs introduced in Shakespeare's Plays. Illustrated with Chromolithographs, by Percival Leigh. Price 4s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FOR THE DRAWING-ROOM.
NEWEST AND MOST COMIC SONGS.
"The happy little man." Sung by W. Randall ... ... 2s. 0d.
"Jemmy Jessamy's Courtship." Sung by Miss Leoni Neville ... 2s. 0d.
"Just a little bit of Nothing." Written by F. C. Burnand. Composed by J. L. Hatton ... ... 2s. 6d.
Illustrated with highly comical Chromolithographs.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS OF
THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS.
Matthew would somfort me ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Mary Blane ... ... 2s. 6d.
Ring de Banjo ... ... 2s. 6d.
Weeping, sad and lonely ... ... 2s. 6d.
Brother Sambo and Sister Phebe ... ... 2s. 6d.
Brother Sambo's Address to the people ... ... 2s. 6d.
Duplicate ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS BY POPULAR COMPOSERS.
"Spring." Virginia Gabriel ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
"When Summer is Bright." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh, spare me, Boy at Sea!" Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Sweet Spring." Miss Lindsay ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Spring, sweet Spring." Walworth ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Whose Night's Mare." H. W. Goodban ... ... 2s. 6d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S OTELLO (Prize and Reversed). Transcription for the Piano, of moderate difficulty, on the favourite Airs. Price 4s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S LE NOZZE DI FIGARO and DON GIOVANNI. Transcriptions for the Piano. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S QUI LA VOCE. Transcription (facile) of the favourite Cavatina from "I Puritani." Price 4s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Third Edition. With Portrait and Autograph. Price 2s.
IT THE HOUR.
LEAH'S SONG.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S LA FAVORITA.—A remarkably successful and brilliant piece on the best melodies in Donizetti's beautiful opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S I PURITANI.—A new and most admirable piece on airs from the splendid opera of Bellini. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA SONNAMBULA.—An elegant, effective, and most successful piece on Bellini's melodious and ever attractive opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A beautiful and piquante melody, treated with remarkable originality and effect. Price 3s. Just published.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. A vigorous, dashing, and thoroughly effective piece, in the form of the Tarantella. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANTASIA. One of the most recent and successful pieces by the unrivalled and favourite pianoforte composer. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE COEUR. A Polka by the Composer of the "Reminiscences of Norma," immense applause. "A melodious, elegant, and charming composition."—See ATHENÆUM and PARIS, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. 3 Pensées Rêvées. One of the most popular and most permanently successful pieces ever written. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season." Illustrated London News. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song, sung by Mdlle. Parepa at the Crystal Palace and other Concerts, with enormous success. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

Just published,
MY HEART IS EVER THINE. New Song. Words and Music by J. W. DAVISON. Price 2s. 6d.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

ROBERT COCKS AND CO.'S LIST OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.
THE ADORATION. The Most Sacred Melody ever Composed. By J. BLOCKLEY. Price 3s.
"Mr. Blockley's 'Adoration' is a beautiful melody."—Vide Times, May 30, 1863

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Nos. 1251, 1252.—vol. xliv. SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1864. WITH TWO COLOURED PICTURES AND LARGE VIEW OF GLASGOW | TENPENCE

EASTER.

Easter is back again. Ice-ribbed Winter has moved off at last, after a long and dreary reign. The stern old monarch seemed loth to depart, and, as if determined to dispute the ground with his successor, has sent back his body guard of frost and snow again and again. Whilst he lingered, timid and bashful have been the advances of young Spring. We all cheered ourselves, however, with the confident expectation that the grateful change would come in due time. In the darkest, bleakest, stormiest days of winter, when our eyes were all but blinded by driving wind, and when we could scarcely keep them sufficiently open to see what was going on around us, even then—when every word we spoke went forth tremulously, half fearful of being bitten asunder by chattering teeth—we all knew well enough that the days would gradually lengthen, that the sun would get higher in the heavens, and that chaps would disappear from the lips, leaving us at full liberty to laugh without screwing them up into unnatural puckers lest tears should start into our eyes. And now gentle Spring is with us once more. True, her port is hesitating. Her footsteps seem as often backwards as forwards. The earliest smile upon her fresh and blooming countenance is ever and anon overshadowed, as the brilliancy of morning is not unfrequently chequered by rising mists. But we are leaving behind us the sternest quarter of the year. The meadows will presently don their new clothes and deck themselves with their brightest ornaments. The skies, as though touched with the tenderer emotions, will laugh and weep by turns. The trees will fling their many-hued mantles over their graceful forms, as who should say, "Let us do grateful homage to the season." And among men many a pale invalid, like a deputation from the realms of sickness, will venture forth from his chamber, his winter's prison, and sob and smile his heartiest greetings of reappearing spring.

Easter is back again. Its return is earlier than usual; but, early or late, it is a pleasant holiday. We say nothing here of its ecclesiastical purport, nor of the great religious truths of which all Christendom regards it as the symbol. This is not the place for descanting on such solemn themes. But we take leave to rejoice with the millions of our hard-working fellow-men to whom Easter gives the first, and, in too many cases, we fear, the only opportunity in the course of the year for snatching a brief and hurried interview with Nature. It does us good to see them swarming, in family groups, over every open spot within reach of them by walk or rail, breathing the fresh air, looking up into the unsullied skies, holding their picnics under the waving trees, and gathering from every hedgeside little bouquets of wild flowers to serve as mementoes of their trip into the country. For their sakes, more than for our own, we pray for fine weather during Easter. Sunny and genial days at this season, what a blessing they are to toil-worn labourers out for a too brief holiday! May that blessing be theirs this year, and so chase away from their minds the last traces left there of the miseries of a more than usually trying winter!

Easter is the first stage in the year's progress from which we are in the habit of looking back to its starting-point, and comparing actual events with early anticipations. The quarter has been one of serious anxiety gradually brightening off into hope. There has been war—war wantonly undertaken, cruelly prosecuted, barren of glory—but as yet it has been localised. That any permanent good will come of it that might not more easily have been obtained without it, nobody believes. But this incidental advantage has resulted from it—that we have the evidence of facts to convince us that the European system is not in quite such a tottering state as many people feared It was generally imagined that the firing, in anger, of the first cannon by either of the great Powers, would dangerously test the stability of the political edifice constructed with so much care in 1815. It has not proved so. The circumstances of the times have bound over the peace, and perhaps the most irritable nations to keep the peace. Under extreme provocation to snatch up arms, extraordinary forbearance has been exhibited. Nothing inflames the blood of the generous more easily than to witness the maltreatment of the weak by the strong; yet, although Europe has seen and felt humiliated by that spectacle, no strong arm has been raised to prevent it. There have been protests, but no forcible interference. The past has filled us with indignation, but the future is not without promise. The two German Powers, left uninterrupted to pursue their inglorious work, begin to be ashamed of the position into which they have rushed. Opposition would have maddened them. Left to themselves, they are impelled to reflection, and they now show signs of some disposition to listen to calmer counsels and to extricate themselves with as little loss of character as possible from the dragon in which their own folly has involved them.

THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD: SEARCHING FOR THE DEAD IN THE CELLAR OF A RUINED HOUSE AT NEEPSEND.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 310.

The year, hitherto, has not been wholly propitious to England, but, looking back from the threshold of Easter, we may say that light has perpetually succeeded gloom during the interval. The birth of a Prince gladdened its earlier days; terrible local calamity has thrown a shade over its later ones. But, on the whole, this country has been tranquil and, we trust, thriving. The cotton distress, the worst of our troubles, is yielding to time and enterprise. Fears of war are passing away. The revenue loses none of its wonted elasticity. Trade is tolerably active. Parliament is quiet and usefully employed; content to let even its ablest members with an occasional exception squabble. Agricultural prospects are cheerful. There seems an obvious tendency to better days. Of course the promise may be at any moment broken. Furious tempests may yet overtake us, whelming all under the waves. But we have reached Easter, and no such probability discloses itself. We are not bound to anticipate evil where there is no appearance of it. We should not be wise to do so. Let us go to our holidays with light spirits and grateful hearts. We have no especial reason to be dissatisfied with the past; we see no ground of fear in the future. We may, therefore, accept the present with free thankfulness, although not without expectation which it brings without suffering it to be clouded by either reminiscences or apprehensions.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

A grand family dinner took place at the Tuileries on Thursday se'nnight, on the occasion of the anniversary of the Prince Imperial's eighth birthday. During the afternoon the young Prince was present at the naval school at Brest, who had come to Paris, assembled to the number of 500 in the Galerie de Diane, and presented to him by the collation. Their Majesties were present at this fête. All the theatres were illuminated in the evening in honour of the young anniversary.

The Moniteur of Monday refers to a report that a new plot against the life of the Emperor had been discovered. The report, it states, is totally devoid of foundation.

The Bank of France commenced on Monday the issue of its new notes of 500 each.

The tomb of Joseph, the eldest brother of Napoleon I., King of Spain, has just been completed at the cemetery of Montmartre, to the right of the Emperor's tomb. The ex-King's remains will shortly be transferred to the new tomb from the vault in which they were deposited in 1862, when brought from Florence, where King Joseph died, in 1844.

There has been a debate in the Senate on a petition for laying an interdict on anti-religious publications. M. Langlais, the Government Commissioner, censured certain publications, but recommended that the Chamber should adopt the proposal of the Committee, to pass to the order of the day. This was carried by a majority of a large majority.

The Opposition have gained another triumph in Paris. In the first circumscription, on Monday, M. Carnot, the Opposition candidate, obtained 11,554, M. Picard 10,722, and M. Ollivier 10,719 votes. As Carnot being consequently elected. In the fifth circumscription M. Garnier Pagès, the Opposition candidate, was elected with 18,139 votes, M. Levy obtaining 8381, M. Bac 330, and M. Thalon 393 votes.

The funeral of Admiral Du Petit Thouars, a name which once played so large a part in the relations between France and Hayti, took place on Sunday at the Madeleine. By the expressed wish of the deceased, his remains are to be sent to Hayti, his native land, and his obsequies were attended only by a large concourse of friends in plain clothes.

A subscription is being raised at Paris for the sufferers by the Sheffield catastrophe, and sent to the office of the Journal de l'English Charity Ball," at the Grand Hotel.

A grand competition of Orphéonists is to take place at Lyons on the 22nd of May. More than 200 societies have already intimated their intention to be present.

The Paris papers assert that a Mexican loan for 200 millions of francs has been credited with a London banker.

According to intelligence from Mexico to the 20th ult., the Franco-Mexican troops were advancing in the province of Zacatecas. The Juarist guerillas are everywhere being put to flight.

ITALY.

The bill for equalising the land tax has passed the Chamber of Deputies by a large majority.

The Senate has passed the bill for the establishment of a Bank of Italy.

From a report presented to the Italian Parliament, it appears that the Italian fleet is composed of 14 ironclad steamers, 12 unarmed steamers, and 18 sailing-vessels, carrying an aggregate of 1324 guns and 21,300 men.

On Monday morning Garibaldi and eight other gentlemen, among whom were his son, Ricciotti and Menotti, embarked at Cuprera, on board the steamer Valetta, with the intention of coming to England.

The Pope is reported to be somewhat better. An operation has been performed which has greatly relieved him, and he subsequently received the British Ambassador, with whom he was able to have a long conversation.

Two shocks of earthquake were felt at Modena on the 14th inst., and one was felt on the same day at Bologna, where it lasted two seconds, its direction being from north to south. At Vergato, near Bologna, the shock caused considerable damage. Several houses were thrown down, and a piece of entablature fell from the church steeple.

AUSTRIA.

The contract of marriage between the Archduke Joseph of Austria and the Princess Clotilde of Saxe Coburg Gotha has been signed at the palace of the Prince of Lichtenstein, Grand Master to the Emperor of Austria.

Advices from Venetia state that the Emperor of Austria was expected there. His Majesty was to hold a review at Verona on the 24th inst., after which he would proceed to Miramar, to be present at the departure of the Archduke Maximilian for Mexico. Troops continue to arrive in Venetia, especially cavalry. Armaments continue, particularly in Roegier and Palermo. A new military route is being constructed between Venice and Solerno.

The Page states that Austria is about to reinforce the principal garrisons in Hungary. Set forth, some evenings ago, a popular demonstration of a revolutionary character is described as having taken place.

GREECE.

News from Athens states that the Ministry had resigned, in consequence of the popular demonstrations. The following had been formed, composed as follows:—M. Zaimis, President of the Council and Minister for Foreign Affairs; Kalergis, Minister of Finance; Diligiannis, Minister of Public Instruction; Deligiargis, Minister of Justice; Cristides, Minister of the Interior; Cosmoss, Minister of War.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

A despatch from Vienna, dated the 23rd inst., states that the conference proposed by England, without detailed bases or armistice, has been accepted by Austria and Prussia. The territorial integrity of the Danish monarchy under the present dynasty will be maintained. The conference will meet in London.

The statement that the Danish Cabinet has assented to a conference, on the basis of the integrity of the Danish monarchy, has been declared "substantially correct" by the Berlingske Tidende, the semi-official organ of Copenhagen. The same journal declares, however, that the Danish Government did not and could not accede to any proposal for a conference which involved either the surrender of Düppel or a suspension of hostilities.

The Prussians are pushing the siege of Düppel very vigorously. On Wednesday week they opened a very heavy fire on the Danish intrenchments, which was successfully replied to by the Danes, who succeeded in silencing two of the Prussian batteries. An evening movement took place on the following day along the whole line of the Düppel works. Early in the morning the Danes discovered that the Prussian right wing Later in the day large masses of Prussians attacked the Danish centre and left wing. The fight which now ensued was violent fire was opened upon the left wing from the Bougar batteries. One Danish intrenchment was carried by the Prussians. The Danish works took an active part in the engagement, which lasted until the evening. The Prussians subsequently retired near Arnkenberg and the village of Düppel, the later being taken and held by the Germans, after a gallant resistance. Several villages were burned. The Prussian batteries did not fire during the night. The Danish works on the Danish works was not inconsiderable, including a Colonel killed and seventy men wounded. The Prussian loss was also considerable. Next day the Prussians obtained a few hours' armistice for the burial of their dead. The bombardment was resumed, and the Danish fire likewise commenced. It continued on Sunday.

The Times special correspondent with the allied armies before Düppel writes from Broacker on the 11th inst., as follows :—

I am writing this letter in the midst of the peace and amid the detestable noise of the most destructive artillery. The Prussians and the Danes—not only men, but guns—are at it hammer and tongs. During Mr. Lindell's very spirited and remarkably accurate sketches of some of the Danish positions, published with the original form, while others I saw reproduced in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, I was under the impression that the Danes were committing prodigious popularity in the Prussian and Austrian armies in Schleswig, and elsewhere, throughout Germany, and Germany, for the last seven or for another, takes strong interest in this war. At Hadersleben, where both head-quarters were lately established, and General Gablenz—on the arrival of the Brigitta Illustrata used to cause quite a sensation in the crowded saloon-cabin of the ship. Personally, then most popular and enjoying a greater demand upon its cellar not larder than had probably ever been the case since the first Sesostris.

In Jutland also there has been some more fighting. On Saturday a reconnoitring party of Danes, under Frederica, Major Prince, Prince Albrecht, and the Prince of Hohenzollern were on the field. The Prussians, who had been reinforced, attempted to drive them into the fortress. During the reconnaissance sites were selected by the allies for the erection of batteries. The Danes kept up a fire by the Danes from the fortress and gun-boats. Next day the bombardment was recommenced on the part of the allies, and the Danes replied in all directions. It was kept up all Sunday night, and on Monday. The town regarded the Prussian fortress according to Prussian accounts, derived from deserters, the garrison lost 200 men killed and wounded on Sunday. The Crown Prince, Prince Albrecht, and the Prince of Hohenzollern were present at the engagement.

The King and the Minister of War left Copenhagen for the army on Tuesday.

A naval engagement took place yesterday week in the Baltic, near the Island of Rügen, between the Danish corvette Hejmdal, the Prussian men-of-war, with some gun-boats. The Prussian version of the affair characterises it as a victory gained by the Prussians, as a result ing the "withdrawal" of the Prussian ships. The withdrawing Prussian vessels were not pursued, but succeeded in gaining shelter.

The Danish brig Alf, 142 tons burden, Captain M. Andersen, has been captured off the Dandsenes, while lying at anchor under the Island of Teneske, by the Austrian gun-boat Velebich, which is usually stationed in the Quarnero.

The Danish Government has ordered the release of Hanoverian ships under sequestration.

AMERICA.

President Lincoln has presented General Grant with the commission of lieutenant-General in presence of the whole Cabinet. Grant, after visiting the President, left Telomac, returned, with Meade, to Washington, and left immediately for Culpepper. It is said that Mr. Lincoln asserts that Grant has recommended the concentration of forces for the capture of Richmond.

Rumours of General Meade's removal from command are again current. Mr. Washburne, M.C., has returned from Culpepper, and Doubleday assert that Meade issued an order for a retreat after the first day's fighting at the Wilderness. Meade's friends desire point blank in a letter to Reverdy Johnson, admitting, however, that he had brought the army back, but that it was in such a position where he could more advantageously accept battle, and dwelling with pathos upon the fact that he had done all he could not be a retreat which was to take place without a fight.

There is no more real importance from the army of the Potomac. A reconnaissance on the 19th by Ely's Ford discovered very few Confederates to the north of the Rapidan.

Buffalo, in Virginia, has been captured by Butler's forces.

The Confederates continue to make demonstrations against Suffolk and Portsmouth, but are repulsed. The Federal cavalry and two coloured regiments.

General Sherman's return to Vicksburg is confirmed. He penetrated thirty-five miles beyond Meridian, destroying all railroads. His loss was only 200 men. Polk's force.

General Johnston was pressing the Federal lines in Tennessee. The Federals have concentrated at Chattanooga. Wheeler's Confederate cavalry hold Bull's Gap, fifty-six miles from Knoxville. His army is at Greenville.

The Federals occupy Morristown, forty-two miles from Knoxville. Gen. Morgan, at Kilpatrick's cavalry raid on Richmond was completely. Upon the person of Colonel Dahlgren, who was shot and killed, papers were found informing the troops that their mission was to burn Richmond and release the Federal prisoners, and not to allow Jefferson Davis to escape. The Richmond press is strongly incensed, and urges that the severest retaliation be exercised upon the prisoners of Kilpatrick's command. The Northern press declares that the conduct to have been in accordance with instructions.

Admiral Farragut has been bombarding Fort Powell, one of the defences of Mobile.

It is reported that 20,000 Confederates are advancing from Texas towards Western Louisiana. Active dispositions are being made by the Federals to check this movement. The Federals are also sending reinforcements to hold Jacksonville, Florida, but have abandoned further expeditions into the interior.

The New York Tribune's correspondent reports that the blockade-running at Charleston has been resumed, two or three steam ers entering weekly.

Charges and specifications have been filed by Secretary Welles against Admiral Wilkes for disobedience of orders in taking and keeping the Vanderbilt for his flag-ship, when he knew that she was ordered on special service in South America ; in refusing to send the Oneida and Cuyler to Farragut ; for insubordination in the case of the Vanderbilt to Lagunyra when he should have remained about the bay superior officer in writing an insubordinate and saucy letter to Secretary Welles ; for disobedience of the naval regulations forbidding publication of official communications in giving a New York paper a copy of the above letter, and procuring it to be published there ; and conduct unbecoming an officer in refusing to tell the Department how did he obtain it.

The House of Representatives has passed the bill authorising Mr. Chase to coin fractional currency, which is now in the public debt, but not to sell gold.

The Tennessee had signed the whisky bill. It imposes a tax of sixty cents per gallon on all domestic-manufactured spirits, and a charge of 2 on all foreign imported spirits on hand.

A bill had been introduced in the House of Representatives to secure to persons in the military or naval services of the United States absent from their residence the right to vote in their respective congressional districts. It proposes to give to all persons who have been discharged from the military or naval service on account of wounds contracted therein eighty acres or a less quantity of the unappropriated lands, to commissioners to be appointed by the Homestead Act. The bill was ordered to be printed.

In Congress Mr. Conkling yesterday has advocated the claims of Secretary Chase for presidential nomination, stating his platform to be emancipation, confiscation, and the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine.

Secretary Chase has written a letter urging that his name should not be considered in connection with the presidency.

From cot's friends are more active in advancing his claims for the presidency.

The Republican ticket has been elected by a large majority in New Hampshire.

The majority in New York have voted in favour of permitting soldiers and sailors to vote.

The Democratic party have carried their elections in New Hampshire by re-electing the present Governor, Joseph A. Gilmore, by a majority of about 5000.

A severe earthquake was experienced at San Francisco on the morning of the 8th inst.

The gold diggings in Colorado and Idaho territories are proving to be very rich. A city is rising rapidly in California. In both territories an immense amount of gold has accumulated in the hands of a few and others, but the insecurity of communication with the States prevents the miners from realising. Provisions, tools, and clothing are very dear.

The Southern Confederacy has dispatched an Envoy for the purpose of negotiating a treaty of mutual amity and recognition with the city of Washington.

It is stated that some ladies in the Southern Confederacy are sending their gold plate to the mint to be coined for their country, "to relieve the pressure on the currency."

The Federal fleet have captured two Federal transports in Chesapeake Bay.

The Bahamian has broken out, and is a total loss.

The City of New York, New Scotian, and Victoria have arrived out.

The Judge of the Court of Appeal, at St. John's, has delivered judgment releasing the Chesapeake pirates.

The steamer Donegal has arrived at Havannah with 1000 bales of cotton.

INDIA.

Sir John Lawrence has been suffering from indisposition. The Governor-General gave his first public bail on the 15th of February, at Peshawur, in honour of the Commander-in-Chief. The bail given great offence to the native community.

The Rajah of Coorg has at last rendered his resignation, which has been accepted, and that Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., is to succeed him. The Rajah's pension is to be 2000 rupees.

General Sir Neville Chamberlain has been compelled, by the state of his health, to give up the Madras command.

The cotton crop of Western India will, it is feared, be short this year.

The peasantry of Portuguese Goa have risen in rebellion, in consequence, it is said, of the new taxes imposed on American planters, to whom the Government has lately leased immense tracts of land.

The north-eastern branch of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway is blocked up, its single line and small rolling stock being unequal to the traffic which has suddenly accumulated upon it.

Mr. Maine has introduced in the Viceroy's Legislative Council a bill providing for the better administration of justice among the aboriginal of the magistrate of his district.

Lawlessness prevails in Rajpootana. Detachments of cavalry have been stationed along the roads to protect travellers from the robbers.

General Sir G. St. P. Lawrence is on his way home. Colonel Elliott proceeds from Agra to succeed him in the command of the Jat Temple goes back to the central provinces as Chief Commissioner.

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has passed a resolution in favour of a subsidiary gold currency for India.

An important decision has been given in the Small Cause Court of Bombay respecting the jurisdiction of the Recorder's Court. It is by the jurisdiction of British Courts, even when they are residing in British territory.

A Turf Club of Western India has been formed in Bombay.

The Bombay Government has given up the anchorage ground of the extinct Indian navy to the Peninsular and Oriental Company, which is now constructing docks at Bombay for the repair of their ship the mails.

A public subscription has been raised to erect a statue to the Hon. Mr. Juggonath Sunkersett in Bombay.

CANADA.

The Baroness Dejean, a lady who has devoted her life to works of charity, has left the whole of her property, the value of her property, to the Hôtel Dieu, the Bureau de Bienfaisance, the Orphan Asylums, and the Asylum for Incurables at Montreal. The Baroness Dejean has been divided between the town of La Pleche, Le Mans, and the collective of the Sarthe, in the department of the Sarthe.

A public meeting has been held at the Sanlhan, at Frankfort, to take the necessary steps for celebrating the 300th anniversary of Shakspere's birthday. Dr. Hamburger, president of the English circle, presided ; and it was resolved to celebrate the day in a manner appropriate manner. By a resolution of the meeting, Sir Alexander Malet the Britannic Majesty's Minister to the Germanic Confederation, and Mr. Murray Consul-General of the United States at Frankfort were made honorary presidents of the committee.

A letter from Washington, dated the 5th ult., says :—The British officer has taken on himself the mission of studying the devitation, according to distance of the effects of the Confederate shells. He has had a telescope sent, provided with a glass, and makes a memorandum of his observations. He has by letter communicated the result of his observations to the effect that out at the distance of about 600 metres. The soldiers, instinctively obedient to military discipline, respected the prohibition, and their presence served to attempt to lodge a ball in the officer's body. The latter replied at the upper part of the body, and the soldiers, who had not yet received any instructions, began to fire at him. He, however, was not touched, but was able to watch his movements. "That is all right," said he; "the muzzle is just on a line with my head." He added that he had no fear of being hit, but he was quietly wrote down, "At the distance of about 800 yards the deviation of a ball from a right angle is about 2 yards."

A Munich journal states that the private property of the late King of Bavaria amounts to the sum of upwards of £150,000, and that his Majesty's will specifies that the whole of this property is to be devoted to those benevolent purposes which the deceased monarch had much at heart during the life of the King formed his chief care. One million will be devoted to the completion, establishment, and endowment of the Maximilien Orphan Institute for the children of servants of the State ; a similar sum will be devoted towards the Maximilianeum in their preservation ; and, finally, a sufficient sum will be invested in order that the scientific undertakings—and especially those relating to history—which were set on foot by his Majesty may be carried out, and that the pensions conferred by him on certain artists, poets, and learned men may be continued. By a codicil to the will, his Majesty orders that a mausoleum shall be erected for himself and his consort behind the Theatin Church, in the Theatin Street, in the Royal residence town of Munich, and not in the vault. The plan for the mausoleum and the sum to be expended are also attached to the will. The tomb will be similar to that of Frederick William III. of Prussia and Queen Louise at Charlottenburg.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

A choral union has just been established at Tiverton, Devon, and fifteen choirs have enrolled themselves as members.

The Very Rev. John West, D.D., was installed at Dublin on Thursday week as Dean of St. Patrick's.

The confirmation of Dr. Harold Browne to the bishopric of Ely took place on Saturday in the parish church of St. Mary-le-Bow, Cheapside. The consecration will take place in Westminster Abbey on Easter Tuesday.

The Rev. Alexander J. D. D'Orsey, B.D., English Lecturer at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has been appointed by the council of King's College, London, to the Professorship lately filled by Professor Brasse.

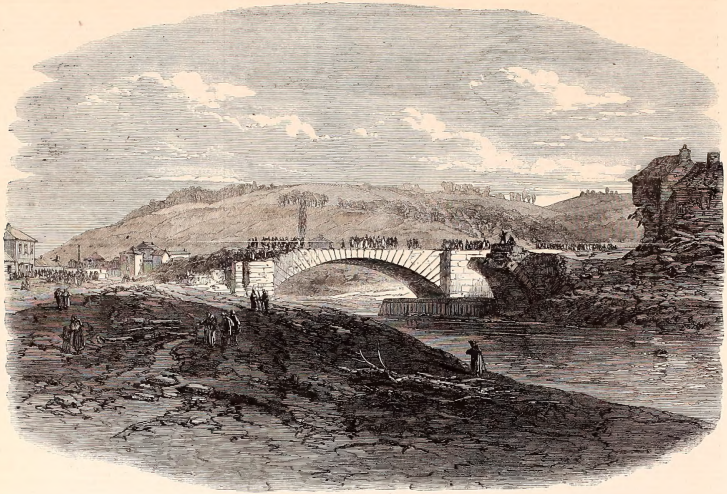
The clergy of the rural deanery of Penrith, Cornwall, have petitioned the Lords of the Committee of Council on Education to dissolve the See of Cornwall.

The old parish church at Foothill Gifford, Wiltshire, in the Vale of Avon, Salisbury, near the magnificent abbey there, is about to be taken down and rebuilt. The Marquis of Westminster has contributed the entire cost of the work, which is estimated to exceed £3,000 and £4,000.

We understand that the fourth annual meeting of the parish choirs of Lent and the sermons to children will be held in the cathedral Christ Church, on Tuesday, April 9. Divine service will commence at eleven and half-past.

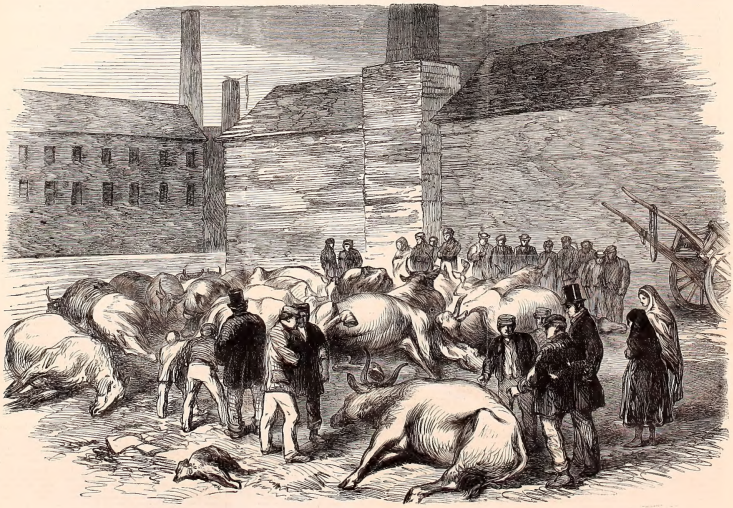
The Bishop of London proceeded to Windsor on Saturday last, to endeavour to heal the unhappy commotion, and remained all night. His Lordship preached in the chapel of the castle on Sunday, and in the evening had the honour of dining with her Majesty and the King of the Belgians.

On Thursday week a mission was inaugurated by the opening of a school-chapel, and the erection of a cross in the cemetery in the centre of the district of Bethnal-green, in the populous district of Bethnal-green, and will be preached by the Lord Bishop of Oxford. The sermon at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, at eleven o'clock, will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Goodenough, as Dean of her Majesty's Chapels Royal; and the sermon at the three o'clock service at Whitehall will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Jelf, Canon of Christ Church, Ordinary to the Queen. The sermon under the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, in the service will be preached by the Rev. Dr. Barry, Principal of King's College.



The Archbishop of Canterbury has addressed a pastoral letter to the clergy of his diocese, in which he calls attention to the late decision of the Privy Council. It will be remembered that he dissented from the judgment of the majority in the case of Gorham v. the Bishop of Exeter, and he now states that while he would not undertake to declare inspiration, he accepted the testimony of the Articles, which declare that "Holy Scripture is sufficient to contain all things necessary to salvation." It is not, he writes, "and therefore it is not necessary to be received." He then proceeds to the exercise of discipline in the congregation. As to his acquiescence in the late views on the doctrine of future punishment, he says that he cannot find in Scripture any thing that the Church teaches the eternity both of reward and punishment, but that from the nature of the case the latter is not equal in duration to the former. The great formerly made towards restoring the church at Bodmin, near Exeter, by the late Rev. Mr. Hawker, vicar of the parish, for the reception of the relics of Cornish saints, has been seriously interrupted. The church is now undergoing a thorough restoration. The society likewise accepted the trust of a sum fund for the erection of a new church in Bodmin-moor district. The society have made during the year now expiring grants to the amount of £4,013 towards the erection of churches in populous districts destitute of sites, and the re-arging and restoring of eighty-five; the income from all sources is £9,200. The total amount of grants since 1837 is £72,000.

On Thursday week was issued, in four bulky bluebooks, the report, with minutes of evidence, of her Majesty's Commissioners appointed to inquire into the revenues and management of certain colleges and schools, and the studies pursued and instruction given therein. The Commissioners were the Earl of Clarendon, the Earl of Devon, Lord Lyttelton, the Hon. E. Twisleton, Sir Stafford Northcote, Sir Roundell Palmer, and the Rev. C. Vaughan. The schools reported on are Rugby, Shrewsbury, Winchester, Harrow, Charterhouse, Westminster, Merchant Taylors', St. Paul's, and Eton. The Commissioners held 127 meetings—and examined 130 witnesses; and they also personally examined each of the nine schools. The report is very full and elaborately, and recommendations relating to each are made—but, as we have before stated, they are not unanimous. The recommendations are:—1, those which relate to the revenues of the schools; 2, those relating to the government of the schools; 3, those relating to the rights of foundation; 4, those relating to the endowment of the schools, subordinate schools, and exhibitions at the University; 6, those relating to the management of the schools, including the appointment, removal, and payment of the masters; 7, those on system of admission; the regulations with respect to the board and lodging of the boys, the hours of charge, and the general discipline of the schools; 8, those relating to the course of instruction.



PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. B. Glennie to be Archdeacon of Brisbane. Rev. E. P. Bridges to be Chancellor of Salisbury Cathedral. Rev. Henry Jones, M.A., Rector of Llanvair Talhaiarn, to be Registrar; Rev. T. E. Chetwynd to Packington; Rev. W. B. Cockser to Wadenhall, Suffolk; Rev. Joseph Hall, Newington, Surrey, to be Vicar of Simpson to Stretton, Rutland. Vacancies: Rev. J. Chalmers to Abbotsinch, Renfrew; Rev. T. Hill to Lower Gornal, Staffordshire; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan Chapel, Bath; Rev. J. E. Herring, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to St. James's, Near Dover; Rev. Mr. Hutchinson to Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. J. F. Holmes to Bishop's Waltham, Hants; Rev. Mr. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. J. Worthy to St. Gregory, Norwich; Rev. Thomas to Pollington, Yorkshire; Rev. Mr. Beaumont to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. W. C. Mursel to High Legh, Cheshire; Rev. H. F. Welch to Olney, Shrewsbury. Curacies: Rev. F. J. Arnold to Bishop's Tawton, Devon; Rev. St. Mark's, Cheetham-hill, Manchester; Rev. J. Greenwood to Ecton Junction; Rev. H. H. Hughes to Ditteston and Glascoed; Rev. J. Hughes to St. Martin's, Birmingham; Rev. W. A. Newman to St. Martin with St. Paul, Canterbury; Rev. J. Hall to Newington, Surrey; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan, to St. Saviour, York. Rev. D. Denton, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cathedral Church of Christ, Nelson, New Zealand; Rev. Mr. Hutchinson to Wellington, New Zealand; Rev. A. Knell, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cure of Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. Mr. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. Mr. Thomas to Pollington, Yorkshire; Rev. Mr. Beaumont to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. J. Worthy to St. Gregory, Norwich; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan Chapel, Bath; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. W. C. Mursel to High Legh, Cheshire; Rev. H. F. Welch to Olney, Shrewsbury. Lectureships: Rev. F. J. Arnold to St. Mary's, Bishop's Tawton; St. Mark's, Cheetham-hill, Manchester; Rev. J. Greenwood to Ecton Junction; Rev. H. H. Hughes to Ditteston and Glascoed; Rev. J. Hughes to St. Martin's, Birmingham; Rev. W. A. Newman to St. Martin with St. Paul, Canterbury; Rev. J. Hall to Newington, Surrey; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan, to St. Saviour, York. Rev. D. Denton, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cathedral Church of Christ, Nelson, New Zealand; Rev. Mr. Hutchinson to Wellington, New Zealand; Rev. A. Knell, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cure of Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand. Rev. Mr. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. Mr. Thomas to Pollington, Yorkshire; Rev. Mr. Beaumont to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. J. Worthy to St. Gregory, Norwich; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan Chapel, Bath; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. W. C. Mursel to High Legh, Cheshire; Rev. H. F. Welch to Olney, Shrewsbury. Curacies: Rev. F. J. Arnold to Bishop's Tawton, Devon; Rev. St. Mark's, Cheetham-hill, Manchester; Rev. J. Greenwood to Ecton Junction; Rev. H. H. Hughes to Ditteston and Glascoed; Rev. J. Hughes to St. Martin's, Birmingham; Rev. W. A. Newman to St. Martin with St. Paul, Canterbury; Rev. J. Hall to Newington, Surrey; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan, to St. Saviour, York. Rev. D. Denton, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cathedral Church of Christ, Nelson, New Zealand; Rev. Mr. Hutchinson to Wellington, New Zealand; Rev. A. Knell, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cure of Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand. Rev. Mr. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. Mr. Thomas to Pollington, Yorkshire; Rev. Mr. Beaumont to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. J. Worthy to St. Gregory, Norwich; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan Chapel, Bath; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. W. C. Mursel to High Legh, Cheshire; Rev. H. F. Welch to Olney, Shrewsbury. Lectureships: Rev. F. J. Arnold to Bishop's Tawton, Devon; Rev. St. Mark's, Cheetham-hill, Manchester; Rev. J. Greenwood to Ecton Junction; Rev. H. H. Hughes to Ditteston and Glascoed; Rev. J. Hughes to St. Martin's, Birmingham; Rev. W. A. Newman to St. Martin with St. Paul, Canterbury; Rev. J. Hall to Newington, Surrey; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan, to St. Saviour, York. Rev. D. Denton, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cathedral Church of Christ, Nelson, New Zealand; Rev. Mr. Hutchinson to Wellington, New Zealand; Rev. A. Knell, St. Augustine's, Canterbury, to the Cure of Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand. Rev. Mr. Hall to Ashton-under-Lyne; Rev. Mr. Thomas to Pollington, Yorkshire; Rev. Mr. Beaumont to Bolton-le-Moors; Rev. J. Worthy to St. Gregory, Norwich; Rev. Mr. Lewis to Cotgan Chapel, Bath; Rev. J. Hutchinson to Christchurch, Auckland, New Zealand; Rev. W. C. Mursel to High Legh, Cheshire; Rev. H. F. Welch to Olney, Shrewsbury. *Curacies

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD.

BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE VILLAGE OF HILLSBOROUGH AFTER THE FLOOD.

DROWNED CATTLE AT HIGH BANK, ON THE RIVER DON.—SEE PAGE 300.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD.

BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST

THE VILLAGE OF MALIN BRIDGE AFTER THE FLOOD.

REMAINS OF BROADHEAD WHEEL MILL, ON THE LOXLEY, NEAR LITTLE MATLOCK: WORKMEN SEARCHING FOR THEIR TOOLS.—SEE PAGE 300.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 2.

SUNDAY, March 27.—Easter Sunday. Robert Bruce solemnly crowned King of Scotland, at Scone, 1306.

MONDAY, 28.—The Parliament guards murder the Emperor Pertinax, and put up the direction for sale by public auction, 193. The planet Pallas discovered by Dr. Olbers, of Bremen, 1802.

TUESDAY, 29.—Victory of the Duke of Newcastle over the Parliamentarians under Fairfax, at Bramham, 1643. Dr. Olbers discovers the planet Vesta, 1807.

WEDNESDAY, 30.—Bedward taken by Edward I., and a great number of the Inhabitants put to the sword. Hospitallers, or Knights of the Assembly of Greater proclaim George I. King, 1663. Moon's last quarter, 10h. 20m. p.m.

THURSDAY, 31.—Preaching of Joseph Barth, the Capuchin, against "The Creation," born, 1732. The French enter Puebla, Mexico, after four days' bombardment, 1863.

FRIDAY, April 1.—Pope Urban VIII. issues the bull "In Cœna Domini," and excommunicates the opponents of his Papacy, 1627.

SATURDAY, 2.—The new Edinburgh Lighthouse founded by Smeaton, 1757. The Five Nations, London, published, 1844.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE
FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 2, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.
1 30	2 0	2 30	3 0	3 30	4 0	4 30
13 45	14 15	14 45	15 15	15 45	16 15	16 45

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER.—On MONDAY and during the Week, THE PRETTY HOUSEMAID. Mr. Webster, Mr. Wright, Mr. Paul Bedford, Mr. Leigh Murray, Mr. Emery, A. Wigan, Miss Woolgar, Miss E. Fowler, and THE AREA BELLE—Misses E. L. Tech, F. Bedford, and Miss Woolgar. Commence at Seven.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—EASTER HOLIDAYS.—Greatest Display of Fireworks, the Grand Illumination of the Gardens, and Performance of the Original Kiralfys Pantomimes Herds by the D'Arbeau, Marvellous Dog and Bird Several Performances of Wonderful Dogs, Monkeys of all kinds, Marionettes, Punch and Judy, Ethiopian Serenaders, Bones and Banjo, Negro Minstrels, Archery, Rinks, Circus, Dancing, Dances round Maypole, Swings, Roundabouts, Steam Yachts, Boats, Donkeys, Ponies, Carriages, Chairs, Refreshments, &c. Open from 9 till 6. Admission to Crystal Palace, Sydenham Station, and Back, 1s. Open on Good Friday. Season Tickets Free.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—EASTER.—Last days of the Victoria Cross Gallery. Sir Colin Campbell, &c.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—By permission of the Directors.—REMONDINI (late WORDWELL'S) ROYAL MENAGERIE will be exhibited in the Egyptian Hall, Crystal Palace, during the Easter Holidays, and will contain the finest Lions and Lionesses ever exhibited, performing Lions, Tigers, Panthers, Leopards, &c., performing Kangaroos, Elephants, the only male Rhinoceros in this country, a pair of Polar Bears, the Sea Lion, Hyena, Wolves, Bengal Bears, Performing Dogs, Monkeys, Zebras, Ex-Racing Lion and Lioness, a group of Barbary Lions' Cubs, Performing Cockatoos, Macaws, Parrots, Eagles, Vultures, Owls, Serpents, Monkeys of all kinds, a Beautiful Leopard Cub, and various other Animals. Admission to Crystal Palace, or Sydenham Station, and Back, 1s. Open on Good Friday. Season Tickets not Available. Open from 9 till 6.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—WOMBWELL'S SHOW in the GROUNDS at EASTER.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—Arrangements for Week ending SATURDAY, APRIL 2.—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, Grand Holiday Attractions and Amusements, under the Direction of Mr. Nelson Lee (as formerly advertised), also Mr. Sam Adams' Minstrels, Mr. Wilson's Minstrels, Mr. Wombwell's Menagerie, Dancing, Children Happens, Charge to the Menagerie, Negroes each Several Boats, Half-a-dozen Donkeys, Several Ponies, Several Carriages, Several Chairs, Several Boats, Half-a-dozen Swings, Several Roundabouts, Steam Yacht Fun.

QUEEN'S CONCERT-ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—The TYROLESE MINSTRELS—HERR PRAGSER and FAMILY will give their Vocal, Instrumental, and Characteristic Entertainments EVERY EVENING at 8, and on SATURDAY, March 26, and EASTER MONDAY and TUESDAY, at 3. Stalls, 3s.; Area, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. Programmes and Tickets at Cramer, Beale, and Wood's, 201, Regent-street; at Keith, Prowse, and Co.'s, 48, Cheapside; and at the Queen's Concert-rooms. Doors open at Seven. Carriages at Eleven. Private Entertainments at Eight. Applications for Provincial, St. Leonard Smith, 9, Argyll-street, W. Agent for Paris, M. Jules Beer, 27, Boulevard des Italiens. New Instrument—Horn, Bassoon, Flute, Violin, Violoncello, Harp, Drum, Cornet, Trombone, Clarionet, Bass, and Reed, &c., Separated—Stalls, Private Boxes, Offices, Programmes, and the principal Musicsellers.

MR. LEACON begs to announce that his THREE ANNUAL MUSICAL ENTERTAINMENTS will take place at the QUEEN'S CONCERT-ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE, on MONDAY, April 11, May 9, and June 6. Commence at Three. Stalls, 5s.; Area, 3s.; Gallery, 1s. Programmes, &c., at Mr. Leacon's, No. 21, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. JOHN PARRY, will commence at MONDAY NEXT, at Eight, in THE PYRAMID, To conclude their Ten Years' Entertainments, ENTITLED MRS. REED'S PARTY, by MR. JOHN PARRY. Under Arrangements—Every Evening (except Saturday) at Eight; Thursday and Saturday Mornings, at Three. Stalls, 3s.; Admission, 1s. Box-office open daily.

PRACTICAL GEOLOGY.—KING'S COLLEGE, LONDON. Professor TENNANT, F.G.S., will commence a COURSE OF LECTURES, on WEDNESDAY, April 6, at Eleven o'clock, on PRACTICAL GEOLOGY. The Course in GEOLOGY to ENGINEERS will follow, and not precede, Easter. The Lectures will be continued on each succeeding Friday and Wednesday, at the same hour. Fee, £1 1s. 6d. R. W. JELF, D.D., Principal.

POSTAGE OF THE DOUBLE NUMBER OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS FOR THIS WEEK, MARCH 26.

AT HOME.

Copies bearing the impressed stamp (which must be exposed to view) circulate FREE through the Post Office for fifteen days from the date of publication, to all parts of the United Kingdom and the Channel Islands; unless addressed to persons within the free delivery of the Post when they are posted for delivery by the letter-carriers. The following are the rates at which they are charged by weight, when posted for delivery beyond the free delivery of the Post Office, and when not posted for delivery at all, but only as are within three miles of the General Post Office.

Unstamped copies should have two penny postage-stamps affixed to each.

FOR FOREIGN PARTS.

The impressed stamp is of no service for copies which are to be sent abroad; those must have postage-stamps to the amount specified in the following table:—

Africa, West Coast of—Penny Stamp	Germany—Four Stamps. This paper
Africa, South—Penny Stamp	Gibraltar—Penny Stamp
Australia—Penny Stamp	Greece—Penny Stamp
Brazils—Penny Stamp	Mexico—Penny Stamp
British North America—Penny Stamp	Newfoundland—Penny Stamp
Canada—Penny Stamp	Norway—Four Stamps. This paper
Cape of Good Hope—Penny Stamp	Sardinia—Four Stamps. This paper
China—Two Stamps	Spain—Four Stamps. This paper
Constantinople—Four Stamps. This paper	Sweden—Four Stamps. This paper
Egypt—Four Stamps. This paper	Turkey—Four Stamps. This paper
Egypt—Penny Stamp	United States—Penny Stamp
France—Two Stamps. This paper	West Indies—Penny Stamp

An edition is published on this paper specially for transmission abroad. The postage of this Journal, printed on the ordinary stout paper is double to those places which require, as marked in the above list, the thin paper edition.

LONDON: SATURDAY, MARCH 26, 1864.

At this period of the year, when, after befitting attention to the most serious of all concerns, the mind of our people turns upon social and lawful enjoyment, it is impossible not to think (with deep regret for the cause) how differently engaged upon the unhappy condition of our American brethren. A few words in explanation of the present state of the war may not be inappropriate, now that the war itself appears to have reached a point of temporary stoppage.

The new campaign opened with a series of boldly-conceived but badly-executed movements on the part of the Federals. General Sherman set out from Vicksburg for a rush eastward, and Admiral Farragut made an assault of some kind at the entrance of the bay of Mobile, in the extreme south, in order to distract the attention of the Confederates. Both efforts appear to have signally failed. The one attack was useless, and have given new courage to the South; and Sherman, who certainly dashed with great courage into a terrible danger, was not seconded by the assistance on which he seems to have relied. Had he succeeded, a most important gain would have accrued to the Federals, by the acquisition of a large portion of Alabama and of Georgia, with the Confederate arsenals and stores. As it is, we are by no means informed how far Sherman proceeded; but he was soon met by the enemy, suffered at least two defeats, and retreated to Vicksburg. Rumour said that he had suffered most tremendous loss; but, except that the absence of authorised contradiction, usually so ready, give us reason to believe that there may be foundation for such reports, we cannot form an opinion upon this part of the story. The Confederate cavalry had again shown its vigour and the ability with which it is handled; and though, as one of our military writers said years ago, "more men are killed in an hour of cavalry pursuit than in days of skirmishing and sniping," the carnage must, at some points, have been frightful. Moreover, the other attempt which was made against Lee has even more conspicuously failed, and the Federal force had to make its escape as best it might, leaving large numbers behind it, either killed or prisoners. Nothing, in fact, could well be more disastrous than the way the Federals have opened the war this new year.

Such is the state of military affairs in America while we English are preparing for a national holiday. The condition of political matters there affords also a great contrast to that of our own. We have had party fights; but no principle is at stake, and the confidence of the country is given generously and fully to the veteran statesman at the head of the Government—a man whom the bitterest enemies of the Cabinet do not venture to say they desire to displace. Our Parliament has done nothing since last meeting, for the best of all reasons—it has had little or nothing to do; and if it has occupied itself with wrangles it is because men are impatient of idleness and will combat on trifles rather than not fight. The business of the country at stake, or were a domestic interest in question, we should speedily see patriotism take the place of petulance. But the northern part of America is simply given up to elecioneering intrigue, and to the meanest political influences. That unhappy arrangement, by which it becomes impossible for the Americans to elect one of their best and ablest men, and which compels them to fix upon some person for Chief Magistrate whose chief merit is that he is unknown, is much what has is not to be laid to the present generation as a fault, though some will deny that it is a misfortune. There is not one of the reputed candidates for the presidency who, by any stretch of words, can be justly termed a statesman. But absolutely longing for a military dictator, one who will place a strong foot upon the miserable intriguers who make her success in peace or in war an impossibility, and one who with a strond hand will free the country from the corrupt politicians, the favourite names are those of M'Clellan and of Grant, and, though neither has met with disasters enough to disqualify him from popularity, neither has done anything to justify a first-rate place in the headship of a mighty country. It seems probable, however, that a military ruler may be more easily obtained than a successful commander. Mr. Lincoln's friends are strong, and he has the advantage of possession, and it may be very said that his chances are at present the best. But all presents a sorry prospect for our American brethren, and both North and South have the sincerest sympathies of all who are sincere in their observance of the season which is now passing.

OUR COLOURED ILLUSTRATIONS.

THE PET.

So, Master Walter! Found you out?
Resolved a holiday to spend
Not quite so pleasant for the trout
As for your hairy, four-legged friend.
Where's Master Walter's fishing-rod, please,
And Mangnall's Questions, might one ask?
Where's the Delectus, pen with blue,
And stern Coleno's stiffer task?

All left at home, and Doggie, there,
Thinks nothing rain—nor cares who blame—
Well, whipper, Walter—I don't care
If I shall—I think the same.
Could Doggie talk as well as bite
(Please read me a line, Master, do),
I think your Pet would say "All right,"
And this is what he'd say to you.—

"Master, the day is fine and fair
But not too bright, you understand,
I'm sure if you would throw your line
You'd soon have fish enough to land.
I like this better, Master, much,
Than merrier light and all the sky,
While you sit learning double Dutch,
Tables, and spelling, and a fly.

"Besides, there's much that you can learn
By sitting here along with me;
What do they call that pretty fern
Close to our basket, Master, see?
We can talk Latin, write both,
For Cloud and Water, Tree and Sun,
Nubes and Aqua, Arbor, Sol;
Come, Master, there's a lesson done.

"And Master Walter, list, I say,
I did not mean that joke, I'm sure,
Not 'Master' as in school, to play,
For you're as straight as any reed.
You've got your Book, and I've got mine,
You'll make it ready for a three,
I've heard good sermons in a preach,
"No day without a Line," you know.

"And angling teaches other skill,
Patience we always have in need,
And study when they should be still,
And how they should be read and when.
Then, learn this lesson from the fish,
Who's caught by artificial fly,
That thinking all things what we wish
Is not a proof of being wise."

Yon Learned Dog, you dear. Aha!
What a nice dinner you will get
When Walter gravely tells mamma
His pet's excuses for Aer Pet!
And when, a prosperous man and true,
He fills his cred from Fortune's stream,
In dreams she'll see Boatswain frowning Two:
As happy, loving mothers dream.

BIRDS'-NESTS.

WHATEVER doubts there may be about the origin of flint implements discovered in the drift, and whether man at first lived in cave, forest, or shored himself up beside some inland lake, there can be none regarding the specimens of architecture he must have had constantly before his eyes in the birds'-nests that were then built. Did he want a cavern to shelter in, he had but to watch the little swallow, called the sandmartin, bew out his home in the sand rock, with no other implement but its bill. If he wanted to build himself a wattled hut in the forest, there was the musel-thrush, and no end of basket making birds, to show him how to weave his materials together, then plaster them over with mud cement, to bind when dry. Even to-day the cutting wind nor the searching rain could find an entrance, but that has to sing in the face of it. The bed of rushes is the best mean example he had followed did in its nest. Even the high-arched dome might be suggested by the reed, but it is not the bird architect which, no doubt, at that undated period, came chattering at times around him in the forest shade.

No matter how remote the period geologists may go back to in their search for the origin of man, there were swans and storks and cranes busy at work ages before man hewed out a cave for himself, with his hatchet of flint, in the soft sandstone cliffs. The birds were the natural carpenters who first built, and made joists, and laid rafters across to support their dwellings, myriads of years before the Pyramids uplifted their heads to the sky, or the builders hewed a stone of those mysterious cities that now form the ruins of Stonehenge. Frail as some of the birds' nests are which these birds have built under our eyes, yet they are renewed like the flowers, that seem imperishable, making the annual appearance with every returning spring.

There is perhaps, some exaggeration in the outcry raised against taking bird's-nests, and eggs. Where there has been better established to teach a boy or girl tender-heartedness than rearing a nest of young birds. Two enough, a few are killed at times through overfeeding and too much kindness, a pardonable tenderness of which many an indulgent mother could tell. Those who have never heard the glad cry and boys over the hero of their birds as would fill all the nests that are built during a long spring and summer, and the piteous cry of grief that would arise from the bird itself. Thousands upon thousands of young birds perish every year; for, bravely as the old ones will defend the brood, it has often to succumb in its most unequal struggle to support them. It is then that the young are attacked, for there are hundreds of the feathered creation that, at the last look, and many so ravenous that a mouthful of unfledged little birds would be a welcome meal to a single pair. The old will also try to keep a sharp look out after herself while abroad, for there are keen-eyed hawks that will not leave her alone if they can but get hold of her, and would be glad to finish off her while family duties are being without leaving a single "prize" out of their wholesome." The butcher-bird makes any old thorn his larder, and there hangs up the carcasses he has killed until he is ready for a fresh joist. Rats, mice, cats, and even snakes, are constantly hunting after young birds to devour them, instead of nursing and feeding them with the grubs and insects.

Several of our birds'-nests are very beautiful, especially those of the goldfinch and chaffinch, which are lined with cobwebs and the finest cattle, that lies like spangles on the moss. Then the lining, of wool, feathers, and hair, is sometimes very luxurious, as in those of the long-tailed tit, which is said to tear asunder as a piece of good cloth; for these birds were hunters and weavers of the finest fabrics for breakfast-time.

The thrushe builds a very neat nest, whether the outside be of straw, hay, or weeds, for it generally takes what is at hand. The blackbird is a very slovenly builder with rotten wood, or something of a softish nature, that fills up every crevice; then comes the plastering, which is not always done on the inside of a round globe as round; for as the thrush hatches its young earlier almost than any other of our native birds, it has to house several times to keep out the strong March wind and April rain. Perhaps of the two basket-makers the hedge-sparrow is the most handy, and neatest workman, for he will weave into his nest the living branches and twigs that are growing around him, and very beautiful are the cups he houses look when the buds open, as his walls are covered with green leaves, and he is sheltered by the hoofs of cattle that graze in the places where it builds. The little wren, for its size, builds as immense nest, very much resembling like a pocket. How it contrives to feed the young which lie at the bottom of this deep nest—for it has sometimes as many as eight—is a puzzle, unless in case of nature's secrets which we cannot unravel. Some think the little mother pushes her food down the throats from the outside, and so feeds them in that way, and that the little harvest-mouse makes openings to get at the young as the latter lie bottom of the nest in a similar manner.

Birds build their nests everywhere, except under water, and sometimes venture so near that as to be flooded away—indoors, out of doors, in trees, and in the very bowels of the earth, in holes of dead trees, and in the very bowels of the earth, in holes of dead trees, and in the very bowels of the earth as well as on the topmost branches of the tallest trees, under the tiles, under the thatch, in the attic, in the crevice, and in the cellar, that are selected for burning. It would be difficult to say where bird's-nests have not been found or where not another.

Then their eggs are exceedingly beautiful and of every shade of colour, from white to green, from pale blue to deep blue, in the markings or dottings. Some are blue as heaven, others of the most delicate pearly hue; pink, and of the richest blush rose, and just as warm a green of every shade, reds and browns of every variety;—and many a string may be strung of these eggs as beautiful to look upon as are the richest-coloured necklace ever worn.

Now the birds are coming back, that left us when Autumn had burnt round the beautiful green curtains which Summer had hung out to shelter them while they built their nests and brought forth their young. They are busy now in their very dress this sunny season, and we shall soon hear them singing in our long leagues of hawthorn hedges, while the lark may be heard over the fields, and the rich perfume our seagirt island from shore to shore; for the birds are God's messengers of love and all signs of the time—the pretty hues that make sweet music in the "long-drawn aisles" of our cathedral-like woods, and sweet by song His praises who sendth not "a sparrow fall to the ground unheeded."

THE COURT.

The Queen continues at Windsor Castle, in good health.

Wednesday was the forty-fourth anniversary of the death of the Duchess of Kent, the Queen and the Royal family repaired to the mausoleum at Frogmore, when the statue of the mother of her Royal Highness was uncovered.

On Thursday morning the Queen walked and drove in the castle grounds. The King of the Belgians arrived at the castle. Prince Arthur and the Duke of Manchester also arrived. The Right Hon. C. P. Villiers had an audience of her Majesty.

Yesterday morning the Queen walked in the grounds of the castle. Yesterday morning the Princess Clotilde of Saxe-Coburg and Prince Princess Amelia and Prince Leopold honoured the Princess's theatre with her presence, returning to the castle at night. This was the sixteenth anniversary of the Prince Imperial's birthday.

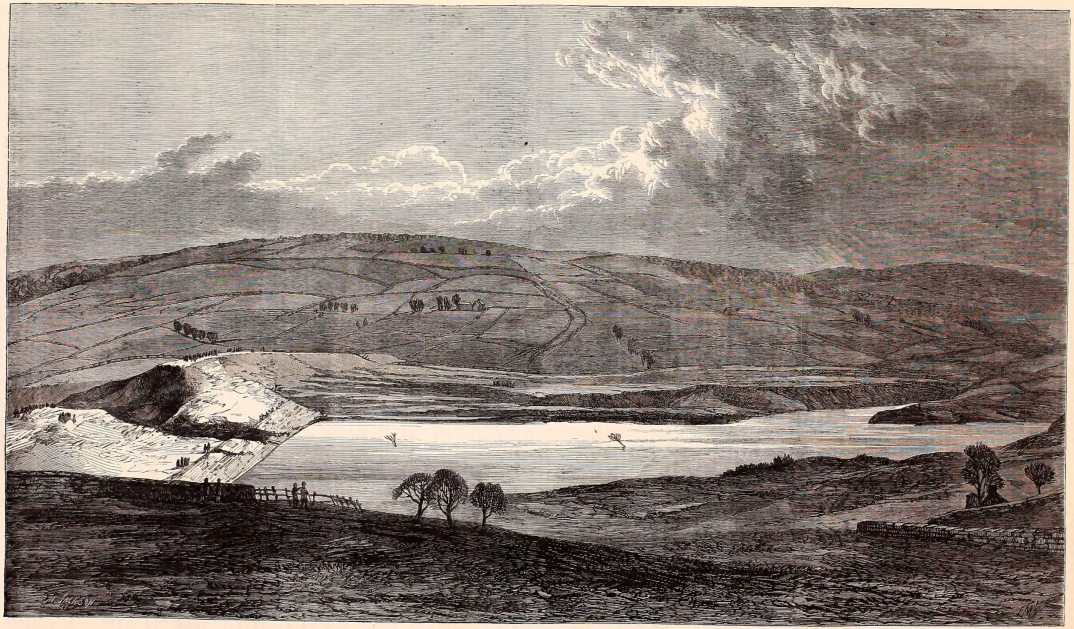
On Saturday last the Queen walked and drove in the castle grounds. Prince Leopold arrived at the castle, and was at the Drawingroom held by the Princess of Wales. Prince Arthur left the castle for Greenwich Park. Prince Leopold accompanied his Royal Highness on a visit. The Duke of Somerset and the Bishop of London arrived at the castle. The Duke of Somerset had an audience of the Queen, and also had the honour of dining with her Majesty. The Judge Advocate General also had an audience of her Majesty.

On Sunday the Queen, the King of the Belgians, Princess Helena, the Princess Louise, and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service in the Princess Louise, and Princess Beatrice attended Divine service in the private chapel at the castle. The Bishop of London officiated.

On Monday the Queen drove out in a carriage and four. Her Majesty visited Prince Arthur's apartments. The Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor and Mrs. Wellesley and the Rev. J. Blunt,

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

AUTHOUR England has three plague, pestilence, and famine; although no blighting storm slays its thousands, no avalanche of snow overwhelms its villages, no lava rolls down the lofty purple mountains and overwhelms its farms, yet the continued and ceaseless accidents from machinery, railways, coal-pits, mines, fires, and other less pretentious sources of taking up a life level in misfortune, perhaps, with countries which we, with a peculiar unction, deem less favoured. Even now the full extent of the plague calamity at Sheffield is not yet seen; nor, indeed, until the excitement has in some measure subsided, can we guess at the full extent of the misery it has caused. The press has asserted her supremacy, proving that she can be cruel as well as kind; and the money and sympathy which have poured in so free when they seek to put their hands upon the exact and removable cause of the accident. That the days are over when the city pomps all agree; but nothing could have supplemented its strength, or have increased the decent respect for the memory of the dead. That destruction is so great that Lord Alfred Paget, who has been down especially to the spot, believes that two millions of pounds will not cover the damage. Sympathy, however, is not dead in this land, and all the leading men of every sect and party are anxious in their endeavours to relieve the sufferers. We have had the most fearful descriptions to which, we hope, our readers will add their names, in aid of the public fund.



The great Sore Canal Company, conducted by M. Ferdinand Lesseps, which has more claims on the sympathies of a war between England and France, which has occasioned immense irritation, and has brought terror of the Emperor's name at the doors of overworked Egyptians and smuggled Coolies, is, it would appear, very much in want of some of the gold which the sale of its valuable stock machinery work easily. It shows that it has faith, much faith, in the easy kindness of John Bull's heart in appealing—by an enormous advertisement—to the public generally. Whether it is such a matter as Bacon's "Essays" or Goldsmith's "Vicar"—to his pockets for help. Whether it is a case of sympathy with the Egyptian's ceaseless and ceaseless enmity, and the Times, Economist, Standard, and Saturday Review will be equally anxious to help it. Time, however, we see, is now De Lesseps. Does not this recall De Béranger and his indignant song of "Ma Nuit"?

> Eh, non! j'apprends que l'on critique
> Ce que je prends pour mon nom.

We are afraid that, at present, the cause of Arabia Petræa are hard enough, there is yet sufficient sand in the course of this Suez (old) Canal to swallow much English gold, should it come in the way.

Our correspondent at Rome writes that the fall of a part of Pisino drilling in Cork and other parts of Ireland, of the tramp of armed men in recruiting parties, of the sharpening of swords in the streets, and by trembling but loyal citizens, and the "right, half-face, mar-c-r-ch" of some volunteer drill-sergeant, is heard in the very next street and even past. At the same time, many people have been asking why Garibaldi should be put down, and why the Italians should not have our help and energy are not given there as elsewhere? Perhaps this Fenian question is to blame. The Irish organisation is enormously rich and money-bags, as we know from Addison's allegory, tremble and shrink up when they are approached by the sword. Perhaps it is known with that this ghost of '98 were finally laid. What if the Queen, like a good fairy, or that virgin who in Moore's melodies bore a bright gold cross on her breast, were to step down from her throne to make a summer tour through Ireland, spending, let us say, half a million of money among the people? Would not enthusiasm and fun, going freely as she could go amongst her poorest subjects (without guards), be worth the money spent? Would it not be cheap? Would not the play be worth the candle? Her Majesty goes to Scotland; why not to Ireland?

When our last Number was in the hands of many of our readers, the Lord Mayor's Banquet, with fifteen hundred auctioneer-like and unfit word in relation to a great author—which we had commenced to call the Guildhall Gorge, the most mysterious notion which pervaded the sale-room that Hogarth—once silver engraver and then sergeant painter—had something to do with it, before the Lord Mayor's Banquet, and which is now every little: even the souvenirs of the man were hardly prized. A little figure from the "Analysis of Beauty," in 1806 called "The Gorgius" in the Sock Papers, the constant desk companion of Thackeray, and Mr. Punch's pet, and the Lord Mayor's Banquet heads of our late Monarch in Punch, was bought for a small price. The Lord Mayor's Banquet,

THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD: VIEW OF THE BRADFIELD RESERVOIR, SHOWING THE BROKEN DAM.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE TERRIBLE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD.

THE extraordinary disaster at Sheffield, an account of which, illustrated with two Engravings from sketches by our Special Artist, was given in this Journal last week, has not yet ceased to occupy the public mind. The inquest upon the death of those who perished by it, or, strictly speaking, upon four or five of them, among the first that were identified, out of a total number of about two hundred and fifty, whose lives were lost in one hour at midnight on Friday, the 11th of this month, has now been resumed, after its adjournment from Saturday, the 12th, and will probably lead to a thorough examination of the whole matter. At the same time we observe no abatement in the efforts that are being made, through various organs of publicity, to further the national subscription—it should be no less than national—for the relief of hundreds of bereaved and houseless families, to which must be added thousands of workpeople thrown out of employment, in consequence of this tremendous visitation. We therefore present to our readers this week, in continuation of the views of Bradfield and the Dale Dyke Embankment, already published, a small Map or Plan of the country for seven or eight miles west of Sheffield, and half a dozen more Engravings, from the sketches by our own Artist, to show the scenery and situation of the Loxley Valley, and to illustrate the huge amount of havoc and ruin which was caused by the bursting of the reservoir.

Along with the Map, on page 304, we would direct attention to a view of the Reservoir itself, engraved above. It gives a notion, which the verbal descriptions had failed to supply, of the shape of that great hollow between the Loxley hill on the north and the Stannington hill on the south side, in which the Bradfield Reservoir was formed.

The tract of moorland country, which still popularly retains its ancient name of Hallamshire, that runs up westward of Sheffield into the almost mountainous range of the Derbyshire hills, has much the same character with many other districts in the West Riding of Yorkshire. It exhibits the same features of scenery—broad valleys or "dales," of an oval shape, and generally with a sloping bottom, narrowed at each end, being almost inclosed by the boldly swelling downs. These downs, unlike those of the south of England, as they consist of something very different from chalk, pour into the valleys an abundance of water, feeding innumerable rapid streams, which all flow in an easterly direction, and, joining the Don, the Aire, the Wharfe, or some other Yorkshire river, are finally discharged by the Humber. The near vicinity of several of the great manufacturing towns to such upland basins along the ridge of the Yorkshire border has occasioned their use by the inhabitants for the purpose of storing up water, so much required by the processes of their trade as well as by the natural wants of an immense population. The easiest way in which the water companies could here provide for a constant supply was by taking possession of one or more of these moorland valleys a very few miles above the town, and artificially completing the basin with a dam or embankment across the gap left by the surrounding hills at its lower end.

The Engraving on this page shows just such a basin as we have described. The water now seen at its bottom, since the bursting of the dam, is the mere pool that remains out of a spacious artificial lake, which was a mile and a quarter long by a quarter of a mile in breadth, or equal, perhaps, to the most extensive reach of the Thames visible at high tide from either of our London bridges. Its depth, we are informed, was about 40 ft. on the average; but a glance at the Engraving will show us how the bottom slopes away towards the broken dam, on our left hand, and we might thus be warranted in believing the local reporter, who says that the extreme depth at that end of the reservoir was more than 80 ft., or nearly 100 ft. We will take it, however, at 85 ft., the height of the dam or embankment outside the reservoir being reckoned at 95 ft. One of our Illustrations last week showed, as seen from below, this outer or eastern side of the Dale Dyke Embankment, with the vast and fearful gap that has been torn in it—110 yards wide and 70 ft. deep—by the bursting force of the water. In the present Illustration, on our left hand, we look at the same embankment, with the same chasm in the midst of it; but we look at it from above, and see its inner or western side, partly composed of masonry, which is now laid bare, except perhaps some 10 ft. or 12 ft. at the bottom, by the emptying of the reservoir. We can readily perceive how large a space the water must have formerly filled when it was up to the top of the embankment. It must have come very near the trees in the central foreground of the picture, where the spectator is supposed to be standing on the north bank of the reservoir; and on the opposite side it must have bathed the foot of the hill—Stannington Hill—which rises majestically to the south; while it must have stretched westward, up the Dale, a little way beyond the limit of our View to the right hand, the extent of one mile, or thereabouts, being comprised in the length of our Engraving. This will be found a very serviceable illustration of the form and position of the Bradfield Reservoir.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

FIGHT BETWEEN THE DANES AND THE AUSTRIANS AT VEILE ON THE 8TH OF MARCH.

We proceed to notice some of the destructive effects of the flood in its course down the Loxley Valley, as far as the confluence of that stream with the River Don, but a little way above Hillfoot and Neepsend, the suburbs of Sheffield town. The length of this course, from the Dale Dyke Embankment to Hillfoot, is at least six or seven miles. In the upper part of it, where the ordinary channel of the Loxley lies in a deep gorge pent in by its steep banks on each side, and with a rapid fall admitting the utmost swiftness of the current, the water could not spread so much to the right and to the left; nor could it long abide and continue to rise in the space which was at first overflowed. The village of Low Bradfield, for instance, a view of which was engraved in our last, though it stands nearest to the source of the inundation, suffered very much less than some other villages four or five miles removed from it. The bridges, and some of the buildings here close to the stream, were at once swept away; but these were not dwelling-houses; and most of the inhabitants, after their first alarm when the water came into their lower rooms while they lay in their beds up stairs, found it subsiding in a quarter of an hour without more fatal mischief. But on the very banks of the Loxley stream, in the narrow part of its channel where it always runs with considerable force, were erected, at intervals of some half a mile, several forges and mills for grinding steel, which were instantly overwhelmed; and as the machinery of these establishments was turned day and night by the water-power, a number of workmen, who were attending to it at that hour, perished in the wreck of their workshops, having not the slightest chance of escape. It will probably be for the surviving families of these poor fellows, and for those who are deprived of subsistence by this destruction of their factories and implements of labour, that a great part of the charitable fund will be required. As an illustration of this particular form of the local

(Continued on page 304.)

ARTILLERY BAGGAGE-WAGGONS ENCAMPED NEAR KOLDING

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK.

We have engraved on the preceding page two sketches by our Special Artist in Denmark, one of which represents the fight which took place at Veile on the 8th inst., while the other scene is an encampment of artillery baggage-waggons near Kolding. It will be remembered that the town of Kolding, a View of which we gave last week, is on the frontier of Jutland and Schleswig, and Veile is a short day's march to the north of it. The road, for two thirds of this distance, goes straight across a bare, monotonous plain, with scarcely a village upon it. Near Veile it is diversified by hilly ravines, and woods, sloping towards the south-east, where the town stands, at the head of the inland fiord or gulf of the name of Veile, and a fine harbour station. Here the Austrians arrived about eleven o'clock in the morning, from Jelling, and were slowly advancing for the last three hours into the Austrians commenced their attack. Having planted their batteries on the heights of Windfalli Bakke, to the south of the town, they opened fire, which was replied to by two of the Danish guns on a hill to the north, at the opposite side of the inner side played right over the town. Meanwhile, the Austrian infantry regiment, the Hesse was advancing in line from the left hand, across the frozen swamp above the town, to gain the rear of the Danish artillery posted on the hill. The Windsbrigaths Dongeons, who covered this movement, fell in with a stronger force of Danish cavalry, and had to drawn men. But the Hesse Regiment, being speedily formed their way across the bridge, and, in spite of a sharp fire of musketry, entered the street of the town. The Danish artillery soon left the town, and then took their stand on the steep wooded heights where their artillery was posted, on the north side of Veile. There was a few poor houses at the end of the town, close under the hill, which is the place shown in our artist's sketch. On the top of the hill, from where the smoke of musketry is seen, the Danes had constructed a sort of breastwork of earth and trunks of trees, from behind which they kept upon the enemy; while upon the second hill, in the middle background of our View, they had cut an object on the line of road, and through which their battery commanded the road below; and they had another battery still farther back, where the road turns to the left hand. The Austrians were 15 pounders. The Danish infantry was about 1000 strong, of the 1st, 11th, and 7th regiments; but all these were not engaged. The Austrian force consisted of the Grand Gouderourrix brigade and of the Nostrix brigade, comprising the regiment of Hesse (so called, though recruited from Lower Austria), the regiment "King of the Belgians," and the 9th and 18th Jager battalions. The regiments and the Jagers were all present at the time. They held the Austrians in check till about six o'clock in the evening, when the Austrians battered open the gate, the Danes then went forward, and encamped for the night three miles to the north of Veile. The loss on both sides was trifling, that of the Austrians being about 30 killed and wounded, and the Danes' about the same. It thrives by the breeding of cattle and the manufacture of boots. Our second Illustration—that of the encampment of baggage-waggons in readiness for the next day's march—does not require any comment.

THE FARM.

The sale of the Towneley herd, the result of which we gave by telegram last week, was a tremendous success. About 1000 visitors had lunch, and the catalogues announced 49 cows and heifers. The average of £128 7s. 7½d. for 56 was 7s. 3d. less than Robert Colling's for 61, in the memorable year 1810. The highest price was 1000 guineas, given by Lord Dudley for Lord Duke's average as still quite untouched, and the former, £151 8s. 9½d. for 47 (one of them a Bates's cow), and the latter, £128 7s. 7½d. for 56 (none of them), therefore far below it on the merits. Taking the average of the eight greatest sales since 1810—viz., Mr. Colling's, £133 15s. 10½d., and that 548 lots were sold at them. No one would give the 9 gs. beyond 1000 guineas for Duke of Oxford 6th (by Mr. Eastwood's Butterfly), and therefore he was sent back again to his box; but he will no doubt be sold for a very handsome price. The 9 gs. bull calf, Two of his stock averaged £440 8s. that day, and Mr. Eastwood bought three of them for £1000. The 9 gs. Towneley bull calf was sold to him, and the top lot of all was only the third calf at the Worcester Royal. Owing in a great measure to the unfavourable state of the Duke of Wharfdale calf, the second prize in calf heifer at Worcester beat the first-prize one at the money test by no less than 32½ gs. The average for the Duke of Wharfdale's 12 was £151 8s. 9d., and this also showed with what judgment Bates had been dipped into for the first, and Booth for the second time. The Duke of Oxford 6th's Duchess tribe averaged £179 11s., and the old cow was repurchased for a good commission from Mr. Eastwood, who thought she was not well, and therefore she was not put up; and if (although two Agreeys have declined to part) Colonel Towneley would only take two or three more, there will be a small nucleus left for herd No. 2, which, like the first, will have a most distinguished and ancient name at Thornsyholme. We shall engrave Royal Butterfly's portrait.

Mr. Wragge, on behalf of Mr. Gaskell, M.P., has given 400 gs. for Royal Butterfly 11th, which was second to Mr. Eastwood's Hero at Worcester; and Mr. Beever secured a bull-calf of five months and a half, also by Royal Butterfly, for 200 gs. This calf has already made fame, bought Royal Butterfly 10th, the second at the Battersea, Royal in the yard, and sire of a well-known prize-winner (Lovely), was a very grand and true average, and but for the doubt respecting Hero's sire she ought to have reached nearly £200 each.

A prettier trio than Royal Butterfly's Duchess, her daughter, Butterfly's White Duchess, and Beauty's Duchess, has not been seen here back from a sale, and Mr. Betts may be very proud of them. The improvement in the first-named dam since Worcester was most remarkable.

Mr. Wickstead's Cambridge herd blood may be said to have made the sale, as Buttercup, the dam of Butterfly by Booth's Leveller, and Beauty, the dam of Frederick by Lax's Duke, were both from his Barnpton Duke, which was sold at the Rev. Mr. Sharpe's to Mr. R. Watson, a few minutes after he lost 1, Roan Duchess, a thirty-two days calf, was knocked down to Mr. Richard Booth, at the same sale, the Earl of Scarborough, who was the first prize in the first class at the Yorkshire Royal, and Mr. Betts's sale for 20 gs.; and Whittington, the sire of Roan Duchess, was taken out of the ring having no one worthy of him to go to. "Time is the judge; Time knows nor friend nor foe," and, cheap as these lots went at the time, it has confirmed the judgment and choice of the shorthorn Nestor in selecting his blood, and of Mr. Eastwood in buying it.

The Farnley sale was a fitting sequel to the Towneley one, and, with two or three exceptions, the buyers were entirely fresh ones. The average for one-and-twenty females was £74 11s., and that for the fourteen males; and the whole thirty averaged £58 19s. The highest price at the sale was 200 gs., given by Mr. Chorley for Miriam, and Mr. Eckersley gave 80 gs. for Lord Valentia by Lord Colling.

The sale on Tuesday was attended by about 2000 persons. The eighty-six cows and heifers averaged £74 11s., Mr. Bates's own bulls £58 16s. 5d., and the sum total was £5194 7s., which shows an average of £47 18s. 6d. The top price, 100 gs., was given by Mr. E. L. Betts for Lady Louisa; and Thorndale's Grand Duke 17th was the highest bull. Lord of Lancaster 2nd made 90 gs., and Lancaster for 65 gs. The sale was a good one, considering the large amount of lots, and twelve of the females sold for 70 gs. and upwards.

Dr. Bowring has presented to the British Museum his very fine collection of insects made during his long residence in the East. The Bowringian Collection, as it is called, consists of 84,296 specimens, arranged in three cabinets of forty drawers each and fourteen cabinets of twenty drawers each.

THE FISH-REARING HOUSE AT TWICKENHAM.—We last week reviewed an Engraving of the interior of the fish-rearing or pisciculture establishment which Mr. Francis Francis, of Twickenham, has constructed within his own domestic premises. It ought, however, to be mentioned that Mr. Francis, as a member of the Acclimatisation Society of Great Britain, had been specially directed by one of its committees to the subject, and was thus led towards the cost of the fish-rearing house now granted from the society's funds. The result is to be simply our own and by it to the most valuable fish to introduce to the society at such prices as will be remunerative.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

The Old House in Crosby-square. By Henry Hall. (2 vols. Saunders, Low, Son, and Marston.) The author deals this tale "a story in two parts" and he manages matters so that the more prominent characters either die in the first part or appear in the position to which the resolutions of the whole of Crosby-square. The scene of the story is laid in the City, and the time is borrowed from the fact that the chief personage in the drama, a merchant, lived in a goodly house in Crosby-square. The merchant, whose father had been ruined by pecuniary reverses (as we learn from every people are not very often, except in novels), and who in his youthful days was jilted by a frivolous coquette in the neighbourhood of Hampstead, has more than sense by coming to a deterioration that he will mete out Shylockian justice, untempered by mercy, in all matters of pecuniary borrowing, and that he will make himself uncomfortable for life by refusing to listen to the voice of the female charmer—charm she never so wisely—who has jilted him in his youth. The first intimation that he becomes a miserly old bachelor, rich enough in time and riches to be a fit subject for the "Times" Gold Mine" of a workhouse in love and friends. Howbeit, he preserves for some time a character of certain interest—interest, that is, having been most likely of an eccentric disposition, had taken a fancy to the new merchandise to be school, and when battles were fought (the various pugilistic encounters being described at somewhat tedious length by the various boy-heroes) he fought. Be it, as we hour, the clerk becomes security to the merchant for some one in the latter's employment. The merchant is candid enough to give him the advice which he always gives to those who apply to him for security, "to wit, "don't;" but without avail. So it comes to pass that the clerk runs away, and the merchant becomes liable. This is not much more able to pay than an unsuccessful crossing-sweeper would have been. The merchant's liabilities are £20,000 and his his pound of flesh at all risks, even from his own grandfather had it been due, thereon his fate is sealed, and he is left to his own dismost forthing. The friend, however, being a chronic invalid, pays the debt of nature, and the merchant is left to his own devices without a home and without subsistence. The wife and son had already died, the effect of entreaty and humiliation more after the fashion which prevails upon the stage than upon office floor or counting-house. The son, by the way, is a disappointing one): merchant; but they might as well have spoken to the metal from which the metaphor is borrowed. And so the first part of the story ends. The second part is chiefly taken up with the scenes of highway robbery, after the Dick Turpin and Claude Duval style of the days of the Georges, and in which the City men are introduced to some of our old friends in new characters. The merchant has a second time to be ruined, and he is left to the mercy of dangerous Hertford road; the clerk's son, under the name of Chestnut Neale, has the characteristics of the gentlemanly man of highway robbers; the clerk's daughter is the companion—if not chaperone—of a young lady, the heiress of the merchant, for whom the clerk had been security, is a "full private," or coarser thief and drunkard, the leader of the predatory band. The author has to be readily guessed at the time of vengeance which the clerk's son had piously prayed for arrives; the merchant's grandson on the side of the highway robbers thieves, and the thieves reckon in their number the clerk's son and the unfortunate merchant's grandson. The merchant's grandson is the only one who has been robbed of money belonging to the merchant, and knowing how austere a man he is, he (the grandson) has the courage of making and robbing the public to confessing his misfortune (attributable undoubtedly to the paternal blood which flows in his veins). He does, however, is merciful in his hour of triumph, and even rescues the merchant from the hands of the highwaymen of his rivalry; the family—though remarkable—was surpassed by his thirst for the merchant's blood); which act of generosity, consequently, the merchant is not likely to forget. The merchant's chant, that he falls sick, and becomes sentimental, and ultimately dies, "with the sun shining on his face, and a contented smile on the clerk "Chestnut Neal" and his sister very wisely (for the former is the gentlemanly robber) "go to the Cape of Good Hope to their own country;" the delinquent, so far as one can understand, was hanged; and the merchant's grandson, "Jack Neale," is, in our opinion, are the descriptions of natural scenery and natural incidents, such as we have in "Jane Eyre," and in the descriptions; the struggle, also, in the mind of the hand man, the merchant, between the dictates of conscience and the love of money. The author's style is ably handled, and some of the dialogue is according to experience and reasoning. But there is no denying that the narrative is occasionally tedious, and that we are not of that kind which compels one to read on; the pathos and the humour are not of the kind which will make one laugh and cry; and the perils and escapes, the loves and the quarrels which lent absorbing interest to the "Romance of the Forest," and other romances of the road," are here almost entirely wanting.

Beppo, the Conscript's Foster-Brother. A Ballad. (2 vols. Chapman and Hall.) We are aware of only one man who ever requested to be allowed to write the ballads of a nation, and that he thought he could with infallibly perform that ceremony (at any rate, figuratively, or their mental tablets) for Giuseppe Verdi. Of that is the full style, while the other, the author, has consented to write the Italian people jealousy from beginning to end made him totally unworthy of the task undertaken. Beppo, the conscript's foster-brother, and who were much discontented that she did not bestow her hand upon the former, although he was a conscript, and she knew it. So that there was anything to object to in Beppo except that he was the fact of being conscripted. Beppo, however, was, more than strong enough, more than plucky enough, more than hand-some enough to be the hero of a ballad, and the whole romance of his life is soon told. He was the eldest son and heir of a thrifty Romagnese peasant, and his foster-brother was the younger, and lived with the family. Beppo, tall at he was, was over head and ears in love with her, a contingency which his anxious parents, who wished to see their son married to Giulia, regarded with the assistance of a crafty priest, got Giulia away from the house, and by tempting Beppo to go to the fair of Rimini, in order that Beppo had managed to understand one another. In the town Giulia became the sequaintance of a corporal of Bersaglieri, and in consequence of Beppo's absurd behaviour when he went to call upon her and found the corporal in her company, he was enlisted in the regiment against Beppo and drove the latter to the verge of lunacy. Soon afterwards Beppo is drawn for a conscript; he is accompanied by the above-mentioned crafty priest's advice, he "takes to the hills," and is set down as an outlaw. Giulia, who has been sent somewhere else to the farmer's, makes an appointment to meet Beppo and is overheard by two soldiers reading aloud the Riminese Gazette. Beppo appoints a meeting-place, but discovers what the soldiers have done, and at once perceiving that Beppo will regard her as a traitress, sets off to meet Beppo, and Beppo to meet her. The two meet beforehand with her, come upon Beppo suddenly, and would have killed him, but Beppo, with "Old Mortality," in a hand, he takes, to which Morton's, in "Old Mortality," is a reversed, and Beppo, who has become a mutual-aid-society man, a river (a curious, not to say ridiculous, position for angry lovers—though, however, Beppo is not angry with her, but only pleading at such side of their mouths, to have) out renewals of love in), love is renewed, and Beppo becomes a brigand. The brigand becomes himself, in parcloned, joins the army, gets promotion, and marries Giulia. The story is told in a pleasant manner, and the versification, it is slight, but pleasantly, if a thought lengthily, told. We allude to the many passages devoted to the description of nature and to the thoughts passing through persons' minds, to questions as to those thoughts which it is impossible and unnatural to answer, and to general reflections. By-the-way, a little reflection, we should have thought, would have convinced the author that Phidias, a Greek sculptor, would scarcely have called a girl with a net retrossed (vol. i. p. 35) "the incarnation of his best ideal" (p. 36).

Sketches of Character. By the Rev. Edward B. Hastwick. (2 vols. Smith, Elder, and Co.) It is pleasant to lay hol upon a book which is not a novel, and which is not a book of travels, which we know, and much that it is convenient for conversational and other purposes to know. This Mr. Eastwick's book does; and it would be difficult for us, at a moment's notice, to mention a work of the kind which is more entertaining reading. Matters relative to hieroglyphics in Persia, where he was first of all Secretary of Legation and then Chargé-d'Affaires at the Court of Tehran, are not reached until one arrives at the 246th page of the first volume; but he leads up to that point in a particularly readable and vivacious manner. As a usual with most travellers, he discourses at some length about the fly, the flea, the bug, and the mosquito, and devotes to those subjects more space than their flative worth would seem to require; but "he tests at scan no more felt a wound;" the bi-bitten veteran from Eastern climes would probably consider his wounds to be mere matter. It is not for us to discuss the reasonableness of recalling the author, after but a very brief hour of acquaintance as Chargé-d'Affaires, nor, indeed, can one pather from his narrative any particular ground for his recall; but the fact is that he was recalled hurriedly to England for inserting in, and appending to, his work high testimonials in his favour. He appears to have been sent with despatches over the line of telegraph from the Turkish frontier to Tehran, with respect to which it will not be out of place to quote the words of a caustic German, "Meine Meinung nach, in Tehran die reine Wasserleitung ist viel mehr nothwendig als Telegraphen," and Mr. Eastwick may well seems to think that water-supply is almost if not quite as necessary as a telegraph. The second dispense with, we take on account of the presents his friends gave him when he left, and with the announcement that his "Persian Sketches" were in course of preparation. We should, however, like to find a Chargé-d'Affaires talking of himself as "parties" (vol. i., p. 2); and such expressions as "starvation and consequent emaciation" (p. 3) smack rather of affectation or pedantry than of delicacy or humour.

FINE ARTS.

We are informed that her Majesty, on her visit last week to the exhibition of Mulready's collected works at the South Kensington Museum, made the remark that they had implied a wish to have them—whether an exhibition of the late Mr. Dyce's pictures could or would be arranged. The most great mural works could not of course be assembled from Westminster and Buckingham Palaces, Osborne, All Saints' Church, and elsewhere; but there are some forty most perfect of the cartoons, sketches, studies, and other works which would make a most interesting and instructive display.

The Royal Commission of Fine Arts has reported on the Royal Commission of last year. It will be immediately submitted to the Queen, and Her Majesty will understand that the proposal to introduce "lay members" was rejected almost unanimously.

One of the most remarkable of the recent works of Sir Rowland Hill for a postage envelope, and to which we alluded in the notice of the painter's exhibition, is that of Mr. Kensington, has been produced in the Times for sale. It is described as "an India-proof impression" one of six—from the original block engraved by John Thompson in the year 1840, and printed in colours." A curious fact for our postage-stamp collectors.

It is well known that French painters practise the fascinating art of etching more generally than our own. An article in the last Fine Arts Quarterly Review on the subject of French etching is a well-timed addition to our knowledge of contemporary foreign art. It will be interesting to collectors to learn that "the value of a photographs—"auto-photographs" they are called—from French etchings is stated to be very various. Concerns such as that of Goupil, of Paris street. These comprise examples, in a remarkable diversity of styles, of Herard, Jacque, Meryon, Millet, Thomas, Portaels, Bida, Tschaggeny, G. David, Lamy, Lamar, Noel, Kipp, Richard, Gigaux, Damey, Francia, Lemoine, Henri Berger, Eug. Faver, Gueide, Chavet, C. Haut, Comte del Gallo, Gaillard, Guichon, Gaichon, Cicéri, &c.

The council of the Society of Arts are increasing their very liberal and praiseworthy efforts to encourage art-workmanship. They have just offered a new and greatly extended series of prizes, which collectively amount to the munificent sum of £500, and which is more than total amount of the prizes is £500, which is apportioned as follows:—Plate of repoussé-work, in any metal, £15; ornament, £8; hammered metal-work, £8; glass-blowing, £12 10s.; engraving in intaglio, £8; etching and engraving on metal, niello-work, &c., £15; enamel-painting, £20; painting on porcelain, £20; decorative painting on glass, £20; for walls, £20; engraving on glass, £8; gem-engraving, £20; die-sinking, £15; glass-blowing, £12 10s.; bookbinding and leather-work, £15; carving in wood, £15; wood-engraving, £15; lace-making, £11? 10s.; and ivory, £37 10s.

Messrs. Negretti and Zambra, opticians, have just issued a first part of a series of carte-de-visite photographic "character-portraits," taken by Mr. Mayall, jun., of "Celebrities of the Crystal Palace and London Stage," accompanied with short biographical notices. The first portrait is that of Mr. Charles Dickens, in the character of "Dr. Augustus Tinside," and subject and photographer have conspired to produce a most amusing and characteristic result. The same gentlemen, opticians and photographers also announce the publication of a series of largersized photographs of "Illustrious Personages of Literature Person," which, judging by the portraits of the Prince of Wales, in his robes of the Garter worn at his wedding, and Prince Alfred, in his naval uniform, both included in the first number, will likewise be first-rate examples of photographic art.

Miss Burdett Coutts, the daughter of the late Mr. Ellison, and to whom the most valuable portions of Gateshead belong, proposes, in a plan just published, to make extensive and costly improvements and embellishments in the borough. A very beautiful tower is to be built in the centre; and a handsome fountain, and also a park are to be constructed. Not the least novel part of the plan is, that the streets proposed by the lady Janes and Annes of the Gateshead and Claverton Person, which, and the martyrs are to supply names for others. Royalty and Anti-tocracy are also to be duly commemorated in the names, and the statue of a famous native wood engraver is to be honoured by "Bewick-road."

The council of the Art-Union have awarded the premium for the best model of a design for a monumental work of art-decoration at South Kensington Museum is the "Wood Nymph," by Mr. C. B. Birch.

A repetition of a marble bust of Oliver Cromwell by Mr. Noble, sculptor, has been purchased by Mr. R. J. Mackie, of the Manchester, to the Reform Club.

A statue in marble of careful drawings from "The Life of Peyslo," in the Farnesina Palace at Rome, has been issued by the Photographic Society of Berlin.

Worcester College Chapel, Oxford, is to be redecorated from designs by Mr. Burgess.

Shakspeare's will, which consists of three sheets of brief-paper, has, by permission of the Lord Chief of the Court of Probate, been carefully cleaned, and each sheet has been placed in a polished oak frame, between which it was placed. Photographs were made simultaneously on the top of each in a brass plate, engraved, "Shakspeare's will, March 25, 1616," and the inscription, with the date, was also cut in the wood. Impressions and copies of photographs of the will have been taken, and despatched.

Garibaldi is expected in England in the course of the following week. Signor Carta, residing at Chelsea, has officially communicated to the secretary of the Italian Democratic Committee in London that the General would be in London by the end of the present month at the latest. Signor Carta has received letters from Garibaldi, in which the latter has not mentioned the day on which he intended to start, but left the impression, believed, on receipt for England. The committee have been called together to organise the reception of Garibaldi, and it is probable that he will remain in London and a banquet, probably at the Crystal Palace. Garibaldi and his suite arrived in Genoa, and were received by the Vice-Admiral for Southampton on the next day.

GOVERNMENT EMIGRATION.—The Legislature of Queensland has voted £100,000 for the immigration service of the present year. The sum of £10,000 has been remitted to the Emigration Commissioners, for the purpose of granting free and assisted passages to the colony to domestic servants, agricultural and railway labourers, and country mechanics.—The National Colonial Emigration Society, London, provided passages for 79 persons of the operative classes selected from the neighbourhood of Manchester and Stalybridge, in the Eastern Empire, which has sailed from Plymouth for South Australia.—Her Majesty's emigrant-ship Northumberland, which sailed from Plymouth on the 20th of September last, arrived at Port Adelaide, South Australia, on the 20th of December, with 400 emigrants on board, consisting of 100 married couples, 100 single women, 30 boys and 22 girls between the ages of one and twelve, and 15 infants. Seven births and two deaths (both of infants) took place on the voyage.

MUSIC.

Covent-garden Theatre—as "The Royal English Opera," under the management of Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. Harrison—closed its doors on Saturday evening last, to be reopened by Mr. Gye, as "The Royal Italian Opera," on Easter Tuesday. On the closing night of the Royal English Opera a pretext farewell address by the lessees was circulated among the audience. It is a straightforward, manly paper, to which, had space permitted, we should have given a place in our columns; but we are able only to insert the following passage, which is a brief statement of facts well worthy of attention:—

It requires no very great stretch of memory to recall the time when there existed no home for English Opera, no theatre to which the music-lover could secure a hearing at the bar of public criticism for works which demanded a large and well-trained body of artists to interpret them. It is our boast to be able to say that such a house, such a theatre, we have furnished; such a body of artists we have brought together. In the course of our eight seasons we have produced fifteen operas and five operettas, together with eleven revivals—all admitted to be of interest or excellence, including the entire number of the seasons of which competent judges have pronounced them deserving. It is not too much to say that the lists of these works will be found a valuable index to that for the existence of the Royal English Opera; and that, had it not been for the existence of that theatre, they would have remained in their obscurity. In these eight seasons we have produced no artists of European fame, but we have formed a good and capable company, consisting of two hundred thousand pounds.

All this gives the lessees a strong claim to the approbation and gratitude of the public. At the close of the performance testimonials by the members of the company, the officers of the establishment, and a number of distinguished amateurs, to Miss Pyne and Mr. Harrison, on the close of their managerial career, were presented to them by the conductors assembled on the stage. The gifts, which were precisely similar, consisted of two very elegant breakfast services, each bearing an appropriate inscription. The Rev. Henry Bellenden, in the name of the subscribers, presented the testimonials; and the compliment was acknowledged by Mr. Harrison, who, as well as Miss Pyne, in a brief address, full of good taste and feeling. We have only to add, that if the management has had to struggle with pecuniary difficulties on the whole, lucrative to themselves, it has, nevertheless, been beneficial to the English musical stage by raising it to a position which is not never before attained.

English Opera, hitherto a monarchy, is now to assume the form of a republic. The "Royal English Opera Company," a joint-stock society on the limited principle, having taken from Mr. Gye a lease of Covent-garden Theatre, is to commence operations in October next.

During the past week the only public musical performances have been the usual "Passion Week oratorios" at Exeter Hall.

The arrangements for the meeting of the three choirs at Hereford have been completed. The first morning will be performed Haydn's "Creation" (parts 1 and 2), and Beethoven's Mass in C; on the second morning, Mendelssohn's "Elijah;" on the third morning, the first part of Spohr's "Fall of Babylon," Rossini's "Stabat Mater," and selections from "Judas Maccabeus" and "Israel in Egypt;" on the fourth day, "The Messiah." The evening service will comprise the following works:—Midsummer Night's Dream, a selection from Mr. W. Sterndale Bennett's "Woman of Samaria," Richard Coeur de Lion," Symphonies, Beethoven's in C minor and Mozart's "Jupiter." On Friday evening there will be a concert of chamber music.

THE THEATRES.

Many of the theatres have been quiet upon Passion Week, Good Friday excepted. At the HAYMARKET, "The School for Scandal," and "All Five Shillings," and the "Lucky Hit," etc., were performed. Mr. Webster appeared at the NEW ADELPHI, in "The Dead Beat," which was followed by "All the Area Belle." At the LYCEUM "A Day At the Races" and "Bel Demonio" occupied their places; as did also "B. B." and "The Ticket-of-Leave Man," at the OLYMPIC. The bill on this occasion was filled up by "Ici On Parle," consisting of "Under the Rose," "The Silver Lining," and "Cool as a Cucumber." The SURREY still disports itself in the sensational drama, in "Ashore and Afloat," followed by the Christy's Minstrels; and the NEW ROYALTY with "Mother Shipton," "Rhiz" and "Sam," and "Item at the Wheel." At the GREEKAS "Deborah" was performed to full houses; and the extraordinary success of Miss Kate Terry in the character continues manifestly to increase. At the STANDARD Mr. and Mrs. Howard Paul gave their entertainment, entitled, conducted by H. Emile Berger. We may also notice, under this head, that Miss Grace Egerton has removed her entertainment from the Polygraphic Hall to JAMES'S HALL. At the latter place Mr. Wallace Montgomery has given recitals from the poets during the week, to the satisfaction of a fashionable audience.

POLYGRAPHIC HALL.—On Tuesday Mr. Woodin repossessed himself of this popular place of amusement, and appeared in two new monodramas, entitled "Elopement Extraordinary" and "Bachelor's Box." These two entertainments differ materially in their character from Mr. Woodin's previous performances. They are more dramatic, more elaborate, more ambitious. The first has been composed for him by Mr. John Overdrift, and consists of the adventures of passengers on a railway, as it stops at three stations, on its way from Tilbury to Fenchurch-street. Here Mr. Woodin appears in a succession—like-sloping couple, the father of the lady, a railway porter, a ticket collector, and a desperate passenger. Each is most characteristic, particularly that of the last scene, where, by mechanical contrivances, the father and the two lovers are made to be apparently suspended in the railway carriage, the head of each being alternately supplied by Mr. Woodin. The device was necessarily a most laughter. The second piece, which is divided into three parts, and written by Mr. T. W. Robertson, is of so complicated a character that we can reserve our description of it to a future occasion. There are many parts in this singular drama, which are capitally played by Mr. Woodin. Some of they are not decidedly dramatic, and show the artist in a more decidedly dramatic point of view than usual. The bachelor is a Frenchman, and when the action begins at sunset and concludes at break of day. Then there is the policeman and the sympathetic maid-servant, and the two sable swells and whisky, which, however, are partaken of by others as well as by himself, particularly by Le Baron de Crac-Crac, who is most magnificently made up, and by the M'Tartan, of Glensmiffogh, very characteristically dressed. As a monologue it is wonderfully successful in his female portraits, and the author has here provided Mr. Woodin with one which are capital. The little monologue with some stereophoric and spiritual effects, which, owing to the extemporised nature of a first night, could not be thoroughly exhibited, and speaking which was another opportunity of speaking more at large. Altogether, this promises to be the most successful of Mr. Woodin's entertainments.

EASTER PIECES.—At DRURY LANE an elaborate revival of Shakespeare's "Henry IV.," with Mr. C. Kean as Prince and Falstaff, is in active preparation. The HAYMARKET will produce a new burlesque, by Mr. J. C. Burnand, called "Venus and Vulcan," which a new actress will make her appearance; and at the NEW ROYALTY a new extravaganza, by the same author, called "The Maid and Wife in the Moon." The WORKS will open with a new and original low comedian, is announced. The APOLLO will rely upon "Leah, with new scenery and its stock burlesque. The latter piece changes its bill, except to introduce a new comedietta, called "A Hunt for a Husband." At the ST. JAMES'S Miss Kate Terry will shortly appear in a new burlesque version of "Fra Diavolo." The PRINCESS'S will produce a new farce, by Mr. Augustus Mayhew, called "Drawing-room, Second Floor, and Attics." At the LYCEUM there will be no change, except in the revival of an old farce ("A Day After the Fair") and the return of Mr. Fechter after his late severe accident; and the OLYMPIC will probably not alter its programme, unless to introduce the burlesque "morality" prepared last Christmas by Mr. Tom Taylor. The SURREY announces a new melodrama, with Mr. Anderson in the chief character; while MADAME WILLIS will open its doors with an English opera company. ASTLEY'S promises a new drama, with extraordinary "effects," and the STRAND will open a new by Mr. Stirling Coyne, with Mdme. Celeste as the heroine. At the ADELPHI the bill will remain unchanged, consisting of "Deborah" and the pantomime.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

THOMAS WORTHMAN.—You will have seen from our last Number that Problem No. 1041 (sent in our opinion) be solved by the process you suggest.

J. H. S. (Bath).—Correct solution received.

J. P. T.—Your solutions of Problems sent by you are all right. 3. The key move to Enigma 1317 shall be given next week.

J. B. (Cheltenham).—Problem 1041 is wrong. 1. R to K 3rd, fine White proved ? No. 2 would play. No. 3 like a successful contemplation.

J. B. G.—Exceptionally clever of the sort; but who will be at the pains to solve a Problem with two solutions?

ALPHA.—You are bound to capture when you can be touched. 3. Tyx I, B to K 4th; 4. B to K B 6th. 5. No; the Problem, as we gave it, is without fear; you overlook the check by Kt.

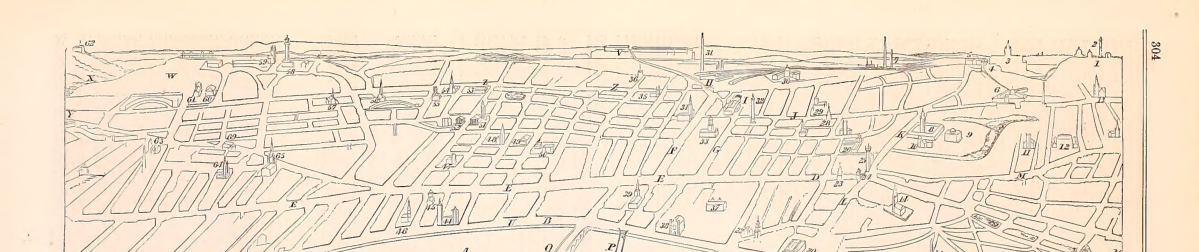
E. B. T.—It is correct, but much too easy.

J. P. T.—Your solution is correct.

J. P. T. (Bath).—Your solutions are all right.

W. B. T.—Defence both in difficulty and interest.

ALEXANDER.—Your solution, though not intended, to Problem No. 1040, by your mate in two moves. 1. Kt to Q 5th (ch), K to Q 4th; 2. Kt to K B 3rd, mate. What then?



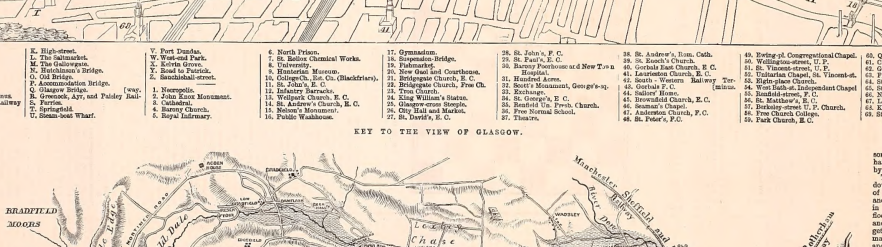
ALEXANDER.—In the position given, the player of the white men ought to win easily.

J. F. L.—We acknowledge correct solutions of any problem, even though they differ from the author's solution.

W. PENNEY.—It is not practicable to spare room for solutions to the same enigmas, more than a week after publication.

J. F. L.—We acknowledge correct solutions of Problem No. 1041, by J. P. T. (Bath).

SOLUTIONS OF PROBLEM NO. 1040 by Selina, Phil, Q. R., J. H., J. Shepherd, T. K. B., Alpha, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Omega, Rho, Sigma, Tau, Upsilon, Phi, Chi, Psi, Omega, E. Kidd, W. White, and L. Leverton, Plymouth; C. G., Lincoln; Rev. G. Gorham, Ely; Captain Spring, Lee; W. D. Chester; Sentry, C. B. Bernard Dev, The Dub Fenny, Burgh, Clun, Ajax, Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond, Ben Cruachan, Ben Ledi, Ben Venue, Ben Voirlich, Ben Ghlas, Ben Dearg, Ben Wyvis, Ben Attow, Ben Nevis



A. The River Clyde.
B. Broomielaw.
C. Glasgow Green.
D. The Trongate.
E. Argyle-street.
F. Buchanan-street.
G. Queen-street.
H. Caledonian Railway Terminus.
I. Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Terminus.
J. George-street.
K. High-street.
L. The Saltmarket.
M. The Gallowgate.
N. Hutchinson's Bridge.
O. Argyle-arcade.
P. Jamaica-street Bridge.
Q. Glasgow Bridge.
R. Greenock, Ayr, and Paisley Railway.
S. Ferries.
T. Springfield.
U. Steam-boat Wharf.
V. Port Dundas.
W. West-end Park.
X. Kelvin Grove.
Y. Road to Partick.
Z. Sandyford-street.
1. Necropolis.
2. John Knox Monument.
3. Cathedral.
4. Barony Church.
5. Royal Infirmary.
6. North Prison.
7. St. Rollox Chemical Works.
8. University.
9. Hunterian Museum.
10. College Ch., Int. Ch. (Blackfriars).
11. St. John's, E. C.
12. Trinity College.
13. Wellpark Church, E. C.
14. St. Andrew's Church, E. C.
15. Nelson's Monument.
16. Public Washhouse.
17. Gymnasium.
18. Stepenson-Bridge.
19. Fishmarket.
20. New Gaol and Courthouse.
21. Bridgegate Church, E. C.
22. Bridgegate Church, Free Ch.
23. Tron Church.
24. Glasgow Bridge Station.
25. Clyde Suspension Bridge.
26. City Hall and Market.
27. St. David's, E. C.
28. St. John's, F. C.
29. St. Paul's, E. C.
30. Barony Poorhouse and New Town Hospital.
31. Hundred Acres.
32. Scott's Monument, George's-sq.
33. Exchange.
34. St. George's, E. C.
35. Campbell Un. Presb. Church.
36. Free Normal School.
37. Theatre.
38. St. Andrew's, Rom. Cath.
39. St. Enoch's Church.
40. Gorbals East Church, E. C.
41. Laurieston Church, E. C.
42. South-Western Railway Terminus.
43. Gorbals F. C.
44. Dallier' Home.
45. Brownfield Church, E. C.
46. Seamar's Chapel.
47. Anderston Church, F. C.
48. St. Peter's, F.C.
49. Ewing-pl. Congregational Chapel.
50. Wellington-street, U. P.
51. St. Vincent-street, U. P.
52. Unitarian Chapel, St. Vincent-st.
53. Eight-place Church.
54. West Sixth-st. Independent Chapel
55. Rendrid-street, F. C.
56. St. Matthew's, E. C.
57. Berkeley-street U. P. Church.
58. Free Church College.
59. Park Church, E. C.
60. Queen's Rooms.
61. Claremont Church, U. P.
62. Gilmour-hill.
63. Finnieston Church, F. C.
64. St. Patrick's, R. C.
65. St. Mark's, F. C.
66. Napier's Rooms.
67. Lading-Shed.
68. Kingston Church, E. C.
69. St. John's Scotch Episcopal Church.

KEY TO THE VIEW OF GLASGOW.

(Continued from page 301.)

distress, we have engraved on page 297 a view of the remains of the mill called Broadhead Wheel, situated near Little Matlock, on the Loxley, where four or five workmen are sadly searching for their tools in a heap of timber, stones, and broken iron, beside the large water-wheel, now still and silent, upon whose busy revolution they formerly waited for employment. This scene, though a very simple one, is peculiarly characteristic of the district, and of the industrial habits of the people, whose portable tools, being the property of the workmen themselves, are usually kept for them at the workshops or mills when they go home at the close of the day. At Broadhead Wheel, it is said, there were only two boys at work at the time of the inundation, and it was supposed that both of them were drowned; but one of them has since appeared alive—the other, Walter Sooth, is not yet found. Besides these establishments of the staple manufacture of Sheffield, there were corn and paper mills, blacksmiths' and wheelwrights' shops, and farmsteads, employing in the aggregate some hundreds of men, who have been thrown out of work by the common disaster.

The strange mixture whirled down the rivers and the roads of this district from the ruin and ruin of all human industry in the path of the restless flood, was both a grotesque and a lamentable sight. Together with the fragments of machinery, the piles of wood and iron that buried in the oozy mud, the broken wheels, the pieces of houses—flooring, roof, rafters, and staircases—which had floated miles away from their demolished walls, might be seen the trunks of trees uprooted from the fields, the washed-out stores of barns and farmyards, and the bodies of drowned oxen, horses, and pigs, of agricultural as well as manufacturing stock. The imagination of our readers may conceive what a medley assemblage of relics—contributed by all the villages, factories, and farmsteads along the Loxley Valley—was at last collected upon the low land just outside of Sheffield, on the left bank of the river Don. As soon as the retirement of the waters allowed the labourers to set to work to clear away the drifted masses,

BRADFIELD MOORS
Bole Edge
Bradfield Dale
Dale Dike
Agden Dike
Ughill Moors
Ughill Dale
Stony Delph
Rivelin Dale
Loxley Chase
Wadsley
Loxley
Wisewood
Malin Bridge
Hillsborough
Owlerton
Penistone Road
Sheffield and Rotherham Railway
Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway River Don
Rivelin
Stanningfirth
Bower Spring
Bower Building
Brightside
Carbrook
Attercliffe
Darnall
Woodhouse
Handsworth
Tinsley
Low Marsh
Sheffield
Old Wicker
Wicker
Sheaf
Park
Ecclesall
Nether Edge
Sharrow
Heeley
Norton
Norton Lees
Crookes
Crookes Moor
Upper Hallam
Lower Hallam
Hallam Moor
Ranmoor
Fulwood
Broomhill
Broomhall
Glossop Road
Upper Don Pool
Lower Don Pool
Sheffield Moor
Wadsley Bridge
Wadsley Common
Wadsley Church
Wadsley Church Road
Loxley Road
Loxley Valley
Loxley Common
Loxley Chapel
Stannington
Stannington Road
Stannington Moor
Stannington Dam
Stannington Dam Road
Rivelin Dam
Rivelin Head
Rivelin Valley
Rivelin Glen
Rivelin Mill
Rivelin Bridge
Rivelin Dam Road
Rivelin Head Road
Rivelin Valley Road
Rivelin Glen Road
Rivelin Mill Road
Rivelin Bridge Road

THE CITY OF GLASGOW

We this week present our readers with a large Picture-plan or Bird's-eye View of the city of Glasgow, engraved on a supplemental sheet. Its topographical details are explained by means of the key-plan and index of names, which will be found on the opposite page. With such illustrations of the locality, no very elaborate description of its site and general aspect is required. This city is the largest in Scotland, and one of the greatest provincial towns in the United Kingdom. It stands in the county of Lanark, forty-two miles west-by-south of Edinburgh, and about four hundred by the shale river, after a course of 100 miles, discharges itself into the Firth, about twenty miles west of Glasgow, having the port and town of Greenock on the south bank, and the opposite shore of Dumbartonshire on the north. The manner in which its channel has been artificially improved as far up as Glasgow will be explained presently. Here it is first encountered with the great town or city which has grown up at that place, and which has extended considerably beyond the limits of the parish. The view of Glasgow shown in our Engraving is taken from the south side, and from a point considerably elevated above the line on the north bank of the Clyde. On the south bank, in the foreground of our View, are the suburbs of Gorbals and Hutchesontown, suburbs of Hutchesontown on the one, or to the right hand, almost every building in which is a cotton factory, and to the left hand of the spectator. The city of Glasgow proper lies straight before him, in the middle of our Engraving, with the suburbs of Calton and Bridgeton on his right hand, and those of Anderston and Finnieston on his left, all forming one continuous town on the north bank of the river. The harbour of Glasgow is on the south or near side of the river itself up to the first bridge—that is, to Glasgow Bridge, so called par excellence, which crosses the river in our View. It is, however, sometimes called the Broomielaw Bridge, after the Broomielaw Quay, on the north bank, near to it. The present bridge, designed by Telford, is a fine structure, faced with granite, 906 ft. long and 52 ft. wide, with five arches, one of which is an opening, and a suspension-bridge higher up the river. Those parts of the city and suburbs which lie nearest the river are on level ground; but the northern parts are on the flat and on the low ridge, beyond which there is a gentler acclivity towards the north-west.

The general appearance of the city is not inviting as that of some other great manufacturing towns. Together with the innumerable tall chimneys, which are the characteristic feature which relieve the outline of its mass. The buildings are mostly of white freestone; many of the streets are handsomely constructed, and many private houses and warehouses of a certain degree of elegance and of architectural merit. The principal streets, which run in the Irongate, with Argyle-street, its continuation, to 80ft. wide, and may be esteemed, as well as Buchanan-street and Queen-street, which cross Argyle-street, Trongate, and Gallowgate, to be 60ft. wide, as a city. The Royal Exchange, in Queen-street; the Tontine, on the north side of Trongate; the Trades' Hall, in Glassford-street; the Merchants' House, with the Huntarian Museum behind it, are among the finest public buildings of the city. The Cross, at the junction of Trongate and Argyle-street, is a Corinthian style, with a triple columnar portico, and columns along the sides, the whole surmounted by a dome, with a cupola and a fine structure of some pretensions. An equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, by Marochetti, stands in front of it. The other ornamental monuments, comprising a Nelson obelisk in the Green, or Park, on the east side of the city, a Doric column, and a statue of Sir Walter Scott, in St. George's-square, with several statues of illustrious men born in the city, are all more or less worthy of note.

We have not space to enter into the extravagance of the architectural and other places of worship, except the venerable Cathedral, or High Church, which dates from the 13th or 14th century. The World is, on the steep bank of a small stream called the Molendinar, which flows into the Clyde from the north. The cathedral stands in a wooded shadowed of yore by a forest of pine-trees, the original Celtic inhabitants of which gave the name of Glasgow (Glas-dhu, or "Dark Ravine") as though to have settled in pre-historic times. The church was dedicated to St. Mungo, or John Kentigern, the founder of the first Bishop. It has a commanding position to the north-east of the city. The custody of this ancient cathedral is supposed to belong to the Crown, but the management of it appears to be in the hands of themselves. Within the last thirty years, however, large sums have been spent in the restoration and repair of the fabric. In January, 1856, some hatted and public-spirited gentlemen conceived the idea of decorating the interior with stained-glass windows, as the finest of the best workmanship and good pictorial design. For this purpose a committee was formed, and subscriptions raised. Mr. Charles Neath Wilson, then of the Government School of Art at Glasgow, was commissioned to prepare cartoons for the work. This was executed by the Royal Establishment of Glass-painting at Munich, from designs by various artists. The choir, the nave, the transept, and the eight side-aisles have new windows, filled with scenes from the Old and New Testament; and there is nowhere in Europe, either in ancient or modern architecture, a more complete and chronologically arranged a scheme of Bible illustration by means of stained-glass windows. The cathedral has also a fine crypt, or subterranean series, and these are nearly ready. We must not, however, linger in the city of the dead, but return to the busy scenes of the industrial and commercial activity of the town and port of Glasgow.

Glasgow is not a seaport town. Although the ground required for their construction has been secured. But, with an ingenuity born of necessity and most vigorously applied, the barriers of the navigation have deepened and widened the formerly shallow stream, and, by making it securely on both sides, have converted the river itself into a harbour. Glasgow Bridge is now 906 ft. in length, ranging from 18ft. to 21ft. Sixty years ago its depth, under favourable circumstances, was but 9ft. Now it is 20ft. at low water. Within these massive quay walls extend downwards on each bank to a distance of 1,000 yards, and more, the docks and basins of extensive and space of substantial but temporary wharves. The whole combined furnishes quays and accommodation for ships of the largest burden miles, where fifty years ago people might be seen upon the jetties, with rod and line, fishing for salmon, and where there was even a solitary sail would disturb their enjoyment. In 1863 the arrivals of sailing ships numbered 3148, with an aggregate tonnage of 350,956; and the arrivals of steamers reached 6556, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,035,982. In 1801 the harbour dues levied amounted to £2450 16s. 10d.; in 1824 to £12,000 16s. 2d.; and in 1863 they amounted to £116,083 7s. 10d. A harbour so situated and constructed would, however, be of little commercial importance, if it were not for a channel of proportionate dimensions. This difficult object has been accomplished principally under the superintendence of a succession of eminent engineers. The magnitude of these operations may be inferred from the fact that the Act obtained alone for the widening of the river and extension of the harbour has cost upwards of £1,000,000 sterling, and that more than £700,000 has been expended in construction and dredging. Of the harbour dues mentioned above as levied in 1863 there was expended by the Trust, in ordinary repairs and improvements, £30,000 15s. 7d., irrespective entirely of new works and improvements. All these large sums were thus economically and efficiently administered by a body constituted free of expense, by gentlemen elected by their fellow-citizens.

In nothing, perhaps, is the commercial spirit of Glasgow more exemplified than in the progress of the ship-building trade. The material used in shipbuilding is, of course, principally iron. We may remark that this iron is dug, smelted, rolled, and finished within a few miles generally of the city. The mineral fields contiguous to the quays and wharves at the city the shipbuilders yards commence, and occur at intervals for miles along the banks of the river. Very soon after iron began to be used as a substitute for timber in the construction of vessels, a series of river-steamers were turned out in succession at Glasgow. Notwithstanding much opposition from prejudice and an adverse decision from the Admiralty, which declared the utter unsuitability of this material, the iron shipbuilders of the Clyde maintained their practice; and when at length the Admiralty reversed its decision, the builders of Clyde were found occupied by a steadily increasing number of iron-ship yards, many of which have since attained to celebrity by the magnitude of a Great Eastern. We have already seen how two ancient coal-steam-ships of our own Navy—the Black Prince and Hector, with the iron floating-battery Erebus, and the Danish armour plated frigate Rolf Krake—were built and launched almost within the city; besides the yet unnamed Danish steam-ram, now detained in the Clyde. The results of the last named is now occupied by the Java, a Conard liner of 3000 tons.

The statistics of shipbuilding on the Clyde during the year 1863 about nine miles and twenty-one vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 124,000 tons, were launched. Of these thirty-one were iron sailing vessels, and four were sailing-vessels of wood and iron combined; sixty-seven were iron screw-steamers, and two were vessels of the same material with paddle and screw; and lastly of wood; thirty-eight were iron paddle-steamers; there was one iron war-ram, the Rolf Krake, and one iron steam-dredger; a total of 144 vessels constructed at or near the city, while the wooden vessels, which we do not particularise, were built lower down the Clyde. In addition to these were a multitude of smaller craft, built at Greenock, since the 1st of January, 1864, exhibit a marked increase in proportion to those of the same months in 1863; and the quantity of tonnage at present in course of construction on the Clyde considerably exceeds 100,000 tons. The total statistics of 1864 will be of a quantity those of last year. Before leaving this subject of the harbour it is interesting to advert to the statistics of the revenue and trade of port, as indicating, to some extent, the quantities, if not the value, of the imports. The dues collected in 1863 amounted to upwards of £469 13s. 6d.; and in 1863, after successive reductions of duty upon almost every article of importation, and the consequent increase in the greater number of those articles, the amount collected reached £1,000 15s. 7d. Much is due to the progress of shipbuilding and navigation at Glasgow, which is really remarkable. If we recollect that a hundred years ago the river Clyde was impassable except for a few flat-bottomed boats, and that 1770 the depth of water in the Ford about two miles below the city being only 11ft. 3 in. at low tide and 21ft. 6 in. at high water, the navigation of the river was then literally perceptible at the bridge. There is now a depth of 18ft. or 19ft. at the same tide and 30ft. at high water. At the spring tide a steamer, extending over a space of 375,000 square yards, will accommodate hundreds of vessels, and ships drawing 20ft. of water with good anchorage and room for them to get round without being towed. There are now eight iron graving docks, 1500, with an aggregate tonnage of a million and a half. These figures, compared with the significant amount of maritime commerce at Glasgow before its great engineering works, will serve more emphatically as a sample proof of what may be done by skill and enterprise to remedy the defects of nature. We have not seen in the world so fine a natural example of this sort of conquest over the difficulties of a local situation.

While Glasgow has improved her river and created a port for shipping, she has no less made good use of the mineral wealth of that district of Scotland which surrounds her, with good coal and ironstone, of which she is the natural outlet. The cotton manufactures of Glasgow are very considerable. Before the American war, forty or fifty years ago, the cotton-spinning mules and sewing-thread were in full and constant work. As many were employed in the weaving of the cotton goods. These with the carpet, worsted, linen, silk, and mixed fabrics, gave employment to thirty thousand persons. The cotton trade of Glasgow, however, must be added the multitude of handloom-weavers in all the suburbs of Glasgow, and in the Glasgow branches of the cotton trade engaged in the factories and printworks of that district beyond the limits of the city. Glasgow manufactures also large quantities of the cheap linens of Scotland, and these produced 30,500 tons of pig iron in 1863, as compared to 31 in 1862, and 29,000 tons in 1861, besides 38 not in blast, and the production amounted to 1,160,000 tons, of which Glasgow and its neighbourhood made 1,105,000 tons. The abundance of iron and facility of conveyance naturally render the production of coal extensive and very extensive in the district. Indeed, the castings of Glasgow are known throughout the world. The home consumption it is impossible to ascertain, but the shipments at Glasgow, for the year 1863, were as follows:—Coastwise, foreign, 17,678 tons; coasting, 19,682 tons. Railway chairs, foreign, 30,000 tons; coastwise, 11,012 tons. These do not include the castings sent by rail. We have already noticed the construction of iron bridges and marine steamers, to which may be added the rails of all locomotive engines and carriages, machinery for the mills, and a great deal of other work. The iron-plate trade is also very considerable in Glasgow manufactures and trades, such as the breweries, and the sugar-refineries, and the manufacturing in timber. There is no city in Great Britain so multitudinous in its pursuits. Doubtless, much of the progress of Glasgow is attributable to the fact that it is not in the general excellence of her productions. Depression may overtake any branches of trade, as lately it did the cotton-trade; but all do not suffer at one time. Hence, there is not that general ruin and bad misfortunes which sometimes come upon localities dependent upon a single kind of industry, as was the case in the cotton districts of Lancashire, depending solely on cotton.

The Glasgow Corporation in 1856, and opened by her Majesty in person on Oct. 14, 1859, deserve especial notice. From the Clyde they convey water by the Loch Katrine, a distance thirty-four miles straight, the pure water of that lovely Highland lake is conveyed, by means of a tunnel, aqueducts, and iron-pipes, and a pipe, under the mountains, over the valleys, and across the rivers, into the heart of the populous city. The engineer was Mr. Bateman. The total cost of the works was about £700,000. The Corporation also paid £675,000 to buy up the old waterworks, which belonged to a private company, and the total cost of the whole, at the gates of the City, has been kept in operation, the rest being now superseded, the water from Loch Katrine is found sufficient for all purposes in the amount of its supply. Descending from an elevation of 360 ft. above the sea-level, it has a pressure of a half million. Water daily poured into Glasgow for the public and private wants of a population of 450,000 souls, and in the case of fire. Hydrants are in service.

This sketch has been more especially directed to a review of the commercial and material progress of Glasgow. But it must not be supposed that the pursuits and appliances of education are neglected in that city. Glasgow has a flourishing University, founded above four centuries ago, and which still maintains its high efficiency, down to the lowest parochial school, good opportunities of acquiring information abound for both old and young. There are the Andersonian Institution, founded in 1795; the Mechanics' Institute, the Mechanic Institute, a number of elementary schools, the colleges of divinity and medicine, and a variety of scientific, literary, and philosophical societies.

The charitable interests of suffering humanity left unheeded. The Royal Infirmary is one of the noblest hospitals in Europe. It has sheltered and relieved since its erection more than 5662 inmates and 13,768 dispensary or outdoor patients, while affording to numerous students the invaluable opportunities so wide a field of observation. There are likewise institutions for the blind, the deaf, and the dumb, with many charitable foundations for the relief of the aged, the unfortunate, the miserably poor, and for the assistance of the passing stranger in the need.

The municipal government of the city is intrusted to a Lord Provost, eight Bailies, two River Magistrates, a Dean of Guild, a Treasurer, and thirty-seven Councillors, elected annually by the £10 ratepayers. We heartily respond to the motto of their Corporation, "Let Glasgow flourish!"

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.

BIRTH.

On the 16th inst., at Bodnigh Grange, Hants, the wife of Thomas Sergeo, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGE.

On the 15th inst., at Kennet House, Arrahies, by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Glasgow and Galloway, James George Hay Boyd, of Townsend, Major, unattached (late 59th Foot), to Mary Ashley Adeline, youngest surviving daughter of Charles Somerville M'Alester, of Loup and Kennox.

DEATHS.

On the 19th inst., at 2 Fulwood Park, Liverpool, Elizabeth Macknight, wife of Robert Christie, Esq., M.D.

On the 20th inst., at Amsterdam, Jane Elizabeth, the beloved wife of Mr. F. Brook-deep, and deservedly lamented by her sorrowing family; aged 45. Friends out of Holland are requested to accept this intimation.

MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY will APPEAR at the EGYPTIAN HALL, Piccadilly, in his New Ethiopian opera, entitled PARIS, and MRS. BROWN AT THE PLAY, Every Evening (except Saturday), in April, and Wednesday and Saturday Mornings. Stalls, 3s.; Second Seats, 2s.; Gallery, 1s. The Box-office at the Egyptian Hall is open from Ten o'clock until Five.

ROYAL HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY'S GARDEN, SOUTH KENSINGTON.—The Gardens will be OPENED THIS DAY, MARCH 29, at SIX O'CLOCK in the MORNING. Fellows admitted at Twelve o'clock. Tickets, 5s. each; Saturday, 10s. 6d.; Monday, 2s. 6d.; Wednesday, 7s. 6d.; and on Two Days only, 10s. The Gardens will be in the Grand Season. The Band will play in the Conservatory from 4 to 6 P.M.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON TERCENTENARY FESTIVAL.

PROGRAMME OF ARRANGEMENTS.

Position—In front of CARLILE, R.G., CHARLOTTE-STREET.

The following Entertainments will be given in the GREAT PAVILION,

MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 21, CONCERT.

SATURDAY, APRIL 26, BANQUET.

Tickets, 10s.

MONDAY MORNING, APRIL 28, MESSIAH.

Tickets, 10s. and 5s.

MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 28, CONCERT.

TUESDAY MORNING, APRIL 29, MESSIAH.

TUESDAY EVENING, APRIL 29, TWELFTH NIGHT.

Tickets, 10s. and 5s.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, APRIL 30, CONCERT.

Reserved Seats 10s. and 5s. 6d.

THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 1, AS YOU LIKE IT.

Tickets, 10s. and 5s.

FRIDAY EVENING, MAY 2, GRAND FANCY-DRESS BALL.

Tickets by voucher, 21s.

During the Festival there will be Readings, Recreations, &c., and the Gardens will be open from Ten o'clock in the morning.

Tickets will be issued to Members of Corporations and Members of Parliament on the claim of each day's entertainment.

Engravings of the Pavilion, the Site, and Plan of the Pavilion and Gardens, Bird's-eye-view, Bow-plane, Sketches-in-Avon, and 2, Banner-all, Sketches, &c.

All orders for Tickets must be accompanied by a remittance for the amount. Cheques and Post Office Orders should be made payable to the Secretary, Mr. Arthur Sketchley, Avon, or to the Committee, No. 8, Bond-Street, London.

THE ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS, EARLSWOOD, Redhill, Surrey.

A BAZAAR, in aid of the Funds of the Asylum, will be held, at the MANSION-HOUSE, LONDON, on SATURDAY, the 29th, MONDAY, the 5th, TUESDAY, the 6th of JULY NEXT, under the Patronage of

Her Most Gracious Majesty the QUEEN,

H.R.H. the Duchess of Cambridge,

H.R.H. the Princess Mary of Cambridge,

and the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Committee.

Contributions of useful and ornamental work, clothing for the Asylum, Fancy Articles, Toys, Books, Prints, Pictures, Plants, Shrubs, Flowers, Confectionery, Refreshments, Wines, Spirits, Fruit, botanical specimens, nursery, stationery, cutlery, perfumery, glass, china, hats, caps, boots, and any other articles suitable for sale, will be thankfully received.

Contributions for the approved value of six guineas will entitle to a Life Vote.

JOHN CONOLLY, M.D., D.C.L., Hon. Secretary.

WILLIAM DUNCOMBE, Secretary.

OFFICES,

London Joint-Stock Bank Premises-street, E.C.

Earlswood Asylum, near Redhill, Surrey.

Office, 26, Finsbury, E.C.

BANK OF NEW ZEALAND.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF GOVERNOR AND COUNCIL.

Bankers to the General Government of New Zealand, the Provincial Governments, and Municipalities.

CAPITAL, £500,000. RESERVED FUND, £50,000.

Branches and Agencies in New Zealand.

Auckland	Hokianga	Onehunga	Russell
New Plymouth	Lyttelton	Tokomairiro	Riverton
Wanganui	Napier	Wellington (Manager)	Wairarapa
Wellington	Christchurch	Waikouaiti	Dunedin
Nelson	Akaroa	Waimate	Invercargill
Picton	Kaiapoi	Waitaki	Queenstown

Branches and Agencies are also established in the principal towns of the Australian Colonies and in San Francisco.

New Zealand Government and other Debentures issued, and Banking business transacted with that Colony, on terms which may be learned on application at the Offices.

No. 7, Bank-buildings, corner of Old Broad-street and Lothbury, E.C. JAMES MACKAY, Manager.

VOLUNTEER and GENERAL ASSURANCE ASSOCIATION.—Fire, Life, Annuities, Endowments, Volunteer Corps Accident, Plate Glass, and Fidelity Guarantee. LIFE POLICIES are issued for any amount from £10 to £500, at moderate rates, and without profits, by which the assured secure the full sum assured, or premiums and bonuses paid quickly.

London, 15, Adelaide-place, London-bridge, E.C. J. B. SYKES, Secretary.

N.B.—Agents wanted.

A LADY REQUIRED to MANAGE a CLUB. The rent is proposed to be raised a sum on security. She would be required to give security of nothing with a capital here.—Address C. 107, Fleet-street.

EDUCATION, in preparation for Naval SCHOLARSHIPS, &c.—The Rev. J. E. RUSSELL, M.A., Assistant Mathematical Master, Eton (late 7th Poplin Prize scholar) has Pupils to prepare for the Examinations.—Address, Windsor.

WORTHY of NOTE—All kinds of Cutlery and Razors, particularly sensible and reliable, Scissors, Carpet and Sheep Shearing Machines, and Medicine Chests, of the BEST QUALITY, and at MODERATE PRICES. The Illustrated CATALOGUE, Gratis, on Application. THE SHEFFIELD CUTLERY, Electro, and Ornamental Metal Co., 67, Strand, London, W.C.

MALVERN.—HYDROPATHY.—The Establishment for this much-visited water-cure is NOW OPEN. PATIENTS will be RECEIVED for the RECEPTION of PATIENTS in MAY. It is situated in the most healthy part of Malvern, and has been specially planned for the use of his proprietor, in practice of 20 years' experience. Detailed prospectus for the convenient possession of Hydropathic treatment, Turkish and Russian baths, and terms apply to Dr. LAMBERT, Priessnitz House, Malvern.

"We are all players."—As You Like It." Act II. Scene 7.

GODALL'S SHAKSPEARE

PORTRAIT-OF-THE-PERIOD PLAYING CARDS.

Historians in the United Kingdom

Will find in these Cards a key to the Shakspeare year many persons may think the previous year of Shakspeare Celebration.

C. GODDALL AND SON, Cheltenham, London, Liverpool.

LOTS of FUN for 1s.—APPARATUS for the PERFORMANCE of 100 wonderful Magical Experiments. Instructive for many. Post-free, 14 stamps. Ogilvie's Magic-Circle, 2 Passage, 12, Newgate-street, London, E.C. Established 1840.

JENNER and KNEWSTUB, to the Queen, Manufacturers of Ecclesiastical Vestments, Robes, and Hoods, Fine-medal Dressing-cases, Travelling, Dressing, and Writing Bags; Despatch-boxes, Envelope-cases, Portfolios, Blotting-books, Albums, Church Services, and Illuminated Horn-books for Stamping Monograms. List free.—Jenner and Knewstub, 33, St. James's-street (removed from 62, St. James's-street) ; 66 and 67, Jermyn-street.

PAPER AGE!!!—PAPER COLLARS, Plain and Fancy Patterns, 5d., 6d., and 6d. per dozen; 1s. 6d., 2s., and 2s. 6d. per box. Sample collar for 6 stamps. Cuffs, Shirts, and Gloves. Agent wanted.—ARTHUR CLARKSON, the Cheap Haberdasher and Toy Importer (Patentee), 209, High Holborn, W.C.

H. WALKER'S PATENT RIDGED-CORRUGATED INDIA-RUBBER SPRINGS, Fixed in Chairs, Sofas, Beds, &c., for Carriages, Railways, Steamers, Yachts, &c. Prize Medal, 1862. Illustrated Price-list free.—H. Walker, Sole Manufacturer, 4, Bridge-street, Westminster, S.W.

NEW BOOKS.

Cheaper Edition in 1 vol., with portrait, 5s., bound,

LIFE of the REV. EDWARD IRVING. By MRS. OLIPHANT.

HURST and BLACKETT, Publishers, 13, Great Marlborough-st.

NEW ILLUSTRATED FAIRY TALES.

Ready next week, price 5s. 6d.,

THE SPIRIT OF THE MOUNTAINS. A Series of Forty Fairy Tales, with Illustrations.

London: J. Allen, 30, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

Ready this Day, Part I., price 2d., pp. 32, with Illustrations, and Part II. on April 15, price 2d.,

THE VICAR of WAKEFIELD.

"Perfect pictures, engraved with a care and finish that do full justice to Mulready."—Athenæum.

"Mulready's Vicar of Wakefield."—Art Journal.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, 4to, 21s.,

DALZIELS' ILLUSTRATED ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Part 4, for April, 1862, price 1s., pp. 96, completes Vol. I.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Just published, 8vo, cloth, gilt, 1s.; in paper cover, 6d.,

CROQUET. The Revised Laws of the Game. By HERBERT and WALTER JAQUES.

LONGMAN and CO., Paternoster-row.

Price 6d. Illustrated, 1s.,

THE ENGLISHWOMAN'S DOMESTIC MAGAZINE. Contents of No. XLVIII. (APRIL):—

Sketches of Character. By Mrs. Ellis.—Mrs. Beeton's Nursery and Sick Room. By Isabella Beeton.—Mrs. Beeton's Cookery and Pastry. By Isabella Beeton.—Mrs. Beeton's Needlework. By Isabella Beeton.—A Tale of Society. Three Chapters.—The Englishwoman's Conservatory.—Fashions for May.—Fashions for the Month.—The Fine Art Gallery.—Mrs. Beeton's Model Bill of Fare.—Mrs. Beeton's Model Bill of Fare.—Mrs. Beeton's Model Bill of Fare

BRIGHTON and BACK for 3s. on EASTER SUNDAY and MONDAY, from London Bridge, Victoria, and Kensington, at 8 a.m. Children under twelve years, 2s. Luggage allowed.

HASTINGS, ST. LEONARDS, EASTBOURNE, and LEWES, by the BRIGHTON line, on EASTER SUNDAY and EASTER MONDAY. From Victoria at 7.45 a.m. and from London Bridge at 8.0 a.m. There and Back for 5s.6d. No luggage allowed.

GRAND EXHIBITION of HYACINTHS, TULIPS, and other BULBOUS ROOTS and SEED in connection with their ANNUAL GRAND EXHIBITION of HYACINTHS and other Spring Flowers, at 21, Old Bond-street, by the HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY. Admission, by presentation of address card, from 11 to 4 o'clock, 1s. Open to the public on Wednesday and Friday, Eighteen-pence. London, W.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS post-free, at the annexed prices:—10 fine hardy annuals, 1s.; 20 ditto, 2s.; 10 choice annuals, 1s.; 20 ditto, 2s.; 10 beautiful biennials, 1s.; 20 ditto, 2s. From R. W. KERSHAW, Florist, 67, Highstreet, Battle, Sussex.

WINES.—CHARLES TYRRELL'S Sherries, 16s., 18s., and Claret, 18s. per doz. To be obtained post and cheap at 21, Mansell-street, Aldgate. Terms, cash against the delivery of the Goods. Wine, and sold to the public at reasonable prices.

Sherries and Claret—Oily, Oxford-street, W.
Report and Bottling Yards—12, Suffolk-street, Cockspur-street, S.W.

PURE PICKLES, SAUCES, JAMS, &c., and Table Delicacies of the highest quality and flavour, bottled by CROSSE and BLACKWELL, Purveyors to the Queen, Soho-square, London.
May be obtained from all Grocers and Oilmen.

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE delicious and nourishing. The healthiest and most delicate aliment for breakfast. Unsurpassed highly nutritious. A small quantity goes a long way. Sold by Grocers, Chemists, &c., in packets, Tablets, and tins. Manufactory, Paris.

T. S. HUT and SONS, Makers to the Queen and Prince of Wales.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE and COCOA, The superiority of J. S. Fry and Sons' article has been attested by numerous analyses during a century.

FRY'S CHOCOLATE, IN STICKS and DROPS, for EATING.
Also, the Cocoa Nibs in pure purity.
DELICIOUS, REINVIGORATING, and NUTRITIOUS.

COOKING PREPARED COCOA
for Puddings, Custards, Blancmanges, &c.
Manufactured and Patented by
J. S. KINGSFORD and SON,
Oswego Mills, Silvertown, E.
It is the critical opinion of the Profession that of maize established 1848, commands the highest price from the trade, and offers the best food for the human race.
It is invaluable in any of the imitations of Arrowroot, Sago, and Corn, and is more delicious.
The Cocoa has the natural golden tinge, and not the chalk white produced by artificial process.
Sold by Grocers, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

KEEN'S GENUINE MUSTARD,
Very Manufactured 1742.
Sold in 1lb. and 1lb. Canisters, at 1s. and 2s. each, and in Packets, at 6d. and 1s. each, by all Grocers.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

LETTING PATENT 100. PRIZE MEDAL, 1862.
ROBINSON'S PATENT GROATS is the most valuable preparation for making pure and delicate gruel. Nothing has ever been known that will so completely supply its place.
ROBINSON'S PATENT BARLEY makes a delicious custard pudding. Nothing with which have been tried will make so delicate. It is appreciated as a non-inflammatory diet, is recommended by the faculty, and has long been used in the nursery for mother and infant.
KEEN, ROBINSON, BELLVILLE, and CO., London.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
and awarded the Prize Medal 1862.

FIELD'S CELEBRATED UNITED SERVICE SOAP TABLETS, 4d. and 6d. each, sold by all Grocers and Chandlers throughout the Kingdom. It is the most special soap for Toilet, and are that the name of "FIELD," and "Field, Purveyor to the Queen," is stamped on and for exportation on the Wrapper. Upper Marsh, Lambeth. A reward of £50 is offered for the detection of any person who counterfeits the above.

CANDLES. Price Medal. PARAFFINE. The Patentees of the Paraffine Candle for the Military Stations, &c., of India supply the original Manufacture to the London of the 1857 Price Medal, ensures the public against any spurious imitations. Their brand is on all packets and boxes. Sold by Chandlers throughout the Kingdom. Wholesale and for exportation at the Works, Belvedere-road, Lambeth. Agents may be obtained in all the principal Cities of the United States and Canada.

LANGDALE'S ETHYL, C^{4}H^{5}, will positively remove the most obstinate and severest Headache in a few minutes, without producing any unpleasant effects. The inhalation of Ethyl is perfectly harmless in its extraordinary efficacy, genuine.—Post-free, 1s. 6d., from the Manufacturer, Mr. Langdale, Chemist, Holborn-hill, London. Wholesale, Bell, Sons, and Co., Chemical printers, Fleet-street.

DENNEFORD'S FLUID MAGNESIA is an excellent remedy for Acidity of the Stomach, Heartburn, Headache, Gout, Indigestion, and all Disorders arising from Acidity or constitution.—17, New Bond-street, London; and all Chemists.

DYSPEPSIA.—MORSON'S PEPSINE WINE and LOZENGES. Dyspepsia and its effectual relief is explained in a pamphlet, sent free by post on receipt of two stamps. Sold by Thomas Morson and Son, Southampton-row, Russell-square, W. In tasting 1s. 9d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d. each. Pepsine Lozenges, 2s. and 3s. per box. Pepsine Wine, 4s. 6d. each.

ALL afflicted with WEAK EYES may obtain immediate relief by using DR. WARNER'S EYE WASH. It removes all obstructions, clearing the Eyes from Mucus, Inflammation, &c., and restores the sight in a few days. Sold by Sanger, Oxford-st.; Prout, Strand; Hannay, Oxford-st.; Savory and Moore, New Bond-st.

TEETH.—Mr. ESKELL'S TOOTH ADDRESS has only left Grosvenor-street, Bond-street. Hippotamus-tooth Mineral Paste, 2s. 6d. per box. Tooth-powder, 1s. 6d. per box. Tooth-brushes, 2s. 6d. each. Consultations Free from Fee or Charge. At home daily.

SUMMERS'S COUGH and VOICE LOZENGES, Jurors' Pills for the Exemption, and Sweetness Tablets for Pure Breath. Sold by all druggists, or sent free by post, from the Proprietor, J. S. Summers, Chemist, Custom-road, London, by receipt of 14 stamps.

YOUNG'S ARNICATED CORN PLASTER, 1s. 1½d. each. YOUNG'S ARNICATED BUNION PLASTER, 1s. Hard over lavished. Sent by post 14 stamps. 31, Shaftesbury-street, Fitzroy-square.

GALVANISM v. NERVOUS PAINS, EXHAUSTION, INDIGESTION, PARALYSIS, &c.—Mr. JOHN CHANDLER'S ELECTRO-GALVANIC APPLIANCES for the above DISEASES, ANTI-SPECTIC BANDS, and ELECTRO-GALVANIC BELTS, &c., have rendered them exceedingly durable, friendly, and effectual. Pamphlets, containing prices and mode of use, may be had of Messrs. Hannay, Oxford-street, and Sanger, 150, Oxford-street, and, in self-application, or simultaneously in all the principal nervous centres, with the shocks of regulated intensity, which, by the aid of a new and simple and powerful battery combination, are rendered perfectly safe, and are applicable to the most delicate constitutions, in neuralgia, nervous headache, pain, asthma, hysteria, epilepsy, functional disorders, nervous debility, &c.
Mr. John Chandler, 23, Old Bond-street, corner of Clifford-street. Visit Hours 10 to 4. Mr. Chandler attends at 23, Old Bond-street, on Full particulars see Prospectus, sent post-free by J. L. Pattenden and Co., Galvanic Establishment, 75, Oxford-street, London.

STARCH MANUFACTURERS
TO H.R.H. THE PRINCESS OF WALES.
GLENFIELD PATENT STARCH,
used in the Royal Laundry,
and awarded the Prize Medal 1862.

WANTED, LEFT-OFF CLOTHES, Uniforms given. Ladies or gentlemen waited on by addressing to Mr. or Mrs. Moses, 81, Aldgate, London. Established 1760. Parcels from the country value in cash immediately remitted. Banksman 1760.

FRAMES for the COLOURED PICTURES. Macaroon Gilt Frames, glass, and backs, 7s.; Maple and Ash, 7s., at 6160, REGENT-ST., 74, St. Martin's-lane, and 23, Drury-lane, W.C. Illustrations free.

THIRTY CHARMING COLOURED PRINTS, printed in oil colours, ready for the wall, in handsome gilt frames, new rose and pearl, for 5s. 6d. or example. The subjects are as follow:—Going to Church, the Country Mile, Rustic Hospitality, the Village Pet, Orphans at the Cottage Door, Mother's Grave, the Soldier's Return, the Departure, the Sailor's Return, Sunday Morning, Sunday Evening, Rustic Courtship, the Orphans, the Doctor's Home, Rustic Courtship, the Pet Lamb, the Lord's Prayer; Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter; Morning on the Mountains, Evening on the Mountains, Noon, Night. Sent to any railway station in England, Scotland, and Wales, on receipt of P.O.O. for 5s. 6d., by GEORGE REES, 179, Fleet-street, London, where the case may be inspected.

THE NATIONAL SHAKSPEARE GALLERY, by ARTISTS of EMINENCE, Painted and Sculptured, Engraved and Art. Published under the Special Patronage of Her Majesty the Queen, and dedicated by Command to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.
Copies will be issued, in the order of registration, to subscribers through any bookseller.
Wedgwood Ceramic Statuary, 19 bas-reliefs, price One Guinea.
Parian Statuary, 19 statuettes, price Two Guineas.
Subscribers' names received by the Agents in London, and their Country Correspondents, and at the Offices of the Art Union, 444, Strand.
HOWELL, JAMES, and CO.,
Goldsmiths, Art Agents, and Publishers, and Prince and Princess of Wales's Jewellers, 5, Regent-street, W.
Photographs and prospectuses forwarded post-free.
Illustrations free.

ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE.—MAPPIN, WEBB, and CO., Manufacturers, guarantee the following to be of sterling quality, and exchange it if not approved of:

	Plain	Thread	Ornamental
	£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
Table spoons or forks, per doz.	1 7 0	1 14 0	2 12 0
Dessert ditto	0 18 0	1 5 0	1 16 0
Tea ditto	0 12 0	0 18 0	1 0 0
Gravy ditto	0 12 0	0 18 0	1 0 0
Salt spoons, gilt bowls ...	0 3 0	0 5 0	0 6 0
Fish carvers and forks, in case...	0 13 0	1 1 0	1 5 0
Pair of meat carvers	0 7 0	0 9 0	0 12 0
Pair of poultry ditto	0 7 0	0 9 0	0 12 0
Tea and coffee services, per set ...	4 10 0	7 0 0	9 10 0
Cruet frames, 6 bottles	1 15 0	2 5 0	2 15 0
Ditto, 8 bottles, each	2 5 0	3 0 0	3 10 0
Toast-racks, each	0 11 0	0 14 0	1 1 0
Bread baskets	1 5 0	1 15 0	2 5 0
Butter coolers, every variety ...	0 12 0	0 18 0	1 0 0

Mappin, Webb, and Co., 77 and 78, Oxford-street, West-end, and 4 and 74, Cornhill, City, are sole agents for the Patentees, the Royal Cutlery Works, Sheffield, and are celebrated for the excellence of their Table Cutlery. Mappin, Webb, and Co., Manufacturers, 77 and 78, Oxford-street West; and 4 and 74, Cornhill, City.

SLACKS' TABLE KNIVES.—Best Ivory Handles, 3½-inch blade, 7s. per doz.; 4-inch, 10s.; 4½-inch, 14s.; 5-inch, 16s.; 5½-inch, 18s.; 6-inch, 20s. 24 per cent lower than any other house.
SLACKS' Table and Dessert Knives and Forks.

SPOONS and FORKS.—SLACKS' SILVER ELECTRO-PLATE is a coating of sterling silver over nickel. Fiddle pattern, per dozen: Table forks, 20s. and 28s.; Dessert forks, 16s. and 22s.; Tea spoons, 12s. and 18s.; Dessert spoons, 20s. and 28s.; Soups or Egg-cruet frames, 6 bottles, 21s. and 30s.; Cruet frames, 8 bottles, 30s. and 40s.; Bottles only, 4s. each.
Slacks', 336, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

CHANDELIERS in BRONZE and ORMOLU for DINING-ROOM and LIBRARY. Candelabra, Moderator Lamps, Table Glass, Dessert Services, Tea Trays, Tea and Coffee Urns, and every article for Furnishing. Catalogues gratis.
DEANE, DRAY, and CO., London-bridge.

OSLER'S GLASS CHANDELIERS, WALL LIGHTS, and Lustres for Gas and Candles. Table Glass, &c. Glass Illustrations free.—OSLER, 45, Oxford-street, W.
Glass Dessert Services for 12 persons, from £3.
Glass Tea Trays, from 10s. 6d.

Ornamental Glass, Engraved and Cut Glass, suitable for presents. Glass Dessert Services, Table Glass, Chandeliers, Lustres, Candelabra, Gas Fittings, &c.
Birmingham—Manufactory and Showroom, Broad-street.
London—Showroom, 45, Oxford-street, W.

GASELIERS IN CRYSTAL GLASS, Ormolu, or Bronze, for Gas or Candles.
A large assortment always on view.
Every article required for Gas Fitting.
D. ROLLET and SON,
Manufacturers, 6, Vigo-street, High Holborn, W.C.

SILVER FIR BEDROOM FURNITURE, having been laid in unusually large stock, is now ready for Full Sale. To ECLIPSE FURNISHING COMPANY, 12, Hanover-street, Hanover-square, Manufacturers of the Silver Fir Furniture, who have pleasure in stating that the sale has commenced prize. Illustrations forwarded on application to J. READ, Manager.

COSTLY FURNITURE for Drawing-room, Dining-room, and Bedroom.—The Eclipse Furnishing Company, 12, Hanover-street, Hanover-square, W., have the honour to announce that they have just completed the purchase of a most superb residential character. The drawing-room is constructed in the Louis Quatorze style, and the dining-room in the Elizabethan style, both of which are replete with every modern convenience. The bedroom is equally magnificent, and the whole consisting of the richest Silver Fir Furniture in likewise very superb, and sumptuous all the accessories to rich Furnishing. Visitors to an appointment. Illustrations free.

FURNITURE, CARPETS, and BEDDING. Carriage-free. See our Illustrated Catalogue, 240 Designs Forwarded post-free. Heal and Son, 196, Tottenham-court-road, 2 and 3, Perkin's-rents, Knightsbridge.

DRAWING-ROOMS.—Coverings, in a beautiful variety of colours, and widths, suitable for Carpets, Curtains, &c., at 1s. 6d. per yard, 36 inches wide. At H. GREEN and SON, 54, Mortimer-street, Regent-street, W.

WALNUT SUITE OF DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, a most elegant suite, in rich walnut wood, of sixteen, half in value; consisting of a fine oval loo-table, handsome chiffonier, with plate-glass back, two lofty cabinets, with plate-glass doors, two elegant whatnots, four brackets, and six small chairs, covered in rich silk brocatelle, and chairs loose seats to match; also, an elegant cheval dressing-glass, in the SPARE MAHOGANY DINING-ROOM SUITE, 48 guineas. At 295, 296, and 297, Tottenham-court-road, and 2, Perkin's-rents, Westminster.

FURNITURE CARRIAGE-FREE to any Railway Station in England.
Drawing-room Suites, complete £35 0 0
Dining-room ditto, complete 25 0 0
Bedroom Suites, complete 26 0 0
Handsome Chimney Glasses, Pier Glasses, &c.
Illustrated Catalogues gratis and post-free on application.

THE BURLINGTON FURNITURE GALLERIES, 59, Goodge-street, Tottenham-court-road, City Warehouse, have REMOVED to larger premises as above, from 30, Leicester-square, where the business will be continued by Mr. Lewis.

EASYCHAIRS and FURNITURE.—Howard and Sons' Illustrated Book of Easychairs, Couches, Lounges, Hooms, HOWARD and SONS' superior STOCK, at 25 and 27, Berners-street, Oxford-street. Illustrated Catalogues free by post.

FURNISH YOUR HOUSE with the best article at DEANE'S Ironmongery and Furnishing Warehouse, 46, King William-street, London-bridge, and 46, Parliament-street. Their Illustrated Catalogue sent free.
Deane, Dray, and Co., The Monument, London-bridge.

PANKLIBNAN.—The largest Furnishing Ironmongery and Bronze Warehouse in London. Illustrated Catalogues post-free.
J. BELL and CO., 30, Oxford-street.

TO LADIES.—GREEN TISSUE IVY LEAVES, for Dressing Chaplets, Garlands, Bouquets, and set of 72 sizes. Bridling patterns for dresses (5 yards) 30 stamps. R. PETERS, Truro, Cornwall.

TREELOAR'S COCOA-NUT MATTING
for
FLOOR CLOTH WAREHOUSE,
Removed from No. 31 to 10, LUDGATE-HILL, LONDON.

CHUBBS' LOCKS, FIREPROOF SAFES, CASH BOXES, DARK and DESPATCH LANTERNS. Price List sent free. 57, St. Paul's-churchyard; 28, Wood-street, Cheapside; and 16, Market-street, Manchester; and at Wolverhampton.

KING and CO., SILKMERCERS, &c., have REMOVED from 243, OXFORD-STREET, are now SELLING OFF
£15,000 worth of Silks, Velvets, Ribbons, Cashmeres, &c., at less than half prices.
Also, about
£15,000 worth of Old Stock, at any price it will fetch.
Patterns sent free.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Oxford-street, London.

NEW GOODS.
RAGGANS in SHEPHERD'S PLAID SILKS, at 1s. 9½d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.—RICHARDSON, KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW GOODS.
BARGAINS in MOIRE ANTIQUES SILKS, at 2s. 11½d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.—RICHARDSON, KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW GOODS.
BARGAINS in PLAIN SILKS, at 1s. 11½d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW GOODS.
BARGAINS in CROSS GRAIN SILKS, at 2s. 11½d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW GOODS.
BARGAINS in POULT DE SOIES, at 2s. 9d. per yard.
Patterns post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5700 WORTH of BLACK SILKS,
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£7450 WORTH of BROCHÉ SILKS,
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£6500 WORTH of CROSS GRAINS, Black, at 2s. 11½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£3760 WORTH of CORDED SILKS, at 2s. 11½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£2763 WORTH of MOIRE ANTIQUES, at 2s. 11½d. per yard.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW SPRING MOHAIRS, 10s. 6d. a Dress.
New Norwich Poplins, 9s. 6d.
Patterns post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW SPRING CAMBRICS, 5s. 6d. a Dress.
New Spring Washing Petticoats, 2s. 6d. each.
Patterns post-free.—Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NEW FRENCH MUSLINS, 5s. 6d. a Dress.
Finest Organdie Muslins, 10s. 6d. a Dress.
Patterns post-free.
Address to KING and CO., 243, Regent-street.

NICHOLSON and CO., Silkmercers, &c., 50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard corner of Cheapside, have REMOVED from 50, St. Paul's-churchyard, and are now offering 10,000 yards of choice and elegant foulards and surahs of their own manufacture, in patterns, from 1s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard—half their original prices.

700 Patterns and post-free.
Address to NICHOLSON and CO.,
50 to 52, St. Paul's-churchyard.
Established 20 years.
No connection with any other firm.

50,000 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS COLOURED GLACÉS and GROS GRAINS, from 1s. 6½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS NEW CHECKED and CORDED SILKS, from 2s. 11½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

20 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS NEW BROCHÉ and CORDED SILKS, from 2s. 11½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50,000 YARDS BLACK ANTIQUES and CORDED SILKS, from 2s. 11½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

250 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
50,000 YARDS BLACK BROCHÉ SILKS, from 2s. 11½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

50,000 YARDS BLACK GLACÉS and GROS GRAINS, from 1s. 6½d. per yard.
NICHOLSON'S, St. Paul's, corner of Cheapside.

REAL IRISH LINENS, direct from Belfast, Manufacturers' Prices.—Shirtings, Sheetings, Linens, with Sapphire and Blue to match; fine sewelling, and Ivory Finish Cambrics, Dowlas, Diapers, Damasks, Quilts, Towels, Table Cloths, and Handkerch Towels, Kitchen and Family Linens, for servants' use. Patterns and Price Lists free by post. Any length cut from the piece. Every width woven to prevent waste. Apply to the Manufacturers, Messrs. JAMES LINDSAY and CO., Belfast.

SILKS! SILKS! SILKS! FIRST DELIVERY of SPRING SILKS NOW READY.
Several very choice lots, worthy especial attention.
Wide-width Glacés and Checks, 1s. 9d., 1s. 11d., 2s. 6d., per yard, worth 2s. 6d., 2s. 9d., 3s. 6d., per yard.
Wide-width STRIPED and CHECKED in newest shades, 1s. 11½d., 2s. 6d., 2s. 9d., 3s. 6d., and upwards per yard.
Wide-width plain GLACÉS in the new shades, from 2s. 6d.
Patterns free.—JAMES SPENCE and CO.,
MILLINERY SILKS, ANTIQUES &c.
CRAPES, SATINS, TERRY VELVETS, SATIN, TERRY VELVETEENS.
Our Large Stock is Wholesale Prices.
Patterns free on Application.
Patterns free on Application to Free Trade.
JAMES SPENCE and CO., Manufacturers, Silkmercers, &c., 77 and 78, Oxford-street, West-end, and 4 and 74, Cornhill, City.

NEW SPRING SILKS.—SEWELL and CO'S first delivery for the season, consisting of all the exquisite colours, TEXTURES, and DESIGNS for the present season, are NOW READY. Patterns free. Address to SEWELL and CO., 72 and 73, St. Paul's-churchyard, and 4 the seamless of Bow Church, where they are guaranteed selvage.

SEWELL and CO.'S MOIRE ANTIQUES, Splendid manufacture, celebrated throughout the kingdom, Patterns free.
SEWELL and CO., 72 and 73, St. Paul's-churchyard, and Old Change-street-corner, Soho, W.

SANSFLECTUM CRINOLINES,
10s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 21s.
"Worse crinolines than ever."—Court Journal.
E. PELLOUTT, 37, Foundry.

ONDINA, or WAVY JUPONS,
Light, Graceful, and Elastic.
"Surmounted with the fans of beauty."—Morning Post.
J. PELLOUTT, 37, Foundry.

GEMMA, or JEWELLED JUPONS,
10s. 6d., 14s. 6d., and 18s. 6d.
"A very graceful crinoline."—Court Circular.
E. PELLOUTT, 37, Foundry.

PUFFED HORSEHAIR JUPONS,
Light, Elastic, and Durable.
"Adopted for the crossroads."—Queen.
E. PELLOUTT, 37, Foundry.

PAINT OF A MANUFACTURER
STOCK of SILKS.
PETER ROBINSON'S
desires attention to a recent purchase much under value.
A careful selection of Patterns sent free.
Peter Robinson's, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

GLACÉS, CHECKS, STRIPES, £1 4s. 6d. the entire Full Dress.
Rich Brocade, Striped and Checked, £1 19s. 6d.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW GROS GRAINS, £1 19s. 6d.
Broché and Checked ditto, £2 2s. and £2 10s. 6d. the entire Dress of fourteen yards.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

PLAIN and FANCY, IN EVERY NEW COLOUR.
GLACÉS, £1 4s. 6d. the Dress.
£1 19s. 6d. Full Dress of 14 yards.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW CHÊNÉ SILKS,
Of the richest quality, £2 2s. the Dress.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

NEW SHAWLS, THE NEWEST FORM OF COSTUME.
POULT DE SOISE,
At £3 12s. 6d., Full Dress, 14 yards;
At £3 19s. 6d., Full Dress, 14 yards;
At £2 12s. 6d., Full Dress, 14 yards.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

Now ready, an Immense Collection of
NEW SPRING DRESSES,
at PETER ROBINSON'S,
embracing every new fabric of the Parisian Manufacturer and every fancy for practical and evening wear, at prices varying from 19s. 6d. to 3 guineas.
Patterns free.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street, W.

ALL LAST YEAR'S FRENCH ORGANDIE MUSLINS, perfectly fresh, and many of the patterns equal to new, at HALF-PRICE.—PETER ROBINSON'S, 103 to 108, Oxford-street.

MUSLIN CURTAINS,
at PETER ROBINSON'S,
Fine Lace Curtains, 4 yards long, at 4s. 6d. and 5s. per pair.
Fine Lace Curtains, 4 yards long, at 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 14s. per pair, formerly 10s. 6d. and 15s.
A Sample Pair will be sent to any part of the kingdom, or can be returned if not approved.
PETER ROBINSON'S
Complete Assortment of Furnishing Lace Curtains, Muslin Curtains, Chenille Curtains, Damask Curtains, Drawing-room Curtains, Dining-room Curtains, Bedroom Curtains, Nursery Curtains, Window Curtains, Muslin Curtains, Lace Curtains, Net Curtains, Guipure Curtains, Brussels Curtains, Poplin Curtains, Cretonne Curtains, Chintz Curtains, Damask Curtains, Rep Curtains, Cloth Curtains, Curtain Materials, Curtain Muslins, Curtain Laces, Curtain Nets, Curtain Guipures, Curtain Brussels, &c., may be had on the premises by experienced dressmakers on measurement indoors.
103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, Oxford-street, W.

INDIA SHAWLS.—Just received, direct from India, a Magnificent Variety of Cashmere Shawls, comprising the Richest Designs and Colours, in Square, Long, and Scarf Shapes, for Dress and Travelling. Also a choice and Recherché Collection of Embroidered Muslin Dress Patterns, Robes, Scarfs, Handkerchiefs, &c., Imported from Switzerland, Purchased by Messrs. TARMER and ROGERS expressly for wedding and other presents, and for which they have received the Prize Medal of the Manufacturing Exhibition, 1862.
21, 171, 172, 173, 174, Regent-street.

A GOOD LADIES in the COUNTRY.—The ENGLISH LADIES' JOURNAL, Of Modes, and Its Fashions, Literature, Music, Needlework, and Fine Arts, is by the liberal remuneration, placing them within reach of every lady in the land, that the Publishers have determined to present with every issue a luxury, but a necessity, alike in regard to health, elegance, and economy—a Dress Pattern, Model, or Embroidery Design, of the Latest Parisian Fashion. Price 2d. Monthly parts (4 numbers), 8d. Cabinet-street Cupboards Each Issue).

BONNETS — MANTLES and GAVELL, ordered from Paris with elegant Gabion Bonnets in every Shape, Material, and Colour, Mantles, Gavells, Fichus, Scarfs, Fleet, 61, Regent-street (four doors from Swan and Edgar's).

EMOSES and SON respectfully call attention to their Stock of Mantles, Shawls, and Dresses, which for Style, Quality, and Cheapness cannot be surpassed. All the latest and most Fashionable Designs and the Best Workmanship, at the Lowest Prices. Also a large assortment of Ladies' Outfitting, and Children's Clothing, and every article of Ladies' Underclothing. Observe the Address, EMOSES and SON'S, 247, Regent-street, where only can be found a great convenience for Ladies and Children.

EMOSES and SON respectfully invite public attention to their large and well-selected Stock of

EMOSES and SON'S
"SANDRINGHAM" MANTLE (introduced by them) in Rich Black Glacé Silk, Trimmed with Fringe, Price 2½ Guineas.

EMOSES and SON'S
READY-MADE and BESPOKE CLOTHING, for all Classes and all Ages.

EMOSES and SON'S
CELEBRATED "CHILDREN'S SUITS" from 30s.

EMOSES and SON'S
HOSIERY and DRAPERY, for all Classes and all Ages.

EMOSES and SON'S
BOOTS and SHOES, for all Classes and all Ages.

EMOSES and SON'S
OUTFITS, FOR ALL CLASSES, all Ages, and all Climates

EMOSES and SON'S
247, 249, 251, 253, 255, Regent-street, and 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street, London.

EMOSES and SON'S
Establishments are closed every Friday evening at Seven o'clock throughout the year, in accordance with the request of their Assistants.

EMOSES, with Rules for Self-measurement, Fashion Card, and our new Pamphlet, "On Modern Costume," is sent to "Design on Dress," gratis and post-free.

ELSTOB, of 60, New Bond-street, W., not only makes BOOTING BOOTS and BRUSHES of perfection, but he is also of the best Tweezer Makers in London.—See Letter of Sandry & Brandon, Esq., Bond Street, 1860.

SHIRTS.—Morning and Evening Shirts of every variety, fit, and quality. Self-measure, Patterns, and Prices. Directions for self-measurement and patterns sent on application.—CAPT. SMART and SETZER, 36, Regent-street, London.

NEW MUSIC.

HYMNS FOR THE CHRISTIAN SEASONS. No. 41 of CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE containing a selection of Hymns particularly adapted for the coming Lent. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

DIDDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 40, contains Twenty Sea Songs, by Dibdin and other nautical favourites. All with Piano Accompaniment. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as performed in the Opera. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS, from Gounod's celebrated Opera of "Faust." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. Post-free, 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MARCH from FAUST. (Soldiers' Chorus.) Arranged as a Duet for the Pianoforte. By RENAUD DE VILBAC. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST, in twenty-six numbers, containing all the favourite Operas as finished by the composer, with many additional melodies not before published as duets. In two books, 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST, with ENGLISH WORDS. This popular Opera is now ready, complete, with Italian, French, and English words. Price 15s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantasia for the Salon for the piano, on favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GOUNOD'S FAUST VALSE, the celebrated Valse from "Faust," arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite melodies from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

LOVING SMILE OF SISTER KIND. Gounod's Cavatina composed for and sung by Mr. Santley in "Faust," at Her Majesty's Theatre. In C (for a bass voice) or E flat, for tenor. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S BRIGAND'S DANCE (Impudition Soiree). For the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, favourably accepted by the public, and as vigorously encored, is now ready, in C, D or E flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera, "Faust." Solo, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 5s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera, Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 5s.; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera, Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 5s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just Published, Beautifully Illustrated. Price 4s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing Sewing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. Also as a Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Song arranged as an effective Drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on Airs from Rossini's favourite Opera, for the Pianoforte, by the popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from the Charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just published, Auber's new Bolero, sung by Miss. Dolby, and Vocal Waltz with chorus arranged on the Favourite Airs. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES. A Fantasia on the Bridal Airs for the Pianoforte. By CHARLES COOTE. Illustrated with a new Photograph of her Royal Highness the Princess ALEXANDRIA. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREBELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Seventy-first Piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREBELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP. Eleventh Set for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREBELL'S WAVING LILLY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

WHY THROBS THIS HEART WITH JOY. New Song by the Composer of "Rose in Wallace Open "The Desert Flower." Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MEETINGS AND PARTINGS. New Song, sung by Mr. W. H. Cummings at the Monday Popular Concerts, composed by CIRO PINSUTI. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed on all the popular and favourite Airs of the day. By CHARLES COOTE. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. GOODBAN'S EMMELINE. Nocturne for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played by the Band of the Grenadier Guards at Her Majesty's Ball, and at Jullien's Concerts with distinguished success. Just published price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CARBERY, Composer of the Serpentine Galop. Just published, gorgeously Illustrated. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop, by CARBERY (Composer of the Harum-Scarum Galop, Originality Illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 5s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC at a QUARTER PRICE. Lists of Cheap Music post-free for four stamps.—PRINT and CO., Music Publishers, 55, Soho-street, Portman-square, W.

NEW MUSIC.

THE ORCHESTRA.—"The leading Musical Journal."—Vide Times. "Abounds in... Musical Gazette's subscription (stamped), 4s. 6d. Facilitates, Musical and Dramatic News at Home and Abroad, Sonnets, Reviews, &c. Single copy, four stamps.

THE STOOPS TO CONQUER. Opera. By G. A. MACFARREN.
"I sweet simplicity recognise." Song ... ... 3s. 0d.
"What is the love?" Cavatina ... ... 3s. 0d.
"The coming of the Spring." Irish Chorus ... ... 3s. 0d.
"The good old days of the country squire." Song. ... 3s. 0d.
"Ah! why did I wed?" Ballad ... ... 3s. 0d.
"My pretty maid." Ballad ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Am I not a pretty barmaid?" Song ... ... 3s. 0d.
The Overture, arranged for the Pianoforte (without additions) 3s. 0d.
"The stakes stage in the popular tune." Four-part Song. 3s. 0d.
"Ah! why did I wed?" Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Am I not a pretty barmaid?" Ballad in 2 keys ... 3s. 0d.
"O, Constance, fare," Cavatina in A flat and E flat ... 3s. 0d.
"Ha! ha! ha!" Comic Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
PIANOFORTE ARRANGEMENTS.
"Ha! ha! ha!" as a Pianoforte Duet ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Constance, fare thee curtsey well." Ballad ... ... 3s. 0d.
"I am her friend." Transcribed by Natalia Macfarren ... 3s. 0d.
Fantasia. By Macfarren ... ... 4s. 0d.
The Overture, for Pianoforte ... ... 4s. 0d.
Complete in the Easiest Style MUSIC ... ... 10s. 6d.
Written on the Pianoforte Also by C. Coote ... ... 3s. 0d.
Chess arrangements, by Berthold Tolmer, Esquire ... 3s. 0d.
Other arrangements, by Brinley Richards, Francesco Berger, Brissac, Rimbault, Wrighton, &c.

Tenth Edition of
RICHARD BLAGROVE'S INSTRUCTION BOOK for the CONCERTINA, with full-sized Diagram of Fingering, and Scales and Exercises for the gradual practice of the same. 4s., free by post.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. ASCHER'S "LE CHANT DES MAIENS" (Spring Song). Price 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BISHOP'S MELODIES. Each Number, 3s.
1. Clough and Crow.
2. Tell me the Tale.
3. Home, Gentle Home.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' DANISH NATIONAL AIR (and Variations). Op. 9. Just Published. Price 3s. Post-free, 3s. 6d. Duet, 4s. Post-free, 4s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

W. C. SELLÉ.—SYMPHONY OF SPRING. In A minor, orchestral Pastoral Rondo.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. P. CLARKE'S LAST SET.
SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. Beautifully illustrated. In Gounod's Valse and all the most favourite Airs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

J. L. ROTTER'S NEW SONG.
I DREAM'T I WAS A CHILD AGAIN. 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

A VENICE. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S Barcarolle. In A. Arranged with accompaniments ad lib.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE LOVE IN A HOUSE. Song by GEORGE LINLEY. In B flat. This Song will stand in popular favour. Linley's well-known "Love in a House."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL GUIDE. By BÉNÉ (Pupil of Thalberg).
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE TREES AND FLOWERS. By Miss MARBLE. Words and Music. "Sweet song, and of the best and Miss Marble's most successful effort."—Vide Times.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. The most popular Song in the Opera.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

C. GOUNOD, FAIRER THAN THE MORN. Sung by Mr. Santley in the Opera, "Le Médecin malgré lui."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"THE PIPE."—One of the cleverest and most successful comic songs of the season. Illustrated with a fascinating Portrait of "the great Sir Walter Raleigh."
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. Post Office order payable at Charing-cross.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

THE FIANO FORTE.
KUHE'S SEE THE CONQUERING HERO COMES. Price 4s. (Brilliant but not difficult.)
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

The prettiest drawing-room piece in
GANZ'S LA FÉE AUX ROSES. Mélodie charmante. Price 3s. 6d.
A most pleasing morceau, equally effective in both staccato and legato.—Illustrated News.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Just published,
SENTIMENT POÉTIQUE. By IUCMO. Price 4s. A charming piece for the Piano.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

A REAL MERRY SET.
COOTE'S POLL-PERKINS QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Songs "Isabella" "Mahomet," "Have you seen the Mayor?" "Poll Perkins," &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THREE GREAT SONGS.
WHEN I AM GONE LOVE ME NOT. Price 2s. 6d. Words and melody by Adam. Price 2s. 6d. LAST NIGHT. Words and melody by Adam. Price 2s. 6d. LAST NIGHT. Words and melody by Adam. Price 2s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S INFANT PRINCE WALSES, 4s. Expressly Illustrated.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE QUADRILLE, Price 4s. Introducing the most favourite Airs (and in the Ballroom), under the direction of the composer, at the Surrey-Gross Concerts, Crystal Palace, Her Majesty's Ball, &c. "Coote's Quadrilles are the best that have been published."—Vide Times. "Coote's Waltzes are more than ordinary waltz." What shall be have that killed the deer? Price 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S EXTRAVAGANZA GALOP, Price 4s. Illustrated. Now ready.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Introducing the Danish National Air.
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA WALTZES. Illustrated with a Photograph Portrait in Colours, respectfully inscribed to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE BEST SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S CITIZEN LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Flowers of Love," "My Pretty Page," "Is this a Dream?" "Ah! why did I wed?" "Am I not a pretty barmaid?" &c. Each progressive complete without them. Always merry set. No dance programme complete without them. Always played at Surrey-Gross Concerts by Mr. Coote. Solo or Duet, 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, Introducing "Eileen O'Moore," "Norah's Farewell to Shandon," "Kate Kearney," "Rosin the Beau," "Sally or Dear," &c.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 4s. One of the very best published, and will excel in popularity the above-named Quadrilles.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW CHRISTY SONG.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, Sung by Christy's Minstrels.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

M. GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, MIREILLE, is now ready, for Voice and Pianoforte. Price 15s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, Hollis-street.

M. GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, MIREILLE. Complete arrangements for Piano by Cramer, De Lorenzo, Richards, &c., will be ready in a few days.
HOPWOOD and CREW, Hollis-street.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC REVIEW may be had everywhere. Price One Penny Weekly.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC REVIEW contains a certain number of pages devoted exclusively to the interests of the Provinces. Price One Penny Weekly.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL AND DRAMATIC REVIEW contains Correspondence from all parts of the United Kingdom, also from France, Germany, Italy, America, &c. Price One Penny Weekly.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW contains a Musical Review of Music published, 16 pages, viz. Price One Penny. No. 4 is published this day. Part 1 of all Instruments and Harmoniums in town and country, by KENT and Co., Peterborough-row; and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street. Subscription, 6s. 6d. per annum, post-free.

SUSAN'S STORY, by CLARIBEL, new Song, just published, and sung with great success by one of his favourite Author's songs. The words are charming. Price 2s. 6d. Also, just published, "Sweet Spring," a charming song for the up to the year by Long M. Published this day, "Sweet Spring," a charming song for the up to the year by Long M. Published this day, "Sweet Spring," a charming song for the up to the year by Long M. Published this day

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1253.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, APRIL 2, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

AFTER THE HOLIDAYS.

In accordance with that distribution of the year peculiar to this country, which causes most of our public work to be performed in the summer months, the Legislature, after a brief breathing space—hardly needed, by-the-way—is about to take to actual business. The pre-paschal proceedings of the two constitutional Chambers have this Session partaken more than ordinarily of the nature of preliminary flourishes. The Opposition has done much to show that it is able and willing to wound, but yet afraid to strike; and, so far as the immediate situation is concerned, her Majesty's Government are, after having received a few rough shakings, firmly enough planted in office to enable them, if they have luck, to carry on affairs so as to weather the next four months. At this juncture it is not without interest that we contemplate the prospects of Ministers and the possibility of their proving equal to their responsibilities and the demands upon their capabilities.

In referring, with the prophetic vision of a few days, to coming Parliamentary events, the subject which looms largest is clearly the foreign policy of the Government. It is undoubted that the very earliest opportunity will be taken to summon the advisers of the Crown to give information and explanations in this respect, which they have hitherto contrived, upon the whole, to avoid. Allowing that whatever concerns our relations with the contending States of America will be fought out in the courts of law—where, perhaps, the interest, taking a new form, may undergo a process of revival from its present rather torpid condition—it is certain that serious pressure will be put upon the Government with a view to ascertain how this country stands in relation to the other Powers of Europe. Many pungent interpellations will be made; and inquiries will be frequent as to whether England is in a position of security from foreign hostility, and whether our diplomacy, which it is now assumed has been curiously infelicitous, has entered upon a new and more successful phase. It is a certainty that, refusing to receive half information, the Opposition will demand categorically from those Ministers who can speak with authority ample explanations of their political conduct in reference to foreign affairs. They will be called upon to state who are the allies and who the foes of this country; and, above all, whether er not we are drifting into a war. All this, and more, will be paraded on the floors of both houses, in the shape of questions and debates more or less formal; and, so far as we are able to foresee, without any very palpable or satisfactory result to the interpellators. In reply to interrogatories on the 4th or 5th inst., the answer will be prompt and conclusive that a conference on the chief vexed question of foreign policy in which this country is concerned—that with Denmark—will commence its sittings on the 12th; and that being so, that all discussion on the subject will be premature, and all allusions with regard to the past futile and perfunctory. The conference is to be taken as a great act of condonation of all the faults, follies, and blunders of Ministers—supposing them to have an existence—which have surrounded or mingled in this question. The Danish difficulty will thus, no doubt, be tided over the critical period of Parliamentary activity and vigilance which invariably succeeds the recess and refreshment of the Whitsuntidays. To be sure, Poland remains as a subject of impeachment; but, truth to say, we believe that in the minds of the people of this country, and even in those of the political partisans of the Poles, that question is little better than stage ware. Indeed, in this case that the most earnest philo-Polonist cannot demand that an English fleet should give its moral support to the insurgents, or an English contingent be marched upon Warsaw. A direct demand for active and material aid to Poland can only come in the large and responsible shape of war with Russia, on a scale commensurate with the position of the two nations. Parliamentary talk on this subject, therefore, need present but little in no very terrible shape for Ministers, and that not the less because the Polish question in the House of Commons has got into the hands of very able and eloquent, but very young, members, and therefore has assumed rather a dilettanti than a practical aspect.

THE WAR IN DENMARK: INSIDE KOLDING GATE, FREDERICIA—DANISH SOLDIERS MARCHING OUT TO MEET THE AUSTRIANS.

But, best chance of all for the Government, between all more or less ideal questions stands the reality of the Budget. On Thursday night Mr. Gladstone will produce his Budget, and, unless he belie all his financial antecedents, he is likely to occupy it for no inconsiderable time. Assuming, as we do with a certain positiveness, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will base his final scheme on the principles already at disinclination of taxation, it is not unreasonable to anticipate that he will enamaed, as he supposes, his plain, down right facts and figures with fanciful changes of detail which will exhilarate, if not delight, the House of Commons. It is not to be presumed that a finance Minister of genius will be contented with a plan which will meet with such universal approbation that it will pass through the ordeal of Parliamentary criticism sans peine ni reproche. In short, we do not exactly scarcely consort with the mobile temperament of the Chancellor of the Exchequer; and he will not feel that he has done his duty and discharged his official conscience unless he battles his projects at least two days in each week for a month. It will, of course, not direfully grieve Lord Palmerston if in this way Mr. Gladstone become for a while the chief consideration of the House, and so divert the attention of the hostile thoughts and intentions of the Opposition.

Amongst the minor difficulties with which Ministers will have to contend—and, looking practically at the matter, we use the word minor advisedly—are the two little reform bills which have been launched from behind Mount Olympus. It remembered that the Administration is pledged, with most facile indifference, no doubt, but still pledged, to the question of Parliamentary Reform. However it may be assumed that they have received from the people absolutely no mandate in this matter, to be contended that that absolution is plenary. It cannot be taken that the Palmerston-Russell Cabinet has whistled this question down the winds. All that they have really done in this way is that there is no call from the public for any measure on this subject, but when it comes they will answer to the call. What, then, will they do with Mr. Locke King's County Franchise Bill, and Mr. Baines's Borough Franchise measure? These bit-by-bit reformers, if their words, and, still more, their demeanour, are to be credited, mean to press their schemes and to test once more the temper of the House on the question of Parliamentary Reform. They may, on the notion that there is a political reaction in the country, the Conservatives will oppose these bills uncompromisingly, and Ministers may then be supposed to be placed in a dilemma, for by giving way pronounced and unqualified support to their calling together; that it was created ostensibly by Conservative inspiration; that, on such a question as Parliamentary Reform, they cannot be made responsible for its conduct and encouragement; and if that potent minority, which by the simplest of chances may be converted into a majority, should reject the projects of Mr. Locke King and Mr. Baines, they would give all they can, their votes, and refer the members for East Surrey and Leeds to the consolations of that philosophy which is expressed in the phrase—wait and hope.

Upon the whole, if we take on ourselves to venture on a prediction, it is that the Session, which is now reaching its most interesting epoch, will be perturbed and fruitful of animated debates, but that at its termination it will leave the present Administration in office. If we have read the temper of the Opposition aright, it is not their policy to displace the Government just at present; nor does it comport with their plans to bring on a dissolution of Parliament in the early part of the year. They will not seek to disturb Lord Palmerston personally; but they will so work on and worry each one of those of his colleagues who may be supposed to have an ambition to succeed him as to render such a result wellnigh impossible, and, in the event of any attempt to organise a Ministry out of the components of that which exists, apart from its new chief, a resolute effort will be made to destroy and scatter it to the political winds. At present the people out of doors, as the phrase goes, look on this mere game of politics with indifference, and the respective parties with an apathy which may be a little contemptuous; but the world be a bold man who would assert that, if a real crisis in the affairs of the country were to arise, public opinion and the impulse of the national will would be less effectual than it has been of yore, or that any party or any Ministry would be permitted to trifle with the interests, the well-being, or the honour of England.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Opposition in the Corps Législatif have given notice of several amendments to the Budget.

Vice-Admiral Penaud, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean experimental squadron, died at Toulon, aged sixty-four.

Mazzini has been condemned in Paris, "by contumacy," to transportation for alleged participation in the Greco plot. The decision has been pronounced by the Court of Assizes of the Seine.

Baron Lerich, the inventor of gun-cotton, has visited Paris, by invitation of the Emperor, who has conferred upon him the Cross of Commander of the Legion of Honour, and presented him with a gold snuffbox set with diamonds. Baron Lerich has invented a scheme which promises to effect an important change in artillery practice.

A new Journal for the Ladies, called the Journal des Femmes, by Hippolyte Flandrin, the decorator of so many of the Paris churches in frescos and painter of the wonderful portraits of the Emperor and Prince Napoleon, died last week at Rome.

The Moniteur declares that the Bois de Boulogne attract such crowds of the high society of Paris that the once-famed promenade of Longchamps will soon be known only by name.

Letters from Rochefort to the 19th inst. say from Rennes to that port which was all that was wanted to place Brest in communication with the sea. The Loire is now open to the sea, and the Emperor sent the Emperor's fete day.

About two acres of the forest of Chantilly have been destroyed by a fire, caused, it is supposed, by a lighted match or cigar being thrown under the trees.

The remains of a Roman aqueduct, eight metres in length, have been discovered at Arles, in the Rue de la Calade, by excavators. The aqueduct is supposed to have been made to convey water from the Alpilles, as it is precisely on the spot which was at one time the bed of that river.

A trial of an extraordinary nature has just terminated at Aix, in the Bouches du Rhone, which has excited their greatest interest at some two hundred witnesses. Maurice Roux, the conchman of M. Armand, a gentleman of Aix, was charged with murdering his wife. The catastrophe was found in July last in the woodcutting, lying bound hand and foot, with her throat cut, in a field near the house of Maurice Roux. When sufficiently recovered, though still not able to speak, the letters of the alphabet were shown to her, and she spelled out the name of the murderer's name as that of the person who had attempted to murder her. Roux, who was arrested, was committed to a term of solitary confinement and imprisonment for eight months, and at last brought to trial in the midst of extreme interest throughout the surrounding country, his neighbourhood that it was necessary to call in the proceedings to the more distant Court of Aix. The accusation of Roux was that his master's wife, Madame M. Armand, had told him that she "knew he would teach him to speak ill of his household." But out of six medical men who had been summoned to their opinion as to how the blows might have been inflicted and the cords wound round the hands and feet by the prisoner, only two declared positively against his guilt. Although no motive could be imputed, save, perhaps, a quarrel, with high words and blows on both sides, followed by an attempt to conceal what had occurred, by the murder of the victim, the public took the opposite view; and M. Armand was acquitted on both counts of the charge, and left the court to a scene of hostile harm—in the midst of great excitement. The master and the servant, M. and Mme. Armand, Roux had constituted himself garde civile as well as accuser, in order to be able to claim damages for the attempt to murder on the person of his mistress—and the verdict he promised in the former demand. In the case of Mme. M. Armand, a criminal accusation against such "flagrant opposition with the decision of the jury," and the "undignified and unbecoming conduct" of the jurisdiction of the Court, not absolutely bound in its civil jurisdiction by the negative verdict, entertained the demand and finally accorded 20,000f. damages, in the case of Mme. Armand, 5000f. damages.

News from Mexico is to the effect that Juarez had refused to resign, and that the French had achieved no success.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

Another attempt to carry Düppel by assault has been repulsed. Early on Saturday morning the Prussians made a general attempt to assault upon the Danish position, and from the accounts received, though some details are not known, it appears that they have failed in coming to the conclusion that the Prussians were foiled. All the various reports agree that the Prussians had been repulsed, and that the losses mutually inflicted were large. Both besiegers and besieged claim to have made prisoners; and the latter assert that they succeeded in repulsing the assailants, but latter assert that they succeeded in recovering and retaining the position from which the former attempted to dislodge them. The fact is, however, that the Prussians, even on their own showing, did not succeed in advancing their outposts beyond the point at which they originally commenced operations; and, if the attack was begun by them, as there is every reason to believe it was, they have failed in their endeavour to drive the Danes over it any have been, signally failed.

The Correspondenz Wolff says that Danish army repots on the affair as follows, by telegram to Copenhagen:—"At three o'clock this morning the Prussians commenced their grand attack on the Düppel. He penetrated between two of our trenches, but was repulsed to his former position with considerable loss. Since then the conflict extended along the whole line. Our ironclad took an effective part in the conflict.

The German account states:—"When the outposts of the Raven brigade had almost completed their intrenchments, the commencement of which was interrupted, the Prussians opened a fire from all their batteries and of the Rolfe Krake, renewed the engagement with varying success. The Prussian troops of the 13th Army Corps engaged using the butt-ends of their muskets as well as the bayonet. Ultimately the Raven Brigade, under the enemy, retired towards the advanced position it occupied in the morning. The Rolfe Krake was driven off, having been struck by four solid shot. The village of East Düppel was set on fire. Fifty-three Danish prisoners were taken. The Prussian Regiment of the Guard lost fourteen killed and fifty-three wounded. The loss of the 18th Regiment has not yet been ascertained."

The Times correspondent with the Danes telegraphs an account from Sonderburg. He says:—"This morning, at three o'clock, an attack was made on batteries 6 and on the whole Düppel lines. The Prussians were thrice repulsed. At last the Prussian soldiers refused to obey their officers' command to advance. The Rolfe Krake fired from the Sonderburg Sound on the enemy. The engagement lasted for seven hours. The casualties continue. One hundred Danes are killed and wounded. Twenty-two Prussian prisoners have been taken. Only Danish ingineers were engaged."

The correspondent of the Telegraph sends the following telegram from Sonderburg:—"The Prussians attacked the Düppel works at three this morning all along the line. They were completely repulsed, with heavy loss, and many prisoners were taken by the Danes. The Rolfe Krake fired from the Wenning Bund on the Prussian right. Four Danish regiments only were engaged, and about a hundred Danes were killed or wounded. A tremendous bombardment still continues."

The allies have withdrawn from before Frederica. On the 23rd ult. a despatch from the commander of the place to the Government at Copenhagen announced that the Austrians had left, on the previous day, abandoned their position before the town.

The King of Denmark has visited the troops at Sonderburg and Düppel. The Times' correspondent writes of Christian IX. as follows:—"In the elementary art of Kingcraft, those which belong to the minor morals of his station, he is perfectly at home. Face to his subjects who come within the reach of his fascination, I should think, will not easily be met with the King's dignity, or the King's reserve. The Daily News correspondent is equally eulogistic. He writes that the King "has a fine, soldierly bearing, a tall, handsome ride, it is said, from a bursting shell; and then, with his usual kindness of heart, he had it sent home to the King of Copenhagen. Such attention to the wounded soldiers is keenly felt by their comrades, and the King's visit will fully confirm the high terms in which he is spoken of. His manners are discussed pretty freely; rulers suspected of weakness are often severe critics, and the commander-in-chief knows exactly what he is fighting for. A thorough gentleman, as is his Majesty of Denmark, will never desert the cause which he has sworn to defend. 'I will not be driven from my kingdom,' is reported to have said, 'and the Ministers dare not betray us.'"

The Danish Diet has rejected the proffered services of the Irish Cent Gardes.

The Danish Privy Council, or Assembly for Denmark Proper, has closed its sittings. The Speech from the Throne declared that Denmark was ready to do everything that could fairly conduce to peace, but that the enemy must know how distant the time is when she could be compelled to submit to dishonourable terms.

The Danish Government has drawn up and communicated to its diplomatic agents in foreign countries a history of the proceedings of the two great Powers in the late conflict. It points out that previously to the invasion public order and tranquillity prevailed throughout the Duchies. It says that the object of the Austrian and Prussian forces revolutionary movements immediately broke out, instigated and supported by the Governments of Berlin and Vienna. Although the Prussians and Austrians, in one instance alone, made a pretence of appealing to the Confederation, the many other steps they countenanced them by not permitting the loyal population to make counter-demonstrations. The Danish Government accepted the Allies with countenancing or permitting the expulsion of all the officials who remained faithful to their oaths to the King, and concludes by having for their object the total abrogation of the King of Denmark's authority.

Prussian engineer officers of high rank have arrived at Rendsburg, in order to survey and select grounds for the erection of a new line of fortifications.

The Deputies of the Holstein Estates will meet at Kiel on Tuesday next. They are summoned by order of Professor Hans Ludwig Andreas Hurr Reincke, Pastors Versmann and Schrader.

The Commission of Inquiry appointed on the 15th December will begin in London on the 12th inst, on the basis of the integrity of the Danish Monarchy. The Danish Government has given notice to recognise that the sovereignty of the duchies belongs to Christian IX.; and is the only quarter to make to the connection between one part of his dominions and the other.

SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

The committee appointed by the Norwegian Storthing to report on the King's application for a vote of money to defray the expense of armaments, and for authority to employ, in case of need, the Norwegian army beyond the frontiers of Denmark, has unanimously recommended that the application shall be granted.

The Swedish Government state that orders have been issued for the immediate fitting out of the Carl Johann, screw-ship of the line, and the frigates Bellona, Svea and Aldemar.

The Royal Life Guards and one battalion of each regiment have received orders to hold themselves in readiness to march.

RUSSIA.

The Government has published an Imperial decree abolishing the compulsory sale of serfs belonging to Russian nobles on their marriage with foreigners. The consent of the Emperor to such marriages is rendered unnecessary; and the Governor of Livonia is assigned the command of the military division of the Mississippi, embracing the department of the Ohio, the Cumberland, the Tennessee, and the Arkansas. Major-General M'Pherson is assigned to the command of the department and army of the Tennessee. In which command they participate in General Grant's movements. President expresses his thanks and approbation "for the able and zealous manner in which the officers and troops composing the late expedition have been performed."

The receipt of such a strong impression on both sides that General Grant is about to inaugurate a vigorous campaign in Virginia; and the Confederates are said to be concentrating an army of observation in North Carolina to watch the southern part of James River, in which direction they anticipate the Northern regiment will appear.

The Federals are concerting expeditions against Shreveport, Louisiana, and the Trans-Mississippi region.

General Sherman, who had gone to New Orleans to consult with General Banks, has arrived at Memphis to assume his new command. General Sherman was said to have done immense damage to Chief Federate property in his late raid—to have destroyed 150 miles of railway and to have driven the negroes who chose to go to Vicksburg; but we are told anything respecting the losses sustained by him.

Firing in still heard in Charleston, but no more casualties are reported.

President Lincoln has called for 200,000 more men, to be raised by the 15th inst.

Both Houses of Congress have passed the bill authorising the sale of the surplus gold in the Treasury.

General M'Clellan and General Fremont had both been nominated for the presidency by meetings held in New York.

Arkansas has elected an anti-slavery Legislature.

The Free-State Government has been publicly inaugurated at New Orleans with imposing ceremonies. The wife of General Banks officiated in the lady. At the banquet a great public demonstration of sympathy was made.

President Davis, the Times New York correspondent telegraphs, has appointed the 10th inst. as a day of fasting and prayer.

A conspiracy has been discovered in Kentucky, having for its object the secession of that State to the Southern Confederacy.

The Federal Judge has decided that the English bounty Saxon was illegally seized at Angra Pequena, on the South African coast: but we have yet to learn the result of the inquiry into the homicide of her mate by one of the Vanderbilt's officers.

The steamer Mary Ann was captured by the Grand Gulf, off Wilmington, on the 6th ult. The sloop Two Brothers was captured on Feb. 16, off Indian Inlet. On the 27th of February the sloop Miss was captured; on the 29th the schooner Rebel, and on the 8th ult. the sloop Ann Eliza.

The Navy Department of the United States have advertised for tenders for sailing line-of-battle ships Ohio, Wabash, Minnesota, Columbus, the frigates Cumberland, Congress, Merrimac, Raritan, and Columbia, and the steamer Whitehall, which have been sunk during the rebellion.

A treaty has been concluded between the United States and Great Britain for the settlement of the claims of the Hudson's Bay and Puget Sound Agricultural Companies, under the Treaty of 1846.

JAPAN.

A fire which lately took place at Osaca has destroy ed a portion of the city about five miles in circumference. Fires have also occurred at Kanagawa and at the Japanese capital, Yedo.

The Prussian treaty has been ratified by Baron de Rehfues and the Japanese Minister Tamanu Bip-No-Kami. The Swiss have made a treaty which was to take effect from the 3rd of February, on which day it was to have been signed at Yedo.

The French and American Ministers have succeeded in obtaining a reduction of the duty upon various articles.

COUNTRY NEWS.

A landslip took place a few days since near Weymouth, by which about seven acres of land fell into the sea.

Professor Pillichody died at his house, 3, Newfields-row, Edinburgh, on Sunday morning, at the advanced age of eighty-six.

Colonel Strange has been elected without opposition for the county of Armagh in the room of Mr. Close, recently resigned his seat.

The last remaining of the County Shipwreck Associations—namely, that in Lincolnshire—has ceased to exist, itself to be National Life-boat Institution.

The Right Hon. Sir Francis Thornhill Baring has announced his intention of retiring from the representation of Portsmouth and from the Board of Commerce at the close of this present session.

The Durham Chronicle announces the death of Mrs. Taylor, at Stanhope, at the advanced age of 104 years. She has left an unmarried daughter residing with her.

The Inverness-shire Highland Light Infantry, under the command of Mr. Baillie, Kinmylies, were inspected on the 21st of June and proceed to Fort George. The recruits will muster on the 20th of May.

Last week, at Dundee, a ward, in the High School, where twenty pairs of Witney blankets were given to the poor by Mrs. Hoddinbun Williamson from the proceeds of an entertainment given for charitable purposes.

The East Kent Militia, under the command of Colonel Brenkan, is ordered to assemble at Canterbury on the 21st inst. for twenty-one days' drill, and the recruits to be under quarter-instruction days previous to that date for instruction under the Adjutant.

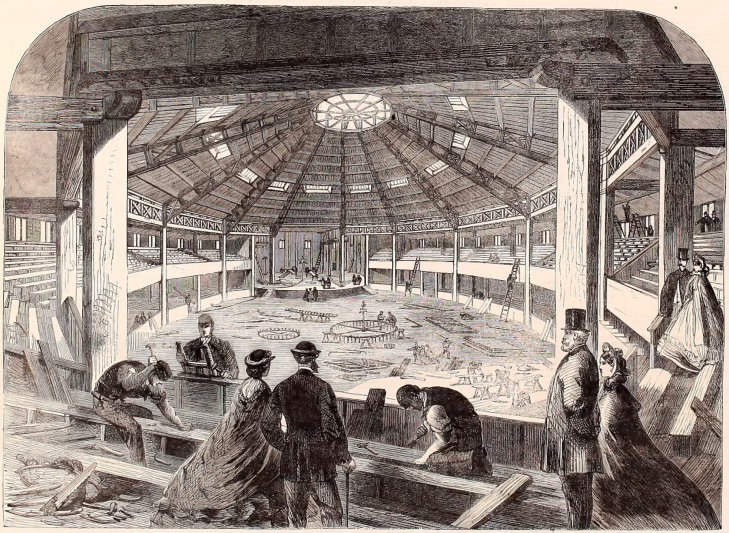
Mr. Thomas Edward Chitty, of the Northern Circuit, has been appointed Queen's Counsel in the room of Mr. Overend, in addition to Rainey Garvey (son of the late Baron Garvey, and brother of the Recorder of London), who also received his Patent.

The death of Viscount Sidmouth, at his seat at Abbey, yesterday week, was announced by Baron Martin on the opening of Court in the House of Lords by his eldest surviving son, the Hon. William Wells Addington, M.P.

Notwithstanding the severe weather, swallows have appeared on the banks of the Thames near Old Windsor. Numerous nests of the same eighteen days before Christmas. A nightingale has also been heard this morning early at Maidenhead, near Cookham.

A boiler exploded one night last week at the Denby ironworks, near Derby, when a person, named Wm. Orrell, a man of the distance of 400 yards. One man was killed; another, it is feared, fatally injured; and a third was seriously scalded and bruised.

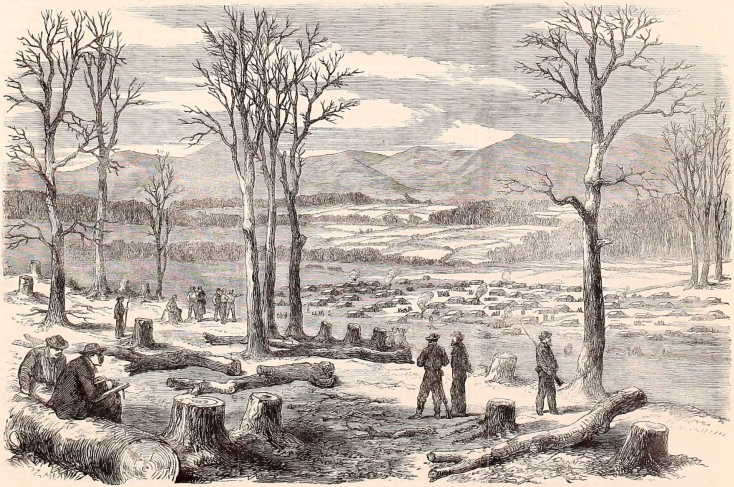
There is a prospect of a revolution in the Isle of Man, the Legislative body of which, consisting of the Governor, known as the Lieut.-Governor, has sentenced Mr. Brown, proprietor of the Isle of Man Times, to imprisonment for the term of one calendar month.



A shipwreck took place near Castletown, in the Isle of Man, on Saturday last. A schooner struck on Port Iron, about five miles of Castletown, and all hands on board were saved by the crew of the Port Iron lifeboat, who saw the schooner had foundered with all hands on board.

The Queen's Bench Division, which has been fruitful a theme of controversy in connection with the affairs of the Northumberland District Bank, have at length been disposed of. The Vice-Chancellor has left the purchaser being a company chiefly consisting of creditors of the bank.

The foundation-stone of the new Medical School of Medicine was laid on Monday afternoon by the Lord Lieutenant. The building is to stand on North Brunswick-terrace, and is the result of the purchase of the ground and the erection being paid out of a fund bequeathed for that purpose by the late Surgeon Campbell, the interest of which for years will bear. The foundation-stone was laid in the presence of nearly all the university members of the medical profession resident in Belfast and the townsfolk generally



THE SHAKSPEARE PAVILION AT STRATFORD-ON-AVON.

INTERIOR OF THE SHAKSPEARE PAVILION.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

NIGHT ATTACK OF THE KENT ARTILLERY VOLUNTEERS IN ORE CREEK, NEAR FAVERSHAM.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: WINTER QUARTERS OF THE LEFT WING OF THE CONFEDERATE ARMY ON THE RAPIDAN.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

VOLUNTEER NIGHT ATTACK AT FAVERSHAM.

We have engraved a Sketch, by our own Artist, of the rehearsal of a night attack and defence by two parties of the Kent Artillery Volunteers, with the assistance of three ships' launches armed with 6-pounders lent by the naval authorities at Sheerness. This novel performance was contrived by Captain Weston, the Adjutant, and Lieutenant-Colonel Gladdish, the commander of the Kent Artillery Brigade, at took place at Faversham, on the evening of Saturday, March 19. Being intended less for a public exhibition than for experimental lesson, it was limited to a small portion of the volunteer force, and no special arrangements were made for the conveyance of spectators from London. The defending party was stationed before nightfall in the private grounds of Major Hall, at Davington, about three miles from the town. They took up their position in the fields near the village of Ore, close to the water of Ore creek, where they had a battery of two 6-pounder guns and some works which they had thrown up in an intrenched and palisaded space, with one bastion looking towards the sea. Major Hall, Captain Crookes, and Lieutenant Shepherd were here in command. On the other side Captain Harper, in the boats of the attacking squadron, which represented gun-boats on this occasion, brought the 13th Kent Artillery Corps to force a landing; Lieutenant Bell, R.N., being in command of the boats. On arriving at Ore creek they began to exchange shots with the battery, and presently the assailants landed, as shown in our Engraving. They are just passing over a substantial wooden bridge, ment which divides the fields or marshes from the creek. The defenders (not seen in the Engraving) are making a sortie on our right hand. We will quote, from the spirited account in the Daily News, the further particulars of this affair:—"Some skirmishing took place on the beach as the landing party advances and divides itself into two bodies, one proceeding in loose order under the sea-wall to attack the right flank of the battery, while the other charges it in front. More firing from gunboats to assist invaders, more return shots from battery to repel the attack; and we descend the "wall," and retrace our steps to the battery. We find last been taken. A solitary sentinel remains in battery. The wall is nearly four-pounder, but the place is otherwise deserted, save by a few inquisitive sightseers, who pat, and smell, and watch the fuse of the gun. In another part of the enemy, who are pursuing its late defenders up to Woolwright's Farm. During the retreat the defending force has formed into volley by sections, while their pursuers, in their eagerness for victory, fire independently and with rapidity, as directed by regulated battery. At the farmhouse just mentioned the Faversham party make a stand, until driven out, when they fall back upon the position of attack at a masked battery, from which they, in their turn, spread discomfiture and dismay. They have been, apparently, lying in wait for the enemy in battery. The enemy, who had marched through a pitch-dark night, some eight or nine miles, are tired, and doves in the castle grounds. Prince Philip of Wirtemberg, attended by Baron von Gultenberg, arrived at the castle on a visit to her Majesty. The Royal dinner-party included the King of the Belgians, the Prince of Wales, Prince Helena, Prince Philip of Wirtemberg, Lord and Lady Taunton, Admiral Sir George Seymour and Lady Seymour, the Hon. and Very Rev. the Dean of Windsor, and the ladies and gentlemen in waiting upon the Queen and the Royal visitors. In consequence of the death of the Landgravine of Hesse, grandmother of the Princess of Wales, the Princess did not join the Royal dinner-party. Count Lavradio, and the Right Hon. E. Cardwell and Mrs. Cardwell, left the castle for London.

On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by Prince Arthur, walked in the castle grounds.

On Wednesday her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Helena and attended by the Countess of Errol (Lady Augusta Stanley), Lord C. Fitzroy, Col. H. Ponsonby, and Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, took an airing. The Queen travelled by special train to the Harrow-ddington terminus of the Great Western Railway, and proceeded thence to South Kensington and to the former site of the International Exhibition Gardens. Her Majesty arrived at eleven o'clock, and was received by Sir Wentworth Dilke, Bart., Mr. Henry Cole, C.B., and the Council and officers of the Royal Horticultural Society. Her Majesty spent an hour inspecting the flowers and plants. Her Majesty received a most cordial welcome, and was frequently recognised by the crowd of the 1st Middlesex (Volunteer) Regiment playing "God Save the Queen" upon her Majesty's departure. The Royal party comprised the Countess of Elgin with a visit, returning to Windsor Castle in the afternoon. The Prince and Princess of Wales and Prince Arthur visited Victoria Park, Bethnal Green, Prince Arthur, attended by Major Teesdale, left the castle for London Bridge, and Prince Philip of Wirtemberg left the castle for London.

On Thursday the Bishop of Cashel, the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, and Princess Mary arrived at the castle. Their Royal Highnesses left the castle on Friday for the Cottage, Esher.

The Queen and the Royal family have again taken to their driving exercise in the grounds adjacent to the castle.

The Queen of the Belgians arrived at the castle minutely inspected Mr. Whitworth's one-pounder mountain gun and carriage, and also his large three-hundred pounder for the purpose of testing the wooden plug which he has lately invented.

Prebendary Owen has, during the week, had the honour of delivering before the Queen and the Royal family the first of a course of four lectures on sacred history.

The Queen, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the Royal family have honoured Mr. Charles Thomas with settings for his picture of the Prince of Wales's Marriage.

The Countess of Gainsborough has succeeded the Countess of Caledon as Lady in Waiting to the Princess Alexandra. Colonel Seymour, C.B., have succeeded Lord Talbot de Malahide and Colonel the Hon. A. Liddell as Lord and Groom in Waiting.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, with Prince Albert Victor, returned to Marlborough House on Wednesday from Windsor Castle. Their Royal Highnesses were attended by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel, and Dr. Holman. The Prince and Princess had the honour to pay a visit on passing through Paris on the Great Western Railway, arriving at Paddington at eleven o'clock. The Prince afterwards left Paddington by the 11.30 express train for the Clarendon Hotel. The Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary visited the Prince and Princess at Marlborough House. The Princess is in good health, and Prince Albert Victor, who has been recently vaccinated, is also doing well. The Prince and Princess were expected to leave Marlborough House (yesterday) for Sandringham, Norfolk, on Thursday. The Princess will remain there the course of the season, and the Prince will hold three Levées on behalf of the Queen.

The Prince and Princess have presented the Countess of Macclesfield with a splendid bracelet, in remembrance of her ladyship's kind act and ready assistance rendered to the Princess on the occasion when her Majesty has also presented Lady Macclesfield with a handsome souvenir of the late visit of the Princess of Wales to Ireland, as a respected Countess, to mark the auspicious circumstance.

Mr. Henry Cole has had the honour of receiving from the Prince for his picture of the landing at Gravesend; and Mr. H. Weigall has been honoured by a sitting from the Princess for a full-length portrait.

Mr. Henry Farnham, Lieutenant of the Knights of the Betrayal, has been submitted to the inspection of the Prince.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred remains at Holyrood Palace. On Good Friday the Prince, attended by Major Cowell, left Edinburgh by the 4 p.m. express-train on the North British Railway, en route for Alnwick, in Northumberland, and arrived at the station at Floors Castle.

On Saturday last the Prince, with the Duke of Roxburghe and the Marquis of Bowmont, enjoyed a day's fishing in Floors Water. His Royal Highness returned to Holyrood Palace. His Royal Highness left on Monday for Belfast, and returned to Edinburgh.

On Sunday the Prince attended Divine service. The Rev. Mr. Smith officiated.

On Monday the Prince returned to Holyrood Palace. His Royal Highness had a dinner-party in the evening.

On Tuesday the Prince honoured the Right Hon. the Lord Advocate with his presence at dinner at his house in Great Stuart-street, Edinburgh.

His Excellency the Ambassador of France has returned to Albert-gate House from visiting Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston at Broadlands.

His Excellency the Belgian Minister and Mdme. Van de Weyer have left Grosvenor-gate for New Lodge, Windsor Forest.

The Duchess of Cleveland has left Battle Abbey for Dowsham Hall, Norfolk.

The Duchess (Emily) of Beaufort has left town for Grimston Park, near Tadcaster, on a visit to Lord and Lady Londesborough.

The Duchess of Somerset and Lady Gwendaline St. Maur left the Vyne for Cowdray, Sussex, on the departure of the Duke for Paris, for a week or ten days.

Marquis Camden and the Ladies Pratt have returned to town from the Wilderness, Seven Oaks.

Earl and Countess Jermyn have left St. Jamess-square on a visit to Lord and Lady Forester at Willey Park, Shropshire.

The Earl and Countess of Lichfield have left town on a visit to the Marquis of Abercorn at Beechwood, Hertfordshire.

The Earl and Countess of Caledon and family have arrived at their residence in Hill-street for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Bessborough left town on Saturday last for their seat, Bessborough House, Kilkenny.

The Earl and Countess of Verulam have returned to town from visiting the Earl and Countess of Craven, at Combe Abbey, near Coventry.

Countess De Grey has left town to join his Lordship and family at Studley Park, Ripon.

The Earl of Rosebery has left town on a tour in Italy.

The Earl of Harrowby has left Grosvenor-square for Norton House, Gloucestershire.

The Earl of Ellenborough has returned to his residence in Eaton-square from Southam House, Cheltenham.

The Earl of Fife left town on Saturday last for a visit to Lady Louisa Brooke, at Aston Park.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston returned to Cambridge House on Monday, from Broadlands, Hampshire.

The Right Hon. Sir George Grey, Bart., M.P., has left town for Fenkins Park.

The Right Hon. the Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone have arrived in town from Dalmeny.

The Right Hon. B. Disraeli and Mrs. Disraeli have left Grosvenor-gate for Hughenden Manor.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

His Grace the Archbishop of York has taken 40, Belgrave-square, for the season.

The Bishop of Exeter will hold his next ordination in Exeter Cathedral on Trinity Sunday.

It is proposed to establish a chair of Celtic literature in the University of Glasgow.

A public subscription is being made in Yorkshire to erect a window to the memory of the late Mr. Justice Wightman in York Minster.

A window in the south transept of the parish church of Ramsbottom, Lancashire, has been filled with stained glass, at the cost of the Rector, the Rev. Basil Berridge.

The new church of St. Andrew, Church of St. Andrew, Romford, has lately been enriched by a painted east window, the gift of Mrs. George Cooper, in memory of her husband.

The Rev. J. Davey, B.A., Queen's College, Cambridge, late Second Master of King Edward VI. School, Retford, has been appointed to the head-mastership of Bromsgrove Grammar School.

The old parish church at Fonthill Gifford, Wilts, near the celebrated abbey tower, which has been recently restored, by order of the Westminster has undertaken the cost of the work, which is estimated at between £1000 and £1500.

The Bishop of Ely was consecrated on Tuesday in Westminster Abbey. The officiating Bishops were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Worcester and St. David's. The Dean of Westminster also took part in the ceremony.

Six stained-glass windows have recently been placed in the nave of the parish church of Newport, Essex, which have been presented by R. G. Windus, Esq., of Tottenham, Middlesex; the sixth being the gift of the Rector, the Rev. R. Bagot Chester.

The Sunday Evening Services in the nave of Westminster Abbey will commence to-morrow. The following are the preachers for the month:—April 10, the Rev. Dr. Jeune, Master of Pembroke; April 17, the Very Rev. Hugh Stowell; April 24, the Rev. R. Woodford, Vicar of Rochdale; May 1, the Lord Bishop of Oxford.

A public meeting is to be held at Cambridge, on the 8th inst., for the purpose of taking steps to establish a Working Men's Institute in connection with St. Nicolas' College, Lancing. The Vice-Chancellor is to be in the chair, and the Bishop of Chichester, the founder of the institution, are expected to take part in the meeting.

The Rev. Thomas Hugo, Rector of Langar, near Ongar, Essex, has been removed, after considerable alterations in the chancel. The work consists of a new chancel-floor, laid with encaustic tiles, new oak stalls, panelled back, and a new timber roof, the cost of which has been defrayed by the Rector, the Rev. T. W. Oliver.

The Bishop of Oxford is to lay the first stone of the new English church at Brussels on the morning of April 19. The church is to be built of Autwerp bricks, is to accommodate about 700 people, and is to have a tower and spire 200 feet high. The architect is Mr. Street, a son of the Avenue de la Toison Or.

A beautiful east window, at a cost of £1000, has been placed in the chancel of St. Mary's Church, Nottingham, in memory of the late Rev. Thomas Hind, Vicar of St. Mary's. The window having been placed by the Queen, the following reply was received by the Vicar, the Rev. Frederick Brooke:—"Windsor Castle, March 29, 1864.—Sir,—I have had the honour to submit before her Majesty the Queen the description and design of the memorial window to the late Rev. Thomas Hind, Vicar of St. Mary's, Nottingham. Her Majesty has been much gratified by this mark of respect and admiration of the late Vicar, expressed by his parishioners.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, C. B. Phipps."

The Bishop of London has appointed the following clergy to be Rural Deans, and has assigned to each his district:—Archdeaconry of Middlesex—Hackney, Rural Dean, the Rev. Thomas Hill, from April 1.—Sunday, 3, the Rev. James Augustus Hessey, Head Master of St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, at St. Mary's, Bryanston-square.—Monday, 4, the Rev. Thomas Scott, Rector of Stanhope, at St. Mary's, Bryanston-square.—Tuesday, 5, the Rev. Thomas Scott, at St. Mary's, Bryanston-square.—Sunday Evening Services, at 8, in St. Paul's Cathedral.—Sunday, 3, the Rev. Dr. Hook, Dean of Chichester; April 10, the Rev. Portock of the Chapter House, Westminster; April 17, the Rev. the Hon. R. H. Liddell, Student of Christ Church, Oxford; 24, the Rev. W. M. Murray, D.D., Rector of Bromley, Middlesex.

The Bishop of Lichfield has issued an appeal to his diocese on the subject of the Church Extension Fund. The fund, since the date of its subscription with £1000, gives the following summary of the work done:—Since 1841 there have been 74 new churches built, and 74 churches built, 174 restored, and 8 temporary ones, furnishing an aggregate of 72,241 additional sittings. Of these 39,000 are free sittings. Of the new churches 19 have had their endowments augmented, and 104 parsonage-houses have been built. The total amount of money raised for these purposes has been £1,000,000. The additional requisite needs of the diocese are said to be—77 new churches, 45 to be enlarged, 77 new parsonage-houses, 4 new endowments, 3 new rural districts, and additions to the endowments of 102 livings of under £100 per annum, and of 100 of £100.

PREFERMENTS AND APPOINTMENTS.—The Rev. A. R. Webster, Rector of Bainton, to be Chaplain to the Bishop of Peterborough.—The Rev. W. F. Block to Hawkchurch, Warrington; Rev. B. D. Bowling to Preen Manors, Salop.—The Rev. Thomas Scott, Rector of Stanhope, to Yatton Keynell, Vicarage: Rev. R. A. Bathurst to Brockworth, Perpetual Curacy.—The Rev. Thomas Hugo, Rector of Langar, Notts, to Bainton, Yorks: Rev. M. Kerry to St. John, Bristol: Rev. R. M. Price to Filkins, Curacies: Rev. J. S. Bowden to Ashton-under-Lyne: Rev. J. Bell to Bolton-le-Moors, Incumbencies: Rev. R. Gibbs to Cheltenham, Lectureship.

TESTIMONIALS TO CLERGYMEN.—On Saturday last the congregation of St. Mark's Church, Kennington, Surrey, presented the Rev. Thomas Hill, M.A., their late Vicar, with a handsome testimonial of plate. Hitherto, with a street dessert service and salver, together with an illuminated address, the gift of the Rev. Mr. Hill's late flock, as a token of their esteem, as they leave, as they say, "a field of labour in which you have been the instrument under God of ministering Christian Comfort, after a residence thirty-five years in the district of Kennington." The testimonial, which is of massive silver, was presented the Rev. C. J. Martyn, M.A., with a portrait of his father, the Rev. Thomas Martyn, B.D., F.R.S., Rector of Kelshall, on Monday a handsome Louis Quatorze timepiece in gilt and porcelain, together with a purse containing £100, was presented to the Rev. Mr. Kaskin, Birmingham. At the same time an exquisitely inlaid workstand, contributed for by the ladies, was presented to Mrs. Kaskin, wife of Mr. Kaskin. The event giving rise to these presentations is the resignation by the Rev. Mr. Kaskin of the curacy of St. Bartholomew's, Birmingham, in order that he may be living in the north and to the office of Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Ripon. On Tuesday the Rev. Thomas Hill, late Vicar of St. Mark's, Kennington, was presented with a purse containing £100, a handsome silver salver, a pair of candlesticks, a handsome drawing-room clock, and an address from the parishioners of St. Mark's, Kennington, on leaving the parish. The Curate of Spennithorne—a handsome edition of "The Parables of Our Lord," in a handsome Oxford binding, from the Rev. Thomas Hutchinson, M.A., the Rev. Richard E. Craig, incumbent of the Martineers' Church, Hull—a set of watercolour exercises, through the kindness of Mr. Lowes Dalby, to the Rev. Mr. Dresching-gown, from his churchwardens and a few friends, on Easter Day.

UNIVERSITY OF EDINBURGH.—A meeting of the Council of gentlemen favourable to the establishment of an association for the better endowment of the University of Edinburgh was held on Monday, in the presidency of the Lord Provost, the attendance included the Lord Justice Clerk, Lord Ivory, Lord Neaves, Dr. David Laing, Dr. Balfour, Professor Bell, Dr. Baxter, Sir G. Home, Professor Christison, &c. Dr. John Hutt (brother of the late Sir William Hutt) read a letter from Sir William Hutt, intimating that an association for the following objects:—1, the foundation of scholarships or bursaries for the encouragement of students of limited means; 2, the endowment of additional chairs; 3, the improvement of the buildings; and the foundation of new professorships. Of the two objects, the former was the more urgent, although the latter was also of great importance to the University. There was not so much occasion to make further provision for bursaries for undergraduates, as the University possessed several exhibitions in the faculty of arts, and seven in theology; and several county clubs now springing up were likely to provide bursaries for students in their respective districts. Lord of Schahampton or fellowships; to the augmentation, where necessary, of the incomes of the Professors; to the improvement of the buildings; and to the character tending to promote the efficiency of the University as a seat of learning." Another meeting is expected to be held, when action should be taken.

The Iceman steam-ship City of New York, from New York, on the 19th ult., struck on Diant's Rock on entering Queenstown Harbour on Tuesday morning. She is likely to become a total wreck, the rock having passed right bottom under the starboard bunker opposite the mainmast. The passengers, specie, mails, and much of the cargo have been saved.

At Vienna, a young Countess, only seventeen years of age, niece of one of the highest State officials, has shot herself through the body. In a letter found on the bed a letter from her lover, a Count, in which the circumstances would not allow him to fulfil his promise to marry her, and which therefore released him, is given as the reason which she adopted for recovery.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

The citizens of the Ward of Bassishaw have elected Mr. David Henry Rose, haberdasher, to be an Alderman, in the place of Mr. E. Conder.

A meeting was held yesterday week on Blackheath to express sympathy with Poland. The chair was taken by Mr. Edmund Beales, Q.C. Names of 6000 persons were present. Various resolutions were passed declaring that intervention on behalf of the Poles was the duty of our Government.

Messrs. Peto and Betts are intend to commence the long line from the Farringdon-road station of the Metropolitan line of railway to Smithfield on Monday next. Upwards of 1000 hands will be put in motion with the Finsbury extension line.

The annual Easter dinner at the Mansion House took place on Monday night in the Egyptian Hall. It was a brilliant affair. The Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Strathnairn, Sir Frederick Smith and other noblemen, together with several members of Parliament, were among the guests of the evening. The Lord Mayor's health, the Lord Mayor's health, after dinner the Lady Mayoress held a reception.

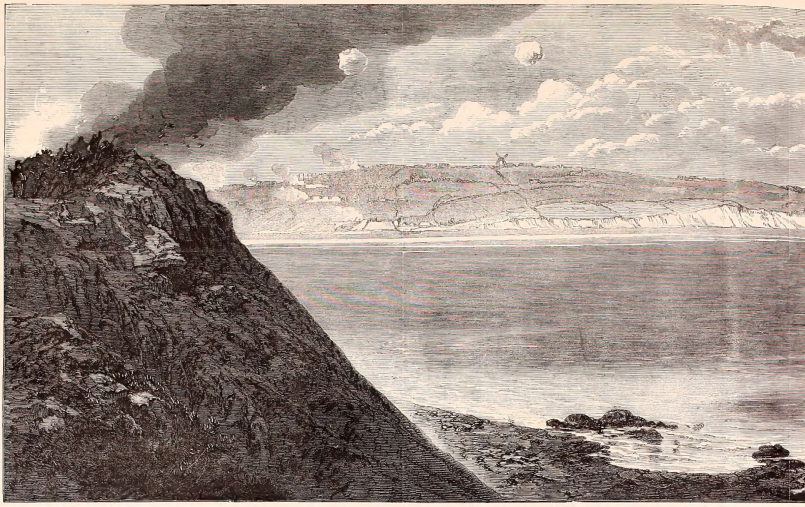
The opening of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club took place on Thursday week. Above six yachts rendezvoused at Blackwall Pier at 11 a.m., and, after a short time, the commodore, arrived at Blackwall pier. Dinner was on the table at six o'clock, and thirty gentlemen sat down. Mr. B. Hewitt, the commodore, presided, being backed by Lord Alfred Paget, the treasurer. A pleasant evening was spent.

The Registrar-General's return contained the Bethnal-green grandmas and Dr. Moore with the conclusion at which they have arrived upon the reports of Inspectors Lankester and Farnall, who conducted inquiries into charges made by the guardians against Dr. Moore. Some of the charges they could not be taken proved, others they say are proved, and they censure Dr. Moore. Upon the whole, they come to the conclusion that he had better resign his appointment, and that the union should reorganise.

Last week the births of 1607 children (974 boys and 923 girls) were registered in London, in the week corresponding week in the last 1851-61 the average number (corrected) is 2861.—The deaths registered in London last week were 1,176. The average number for the corresponding week of ten previous years, 1854-63, is, with a correction for increase of population, 1,347. Epidemic diseases caused fewer cases; measles, scarlatina exhibits an increase, in forty-four; scarlatina in thirty-seven; diphtheria in twenty-three; croup in eleven; and hooping-cough in seven. The number of deaths referred to phthisis is 158; to bronchitis 102, which in nearly the same proportion as in the last week. Diseases of the nervous system, the two evils of whom were respectively ninety-six and ninety-seven years of age.

Meetings of the Civil Service and trades unions' executive committees, who have interested themselves to give a welcome to Garibaldi, were held on Thursday. It was agreed that Garibaldi would leave Southampton on Friday, April 15; visit Southampton on his way, where he would be entertained by the Mayor and Corporation; arrive at Nine Elms Station, London, the morning of Saturday, April 16; arriving there, it was proposed to have a procession to the Crystal Palace, where it is proposed to have a banquet given to Sir Sidney Smith, in March last. The Committee have to be asked to allow the volunteer rifles to line the route. The reception and testimonial committees will meet at the Mansion House, Thursday next, to be held.—Mr. S. Morley is the chairman of the committee, and Messrs. J. Richardson and Co. are the secretaries. A member of the District of Camden Council has given notice of a motion for the presentation of the freedom of the borough to Garibaldi.

A show of flowers was held at the gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society, South Kensington, on Wednesday. There was present, and as her Majesty's visit was of a semi-public character it excited great interest, and a considerable crowd of the public had taste installed. The Queen looked remarkably well. The show was announced as an exhibition of cut flowers and miscellaneous articles. The assertion hardly seems a trifle obstinate this year, the show was extended to other flowering plants, and consisted mainly, indeed, of the latter. Azaleas, rhododendrons, and the like filled the valley, and rhizomatic. Those products of spring culture were arranged in the conservatory, and the cut flowers were in the tent. The Queen, the Prince of Wales, and Princess Alexandra went to the flowers and plants the more of the morning, and, a change of wind having taken place towards the afternoon, the air was very cold, and the tent was deserted. Her Majesty, after inspecting the show made their way to the grand conservatory, where the Royal party lunched, and the Royal Engineers played a selection of music. All things considered, and despite of weather influences, the show almost equalled those of the past year.



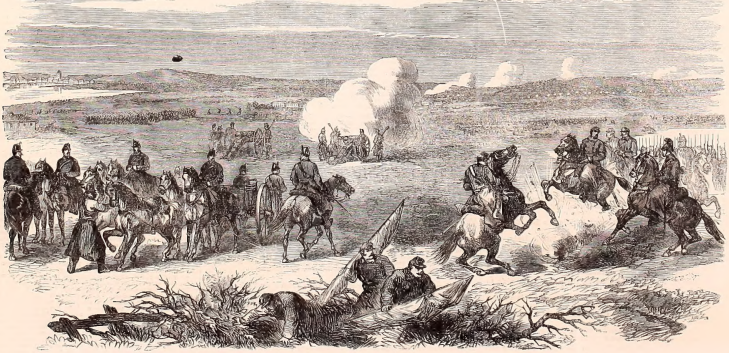
The nineteenth anniversary festival of the friends of the Royal General Theatrical Fund was celebrated on Thursday night at the Freemasons' Tavern, by a numerous company of gentlemen connected with the drama and literature, presided over by Mr. Charles Dickens, the trustee. This society, which aims at affording relief to the sick and disabled actor, or actress, and to the widow, orphan, and to the temporarily distressed members of the "sock and buskin," is the youngest but one of the five societies which have been established for the benefit of the professors of the histrionic art. The operations of this society during the past year were marked by the increase of the number of annuitants from twenty-seven to thirty-two, and by the increase of the annuities from £31 to £40 each. The payment to annuitants, in accordance with the rule which limits the annuity to £40 per annum, amounted to £1280, while £60 refunded to members who have claimed a return of their subscriptions. The Benefit Fund, which is regarding the usual loyal toasts, took occasion to mention that her Majesty had contributed her annual donation of £50, and that the Prince of Wales had consented to become the patron of the institution—announcements which were received with the greatest enthusiasm. The Benefit Fund, which is the special speech in advocacy of the claims of the drama and its professors to the support of the public, was in no case on the night of the festival—namely, the incontestable benefit of an elevated drama and the meritorious character of the actor's profession. The report, which was read by the secretary, stated that the finances of the society remained in an encouraging condition, the receipts having reached £1,000, while the subscriptions from members during the past year amounted to £272. Further donations to the funds were needed, as notice had been given of five more claimants to the benefits afforded by the institution, and there would have to provide for twenty-six decayed actors and actresses whose providence and carefulness had given them a claim to permanent support. The result of the night's meeting by the chairman and by the treasurer was a liberal addition to the funds.

LAW AND POLICE.—The trustees of the late Mr. Dale, deceased, left a will, whereby she gave £20,000 (but by a codicil the sum was reduced to £10,000) to the trustees of the Royal Institution for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The trustees of the Society were empowered by the will to establish and maintain a hospital or hospitals, dispensary or slaughter-houses in the neighborhood of London and Westminster, away from the more populated places, for the relief and protection from cruelty of the animals taken to be slaughtered. The residuary legatees, having contended that the gift was void, and that the money should revert to them, the case came before the Chancery, where counsel for the society urged that the money was given for the purpose of erecting and maintaining suitable buildings, but it might be applied towards the maintenance and management of the buildings when erected and existing. The gift would not, therefore, be void by mortmain. The Vice-Chancellor Wood said he did not think the money should be considered to have been given for the erection of buildings merely, but that the money was given to the society in order that they might apply it in the best manner they might consider for the purposes of the institution. A decree directing the legacy of £10,000, therefore, must be paid over to the society.

Considerable excitement in the police courts prevailing some days since in consequence of the arrest of a gentleman in a fit of insanity in the precincts of Bread. A City bookseller, not unlike, in his way, to Mr. Murdstone, in "David Copperfield," who, considering that it would be paid to the publishers of the "Times" for the advertisement, and, moreover, that the books were charged at exorbitant prices, and had never been delivered, had, in the most business-like manner, declined to engage a packet of the books and engaging a sum of money which had been charged for carriage.

SUPPOSED FOUNDERING OF AN ITALIAN FRIGATE, AND LOSS OF FOUR HUNDRED LIVES.—The ship Star of the West, on her passage to New York, left on the 19th ult. Gibraltar, and on the following day passed the frigate all night, but the weather was usual and favourable. On the 21st ult. it was reported that the frigate was the Re Galantuomo, an ironclad, bound to New York for the Italian Government. We spoke to the Captain Watson, of the ship Star of the West:—"On the 7th of March the Italian frigate Re Galantuomo left Spezia for New York. She had on board four p.m., with mainstaysail gone and colours in mainstaysail, as if they wished to speak a ship. At five p.m. the frigate overhauled by the Star of the West, sixteen miles off. We were about to accompany her to the nearest port, when the weather became very bad, and the frigate, being in sight, we said we would not accompany her to the nearest port, "We have 600." We promised to remain by the frigate through the night, and to accompany her to Gibraltar, and kept by her all night p.m. we fired a rocket, which was responded to by another from the frigate, and we then have to about two miles to the windward. At nine p.m. fired a blue light, which was answered by one from the frigate, the two ships being then in about the same positions. At ten p.m. fired a rocket and a blue light, but received no reply; and again, at eleven p.m., another blue light and rocket were fired, but no reply was made to either. We then stood on and remained there three miles. Here to and by until daylight, and again ran to the spot, but the lookout at the masthead could see nothing of the frigate. At six a.m. hoisted by the wind, supposing the frigate had kept before the wind. Shortly after nine a.m. it commenced blowing a strong breeze from N.N.W., with heavy squalls and rain, but saw nothing more was to be seen of the frigate." A British, a French, a Russian, and two American vessels of war have sailed in search of the Italian war-frigate Re Galantuomo.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DE



GENERAL VIEW OF THE DUPPEL

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK.

THE SIEGE OF FREDERICIA.

The Engraving on our front page, from a sketch just sent us by Mr. Nielsen, a Danish engineer at Fredericia, represents the Danish troops marching out from the western gate of that town—the Kolding Gate—on the 8th of March, to check the advance of the Austrians at Vejle. A sketch and brief account of the conflict, which took place at Vejle on the afternoon of that day, appeared in our last week's Number. Although the Austro-Prussians have, at least for a time, withdrawn from the siege of Fredericia, some notice may here be taken of the position and defences of the place. Beyond the western fortifications, outside the Kolding Gate, the villages of Erritsö and Skovstrup, about two miles from the nearest bastions of Fredericia, were last week occupied by the Austrians; but in the low marsh lands between those villages and the town the Danes had contrived, by damming up a stream which runs across, to improvise a kind of moat, 1000 ft. in width, above an English mile in length, and too deep, as well as running with too strong a current, for either horse or foot to cross it. The landward fortifications of Fredericia extend in a semicircular curve from north-east to south-west; while the south-east side and the south side of the town—each about two thirds of an English mile—are built close to the waters of the Little Belt; and the batteries of the citadel or castle, at the angle

A SKIRMISH NEAR FREDERICIA.

DENMARK. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

FFEL REDOUBTS AND SONDERBURG.

where these two sides meet, command the navigation of that narrow strait. The Times' correspondent, Mr. Gallenga, says that the land-ward bastions are "masses of earth with moats and escarps, constructed with a solidity which he had never seen equalled." This is especially on the north-east side, which is further defended by "trenches, ditches, and palisades, calculated to hold the ground inch by inch, on the entrance, and within the town up to the citadel." The batteries are mounted with the heaviest guns that were known ten years ago. On the eastern side of the town, along the shore, the Danes have constructed, in their old parade-ground, a regular intrenched camp, as far as the Treide Wood, and five bastions, to secure this position, which, if taken by the Germans, as it was in 1849, might interfere with the access to Fredericia by sea. The intrenched camp, which extends rather more than a mile from the northern gate of the city to the wood, is looked upon as "a kind of second Dannewerk, having been undertaken, after the fall of that great national bulwark, on the retreat of its defenders to a narrower field of action." The camp is strengthened on the landward side by earthworks or batteries, provided with mood aid palisade, and armed with cannon of a good large calibre; a breastwork for the infantry runs along the line. As long as the Danes can hold this intrenched camp, the communications of Fredericia with the islands of Denmark will be safe at the northern end of the Little Belt; but last week vessels entering at the southern end could not

PRUSSIAN INFANTRY MAKING FASCINES AT ATZEBULL, NEAR DÜPPEL.

R SPECIAL ARTIST.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF TH

THE SIEGE OF

The Engraving on our front page, Nielsen, a Danish engineer at Fred marching out from the western Gate—on the 8th of March, to cl Veile. A sketch and brief account o ion of that narrow ength, says that with moats and had never seen st side, which is ades, calculated to d within the town

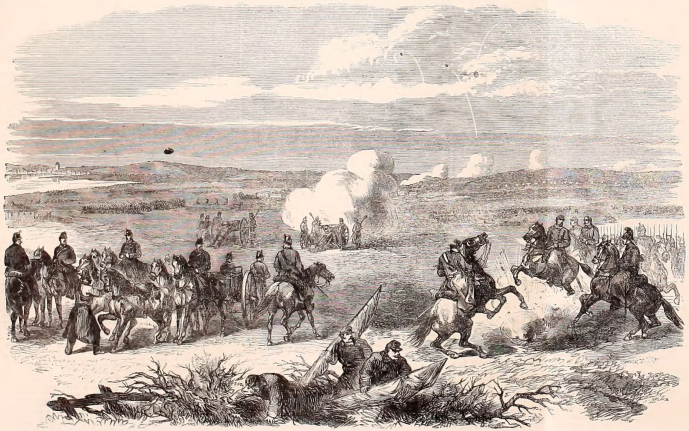
the heaviest guns

that were known ten years ago. On the eastern side of the town, along the shore, the Danes have constructed, in their old parade-ground, a regular intrenched camp, as far as the Treide Wood, and five bastions, to secure this position, which, if taken by the Germans, as it was in 1849, might interfere with the access to Fredericia by sea. The intrenched camp, which extends rather more than a mile from the northern gate of the city to the wood, is looked upon as "a kind of second Dannewerk, having been undertaken, after the fall of that great national bulwark, on the retreat of its defenders to a narrower field of action." The camp is strengthened on the landward side by earthworks or batteries, provided with moat and palisade, and armed with cannon of a good large calibre; a breastwork for the infantry runs along the line. As long as the Danes can hold this intrenched camp, the communications of Fredericia with the islands of Denmark will be safe at the northern end of the Little Belt; but last week vessels entering at the southern end could not

PRUSSIAN INFANTRY MAKING FASCINES AT AZEBULL, NEAR DUPPEL.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.



GENERAL VIEW OF THE DUPPEL REDOUBTS AND SONDERBURG.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE WAR IN DENMARK.

THE SIEGE OF FREDERICIA.

THE Engraving on our front page, from a sketch just sent us by Mr. Nielsen, a Danish engineer at Fredericia, represents the Danish troops marching out from the western gate of that town—the Kolding Gate—on the 8th of March, to check the advance of the Austrians at Veile. A sketch and brief account of the conflict, which took place at Veile on the afternoon of that day, appeared in our last week's Number. Although the Austro-Prussians have, at least for a time, withdrawn from the siege of Fredericia, some notice may here be taken of the position and defences of the place. Beyond the western fortifications, outside the Kolding Gate, the villages of Erritsö and Stonstrup, about two miles from the nearest bastions of Fredericia, were last week occupied by the Austrians; but in the low marsh lands between those villages and the town the Danes had contrived, by damming up a stream which runs across, to improvise a kind of moat, 1000 ft. in width, above an English mile in length, and too deep, as well as running with too strong a current, for either horse or foot to cross it. The landward fortifications of Fredericia extend in a semicircular curve from north-east to south-west; while the south-east side and the south side of the town—each about two thirds of an English mile—are built close to the waters of the Little Belt; and the batteries of the citadel or castle, at the angle where these two sides meet, command the navigation of that narrow strait. The Times' correspondent, Mr. Gallenga, says that the landward bastions are "masses of earth with moats and escarps, constructed with a solidity which he had never seen equalled." This is especially on the north-east side, which is further defended by "trenches, ditches, and palisades, calculated to hold the ground inch by inch, on the entrance, and within the town up to the citadel." The batteries are mounted with the heaviest guns that were known ten years ago. On the eastern side of the town, along the shore, the Danes have constructed, in their old parade-ground, a regular intrenched camp, as far as the Treide Wood, and five bastions, to secure this position, which, if taken by the Germans, as it was in 1849, might interfere with the access to Fredericia by sea. The intrenched camp, which extends rather more than a mile from the northern gate of the city to the wood, is looked upon as "a kind of second Dannewerk, having been undertaken, after the fall of that great national bulwark, on the retreat of its defenders to a narrower field of action." The camp is strengthened on the landward side by earthworks or batteries, provided with moat and palisade, and armed with cannon of a good large calibre; a breastwork for the infantry runs along the line. As long as the Danes can hold this intrenched camp, the communications of Fredericia with the islands of Denmark will be safe at the northern end of the Little Belt; but last week vessels entering at the southern end could not

A SKIRMISH NEAR FREDERICIA.

PRUSSIAN INFANTRY MAKING FASCINES AT ATZEBULL, NEAR DUPPEL.

FINE ARTS.

HERBERT'S "MOSES BRINGING DOWN THE SECOND TABLES OF THE LAW."

Persons who have seen the frieze "Lear Disinherits Cordelia," by Mr. J. R. Herbert, R.A., in the Poets' or Upper Waiting-hall of the Palace, Westminster, will perhaps form a forecast of the higher estimate of the painter's capabilities for this kind of work than those familiar only with his oil-pictures. This frieze has the best qualities of monumental art, and has moreover proved the most durable of all the early frescoes in the new Houses of Parliament.

The Royal Commissioners, who have this acted wisely, therefore, when they intrusted to this artist the execution of an important series of compartments in the same material between the windows in "Peter Robing-Room," but really intended to be the Appeal Court of the Lords, in the Victoria Tower. Seven subjects have been decided on, and seven only, of subjects. Law and judgment are the themes he has set himself to illustrate. Of the seven compartments, five of the largest compartments, indicates the source of the law in the tables of the Ten Commandments given by Moses on Mount Sinai, the other compartments of equal size are to contain illustrations of the wisdom of the judge Solomon, and of the righteous Daniel, between the mothers, of Daniel between the wicked Elders and chaste Susannah, and the divine overruling of judgment in the blessing of the tribes by Balaam. In the four smaller compartments prayer and faith, which are the basis of righteous judgment, will be typified by Daniel at prayer in his window, and Daniel in the lion's den; and on the opposite side, the service to God which precedes and the honours which follow the administration of justice, by Solomon's decision at the building of the temple and Solomon receiving the Queen of Sheba. The seventh compartment, over the throne, is not yet decided on; we could have wished to see some illustration of the new law of Christianity, by which justice is tempered with mercy. But such illustrations might, perhaps, have been out of place in this chamber for we suppose English law is, like the old Jewish, based upon principles of strict justice—"an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth."

Mr. Herbert received the commission for these works nearly ten years ago, and during that time the court was not sufficiently advanced to admit of his painting therein till 1857. Meanwhile the artist was engaged on the compartments assigned to him. The subject just finished was actually commenced in the room six years and a half back, but, from the nature of the work, Mr. Herbert became so dissatisfied with the process of fresco that he cut out the whole of what he had painted, intending to try it in oil; but all the frescoes at Westminster had shown traces of premature decay, but the restitution of the work was, while in progress, so much for the painter that by the new process—which is the purest form of water-colour painting—the artist can retouch as he pleases, altering and improving the whole as he work, while in fresco it is impossible to paint on the stronger (or last coat of plaster) while it is freshly wet, and to paint on the dry coat is to paint on a surface on sandy. The water-glass, or tetra-silicate of potash, which is syringed on when the painting is finished, produces a hardened surface of extreme hardness, promises, moreover, to perform the functions of a perfectly protective varnish, which will not change colour or injure the oil-paints and varnish. The new method also allows the use of all those colours which would be destroyed by lime used in a fresh state in the fresco. One other advantage it is specially important to notice in connection with Mr. Herbert's works—namely, that the process is not liable to the evil of ultramarine. This preparation from the precious stone lapis-lazuli is not only the most costly but also the most beautiful in its effects of all blues. It is the blue employed in the sky in old frescoes, being often the subject of special contract; but it could only be employed in fresco in the ground of the sky, while in oil it could be used in the upper strokes, where the touch is lively, and where atmospheric tints and shadows it is possible to conceive.

The preparation of the ground on which the painter finally adopted a modification of the process, which we must also notice because not only peculiar to himself, but productive of considerable effect in the painting to which it is applied—namely, the brilliant white order of nice. This ground involves much more labour, but is also of a higher degree of durability, and presents a greater purity in the colouring, and, as the painter believes, secures the solemn appearance of the work after years. The new process has proved eminently adapted for the particular scene represented; for it will be seen the room is open to the sky, and the light is used for the arid desert and slopes of Sinai lit with an afternoon sun. For general purposes, indeed, the painter considers the process to be that most likely to produce coldness and crudeness. In comparing this picture with the large painting with the same name by Poussin, the variety of water-glass painting with the pure fresco of the Frenchman we find that while the first has a more vivid brilliancy, and is more tender, pure, and serial, the latter has more transparency, greater depth of tone, more richness, and a richer and more grandiose texture.

Having stated Mr. Herbert's process, Mr. Herbert recommenced his painting from the cartoon towards the close of 1860; the work just now completed has consequently occupied the artist for about three years. In justification of the space we devote to its description we shall at once say that we have not seen a picture in the whole of the art, which we firmly believe is in some important respects the most remarkable production of the modern school of art in Great Europe.

The painting occupies the upper part, of the end wall of the room—space about 25ft. by 12ft. The foreground figures are life-size. The painter's text will be found in Exodus, chapter xix. 20, and in the following chapters, to chapter xxxiv. 9 and 10. At first sight, the dazzling open-air effect of the picture is so startling as to be overpowering. It is not the usual custom for the eye to receive its powers of correct perception. In fact, the eye requires to be educated to appreciate it. No one can observe that the head of a door cuts some two feet into the centre of figures, if considered as a picture, and not as a fresco, without, so to speak, architectural encumbrants are common in Italian frescoes, and sometimes even in Raphael's compositions, as in the Vatican. Here a group of figures is very skilfully disposed round this door-head, so as to form a pyramidal composition. At the foot of Sinai, and this central group communicates on the left with another and grander irregular pyramid, which is formed by the mountain itself, and by the figure of Moses, as he rises, or keystone, in Moses blessing the law of God. The eye is thus instantly directed to and fixed on Moses. In the same way the architectural association would be at once revolted by the strange and extraordinary aspect of the great leader of Israel. But as the result of the picture is to produce a sense of the unconfortably drapid, respectable but ill-tempered, prophesids who have done their duty in this world, and are to be rewarded in the next, it will recall that seated statue of Michael Angelo, so sublime an ideal of prophetic power, which sits on the tomb of Giuliano, resting from the head and taking the tablet from the lap, might serve for Pan or a patriarchal satyr, or a Titan, a Philistine, or any other heathen, but scarcely for the "meekest of men," chastened by a forty-days' fast—vividly, we say, as the visitor will recall this statue with the picturesque Moses of Parmigiano and, may be, a number of less familiar representations, will be at once thus before his eyes, and the conviction of the Moses of Mr. Herbert. The conventional ideas on design from the paintings of the old masters—which are accepted as an early age without thought and are retained through life without examination—are here subject to the test of the principles of nature, and the examination of features, or grave details due to the introduction of draperies admitting of being "cast," academically, or to the addition of merely picturesque accessories, are not to be found. One thesis of this picture is an aged man, wrinkled, worn, and wasted with eighty winters and a forty days' fast, wearing a costume resembling that of a Sheikh of the desert. He descends from the Mount of God unconscious of those gathering about him, thinking possibly of the far-off future, and still in the trance of awe with which he has communed with that Presence which no one else could behold and live, and with the tables "written with the finger of God" in his hand, and with his gold enshrined girdle. The reflected glory lingering about his face, personal to the Old Testament in the words "he wist not that the skin of his face shone," the painter represents by faint rays of horns, which, however, are not obtrusive, and which, as it is by the concentric circles of a halo, or nimbus, the last being the only appearance in the contemporary works of Raphael and Michael Angelo. On each side stand or kneel the Levites, elders, "chiefs of the congregation," and "princes of the tribes," as the text has it—patriarchs, rulers of hundreds, &c., who have ventured up to the elevated rocky platform on which Moses has descended. The same at the suggestion of Moses is intensified by the recitation of the commandments lightning over the heads of the mountain-side, which, with the recent idolatry of the golden calf had been visited. Aaron, the chief instrument in that idolatry, stands on the left side, nearest Moses, holding the tablets of the first dispensation, which promised and deservedly, and with his hand on his breast in token of penitence. Behind him are Abihu, and Nadab, the latter carrying a silver trumpet (copied in the bas-relief of the Arch of Titus), the expression of their features corresponding with the penitence which afterwards cost them their lives when offering strange fire to the Lord. The remaining figures are kneeling in a sword landscape, in the jungle, a rat sibah over his white back, is Joshua, the son of Nun, "a man in whom the Spirit is," by his side—a golder but not less dignified personage—stands Eleazar, Aaron's third son, and attendant high-priest in succession to Nadab and Abihu, towards the front, bending reverently before the Tables of the Law, is Nun, the father of Joshua. All these, except Joshua, being Levites are furnished with the insignia of their order, a censer in the right hand, while his back turned to the spectator, in a Prince of the tribe of Judah, wearing a purple robe and the golden or sized crown of royalty, is intended for Joseph's or many colours. Among a number of other figures and groups in the foreground, the Hebrew slaves, just flying out of Egypt with the Jews) is an Israelitish woman with her babe slung at her back, either Jochebed, Moses's mother, or an elder sister, and protected from the sun by a veil hanging from her head; as accordingly, we see in the figure of the Egyptian who was drowned in the Nile.

Connecting the left-hand crowd with the lower central group are a boy of twelve covering and flying in alarm from the supernatural aspect of Moses, and a young mother, on one knee, giving suck to her infant, while she looks up in fear at the mountain. The mountain is lined with a spray of that spine-studded acacia which is supposed to have furnished the wood of their ark, and which is the only shrub to typify the cruelty of the Jewish race. Next, to the right, a Hebrew mother, with her child in her arms, and a little maid is weeping her position him a Nazarite. He wears the small ahbah, and a garment, which, in the absence of the long robe worn among the Egyptian Arabs, and translated "brochen" in our version. A remarkable feature in this group is an ass with a pack-saddle, the big eyes while gazing at Moses; together with a semi-prostrate shepherd, who, with his crook, is endeavouring to keep his flock from admirable anatomical study—arch over the door-head. Foremost of the right-hand group, with a purple abbah over his green tunic, is Caleb, the son of Jephunneh, one of the "twelve" whom he besides Joshua of those who, numbering in the wilderness, were permitted to enter the promised land. Caleb's next is Hur (the husband of Miriam), in Levitical white. His name is wounded in the head, and is, we believe, the first ancient slaughter. Near him, in a sheepskin jacket, standing in an attitude of weariness, is Aaron's second son, Ithamar, through all which people belonged Jethro, Moses' father-in-law, and, of course, the wife Zipporah, and her two sons, Gershom and Eliezer, carried by the sudden curiosity about her, from giving drink to her daughter's Behind are a Judean boy and Simeonite girl, with Asher, Dan, and Naphtali in the distance, who will contain the Tables of Testimony, the coming workman in gold, silver, and brass, wood, and stone. Nearest Moses Moreh, the acacia-tree, evergreen, and bearing her leaves and head beneath her advanced arm, her timbrel lying by her side. Behind this group a Reubenite and a Gadite, the latter bearing the rod not described; and beyond Levite guards keep the "bounds set round the mount," the sheep art, such as simple but full composition, appropriate expression, and harmonious colouriferice of material dealts with general breadth, are most conspicuously present.

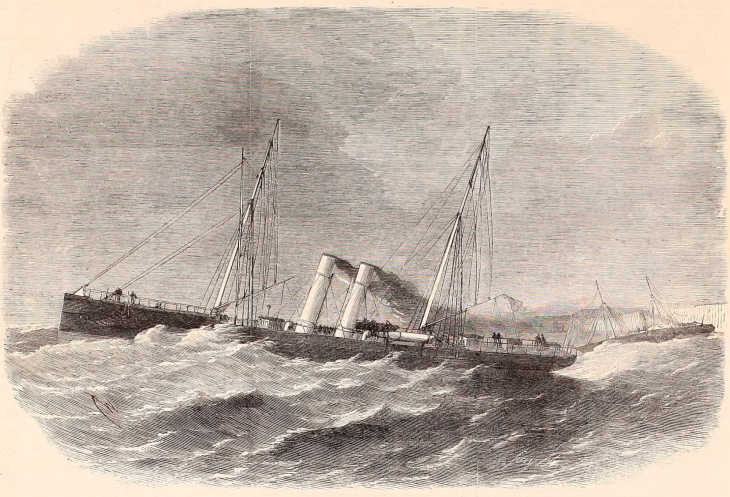
It may have occurred to the reader that in a recent report of the Fine-Art Commissioners, and in the last Session of Parliament, complaints were made at the slow progress of Mr. Herbert, and also of Mr. Dyce. If no further interruptions occur, and we assume making no allowance for the preparation of cartoons) that each of the large compartments yet to be painted will occupy the artist as long as the first, and the small compartments a year each, it will be some thirteen years before the whole court is painted. The delay was quite unforeseen by Mr. Herbert himself, for he contracted to paint the large compartments at the rate of £300 each, calculating that each would occupy him twenty months. What Mr. Herbert's loss must be, have been over this public work will be better understood by those acquainted with the prices (thousands for a single oil painting) now given to inferior artists by dealers and private patrons. And a similar sacrifice, more or less, has been made by all the eminent painters at Westminster. It is, in fact, the simple truth, that well-painting abroad are executed in a much slighter manner and more rapidly, and that for many years past mural decoration such extreme elaboration as we see in every part of Mr. Herbert's work is unnecessary. Had the artists employed at Westminster are quite exceptional for artistic value as well as self-sacrificing labour; and it seems to us remarkable that the graceful that this great and wealthy nation should remunerate artists who are producing works which will remain the pride and glory of the country on a scale which, except in Italy, Raphael, Dyce, and Maclise more especially, has barely amounted to half that of the salary of an under-secretary in any of the departments of state. The late Mr. Dyce had private means to fall back upon, but the unfounded complaints made about him were a terrible blow to him into his grave. Mr. Herbert, however, plainly confesses that he cannot afford to proceed upon the same scale of expenditure and its contemplation of a different description of work. It is for the public to decide whether the 'scheme is worthy of further help.



We are informed that Mr. Herbert intends having this picture engraved on a large scale under his own immediate superintendence.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE racing-season never seems to open in earnest till Ryf's Guide has come, with its little of Lincoln, Epsom, and Goodwood. Jellaman has taken his post in front of the little gilt horse above Mr. Clark's box, and proclaimed, with the preface of a most emphatic "Now," the commencement of the Betting Ring, as we "willin"—and there-fore let the bell be rung for the Trial Stakes. This year it brought some good names on to the turf—names that will be remembered for a-to a on the strength of his Warwick performance, was fairly outpaced by Glenfiddich, who was ridiculously light. Mr. Hargreaves' Seamiss, whose Bedford doings last October made her first favourite, justified her backers' confidence by a very decisive victory, and triumphed again with Dollar by Flying Dutchman (who is equal to taking his part well at weight for age), and Mr. Merryfield's Sinkas. John Day rarely makes a mistake, and he had tried Lord Zetland to beat all the public horses in a trial. The latter, we should know nothing, proved "the missing link" in his Violet chain of calculations. Lastly, the winner of the last race was the property of young courtiers of a mile from home, but got sadly cantered at the last turn. Old Gibraltar, it is said, has broken down, and Mons. Philippe (the winner of the Northumberlandshire in '67) was left to the tender mercies ably only—in the tenth year of his age. Isoline won the Queen's Plate, which—to run in such a hurry—is a great mistake; and we trust that the jockey could hardly see their road. It was a most Siberian afternoon, and the wretched arrangements of the Jockey-Club stand on the North-Western Railway made matters still worse for the London visitors. Their cold shove and discomfort began with the start of things on Wednesday, but the sport was excellent, and of the four races there were two won by a head and one by a neck, and Outlaw fired at the Sheffield-Lane paddocks) won the Racing Stakes, and a very close finish Sir Lage and Mr. Merry's Lady Hall, Mr. Merry's, from an Annandale dam—showing a great deal of the Redeacher, tried, it was said, to be 10lb. better than Money Spinner, and rejoiced by Count Batthyany at the end of the day. Mr. Chaplin's entry Tarayoan, another very promising one by Ethelbert, in the Albury Park Stakes, for which sixteen ran. The Ham Stakes proved a good second favourites, and "the talent" saw them finish in that order. Cantata, a very nice but "very backward" filly by Old Bob out of Tarayoan, another very promising one by Ethelbert, in the Albury Park Stakes, for which sixteen ran. The Ham Stakes proved a good second favourites, and "the talent" saw them finish in that order. Cantata, a very nice but "very backward" filly by Old Bob out of Catherine Hayes (whom she greatly resembles), ran fifth, and old General Peel and Reindeer both ran unplaced. Both seem to be off to no hindrance under 7st. 10lb. in handicaps. We hear that Macaroni, another stud treasure, has left Mr. Merry's for the stud. Hence there will be no great Ascot return match between him and Lord Clifden. He will be sadly missed by the hero of the Derby, the Doncaster Cup, and five other races, amounting to £15,140 in all, and as a sire we shall not have long to wait to see how he take the lead of Stockwell. There are few finer combinations of real quality and muscle, and the winter has done great things for him. He was looking well when we saw him over the Abingdon mile, by Autocrat. It is rather old that, perhaps, the Ascot races his sire will be represented by several, over ran, were with old Inheritrem.

Colonel Forester has, unfortunately, lost his yearling filly by Rataplan from Ilkerinie. She reared up in her box and fell backwards, leaving three of her legs under her body. Mr. Merry's fine-looking day Caller Ou's yearling cister, and the very "narrow" of her, broke his off-fore thigh in the paddock, and had to be shot. It is a hoard mare. Mr. Morland's Tapioca has arrived at Kettleburn's quarters, to have a horse filly by his own Thormanby, and the chestnut colt from Titania (the first of the colour among his foals) are ready for the Old Burlington-street gazette, and Butterfly is shortly due.

The Scottish National Club had a very good wind up, and no less than seven out of the twenty-eight got home for the Cup at the Waterloo. Patient, none the worse for his Craven Cup win, got the only bye in a field of 28, and Mr. Merry's Cornstalk, ridden by Goldsmith, was the favourite, but Cornstalk was pulled up lame. The RACE IN THE CHANNEL BETWEEN THE ATALANTA TWIN-SCREW STEAMER AND THE DOVER MAIL-PACKET EMPRESS – SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

Texan Star, alias the Martaban, bound to Singapore with a rice cargo, was then lying in the position which our Engraving represents: her sails were clewed up, her anchor was down in about fifteen fathoms water, and the fire was breaking out at both ends. The crew having been removed, the Alabama cut the barque's boat adrift and steamed away at full speed to the northwest until midnight, when she was seen suddenly to alter her course towards Malacca, where it appears she landed the captured crew. The Texan Star when last seen was one mass of flame fore and aft, her masts had fallen by the board, and, while fast burning to the water's edge, she cast through the intense darkness of the night a brilliant gleam of light, at once a beacon to the navigator and a warning to all Federal ships in those waters.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR APRIL.

We promised last month to indicate some of the most fashionable materials adopted for the spring season. There is a large field for choice among the fine woollen tissues, ornamented with satin designs, which are different in colour from the stuff itself and usually myrtle-green, light brown, or violet. Barèges have also made their appearance, and will shortly compete with the highly estimated foulard, which still maintains its position of well-merited favour. For grand occasions, moires antiques of the richest water are perfectly comme il faut; and nothing can exceed the beauty now attained in these splendid textures. Amongst the more modest materials may be mentioned the lenos, a sort of mohair, generally light in colour, and

THE ALABAMA DESTROYING THE TEXAN STAR, OR MARTABAN, IN THE MALACCA STRAITS—THE KWAN-TUNG, CHINESE WAR-STEAMER, IN THE DISTANCE.
FROM A SKETCH BY COMMANDER ALLEN YOUNG, R.N.

THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD: REMAINS OF A WIRE-MILL NEAR MALIN BRIDGE.
FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD: REMAINS OF BALL-STREET BRIDGE, FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 326.

well adapted for complete costumes; and the striped and chequered chambery taffetas, which are exceedingly neat. It should be remarked, however, that plain stuffs, whether in silk, wool, or muslin, are in the best taste, although they cannot be expected to exclude, on every occasion, the employment of pattern dresses.

We are evidently in a transition period with regard to bonnets. For the month of April the rule remains unaltered, but the shape advances in front, like a dinghee. Crape, muslin, and satin chapeaux were the most patronised in the recent Easter promenades of Longchamps; they were nearly all plain in colour, with ornaments of the same material, edged with lace. White, light blue, and violet are the colours in vogue; the last, with a rose tint, is perhaps the most recherché.

There is nothing new to signalise in the way of pardessus. In spite of all innovations, the boa fox still awards the palm to the long or square Indian cashmere shawls, which are not, however, within the reach of all ladies by reason of their great price; still it is not easy to account for the large number constantly sold by the principal houses in Paris, at prices varying from forty to one hundred and fifty pounds. To be sure, it must be remembered that, in these days of competitive luxury, no corbeille de mariage is considered complete without the cachemire des Indes, which contributes not a little to the happiness of the future bride.

With the bright sunny days now approaching, it may be well to introduce two Parisian parasols just brought out: one small, in white silk completely covered with white swandown; the other somewhat larger, in blue silk half concealed by a rich lace ornamentation. Nothing can be more elegant, as the complement of a graceful carriage dress than either of these exquisite Parisian ombrelles.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

Fig. 1. Evening Dress.—Dark-blue moire antique robe, trimmed with velvet of the same colour, but of a somewhat deeper tint. Each velvet ornament on the skirt is bordered with black lace. The corsage à basque, opening behind, is likewise composed of moire and velvet, and velvet trimming is also applied to the sleeves. The head-dress is composed of a white feather, a yellow butterfly, and an aigrette. Very narrow lace collar.

Fig. 2. Toilet for a Young Lady.—Robe of stone-coloured taffeta, with violet stripes, ornamented round the skirt with portions of plaited flounces, fastened by a bow in passementerie. Corsage postillon, trimmed to correspond with the skirt. The coiffure is composed of violet velvet, so arranged as to preserve the uniformity of the design of this pretty spring toilet, which is completed by a muslin collar and undersleeves.

Fig. 3. Walking Dress.—Light-brown moire antique robe, trimmed round the skirt with diamond-shaped passementerie ornaments, edged with long fringe. The sleeves are decorated with a similar ornamentation. Blue crape bonnet, with a pompon of black velvet in the middle of a silver silk chardon fastening two small brown feathers.

Of the two bonnets forming part of our Engraving, that on the left hand is in white silk, edged with green velvet and ornamented with a green and a white feather and a rose; that on the right is a dark violet velvet, trimmed with feathers and black lace.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR APRIL.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 22nd ult., at 39, Upper Mount-street, Dublin, the wife of Denis William Pack Beresford, late, H.P., of a son and heir.

At Bombay, the wife of Sir Alexander Grant, Bart., of a daughter.

At Bera Ghazee Khan, Punjaub, the wife of Lieutenant-Colonel W. T. Hughes, of a daughter.

At Trenoweth, Penzance, Cornwall, the Hon. Mrs. F. Morgan, prematurely of a son, who survived but a few minutes.

At Bulmer Rectory, London, the Hon. Mrs. Ogilvy, of a daughter.

On the 30th ult., the Countess of Dalkeith, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

At Kinnea House, Alva, Argyleshire, on the 15th ult., by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Glasgow and Galloway, James George Boyd, M.P., Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding 42nd of the 79th Foot), to Mary Adelaide, youngest and only surviving daughter of Charles Somerville M'Alester, of Loup and Kennox.

On the 24th ult., by special license, at St. Nicholas' Church, Bishopsgarmouth, by the Rev. J. F. Elton, Rector, the Rev. T. C. Headley, M.A., Curate, to Bishop Cowie's Grammar School, Swansea, to Louisa, daughter of William Nicholson, Esq., J.P., Nicholson House, Sunderland, Co. Durham.

On the 26th ult., at Bromley Church, Mirfield, by the Rev. Ralph Micklethwaite, Vicar, William Charles Ward-Jackson, Esq., eldest and only surviving son of Ralph Ward-Jackson, Esq., of Grimthan Hall, in the county of Durham, to Emily, daughter of Joshua Ingham, Esq., of Blake Hall, Mirfield, in the county of York.

On Dec. 24, 1863, at Trinity Church, Kurrachee, by the Rev. H. W. Bagnold, Evan B. Shaw-Stewart, of the Master T. E. Stirling, third son of the late Rev. D. Powell, Chaplain Bengal Presidency, to Margaret Jane, eldest daughter of W. Heilby, Esq., of Clitheroon and Monkhouse, Northumberland.

DEATHS.

On the 22nd ult., in Manchester-street, Lorrain, widow of the late William Kay, Esq., R.N., of Charminster, Dorset, aged 63.

On the 29th ult., at Denmark Hill, Stewart, youngest son of William Jones, Esq., aged five years and nine months.

On the 1 st November, in Central India, Bruce Geordon, the beloved wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Geordon, C.B., of the 8th Regiment.

On the 16th ult., at the Oaks, Nightingale-lane, Clapham-common, Lucy, the beloved wife of Alexander Macintosh, Esq., youngest daughter of William Hyde, Esq., of Hyde House, Clapham-common, Surrey, in the 30th year of her age, and fourteen days after the birth of her child.

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK

(From our City Correspondent.)

GIVING ability to the heavy state of the Paris Bourse, the market for English securities has been very unsatisfactory during the week. Business has been almost entirely confined to the Stock Exchange. No fresh American Bank has been sold. A dividend of 6s per share, or at the rate of 12 per cent per annum, has been declared.

Several new companies have been registered during the week. Messrs. Archibald's. The first instalment of the new loan for Mexico, £2,000,000, has been already forwarded to the agents at Monmidon. It is anticipated that the loan will be taken up soon. The Spanish Loan of £3,000,000 is also in the market. It is not known whether subscribers would have power to withdraw.

No transactions took place in the Bank Exchange on Monday last. The Consols Market was very dull, and prices fell off. Consols for money sold to-day (Saturday) at 90 1/4 ex div., and for account, 90 1/4. Reduced and New Three per Cents, 90 1/4; India Stock, 220 to 222; Bank Stock, 218 to 220; Three per Cent Reduced Annuities, 1903, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1903, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1908, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1726, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1751, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1853-55, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1860, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1861, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1862, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1863, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, 1864, 90 1/4; Three per Cent Annuities, ISSUE OF SECOND MORTGAGE BONDS.—Principal (£200,000). 8,000 dollars (£80,000, New York Division.—Due in 1894. 1,000,000 dollars (£200,000) Pennsylvania Division.—Due in 1921.

Secured by a registered mortgage, constituting a lien on the entire property, franchises, and rolling stock, now owned or hereafter to be acquired by the Pennsylvania and New York Canal and Railroad Company.

The Bonds are redeemable in New York or in London at 44, 51, per dollar and are transferable without charge, at any time between a per cent of the gross receipts will be drawn yearly in July, commencing in 1865, to be paid off at par in London. Interest Coupons are attached to the Bonds, payable semi-annually at the Company's Agency in London, as the first of January and July, as selected.

The Bonds will be issued at 70, viz.:—

Bonds of 100 dollars, or £20, with interest from April 1, 1864, 10 0 0

Bonds of 1000 dollars, or £200, 100 0 0

£110 0 0

The Coupons represent £3 per annum on each Bond of 1000 dollars (£200), or nearly 5 per cent.

TO THE SHAREHOLDERS OF THE

ATLANTIC and GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.

When the First Mortgage Bonds of the Pennsylvania section of this railway were issued, it was considered by the Directors that they would present favourably with the construction of the road before them, and would be readily taken up by the public; but, in accordance with their contract for the completion of such lines of road as one push forward the whole line, and so keep the command of the traffic.

The business of the Eastern section of the new Mid-Continental Railway is now in full operation, developed so rapidly, being only limited by the capacity of the rolling stock, that the Directors decided to open the railway throughout its whole extent with all possible despatch. This has been accomplished, and the line is now open for traffic, and is producing receipts at once that the line is now open for traffic, and will be ready for traffic to Dayton by the 1st of May. It will be seen from the statement of the receipts that the net profits are already much more than sufficient to pay the interest on the Second Mortgage Bonds.

In order, however, that the original subscribers to, or the general holders of, the First Mortgage Bonds may not be called upon for the payment of the Second Mortgage, it is proposed to give to existing holders the privilege of subscribing for the remaining £1,000,000 at the rate of one Bond for every two now held, at a commission to principal of 10 per cent.

No May the whole system of railway will be in operation, consisting of 150 miles from Salamanca to Dayton ... 304 miles.

The Main Line Eastward ... 150

The Franklin Branch and the Oil Creek Railway ... 50

In all about 504 miles, of which 200 have been opened for traffic during the winter. On the 1st of May it is intended to run express trains between New York and Chicago, a distance of 900 miles, in 24 hours. Pullman's Palace Cars, Wagner's Sleeping Cars, and Blanchard Railways, as St. Louis—1200 miles, in forty hours, without change of carriages or luggage.

The terms of the Bonds of the last issue are the same as £20 per mile per rent.—which one year of the opening of the through route will undoubtedly be considerably exceeded. The Bonds are to be sold on the open market at par to per cent, after which they will be advanced from time to time on the whole issue of bonds.

Dividends have been paid to per cent per annum on well-secured and properly established American railways: from the Atlantic and Great Western Railway of Ohio, to the Chicago and Western Railway, and the Indiana and Illinois Central Railway, the lines of the London and North Western and other leading English railways, and the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, &c., &c.

The Atlantic and Great Western Railway shares are now at a considerable under-rent—and persons over the most extensive Mississippi and Ohio valley, in the State of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, are being opened in Canada, and for its traffic in agricultural produce, and the Bonds are considered by many as a most desirable investment, yielding extensive use ... 10,000 additional shares will be issued, and the Directors will not subscribe.

The Shareholders are entitled to be issued over the Main Line and Extensions as follows:—

	First Mortgage Bonds.	Second Mortgage Bonds.	Shares.	Total.
New York division	£8	£100,000	£60,000	£1,500,000
Penn'a division	20	1,000,000	600,000	2,500,000
Ohio	100	8,000,000	4,000,000	13,000,000
Indiana and Illinois	125	500,000	300,000	1,000,000
	200	£9,600,000	£4,960,000	£20,000,000
		(1,000,000)	(1,000,000)	(2,000,000)

and 60 dollars have been issued by consequence of taking 1,000,000 dollars have been exceeded by operation of taking Bond.

The Bonds which are issued for the Penn'a division of the Bonds, which were also issued for the Penn'a division of the present Shareholders, either directly or through their brokers.

The terms of subscription follow:—

1 per cent on application, being £11 5s. per bond of 1000 dollars.
1 " 1st of May,	"	£11 5s. 0d.
1 " 1st of June,	"	£11 5s. 0d.
1 " 16th of May,	"	£11 5s. 0d.
1 " 1st of July,	"	£11 5s. 0d.
		£57 10s.

Subscribers have the option of paying the instalments in advance, and to be allowed a discount of 6 per cent per annum on the sums so anticipated.

After allotment, scrip certificates will be issued to "bearer." These certificates will be exchanged for bonds to "bearer" on payment of the last instalment.

In the event of default in the series of this group, the rights of the company in having this additional issue of Bonds, following the Second Mortgage Bonds, will be forfeited, and the deposits will be paid on application and payment of half-yearly interest on the Second Mortgage Bonds for preceding the interest. These will remain only the Second Bonds of the Penn'a division, the Ohio, and the Indiana, when the total of the bonded debt will be only £9,600 per mile.

Forms of application may be obtained of the Bankers, or at the Offices of the Company, No. 7, Old Broad-street, London, E.C. Bankers—The London and Westminster Bank, Lothbury.

E. H. DIXON, Secretary, London, March 31, 1864.

ATLANTIC and GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.

FORM OF APPLICATION.

To be forwarded to the Offices of the Company, No. 7, Old Broad-street, London, E.C., or to the Deposit and Provisional Depository of the Bankers.

TO THE ATLANTIC AND GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Sir—Having paid the Consolidated Bank Limited the sum of £ ... I hereby request that you will allot me ... Second Mortgage Bonds of the Penn'a division, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, and I hereby agree to accept such number, or the same stated in your favour for that amount.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Signature ...

Address in full ...

Date ...

NUMBER AND DESCRIPTION OF BONDS NOW HELD.

PENNSYLVANIA SECTION.
Bonds of 100 dollars.	Bonds of 500 dollars.	Bonds of 1000 dollars.	Bonds of 5000 dollars.	Bonds of 10,000 dollars.	Bonds of 20,000 dollars.
Numbers.	Numbers.	Numbers.	Numbers.	Numbers.	Numbers.

THE LONDON and NORTHERN BANK Limited, Lothbury, London, E.C.

Branches—Newcastle, Leeds, Huddersfield.

Agents—Liverpool, Manchester, Dublin.

Authorised Capital, £500,000.

DEPOSITS ACCOUNTS opened at the London office and branches of this bank, and interest allowed on the same at the rate of 2 per cent per annum.

Cheques may be drawn against these accounts not containing any fractional sum of less than £1.

J. P. TURNER, Manager and Secretary.

NOTICE of REMOVAL.—Messrs. ALEX and JONES have REMOVED their PRACTICE to 33, Lincoln-street, Bedford-square, in consequence of the Premises they now occupy being required for building purposes.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PRINTER.

THE Printing Press, price £5 5s., is the best ever sold for the use of Printing. One Shilling, or 14 postage stamps.—B. G. REED, Engraver and Stamp Maker to her Majesty's Post Office, 4, Cross-street, Hatton-garden.

PENCILS, Black Lead and Coloured Chalks, A. W. FABER'S POLYGRADE LEAD PENCILS, sold by all Stationers and Artists' Colourmen. Agents—Messrs. Brandauer and Co., 23, Friday-street, London, E.C.

SUPERB FLOWER SEEDS post-free, at the annexed prices:—100 for fancy annuals, 5s.; 50 ditto, 3s.; 50 ditto, 2s. 6d.; 12 ditto, 1s. 6d. Catalogues, with sample packets, 2d. Peas, 2s. 6d. per quart.—R. SYDENHAM, Florist, &c., Highgate, Middlesex.

GALVANISM v. NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, &c.—ALPONS BAGARRE was awarded by both the Medical and Privy Council to Mr. PULVERMACHER, Inventor of the GALVANIC CHAIN BANDS, BELTS, and BATTERIES, for NERVOUS DEBILITY, &c., against all forgery of his rights. The certainty of this statement, as also the unanimity of the testimony and testimonials in proof of the unparalleled success of these curative appliances, may be satisfactorily ascertained from consulting the pamphlet, just published by the inventor, at No. 194, Oxford-street, London, pledging himself to pay a premium of £100 to any one who can produce a single bona fide testimonial. For further particulars, see Pamphlet, post free, gratis.

FRAMES for the COLOURED PICTURES, Mandarins Gilt Frames, glass, and back, 2s.; Maple and Rose, 2s. 6d.; Oak and Gilt, 3s.; Mahogany and Gilt, 3s. 6d.—Mr. MARION, 496, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE—and Name and County, Arms Painted, Impaled, and Quartered, Engraved on Seals, Dies, and Plate, Pedigrees of Families, &c.—H. SALTER, Herald Painter, Lincoln's-Inn Gateway.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.—The Engraving Arms on Rings, Seals, and Silver, according to the Laws of Heraldry. The Arms found, Sketch sent, and Search for Crest, 5s. Engraving Arms on Seals, Dies, and Plate, Crests on Rings, Seals, &c.; Crest-Plate, 5s.—C. Cullieer, Engraver to the Queen, by authority, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square. Arms Painted, Quartered, and Impaled. Sketch of Arms, 2s. 6d. Illuminated, 5s.

CULLETON'S SOLID GOLD SIGNET RINGS, 18-carat, Hall-marked, engraved with crest, 2 guineas; Arms, 3 guineas; Initials, 1 guinea. Gold Seals, Keys, Pencil Cases, Gold Pens, Steel Pens, Quill Pens, Seal Engraver, Stamping, Dies, Steel Seals, Gold Bracelets, Chatelaines, Lockets, Brooches, Studs, Sleeve Links, Albert Chains, Guard Chains, Necklets, Pearl Necklets, Coral Necklets, Gold Necklets, Pearl Necklets, Coral Necklets, Gold Necklets, Pearl Necklets, Coral Necklets, Gold

NEW MUSIC.

GARIBALDI'S HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte by HAROLD THOMAS. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI'S GALOP. By CHARLES PALMER. One of Palmer's best Galops. Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s. Orchestra, 1s. Septet, 1s. Solo or Duet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Princes and Princess of Wales and at Gallway's Concerts, with immense success. Just published, price 4s. Orchestra, 1s. Septet, 1s. Solo or Duet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CARDUE (Composer of the Dutchess Galop). Just published, price 3s. Orchestra, 1s. Septet, 1s. Solo or Duet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop, by CARDUE (Composer of the Harum-Scarum Galop). Capitally illustrated. Price 3s. Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed on the most favourite airs of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 2s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECE FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite airs from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as Pianoforte Solo or Duet. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. S. CALLCOTT. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS. Gounod's celebrated "Chorus of Faust." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of this celebrated Opera as Pianoforte Duets in a very easy, yet pleasing and effective manner, and before published at 6s. Price now reduced to 4s. each.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on favourite Airs from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon for the piano on favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GOUNOD'S FAUST VALSE, the celebrated Valse from "Faust," arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from the popular Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 1s.; Orchestra, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 1s.; Orchestra, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just Published. Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

E. DE PARIS L'APPEL. Galop di Bravura for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a Pianoforte Duet, showing favourite Pianoforte Solo, as a Duet. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. The popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on Airs from Rossini's favourite Opera, arranged for the Pianoforte by the popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from the favourite Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just published, ARDITI'S new Bolero, sung by Miolan, Tietjens and Vaiani with immense success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIERE D'UNE MÈRE. Romance for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S THE ANGEL'S HARP. Rhapsodie for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S EMMELINE. Nocturne for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S BRIGAND'S DANCE. For the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

LOVING SMILE OF SISTER KIND. Composed expressly for and sung by Mr. Santley in Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW Song, expressly composed for him by MICHAEL WILLIAM BALFE, and sung with immense success at the Monday Popular Concerts. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DIDDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. CCXXXVII. Price 6d. Twenty-two Songs, by DIBDIN, and other nautical favourites. All with Piano Accompaniments. Also, Vol. XXIII., cloth, price 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

1200D to 1277H TIMES.—BEL DEMONIO VALSE (performed every evening at the Royal Lyceum Theatre), introducing the melody of the new Song by Mr. Fenton and other favourite airs in "Il Demonio." Composed by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Price 3s.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, for the Pianoforte. By STEPHEN GLOVER. Sent for fifteen stamps. This Piece, by the composer of "Jack's Alive," "Jim Crow," &c., is played by all military bands.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-st.

NEW SONG—JESSY GRAY. By E. L. HIME. Price 2s. 6d. One of the prettiest Ballads that has been published for some time. Sung everywhere with the most unbounded success. Also, a charming Ballad, by the same Composer, entitled "Ever Remember." Composed by W. H. MONTGOMERY. Price 2s.—DUFF and HODGSON, 65, Oxford-street.

NEW MUSIC.

THE ORCHESTRA.—"The leading Musical Journal" (vide "Athenæum").—Office, 201, Regent-street. (Jaeger's subscription transport), 4s. 6d. Fanfiullina, Musical and Dramatic News at Home and Abroad, Comic, Reviews, &c. Single copy, four stamps.

SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER OPERA, by G. A. MACFARREN. Complete Opera, 21s. net. All the Songs, Duets, Trios, Concerted Pieces, Overture, Entr'actes, and Finales. Prince Richard, T. Hill; Hugh, Mr. Machaeus; Sarah Woodacre, and Julia Bizarre. Waltzes and Quadrilles by G. Conia. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

RICHARD BLAGROVE'S PRESTISSIMO BOOK for the CONCERTINA, with Introductory Progress of Exercises, and a full table of instructions for the fingering of the notes, &c. 10s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BISHOP'S MELODIES. In each,
No. 1. Bytowne Yan. No. 2. Oh! Lady Fair. No. 3. Tell me my Heart.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' DANISH AIR. (Dan mig, Jesu Kristelig). Sung by the Danish authors Ulla "Tinon" Fiancée a Sais. 3s. 6d.; Duet, 3s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

J. P. CLARKE'S SAINT SEE.
SWEET SPIRIT HALTZES. Beautifully illustrated. 4s. Founded on four of the most favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

J. L. HATTON'S NEW SONG.
I DREAMT I WAS A CHILD AGAIN. 2s. 6d.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

AT VENICE. VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S last New Song. A dreamy and pastoral gondola song.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL'S IN THE HOUSE. Sung by Miss LOUISA PYNE, at the Monday Pop. last night, in popularity Mr. Linley's well-known ballad. "Little Nell."
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THE ANGEL GUIDE. By RÉNÉ TAYLOR. (A charming song.)
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

THE BREEZE AND THE HARP. By Miss LINDSAY. Sung by Miss Dolby. "The last of the lot that Miss Gabriel has ever written."—Review.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. 3s. The most popular song of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

"THE PIPE." A Student's Song. Illustrated with a Beautiful Frontispiece. By the great Sir Walter Ballagh. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and Co., 201, Regent-street.

NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage stamps. Catalogues gratis. Country Booksellers supplied.
HUTCHINGS and ROMER, 9, Conduit-street.

THE PIANO PIECE FOR 1864.
KUHE'S SEE THE CONQUERING HERO COMES. Grand Military Pianoforte Duet.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

The greatest dancing-room piece in
GANZ'S SOIRÉES TOI. Mélodie chantée, Price 3s. 6d.
A most pleasant Valse, by the same name, is published separately.—Elizabethan Waltzes.—Hopwood and Crew, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEW NOCTURNE.
SENTIMENT POÉTIQUE, By IUCMO. Price 4s. Arranged for the Piano.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

A REAL MUSICAL GEM.
COOTE'S POLLY PERKINS QUADRILLE. 4s. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Scenes, "Isabella," "Matrimony," "Sweethearts," "Polly Perkins," &c., &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Will be ready this week,
COOTE'S INFANT PRINCE VALSES, Price 4s.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE QUADRILLE, Price 4s. Introducing the most favourite airs from Shakspeare's Plays, mentioned, under the direction of the composer, at the Fancy-Dress Ball given by the Prince and Princess of Wales. "Come unto these yellow sands." "Hark! hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings." "Come away, come away death." "What shall he have that killed the deer." Price 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S EXTRA TRAVIATA GALOP, Price 4s. Boosey Edition. Now ready.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Introducing the Danish National Air.
COOTE'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA OF WALES' MARCH. Illustrated with a Portrait of the Danish Princess, respectfully inscribed to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE NEW SET OF LANCERS ARE
COOTE'S ALEXANDRA LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Picture of Love," "My Pretty Page," "Be Mine to-day," "The Song of a Rose," and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life." Also merely set. No dance programme complete without them. Always encored.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S KATE KEARNEY WALTZES, Price 4s. Introducing "Eastern Officer," "Cormack Farewell to Kate," "Kate Kearney," "Cormack Farewell," "Kate Kearney," "Eastern Officer."—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S VILLAGE-BELLS POLKA. Price 3s. One of the very best published, and will excel in popularity the celebrated "Village Bells Waltzes."—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

NEW COMIC SONG for 1864.
OH! WOULD I WERE A BIRD, Then I might be free.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

MERRY SONGS, Have you seen Dolly Grant? 3s. 6d.
Isabella with her Gingham Umbrella - 3s. 6d.
Sweet Kitty Clover - - - 3s. 6d.
Young Barney - - - - 3s. 6d.
Away down Holborn-hill - - - 3s. 6d.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

CAPITAL SONG FOR BARITONE.
HERE, UPON MY NATIVE SIDE! By ELLIOT. Price 3s. 6d. A most spirited composition.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THREE GREAT SONGS.
OH! IF HAD SOME ONE TO LOVE ME, Price 3s. Sung with immense success by Miss LOUISA PYNE.
I'VE FOUND SOME ONE TO LOVE ME, With beautiful, sheet Price 3s. music illustrations. Sung by Miss LOUISA PYNE.
"MARY, DEAR," SIMS REEVES'S New Song, by HOWARD GLOVER, enthusiastically encored at the Composer's Concert, at St. James's Hall, is now published price 3s., by DUNCAN DAVISON, 244, Regent-street.

MR. ALLISON'S Ballads and Part-free, The Night Time of Night. All the Music Publishers refuse to publish these popular Ballads, and Mr. Allison has published them. The Country Trade supplied to sell at Half Price.
ALLISON and Co., 23, Paternoster-row, and all the most popular Music and Song Composers and Publishers. Post-free, 24.
OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEYS' MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW.—A new Weekly Journal of Music and the Drama. 16 pages, 4to, price One Penny. Published every Saturday. In it has all the Intermezzos and Misicelles in town and country, of Every Kind. Performances new and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street. Subscription post-free, 4s. 6d. per annum.

M. GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, Price 6s., also, the Overture, 4s. net, Ballet Music, 4s. net, Soldiers' Chorus, 3s. net, Finale, 3s. net.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MDME SAINTON DOLBY'S NEW SONG.
NORA CREINA. New Irish Ballad. Written by CLARIBEL. Adapted to an Irish Melody by Stephen Glover. Price 2s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

Tenth Edition of
FIVE O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING. By CLARIBEL. The most popular Ballad of the day.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

FORBES'S CAPRERA. Chanson Napolitaine. The best and prettiest piece by this rising Composer. Post-free, 24 stamps.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

FORBES'S RAPPELLE TOI. The most popular Song by this rising Author. Post-free, 24 st.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

FORBES'S STRING OF PEARLS. The most popular Song by this rising Author. Post-free, 24 st.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

GOLLMICK'S HAPPY THOUGHT, A most elegant and popular Valse, played by Jullien. Price 4s. Author of "The Bohemian Girl" Galop, "Les Filles de Cadix," &c.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS HAWLEY'S IVANHOE. New and Popular Ballad. Sung by Miss Dolby. Price 2s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JANET'S CHOICE. Published this day, a Pianoforte Arrangement of the admired Song, by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 3s. Post-free, 24 stamps.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

KUHE'S DAGGER'S SECRET. Chivalric Scottish Romance, sung by Miss Dolby with great success at the Monday Popular Concerts. Price 2s. 6d. Also, the popular Romance. Post-free, 24 st.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

WHATEVER IS, IS RIGHT. New Sacred Song. Words by ALEXANDER POPE, M.A.; Music by Joseph Barnby. Price 2s. 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

A SAUCY SONG.—WHAT DOES IT MATTER TO ME? Written by MISS BURGESS. Composed by Sir Henry Bishop. Published this day, price 2s. 6d., post-free, 24 st. This pleasure little song is becoming rapidly popular.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S TWELVE ANTHEMS for the SABBATH SCHOOL. Price 1s. Complete in Words, Music, and Slide. Arranged by Nordmann. Price 6s. in cloth. Boosey's Sabbath School Hymn Book. This book contains by far the most melodious and beautiful anthems, all of which are original, and published at 1s. each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' LIBRARY.—Two Guinea Subscribers have the use of twelve pieces of Music in town, or twenty in the country, the property of Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' 17-GUINEA PIANOFORTE is the thinnest, the best, and the most elegant Pianoforte manufactured. It has the full compass, is in Walnut, and possesses an excellent tone, and touch. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' 26-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in rosewood, or 27 guineas in Italian walnut, is a highly finished Pianoforte for the money. For any country order, we can confidently say the very best description, the touch elastic, and the tone full and rich. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street. Illustrated lists gratis and post-free.

BOOSEYS' 35-GUINEA PIANOFORTE is in rosewood, and 37 guineas in Italian walnut, four rosettes and trusses, and is a most elegant piece of furniture, as consequently such a Pianoforte is required in the best drawing-rooms. Constructed case, not like the registered by boxer as sold as the new patent, but the old-fashioned case, which is the best. Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

THE COTTAGE, or SIX-GUINEA, HARMONIUM has a soft, agreeable quality of tone.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE SCHOOL, or TEN-GUINEA, HARMONIUM has a rich, full tone, suitable for leading class singing, &c.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE CHURCH HARMONIUM, at 20, 25, and 30 guineas, is a most effective and admirably adapted for those of worship.—BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, Price 20 guineas, possess a genuine variety, new and unconfined, at greatly reduced prices including instruments with two rows of keys and pedals.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

PIANOFORTE MANUFACTURERS.
OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, Manufactory, Hampstead-road.
Patent Cottage Pianofortes - - - 20 gs.
Patent Cabinet Pianofortes - - - 25 gs.
Patent Trichord Pianofortes - - - 35 gs.
Prize Cots and Drawing-room Cots.
OETZMANN and CO., Pianoforte Galleries, London, W.

CHISSOLME and SONS (from Messrs. Collard and Collard), 15, Rosoman-street, Walworth, from 25 to 80 guineas. Cheap cottage models. Pianos, in solid cases, for climates. Pianos to let. One in the window marked with price; plain music cheaper.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a New Pianette in acknowledged the best and cheapest Pianoforte for the Country, Seaside, or Continental Residences. Can be had in every variety of solid cases and tones. Also, a Pianoforte, with the full compass of seven octaves, in handsome Walnut-tree case, at 25 guineas. Every instrument warranted.—OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

OETZMANN and PLUMBS' DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, of the most elegant description, in Walnut-tree and Rosewood cases, from 35 guineas. Lists of prices and drawings sent free on application.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a large assortment of Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, for SALE, at 21 guineas each. They are principally Pianofortes by Collard and Collard, Broadwood and Sons, Kirkman and Son, Chappell and Co., Cramer and Co., Ellard, Lipp, &c., and have been returned from hire. Every instrument warranted.—OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a large assortment of Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, for HIRE, at 21s. per month. They are principally Pianofortes by Collard and Collard, Broadwood and Sons, Kirkman and Son, Chappell and Co., Cramer and Co., Ellard, Lipp, &c., and have been returned from hire. Every instrument warranted.—OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and CO. have a large assortment of Pianofortes, by the most eminent makers, for HIRE, at 21s. per month. They are principally Pianofortes by Collard and Collard, Broadwood and Sons, Kirkman and Son, Chappell and Co., Cramer and Co., Ellard, Lipp, &c., and have been returned from hire. Every instrument warranted.—OETZMANN and CO., 27, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

CHAPPELL'S TWENTY-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in solid mahogany or plain walnut, the best English manufacture, with perfect check action, the full compass, and the most unique appearance. Messrs. Chappell strongly recommend this Pianoforte to the notice of the musical public as an almost perfect instrument.
50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S SMALL FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, at 25 guineas, a new Cabinet Piano, with the best check action, 3 strings, the grand compass of seven octaves, and in a case of the most elegant design, manufactured by Messrs. Chappell at a lower price than any of the Continental Pianofortes. The same instrument with 2 strings, at 20 guineas.
50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDER'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTE, the best that can be made, price 60 guineas; other varieties of the same Pianoforte, from 45 guineas. Lists of Pianofortes sent free by post.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SIX-GUINEA HARMONIUM, by ALEXANDER, with 8 stops, the knee swell, and 13 sets of reeds. These instruments are lower in price and superior to all other Harmoniums hitherto made. 50, New Bond-street.

SECOND HAND HARMONIUMS, by ALEXANDER, nearly all new either as good as new, at considerably reduced prices. 50, New Bond-street.

ALEXANDER'S PRIZE EXHIBITION A MODEL HARMONIUM, for the CHURCH, 13 stops, 4 rows of vibrators, knee swell, and the full compass of pedals. In the Model Room at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

SECOND HAND PIANOFORTES, by CHAPPELL and CO., have been found ADMIRABLE SUBSTITUTES for NEW INSTRUMENTS. Lists of these Pianofortes, recently returned from hire, and sent free by post. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PIANOFORTES at CHAPPELL'S.—The largest assortment in the world, from 20 guineas to 200 guineas. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN PIANO (the only Pianino to which the Prize Medal was awarded), is now sloping from the front, of small size, of the most elegant model, and most perfect touch, admirably adapted to Small Rooms, Yachts, Steamers, Continental Residences, and Hot Climates. Also, a large Pianino Pianoforte, with check action and all the latest improvements. Price, in elegant rosewood, or walnut case, 35 and 37 guineas. A great variety may be seen at CHAPPELL and CO.'S, 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL and CO.'S ENGLISH MODEL OBLIQUE PIANOFORTE, combining the pure English tone of the Broadwood or Collard manufacture, with the most perfect check action, and elegant rosewood case, at moderate price. The action is of the same simple description as that of the Grand Pianoforte, and is not liable to get out of order. The touch is elastic, and the instrument retains unimpaired quality of the tuning. In elegant rosewood case, with full fret, similar in every respect to the Grand Pianoforte, price 50 guineas. Also, in plainer case, 45 guineas.
Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

CHAPPELL'S FOREIGN MODEL PIANOFORTE, price 25 guineas, with the check action, and the full compass of seven octaves, in a handsome rosewood case, and is made entirely in this country. The workmanship is of the best description; the touch elastic, and the tone full and rich. Messrs. Chappell have a large assortment of these Pianofortes in stock, and the repetition very rapid. No Pianoforte at this price has ever been made with the same amount of excellence. Every instrument warranted. Prize Medal Instrument, and, if desired, exchanged within six months of the purchase.
50, New Bond-street.

BROADWOOD, COLLARD, and ERARD. All The best makers of every description of Pianoforte for SALE, HIRE, or HIRE—ALL CHANNELL'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY, 50, New Bond-street, Corner of Brook-street.

PIANOFORTES by Broadwood, Collard, or Erard, for SALE or HIRE—At CRAMER'S PIANOFORTE GALLERY, 201, Regent-street, Corner of Argyll-street.

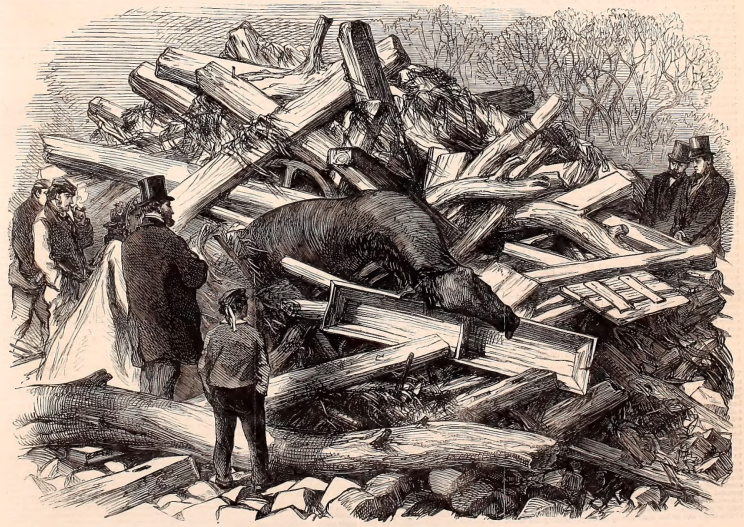
EASY TERMS OF PURCHASE.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO. make special arrangements with those desirous of PURCHASING PIANOFORTES on the THREE YEARS' SYSTEM. 201, Regent-street, Corner of Argyll-street.

CRAMER'S NEW COTTAGE, £22 10 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small Pianoforte, with the full compass of seven octaves, in handsome rosewood case, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished ash or mahogany, and the front is of the same wood as the case, or of rosewood, as required. The touch is very light and elastic, and the tone is the key and wave in the hammer. In rosewood, 25 guineas, in walnut, 23 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is manufactured only by Cramer and Co., and can be had only at their Pianoforte Galleries, 201, Regent-street, or the only manufacturers of it in England.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, 30 guineas. Cramer and Co. have just completed a new and elegant model in Pianofortes, the full compass of seven octaves, peculiarly to the notice of the public Cramer and Co. may be permitted to say that this Pianoforte combines in a remarkable degree quality of tone, firmness and elasticity of touch, durability of action, and elegance of appearance. The case is of solid rosewood, and the front is of the same wood as the case, or of walnut, as may be required. The touch is very light and elastic, the tone is full and rich, and the repetition very rapid. In rosewood, 30 guineas, in walnut, 28 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is manufactured only by Cramer and Co., and can be had only at their Pianoforte Galleries, 201, Regent-street, or the only manufacturers of it in England.

CRAMER'S NEW SEVEN-OCTAVE, 35 guineas. Cramer and Co. have just completed a new and elegant model in Pianofortes, the full compass of seven octaves, peculiarly to the notice of the public Cramer and Co. may be permitted to say that this Pianoforte combines in a remarkable degree quality of tone, firmness and elasticity of touch, durability of action, and elegance of appearance. The case is of solid rosewood, and the front is of the same wood as the case, or of walnut, as may be required. The touch is very light and elastic, the tone is full and rich, and the repetition very rapid. In rosewood, 35 guineas, in walnut, 33 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is manufactured only by Cramer and Co., and can be had only at their Pianoforte Galleries, 201, Regent-street, or the only manufacturers of it in England.

CRAMER'S INDIAN PIANOFORTE, 40 guineas. Cramer and Co. have just completed a very much needed change and will adopt sufficient necessary to meet the effect of excessive heat. This has been the result of long study and planning. The mechanism of the In-tronum as well as the case has been entirely remodelled, and the Indian Pianoforte is now offered to the public as a thoroughly reliable instrument. Cramer and Co. have obtained the highest commendations for their excellent quality of tone and touch.
Cramer, Wood, and Co. deliver these Pianofortes, packed in cases lined with zinc, at any home port, for 50 guineas, free on board. Cramer, Wood, and Co. will be happy to receive orders for 1864.—Pianoforte Gallery, 201 and 205, Regent-street, Argyll-st.



CRAMER'S PIANO CLUB CASE, 7 guineas. Cramer and Co. have just completed a new and elegant model in Pianoforte Cases, the full compass of seven octaves, peculiarly to the notice of the public Cramer and Co. may be permitted to say that this Pianoforte combines in a remarkable degree quality of tone, firmness and elasticity of touch, durability of action, and elegance of appearance. The case is of solid rosewood, and the front is of the same wood as the case, or of walnut, as may be required. The touch is very light and elastic, the tone is full and rich, and the repetition very rapid. In rosewood, 35 guineas, in walnut, 33 guineas.
Purchasers are particularly requested to observe that this instrument is manufactured only by Cramer and Co., and can be had only at their Pianoforte Galleries, 201, Regent-street, or the only manufacturers of it in England.

CRAMER'S PIANO CLUB CASE, 7 guineas. Cramer and Co. manufacture this capital small Pianoforte, with the full compass of seven octaves, in handsome rosewood case, solid touch, agreeable tone. The case is of polished ash or mahogany, and the front is of the same wood as the case, or of rosewood, as required. The touch is very light and elastic, the tone is the key and wave in the hammer. In rosewood, 25 guineas, in walnut, 23

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

SEARCHING FOR THE DEAD AT MALIN BRIDGE.

SCENE IN A GARDEN AT HILLSBOROUGH.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD.

The Engravings which appear in our Journal this week complete the series of illustrations of the late destructive flood at Sheffield, which are all from sketches by our own Artist. The large Engraving, which occupies an entire page, is a View of Sheffield, taken from the Langsett Road, overlooking Hillsborough Vorspond, the suburbs of the town adjoining the River Don. The effects of the water upon substantial buildings are shown by these sketches representing the ruins of the iron factory bridge in Bridgehouses, the wire-mill at Malin Bridge, and the heaps of timber drifted into a garden in Hillsborough, from the wreck of the saw-mills above. The other three subjects are of a very mournful character. There is a scene at Malin Bridge, where people are seen in search of corpses for the bodies of the dead; another sketch, in which we see men carrying a body to the receiving-room in Malin Bridge, shows also the bereaved women and children; and, lastly, the burial of about thirty of the unclaimed and unrecognised victims, which was carried away from the Sheffield workhouse, on the afternoon of Tuesday last, and laid in a common grave. These impressive funeral scenes will tell their own tale. The inquest, held at the Sheffield Townhall, by Mr. J. Webster, the Coroner, has resulted in the verdicts declaring, in most cases, that the deceased came to their deaths by drowning in the inundation caused by the bursting of the Bradfield Reservoir on the night of Friday, the 11th of March. In a few cases, however, their opinion "that there has not been that engineering skill and that attention to the construction of the works which the law demands, and importance demanded; that the Legislature ought to take such action as will result in a more vigorous supervision of the works of this character, and that such inspection ought to be frequent, regular, and unlimited." They add, "we cannot separate ourselves without expressing our deep regret at the fearful loss of life which has occurred from the disruption of the Bradfield Reservoir."

With regard to the other reservoirs of the Sheffield Water Company, the directors have employed Mr. Hawksley and Mr. Bateman to examine the structure and condition of each. Measures, having been done so, now report that the Rivelin reservoirs are in a perfect and satisfactory state; and that the Redmires reservoirs are in generally in a good condition, but that a few ordinary repairs are needed. "In conclusion," they say, "we beg to state that we have no reason to think that these reservoirs, which have now been tested by the practical trial and experience of many years, during which they have undergone no important alteration, ought now to be the occasion of any doubt or apprehension."

CURRENT LITERATURE.

Dr. Jacob. By the Author of "John and I." 3 vols. (Hurst and Blackett.) It would be worth any one's while to take an early opportunity of reading this book, the disappointing work of a writer whose originality, vivacity, and vigour. A priori might fancy he discovered some resemblance between the chief of the Jacobs and Mr. Harold Skimpole; but the likeness, after all, would not be much greater than that which he said he could discover between a watchman and a queen, and which (according to the riddle) is confined to a similarity in respect of the two having positions of one sort or other. The character is drawn with much truth, and is a fair representative of a class; for it is certain that, since the Church has become, to a certain extent, a secular profession, more than a holy calling, there are Dr. Jacobs to be met pretty nearly be found in its ranks. It is exactly that profession which suits clever gentlemen of a noble but impecunious family (and Dr. Jacob was one); for the nobility of the disposition consists in all those specious qualities which clergymen, beyond all others, have the opportunities of displaying to advantage, such as susceptibility to beauty of every kind, natural and inanimate, artistic and literary, and in a manner; general urbanity, enthusiasm, tenderness, worthy philanthropy, affectionate behaviour towards the young, and so forth. But, if that be included under the brief but comprehensive term "gush;" and the obligation consists in an incessant display of these virtues, by day and less suspected in, clergymen than others, to avoid straightforward dealing, whether in the matter of a neighbour's wife, or a tradesman's bill, or a "collection" (non-existent than the Jacobs) in church, to the point of fact, the "noble but oblique" Dr. Jacob differs from a secondary by so small a quantity as to be all but imperceptible to anybody, except a philosophical novelist or an uncompromising parson-hunter. Ahab, Elijah-Pogram, Chadband, Stiggins, and Dr. Jacob is, upon his own showing, not only a swindler, which is bad, but a hypocritical swindler, which is worse, and a self-deceiving swindler, which is worst. He is represented as being so fascinating, though he is sixty years of age, that he has no difficulty in getting helplessly in love with him, a handsome baroness would be only too happy to make him votes for his wife, and a young girl of eighteen is almost as smitten with him as Elaine was with Lancelot. A more singular fact still is, that he exercises the same strange fascination over his own children; for, generally speaking (for there are one or two doliquencies tends to deaden filial respect and filial love), who, having discovered that he really was not the man he had taken for granted which he was suspected, and the idea of which could hardly have suggested itself to anyone less depraved than he, would regard the seven evil spirits taken into partnership by the restless eighth, Jacob with a very placable eye, and continue business in the cheating way, and tends him in his declining days with undiminished respect and love. The picture of filial affection in the case; but Dr. Jacob, notwithstanding his noble talents and impulses, appeared to me unworthy of it. And yet there are more Dr. Jacobs in the world than it is pleasant to acknowledge. Not, perhaps, with cheating have great abilities, large ideas, winning manners, and open hands, have, unfortunately, no principles, and whose kind and generous hearts are too much for them; they must not only live comfortably themselves, but they must gratify their benevolence, at any and every expense, at somebody else's. They resemble the notorious Mr. Redpath, who, if report may be believed, was in the habit, on account of others as on his own; he went regularly to church; he became profoundly penetrated with the truth of religion, he was anxious to show in a substantial manner his goodwill towards men; and, as the world would've admit, he did it at the expense of all but his employers. Dr. Jacob behaved in a similar manner. He wanted all kinds of comforts for his own use and by way of presents for his friends: he would have liked to be rich for the same end; but with pleasure if he could, but, as he couldn't, he was forced to make free with the property of others. He was a born philanthropist, and to show the others leg-bail. It will be seen, then, that the principal advantage in the study of Dr. Jacob as a pleasant study from a moral point of view; but he is described with great skill and care, he would seem to be a true portraiture of the first interview with Dr. Paulus; and he is surrounded by an interesting group of associates. The picture of Mrs. Jacob is a good one; but one hardly knows to what to attribute the singular expressions and sudden changes they meet with. Perhaps the unfortunate fact the writer's English has been spoiled by foreign associations; nor does the Anglo-German nature of the story render this explanation improbable.

Wyldeve Hall. By J. Sheridan le Fanu. 3 vols. Richard Bentley.) This is a story of the hunt-the-secret description. Before proceeding to the end of the book there is an air of mystery over everything, and the reader is hurried on with great ingenuity from incident to incident, getting deeper and deeper every step in the mire of bewilderment, surrounding himself on all sides with mystification into the author's hands without an effort at self-extrication, and finally emerging into the region of mental confusion. The impression of amazement upon his face and a frank confession upon his lips that he has been utterly in the dark all through until the moment when it pleased the author to enlighten him. Of course, when it is imperative that the reader be kept in ignorance, and that everything be sacrificed to keeping the cat securely in the bag, strong measures must occasionally be adopted, the most unlikely things in the world must happen, and persons must talk in a mysterious, unintelligible manner worthy of the inmates of a certain handsome building at Colney Hatch. It is convenient, also, in such a case, that one character should bear a great personal resemblance to another, but that scarcely a hint of this resemblance should be allowed to transpire until the final arrangement of all things. The author has availed himself of every device of this kind; and he has done it very cleverly. Setting his secret aside altogether, there is still much to be said in favour of his novel. Some of the characters (especially the women) are particularly well drawn. They have conversation in which there is talent and good lie, is perhaps, a little more sprightly at one time, tender at another, and witty at another, than one is accustomed to in average society; but, one cannot fairly object to this; it is rather a matter for grateful thanks. We see those parts of the narrative which are connected with the ghostly, or rather lunatic, department of Brandon Hall, by any means boldly told; only it occurs to one, at the end, that they have little or nothing to do from beginning to end with the working of the machinery. To shoe upon how slight a foundation the whole fabric rests, it may be mentioned that the author has so far neglected that two gentlemen had gone out to dinner (October A.D. 1847), one night in the month, and that they returned home at "half-past Two, Hand," in anything like its present form, had been an impossibility, which would have been the case if the author had but Mark Wyldeve was in the habit of carrying pistols and Captain Lake a pocket-book, at the time of the murder of Sir Hugh.

Meadowleigh. By the Author of the "Ladies of Bever Hollow." 3 vols. (Tinsley Brothers.) The sensational is improving; for fiction, will find here a plain, wholesome repast. There are no rich dishes of horror served up; there are no artistic preparations of slaughter; there are no sensational entrées of bigamy; there is not sparkling wit and humour of the choicest description; but there are substantial, satisfying joints of domestic life, and wholesome fare. It is to be regretted that the pleasantry is sometimes a little flat; but the characters are, on the whole, well conceived, and the result is almost a necessity. It was with a tearful countenance, too, that we parted with the heroine very many years after the commencement of the inflectional sights of the poor relative pronoun. We have stood up for local ill-usage of the relative pronoun in sensational and humorous novelists, but without avail; it is continually defrauded of the e which is due to its oblique cases, and has the as perversely attached to its nominative case. Why, then, is it was the case? Indeed! is a construction of common occurrence in novels, and even (it memory may be trusted) in the pages of "Punch," we have, with a sigh, we record our protest. The plot of "Meadowleigh" is pretty much like that of "Bever Hollow," and that is to say, it is scarcely correct to say that there is a plot at all. There are certain adventures experienced by the characters, and there is a very interesting tale told upon one another; but, when all is said, done, and suffered, "as you were" is the order of the day. The story of Bever Hollow was more indite or no change has occurred in the positions of the more interesting personages at the conclusion of the book—if the word is allowable—for having sufficient justice, sufficient knowledge of human nature, and sufficient respect for the kindness of heart which actuates even some disagreeable women, to make one wish for a "second companion" is not only not a drudge and an ill-used dependant, but the friend, the confidante, and adviser of a king's son, and the lucky girl who suffers under the philanthropic eccentricities generated by a warm disposition and a cold head. The philanthropic efforts of the elderly lady's benevolent eccentricities unfortunately lead her to a most undesirable, and (which is worse) unjust, end; but she only remains there a short time; and, as she had often conceived a wish to become acquainted personally with the interior economy of such an establishment, one's anguish at her fate is considerably assuaged. Besides, it gives her friends an opportunity of which they avail themselves, of showing how highly they appreciated her good qualities. The book has no grand, pretentious aim; but, taking it for what it is, it is a pleasant novel. Mrs. Molesworth is a lady who reads and readable a novel as one could wish to have. Nearly all the characters are pleasant, and the conversation is lively and natural. The creation of so many personages with scarcely a cynic (properly so called) amongst them is creditable to the author's large-heartedness.

MUSIC.

Covent Garden Theatre, the closing of which as the Royal English Opera we noticed last week, was opened by Mr. Gye as the Royal Italian Opera, on Saturday last, March 26, with "Lucrezia Borgia," and the brilliant aspect of the boxes and stalls—filled with beauty, rank, fashion, and wealth—showed that the season was to be a gay one. "Norma" was the opera chosen for the opening night, Mdme. Emilia Lagrua appearing, for the first time in England, in the title-character. In the première scène, nee is the regularly beautiful. But her figure is noble and commanding, her action graceful, her facial expression good and interesting. As an actress she reminded us of Mdme. Ristori, whom she resembles in many respects, and she is, in fact, the very power which she throws into the delineation of passion in all its variety and intensity. Her high dramatic power, as it was thoroughly at home in the character of Norma, one of the most beautiful creations of the great composer, Bellini, who, alas! is no more to write, and she will, unquestionably, prove one of the most brilliant stars of the season. Her singing was equally fine throughout, and in the part of Pollione was extremely well acted and sung by Naudin; Adelgisa, which, though, a secondary character, is, in truth, a most difficult and important one, was finely rendered by Scalchi; and in Mdlle. Marie Battu; and Signor Attry, a debutant in this country, appeared as Oroveso. The latter has a fine bass voice, and from that he will prove a great acquisition to the theatre. The opera was brilliantly put on the stage, the scenery, especially, being presented no remarkable features. The ballet has never received much support at Covent Garden, and the present managements of this house having been content to leave its cultivation to Her Majesty's Theatre, time out of mind pre-eminent as the temple of Terpsichore.

On the evening of Easter Monday the first "National Harp Concert" was given at the Royal Albert Hall, under the direction of Mr. Benedict. It resembled the concerts of former years, and was enlivened with Irish melodies, the performance of partsongs, sung by the choir of the Vocal Association and accompanied on the harp by a band of large proportions, and instrumental solos by several of our most eminent performers. An interesting feature was the first appearance in public of Miss Thomas, the sister of our celebrated English prima donna, to whom she is also in vocal talent as well as in blood. She sang two songs, "Ella Dolce Cara Voce," from Verdi's "Macbeth," and Randegger's "Scenes of my youth," from "The Gipsy's Warning," and in both was warmly and deservedly applauded. The instrumental performances were by Mr. John Thomas's duet for harps, entitled "Cambria," a beautiful composition, superbly played by the author and Mr. Robert Cousins. We trust that these interesting concerts will be frequently given in the course of the season.

THE THEATRES.

DRURY LANE.—The management have worthily led off the Easter season with a Shakspearean revival worthy of the reconstoney celebration of the poet's birth, and distinguished itself honourably as the council of a national theatre which may now take rank as really one of the finest in the world. "Henry IV.," the drama in which the genius of Shakspeare culminated as the creator of historical tragedy, and which in his day it is evident excited the liveliest interest, is one which had already secured the attention of Mr. Charles Reade, whose version has been received at the time with considerable completeness and unquestionable effect. The Hotspur of the one and the Falstaff of the other make permanent impressions. The latter we can no longer command; but Mr. Phelps's Falstaff was among the possibilities, and on Monday the veteran actor supported the character in the old, genial, and humorous style. He was warmly received, and his performance was throughout applauded. For the part of Hotspur, Mr. Walter Montgomery, a young and rising actor who so gallantly ventured an experiment last Whitsuntide at the Princess', was available, and threw himself into the assumption with remarkable skill and energy. In fact, he was a piece of acting not inferior to any we have witnessed in the part, and from which we may safely infer that Mr. Montgomery is destined to be classed as one of the most popular actors in London. But the excellence of the performance was not confined to the leading artistes. In other respects, also, the getting-up was highly meritorious. Mr. Ryder, as the King, presented a truly kingly Royal dignity; and Mr. Walter Lacy, as Henry Prince of Wales, delivered the well-known soliloquy with much taste and feeling. Even for the more comic scenes he was scarcely light enough. Then for Poins and Peto as well as Mr. C. Belmore and Mr. Arthur Roxby; and Gadshill and Pete were both capitally hit off by Mr. Wallis and Mr. J. Carter, respectively. Not undistinguished by one most commendable feature. The great Glendower scene, hitherto omitted, was supplied, and introduced to us Mr. Rayner as Glendower, and Mr. H. Vandenhoff as Hotspur's wife, Lady Edith Mortimer, and Miss Lady Mortimer, speaking and singing Welsh. The whole scene is thrown in most admirably, and we wonder that it has not been done before. Mr. Rayner's delivery of the Welsh monstrosities is the dramatic effort of the time; worthy, indeed, alike of Shakspeare and of the Welsh who speak the language which his immortal writings have helped to form.

HAYMARKET.—Mr. Burnand has supplied a classical burlesque, called "Ixion; or, the Man at the Wheel," which has introduced a substance in the former character, one Miss Nelly Moore, whose vivacity will doubtless secure her a favourable reception. Mr. Terry is united with Vulcan in the person of Mr. Compton, who is doubtless dry enough for the character, and who sings with effect. Poor Juno, by the way, by-the-by, frequently shows a cleverness that is not always appreciated. Miss Fanny Holland is pretty as Pallas, and Mr. Farren, who is killed by a "small bore" shot from Vulcan; but, at Venus's prayer, he is revived and immortalised, and enjoys a tercentenary jubilation. The piece is throughout thoroughly bright and humorous very costly, and the language of the dialogue orinate and polished. The business was received with much applause, and Mr. Burnand's piece, in which Mr. Sothern, in Lord Dundreary, was, as usual, lavish of his humour.

PRINCESS'.—After the performance of "Paul's Return" and "The Comedy of Errors" a new farce was produced on Monday, entitled "Popplestone's Proposal," by Arthur Roe, with Mr. J. M. Morton. The piece possesses most of the peculiarities of this gentleman's drama, and impresses us with the conviction that he is one of the practised playwright. The bevo is supported by Mr. David Fisher, who personates Mr. Popplestone. This thoroughly humorous actor is an attic in a house situate in Compton-street, Soho, and Brown enters this room and finds Popplestone sitting there. He is seated sitting down on the clean lincs, soliloquies. He has escaped by his own chimney from a bailiff who is in the house. He is in search by the presence of Phoebe Furbelow, who is acquainted with him, but is an apparently happy ignorance of the fact that he is going by his uncle. Seeing that his own chimney is smoking, and reasonably suspecting therefore that a fire has been kindled in his own grate, he desperately descends another chimney, and finds himself in the bedroom of an adjoining house, occupied by a fair young milliner, frightens her and her admirer, and, in the course of the confusion, finds himself in the drawing-room of her employer. Here he is discovered by the latter in the habiliments of the former. From this leading error a number of ludicrous situations arise, in which Mr. Fisher is compelled to acknowledge her position; whereupon her aunt is free to wed, but proposes to marry her to a rich old gentleman. But upon a young gentleman who she prefers to a more aged suitor. There is no need to say, in the end, that the young people are united, and amazingly.

THE EXHIBITIONS were notwithstanding the rawness of the day, well attended on Easter Monday. The POLYTECHNIC reopened, with additional attractions and a new entertainment, with extraordinary effect, by Professor Pepper, entitled "The Ghost," or a ghost 7 in. high, and which proved very successful. The piping bullfinch is continued to attract a good audience, and the diving-bell is as admirable as ever; and the experiments in magic, bulbo songs, ventriloquism, and the Polytechnic Choir are all continued with the exhibitions of glass-working, which are very interesting. MADAME TUSSAUD'S is also reopened with a new set of the late royal historical figures are still objects of curiosity. That portion of the exhibition called the Chamber of Horrors is also considerably increased, and now goes under the appellation of the "Chamber of Physiognomy." The murderer Townley is one of its inmates. The ALHAMBRA MUSIC-HALL continues to attract large audiences. It presides over the Continental company of equestrian performers, who exhibit both horsemanship and skill in those extraordinary vaulting is gone through by a young girl, named Little Clotilde, who is understood to be M. Lalanne's niece. She is about ten years of age, and, in the course of her vaulting, encounters much apparent danger. Many of the performances are of a daring character, and highly creditable to the courage as well as the skill of the equestrians. The exhibitions at M. Pinder's CIRCUS are of a very interesting character, and the talents of the clown, Bennet, certainly amusing. The EGYPTIAN HALL is still a favourite resort, and the wax-works and other curiosities of Mr. Tebbs's panorama representing "The Prince of Wales's Tour in India, Egypt, Canada, Turkey, and Greece," which is described in a letter by Mr. Arthur Matthison, and accompanied with music by Miss Foxcroke.

ACCOUNTS from the Russian capital state that Mdme. Fiorelli, while singing for her benefit "Linda di Chamouni," gathered an immense harvest of applause and bouquets. Among the latter was one which contained a rich diamond bracelet. The recipient, on those who advocate the cause of Mdme. Pelips against her rival, Mdme. Marcsehek, having become jealous of the applause bestowed upon the latter, have opened a subscription to offer to this favourite—not a necklace, a bracelet, or earrings, as might be supposed—but a model of her foot in gold, which is to be placed on a malachite pedestal. Tamberlik, Calzaboni, Gerardi, and Graziani have been engaged for the forthcoming season at Moscow. Verdi's "Aida," and it is even stated that in addition part he avoided Rossini's "Mose. Gemma Cole will shortly play at one of the theatres, and Madame Adelina

ECHOES OF THE WEEK.

It is at last officially announced that her Majesty will hold court at Buckingham Palace on the 18th and 19th inst., and that two state concerts and two state balls will be held, so that there are some hopes of a fair and busy season in the midst of all our anxieties, our mournings for war, desolation, and starvation. John Bull will have to shake himself up a little and pull himself together for a "rally," as they say in the prize ring.

In the main time it will be interesting to mark that a "period" in the small-beer chronicles of dress is about to dawn. Yes; grave, political organs, much better informed than we of the movements of the fashionable world—of the doings of Lord Frederick Verisopht, the most noble the Marquis of Steyne, Lord Crop-hare, and Sir Mulberry Hawk—have already had a small type hint of the kind. We are reminded to do away with that "spin thing," as Mr. Jennes has it, the swallow-tailed black-coat. So that, if you please, for the last fifty, or about two hundred years hence, "does" for the booksellers a costumehistory of English Dress, and Mr. Planché will announce by the loss of those hinder appendages which distinguished George IV., Beau Brummell, Brummell Hayne, Alvanley, and Dan Mayer, and which in the swells when in full dress, and our Dalmatian and quadrumanous grandsires wore in ordinary costume, that the "period" is now at an end. replanted; it will soon be as antiquated as a spencer, or that pretty garment which the daughters of Eve wore in the days before the fall—"a laced Joseph." It is to be succeeded by a kind of black velvet frock-coat, which, if elegantly made, will be elegant enough, but which will not do so nicely down on the "Row" as a Tweed or Cloth are in painful threats of invention on this important garment. Of George IV. Thackeray once sarcastically said—> he left skill in cutting out coats,

> And an undeniable taste for cookery.

Is it strange that the first kind of genius should be hereditary and reproduced in his grand nephew. Will no one speak up for the old swallow-tail? Our young men, "Young England," "Young Ireland," hoc genitis, look admirably in it—graceful, manly, and yet not feminine. What will they look like in the frock? Will they not look sit and shiver in an old dress-coat? Of what benefit is it to a poor man? Its natural recipients seem to be the waiters at our clubs, and at chophouses, mineralite and fallen mortals, who attract less pity than any others under the sun.

"Shall Government interfere with the Working Man?" is a question put forward gravely in the last advertisement of Mr. Cobden's pamphlet, and Mr. Ayrton, M.P., and various other friends of the "Working Man," are about to hold meetings to demonstrate that he (the W. M.) may be rendered both happier, "if by fair means," and richer by being cheated; why may not Hodge and Dick indulge in it, although Mr. Underhand cannot propose to put a stop to "cheating" as an undesirable security for their savings? The working man is coming out this spring of the working man as a "swell," and is quite ready for the Shakspeare statue, and the working man has been assured that all this sudden exposé is not intended to interfere with it, not time that this absurd nursing, this miserable ticketing of classes should be done away with? Working men are not to be a flock of working men, except a few miserable do-nothings eaten up with ennui, who are to be sent out the Prince of Wales's feathers, "Ich dien," and every member of Parliament, work harder than any cobbler!"

Here we have sent us all the way from Manchester, where, having little work to do, they are running politics into the ground by speculation, a suggested draught of constitution of a "Central Temperance Alliance," which strikes one as the very last word of the age. Through the agency of "Moral Action," the C. T. A. will suppress Crime, Misery, and Pauperism; and the Gin Palace, Beer-shop, and Close Public Rouse by a Total Abstinence from Intoxicating Drinks, by which Social Maine Law, as it is called in the U. S., a lively stock of eupatids for you, Mr. Printer! And how do you think this is to be done? Why, by "moral suasion," by a "moral" cordon sanitaire, poking his nose into everybody's house and everybody's business; sending out its inverse and hotels, at dinners and evening parties, to shall and indulge in "spiking" warning cautions to clerks who take anything stronger than ginger-beer; "strongly recommending" people not to let their wives, &c., have a glass "on any description;" not allowing medical practitioners to prescribe under any circumstances brandy and water; "especially at the present fearfully insidious form and flavours of the ordinary drinks;" and to urge noblemen and gentlemen to assist them to help them. Here is something too, which sins against the statute of Mortmain, as it is in effect the "reception of property either to become a beneficiary, or for the sole benefit of others." Well, this is trying to elevate and improve mankind with a vengeance. Nothing more silly, pernicious, or suicidal has been suggested since the last movement which, in its proper sphere, is beneficial.

Mr. Cobden has been made to go through fire in favour of M. Maintzel, after a silence of twenty years, by a reproduction of a letter printed in the Times during the letter-spelling craze, in which Mr. Thomas Carlyle loves a good strong dogged, yet he speaks thus in favour of that republican whom one of our Tory Premiers called a "mere foreign profit freely with the "moral dogge" called misrepresentation. After "a series of years," in which Carlyle has declared he was "constantly with great freedom that he is a man of genius and virtue; a man of sterling veracity, humanity, and nobleness of mind; one of those rare persons whose unbefriended fortitude, and silent worth are more worthy to be called martyr-souls, who in silence piously in their hearts, and understand and love one another by that." The "right hand" and the "sword" of this martyr soul, General Cavaignac, and Godefroi Cavaignac, a retired of Malic, where he has been very properly received as a great man, and is taken into connection with the state. Mr. Cobden's next step will be the guest of a member of Parliament both in the Isle of Wight and in London; and it is to be hoped that he will not be allowed to fall into the hands of the "working man" and his friends; not, of course, as we have said, of the true working man, but of the sham as well as a worker, but of the mouthing, ranting, mad-headed, confused syllabus of Secularism, Mormonism, and decayed Radicalism which is represented by valid pamphlets and by Secularist writers. Government, too, has been more than once quietly warned not to let the low Irish kick up a row on the entry of the Inns-of-Court, the last half Pepsin rot and half faction fight occasioned by the magic name of Cavaignac has had a savage effect on the Irish, generally covered by fustian or flannel jackets, and if Paddy kicks up a row a few thousand very strong hands and arms are ready to knock him down.

If any one wishes to prepare for the Shakspeare tercentenary in a quiet way, he can go to Dwyer Joyce's lecture on "The Irish Race," or any one has in sensing that play, after "Bumbo Mailer" or the lord sensationalism lately prevalent, it will be found a refreshing bath. A finely harmonised part-song, a calm and beautiful picture, a magnificent specimen of statue, or a glass of fine old wine. How the people laugh at Falstaff's wit—almost with little, flickering hints, which are suddenly, but with a continuous, sound, wholesome enjoyment, during which they forget all their troubles, and go home refreshed, prepared to applaud, and forget the actor, and the stage, and the playhouse, and everything but Falstaff and Jack Falstaff, who is positively conscious of his hot nose and red face, with an avalanche of shouts of wit. This is as it should be, and not as it is sometimes when the house or my pen can pay to all engaged. The battle scene is simply the most splendid scene we have seen for years. The marching, the grouping and scenery thoroughly artistic. We, however, don't like to see the people in plain mourning dresses, and the women in particular trundling Miss Swivellicci in silk tights on a field of battle. Ballet girls never do, never did, and never will look like boys, and really spoil an otherwise admirable scene.

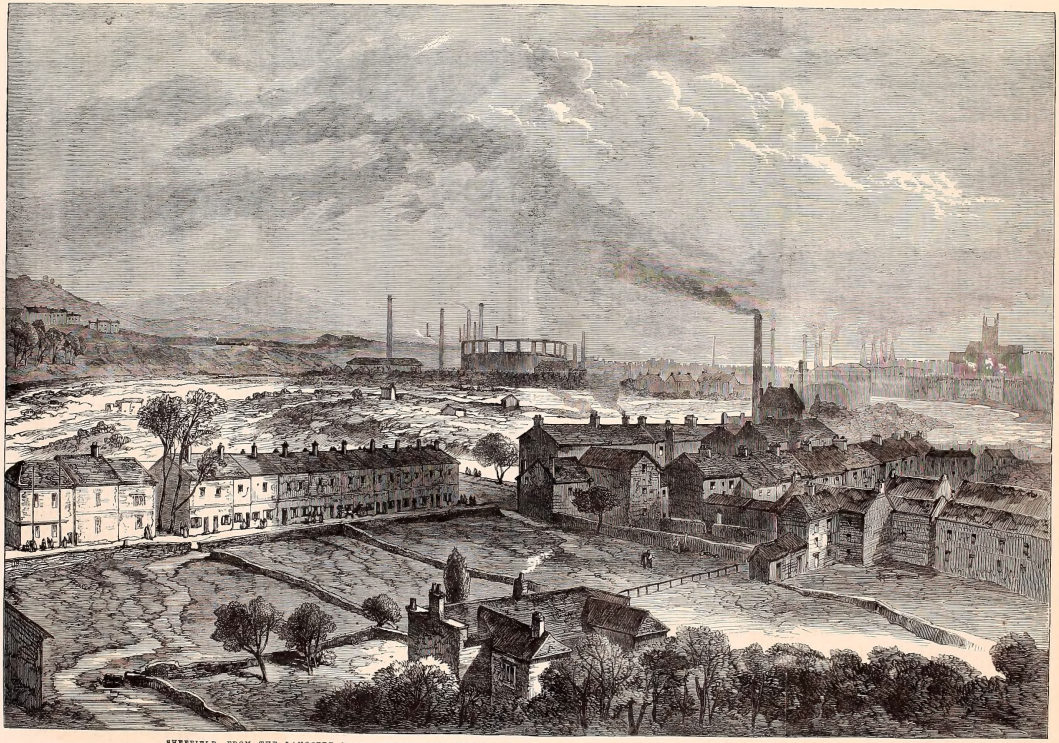
Mr. Dickens's new story, "Our Mutual Friend," which will appear just a month hence, opens with a river scene and a man who seems to be built up of mud, and to have grown from slime, and who is of a new trade, being one who earns his living solely by the pleasant occupation of mud-larking for the purpose of decoying dead bodies!

We are glad to hear that Mr. Mark Lemon's novel "Wait for the End" is not only being reprinted in English, but is in course of translation into German.

THE EASTER VOLUNTEER REVIEW.

The annual Easter Monday review of metropolitan volunteer corps took place this year on Blackheath, near Guildford, Surrey. There were about 17,000 volunteers on the ground, 4000 of which belonged to country corps, and the manœuvres, under General Pennefather, were admirably performed. Although the review was successful, it does not seem to have given much satisfaction. The troops arrived in good order, the guns struggled through the narrow lanes and roads in the main in good time as of everything else, spectators abounded, and the country was lovely; but the general drift of all the reports on the day's proceedings is that the Guildford hills are not exactly suited for those gatherings.

Blackheath is like a vast billiard table, and the men are the nine undistinguishable knobs, and knolls, covered knee-deep with tangled heather and moss; the ground has many copse-like clumps of stunted trees scattered it, with one or two steep ridges which dominate the whole; and here and there a few fir trees, which are dignified by the name of "pines," are supposed to be called—in which latches and fir, sparsely intermingled with stunted deciduous trees, and bushes, and covered with heather. This is the northern extremity, which the volunteers approached by Tangley-lane, the land to the left of which is a wide, open, undulating down, and the right a dusted here and there with homesteads—a perfect specimen of rich English scenery. But the road, as mentioned above, is a lane, which from its the more hasty force and hustler, the only products of this sterile sandy soil, and the only crops which can be raised on it are the fir trees, which have which have been planted for the purpose of timber. It is a fine tree, but it sufficiently well treed to its followers. It goes right across the heath, and therefore must be crossed, and the troops, both cavalry and infantry, had to cross it in every direction. The little hamlet of Blackheath, which consists of half a dozen houses, is on the left of the road, and the Red Lion.



The battalions from Waterloo, and from Surrey, Hants, and Berks, were the volunteers from the north of the river, and they had a long, hard fighting on the rest to Blackheath. These, with a proportion of artillery, constituted the 1st Division. The 2nd Division consisted of volunteers from Kent and Sussex, which were brigaded in the order of their arrival at the rendezvous, and the 3rd Division was made up of the artillery, consisted the 1st Division. Of the four brigades making up the 1st Division, the 1st and 2nd Brigades were commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Elcho and Colonel Elcho; the 3rd, by Lieutenant-Colonel Earl Grosvenor; and the 4th, by Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Ranelagh. The 2nd Division in the same manner made up of four brigades, commanded as follows :—1st, Lieutenant-Colonel Cotton; 2nd, Lieutenant-Colonel Lord Sondes; 3rd, Lieutenant-Colonel Viscount Bury; and 4th, Lieutenant-Colonel Macdonald.

The division of the Royal Artillery (Major Peel, R.A. commanding), Major R. C. Stewart (Aide-de-camp), for the 1st Division. The officers of the 2nd Division were Major Lord Elcho, Major Hay, R.A., Major Hay (Aide-de-camp), and Colonel A. Alison, C.B. The volunteer staff consisted of Colonel Sir Percy Herbert, Deputy Adjutant-General; Lieutenant-Colonel Inspector Chichester, Major Morris, C.B., Lieutenant-Colonel G. B. Lord, &c.; Lieutenant-Colonel C. B. Ibbetson, &c.; Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. A. Fitzroy, &c.; Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. Arthur Hardinge, Lieutenant-Colonel Manners, &c.

The whole of the forces were under the command of Lieutenant-General Sir J. L. Pennefather, K.C.B., and his staff consisted of Lieutenant-Colonel F. Lygon, Coldstream Guards, Deputy Adjutant-General; Major Hon. Percy Herbert, Major Hon. Percy Herbert, Royal Artillery; Captain W. H. Wolfe and Colonel Buchanan, Royal Artillery.

The movements of the troops were under the direction of Colonel Sir Percy Herbert, and the movements were over down came the rain. The evolutions, which began shortly after one o'clock, were completed by three.

The movements commenced with the faint attack on the right of the division, which, supported by the Artillery, advanced to the crest of one of the thin copses and begin a cautious advance, while their guns were ostentatiously posted in the most commanding positions on the most open of the mounds. In a few minutes more the whole of the extreme right of the enemy showed itself in considerable force. The Artillery, supported by a strong company, pushing down rank on rank in cool time, while the guns were hurried into position, and the fire opened with great vigour. The enemy's guns were also brought into action, and the fire was returned, and the General Russell's troops were on the alert, though, beyond throwing out their skirmishers and keeping up a sharp fire, no attempt was made to advance. It was attempted till the numerical superiority of those making the feint attack on the left was made manifest, when the whole of the enemy's line, in the line of skirmishers and supports advanced till almost their whole front was at right angles with the commencement of the line of attack under the shelter the ridges between the two clumps of woodland. For some twenty minutes or so the fire was kept up with great vigour on both sides, and the Artillery, which, while the spattering fire of the riflemen in front sank and rose and spread and contracted like the sound of a distant surf, kept up a steady roar which was very grand. The enemy's guns were then ordered to cease firing, and when they obeyed into the plain General Russell would be completely enveloped in a cloud of smoke, which rolled slowly down the hillside, and came against the part of the field that the real attack was unmasked. Then suddenly the guns of the Artillery ceased firing, and the enemy's guns were commenced a flanking fire which enfiladed the whole defending line. The regular attack was then made in force, and the enemy's line fell back in the rapidly and in good order, and was hurried on, and the same scene upon which assailant kept pouring forth their fire as the result of a gallant charge, and the defenders retired in good order, and in a way to do credit to their gallant leader. Spite of the exceedingly difficult nature of the advance, they crept rapidly on the left wing of the enemy, and when they were in a line with the ground rapidly to the left so as to outflank General Russell's force in such a manner as to cut off their retreat, and to compel their surrender, or their annihilation. And now the plan fast developed itself. To save the outflanked left wing from destruction, the right wing of the enemy and the centre of the corps from his left to strengthen his right, and to stop their reinforcements. The fire was kept up with great vigour by the assailants, and the fight became fearfully rapid, but the tactics of the commander and soldiers were terrific; and the left wing of the enemy, which had begun to slope inwards, was driven back in confusion, and the centre, which was driven back in confusion, and the centre, which was driven back in confusion, and the centre, which

SHEFFIELD, FROM THE LANGSETT ROAD, SHOWING THE SUBURBS THAT WERE FLOODED.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 326.

ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE FLOOD AT SHEFFIELD. BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

CONVEYING THE DEAD TO THE RECEIVING-HOUSE, MALIN BRIDGE.

BURIAL OF THE UNCLAIMED DEAD.—SEE PAGE 329.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE EARL OF ABERDEEN.

The Right Hon. George John James Hamilton Gordon, 4th Earl of Aberdeen, Viscount Formartine, Lord Haddo, Methlic, Tarvis, and Kellie, in the Peerage of Scotland, Viscount Gordon, of Aberdeen, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, and a Baronet of Nova Scotia, was born on the 28th of July as second son of the late Marquis of Douglas, and widow of Lady Archibald Hamilton, daughter of the late distinguished Scottish Statesman, the Right Hon. Sir John Sinclair, Bart., of Ulbster, K.C.B. He was educated at Harrow, and was afterwards sent to Cambridge, where he took high honours. He succeeded his father, the late Earl, in 1801, when only seven years of age, and was consequently brought up under the guardianship of his mother, the Countess of Aberdeen, and of his uncle, George Lord Haddo, now sixth Earl of Aberdeen, who died in 1815. He married, first, in 1805, Catherine Elizabeth, daughter of the late Sir William Hamilton, Bart., of Wishaw, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters, of whom the eldest son, George Lord Haddo, now sixth Earl of Aberdeen, was born on the 28th of June, 1806. His lordship married, secondly, in 1815, Harriet Douglas, daughter of the late Sir John Hamilton Dalrymple, Bart., of North Berwick, by whom he had one son, who died an infant. His lordship married, thirdly, Nov. 11, 1820, Lucien Cornelia, youngest daughter of the late James Alexander Stewart Mackenzie, cousin of the Earl of Galloway, and by her (who survives him) had issue a daughter, Mary, who married in 1850 Sir Henry Edward Bruce, and died in 1853, leaving issue; and a son, Arthur Gordon, who married, in 1851, Isabella Maria, daughter of the late Hon. Bernard Marsh, Duke of Bassano, the distinguished statesman of the First Empire, by whom he has had issue a daughter, Ishbel Maria Marjoribanks Gordon. His elder son, the Hon. Alexander Hugh Baring, who is at present M.P. for Huntingdonshire, on the death of his father succeeds to the considerable personal daughter of Edmund Sir Vincent, much and present Lord Digby. The late peer is heir-at-law for Sir Darling of Lockwood, Bart., and cousin to the present Sir Francis Baring, on eminent London merchant, who was created a Baronet on May 27, 1793, and was the grandfather of the late Sir Thomas Baring, and of Sir Francis Thornhill Baring, Bart., M.P. To modern times the Barings have maintained the very highest position and rank in commercial and political world.

SIR ANDRIES STOCKENSTROM, BART.

Sir Andries Stockenstrom, Bart., of Mauricom, Cape of Good Hope, formerly Lieutenant-General and Commandant of the Eastern districts of the Cape Colony, died at Mauricom, and was the eldest son (by his wife, Johanna Elizabeth, daughter of Andries Bruyns) of the Cape of Good Hope of Lieutenant-Colonel Andries Stockenstrom, of Stockholm (who afterwards settled at the Cape), and became Landdrost of Graaff Reinet (under Sir Lowry Cole, Bart., of Enniskillen, Ireland, and Lucan, co. Dublin, and Grendon Hall, co. Northampton, and Dunsley Hall, co. Stafford, and Mary, daughter of the late distinguished Scottish Statesman, the Right Hon. Sir John Sinclair, Bart., of Ulbster, K.C.B. He was educated at Eton, and was afterwards sent to Cambridge, where he took high honours. He succeeded his father, the late Earl, in 1801, when only seven years of age, and was consequently brought up under the guardianship of his mother, the Countess of Aberdeen, and of his uncle, George Lord Haddo, now sixth Earl of Aberdeen, who died in 1815. He married, first, in 1805, Catherine Elizabeth, daughter of the late Sir William Hamilton, Bart., of Wishaw, by whom he had issue two sons and three daughters, of whom the eldest son, George Lord Haddo, now sixth Earl of Aberdeen, was born on the 28th of June, 1806. His lordship married, secondly, in 1815, Harriet Douglas, daughter of the late Sir John Hamilton Dalrymple, Bart., of North Berwick, by whom he had one son, who died an infant. His lordship married, thirdly, Nov. 11, 1820, Lucien Cornelia, youngest daughter of the late James Alexander Stewart Mackenzie, cousin of the Earl of Galloway, and by her (who survives him) had issue a daughter, Mary, who married in 1850 Sir Henry Edward Bruce, and died in 1853, leaving issue; and a son, Arthur Gordon, who married, in 1851, Isabella Maria, daughter of the late Hon. Bernard Marsh, Duke of Bassano, the distinguished statesman of the First Empire, by whom he has had issue a daughter, Ishbel Maria Marjoribanks Gordon. His elder son, the Hon. Alexander Hugh Baring, who is at present M.P. for Huntingdonshire, on the death of his father succeeds to the considerable personal daughter of Edmund Sir Vincent, much and present Lord Digby. The late peer is heir-at-law for Sir Darling of Lockwood, Bart., and cousin to the present Sir Francis Baring, on eminent London merchant, who was created a Baronet on May 27, 1793, and was the grandfather of the late Sir Thomas Baring, and of Sir Francis Thornhill Baring, Bart., M.P. To modern times the Barings have maintained the very highest position and rank in commercial and political world.

SIR FRANCIS H. LOFTUS, BART.

Sir Francis Hamilton Loftus, third Baronet, of Mount Loftus, in the county of Kilkenny, who died at his seat, Mount Loftus, near Gowerstown, on the 19th of March, was born on the 19th of January, 1787, a year after a protracted illness, was the youngest son of Sir Edward Loftus, the first Baronet, by his wife, Anne Rose, an heiress, married to him about twenty-two hundred years ago, and was, early in life, in the British Army. He was attached to Lord Cathcart's Staff during the Peninsular War, and the following year received a commission in a cavalry regiment, which was then in Portugal. Soon after, having retired from the regular Army, he joined the Kilkenny Militia, and was appointed Captain and Adjutant of that corps in 1809, and served with it on Captain for some years; but, owing to the Militia being disembodied at the termination of 1814, he succeeded, on third Baronet, Aug. 15, 1822, on the decease of his brother, Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Nicholas Loftus, the second Baronet. He had distinguished himself against the rebels in the year 1798, and received from the Irish Loyalists of nearly half a century, Sir Francis Hamilton Loftus was the representative of a family which had distinguished himself, in his hours of freedom from pain and suffering, by application to literature and science, and by considerable accomplishments. He liberally promoted with purse and patronage every useful undertaking connected with the county of Kilkenny, in the immediate vicinity of his property. Sir Francis Loftus was much esteemed and respected. As he never married, the title devolves on his father's male issue, the baronetcy, created July 31, 1776.

THE DEAN OF EMLY.

The Very Rev. Denis Browne, M.A., Dean of Emly, whose death has just occurred, was the third son of the late Rev. Dr. Browne, by his wife, Anne, daughter of Rose Mahon, Esq., of Castlegar, and was grandson of Denis Browne, Esq., of Westport House, county Mayo, and Mount Browne, of Sligo. He was born Oct. 12, 1790, and was educated at Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated M.A. in 1813. In holy orders, he was presented to two livings, Castlereagh and Santry, but, feeling scruples about the propriety of holding two livings of Kilkenny, in the county of Leitrim, thus reducing his income by more than one half. Thenceforth he devoted himself entirely to his clerical duties in his own parish, in which neighbourhood his name has been so long and so honourably associated. For many years his brother, the late Rev. Dr. Browne, was Rector of Emly, and on the death of the latter of his siblings he succeeded to the Deanery. He was also for an active part in working the "Home Mission." In 1848 he was appointed Deputy Lieutenant of Limerick, and was for a period of a thoroughly well-worked parish; and though in his later years increasing bodily infirmities obliged him to relinquish the active duties of the ministry of his schools and other institutions were kept in efficiency by his constant supervision. He was married, first, in 1815, to Mary Ivy Dean married, June 7, 1824, Anne Ailis, daughter of Thomas William Rigsby, Esq., of Ardmore, in the county of Louth, by whom he has had two sons and three daughters.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Adrian John Hope, Esq., of Carlton-gardens, Pall-mall, and of Deepdene, Dorking, Surrey, formerly M.P. for Shaftesbury in this country; the executors appointed being Alexander James Beresford Beresford-Hope, Esq., M.P., of Bedgebury, Kent, and Second Augustus Charles Brudenell Bruce, M.P.; and Adrian Elias Hope, Esq. (the latter in his capacity of a trustee), was proved on the 5th ult., the testator having left personal estate and effects in England in the Hay-market and his residence in Lisbon upon trust for his wife for life, and after her death for his children, the sum of £400,000, and the residue to his said son, Adrian Elias Hope, for his natural life, with remainder to his children.

The will of William Ephraim Smith, Esq., a surgeon, late of Trobrge-square, was proved, in the London Court, under £40,000, on the 29th ult., by Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, the widow, and Mr. Charles Ephraim Smith, the testator died on the 7th of January last, having executed his will in the previous month of July. He left all his property to his executors in trust for his wife and children, and desired that he should be buried in the vault of the parish church of Hampstead.

The will of Thomas Ivy, Esq., of Eaton-square, Pimlico, and James-street, Haymarket, was proved, in the London Court, under £130,000, and executed by the widow, Mrs. Ann Ivy, and Mr. Thomas Ivy, the sole executors being Major-General G. W. Ivy (the brother), William Fuller, Esq., and Mr. Thomas Ivy, the testator died on the 7th of January, 1864, to whom a power is reserved. The will is dated Nov. 12, 1863. He has bequeathed to his wife an annuity of £1,000, and to his son John £17,000: the residue, real and personal, including his freehold in the Haymarket and his residence in Eaton-square, he left to his wife for life, and after her death to his son.

The will of William Ephraim Smith, Esq., a surgeon, late of Trobrge-square, was proved, in the London Court, under £40,000, on the 29th ult., by Mrs. Mary Ann Smith, the widow, and Mr. Charles Ephraim Smith, the testator died on the 7th of January last, having executed his will in the previous month of July. He left all his property to his executors in trust for his wife and children, and desired that he should be buried in the vault of the parish church of Hampstead.

SCIENTIFIC NEWS.

SHEA BUTTER, a fatty matter extracted from the fruit of the Bassia Parkii, is largely used in Western Africa. It was examined by Messrs. Thomson and Wood, who found it to consist of olein, 70·0; stearin, 29·0; and loss, 1·0. Specific gravity, 0·9180. It contained in it 0·70 oleic acid and 70·0 nearly pure stearic acid. These results explain the peculiarities of the above fat, which is solid at 60 deg. cent. as the point of fusion, while M. Ouderans has found it to be 69 deg.

THE USE OF GUNPOWDER AS FIREARMS have been recently investigated by Dr. Decker, who states that the force of the explosion is not due to the heat evolved, but to the gases, after the choice is produced in its exterior and interior modification in its physical and chemical properties, and the time of the duration of this. Dr. Decker has determined the pressure of gases in the interior and exterior of the gun a blockish shot deposit, the age of which may be determined by the velocity of the projectile, and the time of the gas proceed from the action of the residue of the charge on the metal, for an area that has not been acted upon by the gases, and which has same manner as one that has been used. Variations in the quality of the powder and in the circumstances of the gun are also considered, and the author has calculated the character of the deposits resulting from the combustion of the powder. M. Decker states that he has found the best powder to be Kaffeiger's, which he supposes causes and to gun-cotton. Thus chemical science can detect whether a gun has been frequently or not, and, in a certain degree, the kind of powder used.

CULTIVATION OF THE CHINCHONA-TREE.—M. De Vry, Governor of Curaçoa, has addressed a letter to the Academy of Science to the Academy of Sciences at Vienna some particulars respecting the growth of this valuable medicinal tree. The seeds, which are very small, and of a dark blue colour, are sown in a shallow box, containing fine mould, and covered with a thin layer of the same material. The box is then placed in a warm situation, and exposed to the sun. From the specimens laid before the Academy, the latter statement would appear to be correct.

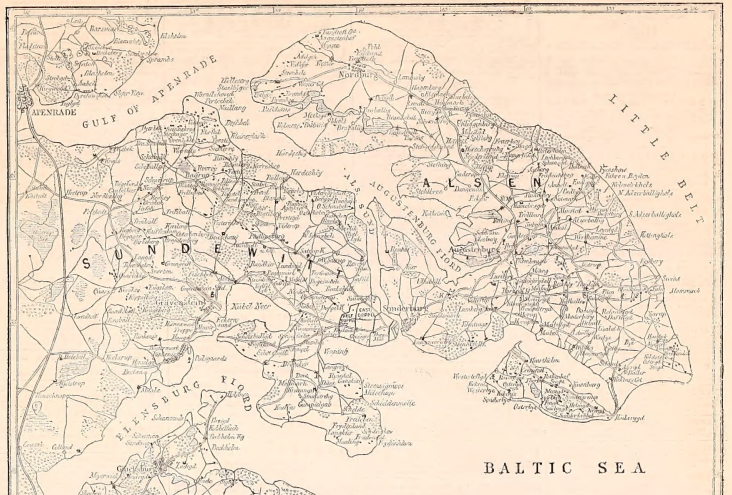
PHENOMENA PRODUCED BY REVOLVING DISCS.—Professor Donkin, of Oxford, has published a paper on the subject of the apparent coloration of geometrical figures executed in black and white or in semitransparent materials, and of the Rev. H. Haughton, who exhibited a revolving drawings produced the same effect, publishing his experiments in the Atmosphere Journal. Professor Donkin's explanation is that the eye, when it sees a white object, receives the impression of that colour for a certain time, say $\frac{1}{10}$ second. "A circular disc of white cardboard, 9 in. in diameter, with half its surface painted black, was made to revolve rapidly in front of a window, and viewed while the bright light from a window fell upon it. A stereoscope, from which the lenses had been removed, was placed in front of the eyes, and in which were cut two square apertures, at such a distance asunder that their binocular combination gave a single square aperture. The disc, in its rapid revolution, was arranged so that through the right-hand aperture some of the white sectors were seen, while through the left-hand aperture the black sectors were seen. The result was that the whole disc appeared of a uniform shade of grey, and the so-called flickering had ceased, no lustre, in the proper sense of the word, appeared, but the whole appearance presented to the eye resembled to a single eye under similar circumstances."

HOW TO DETECT PHOSPHORUS.—Phosphuret of iron and nickel found in a great many meteorites, and which has been much studied by Mr. Lawrence Smith, an American chemist, has been artificially produced by M. Fapé, with the advice and assistance of M. Henri des Claire Deville, the great metallurgist. He placed in a carbon crucible, protected by an earthen crucible, 8 gr. of sesquioxide of iron, 3·7 gr. of oxide of nickel, 10·1 gr. of pyrophosphate of soda, 8 gr. of zinc, and 7 gr. of carbon, and exposed the whole to a white heat. The result of the operation was a mass of black glass, with a metallic fracture, and which, on being treated with nitric acid, gave the residuum. The residuum seemed to be a mixture of iron and nickel, which, with a little sulphur, probably derived from the oxide of iron. When the iron and nickel were alone the solution of the acid was green. A little red phosphuret hydrogen and afterwards pure hydrogen. The intermediate crisis, which was very long, was due to the presence of the phosphuret of nickel, and formed of yellow flakes, with a lively, metallic lustre, strongly magnetic, which, either hot or cold, completely resisted the action of hydrochloric acid, and it stated to be, nevertheless, without characteristic mineral in extraterrestrial substances, which seems to have been regarded as circumstances akin to the theoretic indications of the formation of meteor, and contrary to say, by the aid of heat and protection from oxydising agents. This seems to be the case with meteorites, whose general texture favours the idea of an igneous origin, and in which the smallest particles of iron are preserved for ages through the least trace of alteration, and unlet with modern which are incapable of giving up the smallest part of their oxygen.

THE MISTLETOE (VISCUM ALBUM).—In the last part of the Transactions of the Linnean Society is a paper by Dr. John Harley, in which he states that, in England, the Mistletoe is a parasite, he found the structure and development of the wood, the cortex, and the pollen, and the germination of the seed. The author has not been content with examining the general knowledge of its physiological relations to the plants upon which it grows as a parasite, but has made numerous researches, the result of which is that the Mistletoe, in its circulatory system, has the vessels of the maple, hawthorn, apple, willow, and other trees adopted to mutual growth of the tree plant. The author attaches importance to the nourishing plant by roots, some in the bark, others in the wood, the first being simply root or vessels, and the latter consisting of a cone of cells, increasing in degree from this root proceed horizontal or side roots, generally five or six. The latter resemble as in branches, and are covered for twelve of an inch in diameter, and is composed of a delicate yellowish green cellular tissue. The roots are very destitute of woody fibre, and are, in fact, composed of cellular tissue into the woody fibre of the nourishing them. The anatomical relation between the mistletoe and the fourthlings of the tree. The general disposition in sections of the stem of the Mistletoe. The young stem of the viscum may be regarded as a prolongation of the central pith of the spring, and is surrounded by a continuous layer of the nourishing stem, which is also continuous with the pith in its surface, as shown in the plate; but the woody fibres of the two stems are not continuous, the former being found to be an assemblage of cells, with the exception of a few spiral vessels in the pedicellum of the parasitism. He says that "When the roots of viscum album have become established in the nourishing stem of the host, the nourishing plant, which performs become gradually thickened by the formation of wooden layers from the cambium, and the bark increases in the lateral direction of the tree. In this manner, new zones, with that of the branch upon which it grows for every layer of wood formed by the nourishing tree, a corresponding one is deposited by the viscum, and the growth of the two plants proceeding thus uniformly, the concentric rings of the viscum are found to correspond with those of the nourishing tree. In the case of viscum album, however, the stems sometimes become more and lignification about their outer portions, and the roots extraordinary, and the bark of the stem and roots of the nourishing plant, constantly retain their original soft cellular condition. And, as far as my observations have extended, I find that the parasite depends upon its peculiar cellular processes. They are, in fact, to viscum what the cellular rootlets of cuscuta are to that plant. The bark of the nourishing plant, and also the woody fibre, only rises are thrown out from the soft outer layer of the woody base, which, of course, consists of cells of a smaller or longer diameter, and coincides with the undulating outer layer of the nourishing plant. The inevitable result of the attachment of the viscum to the nourishing stem is a gradual increased compression of the bark and wood of the latter, which ends in its vigour, and slowly buries the intruder; nay more punctuate the fresh layers of the wood, and are also found in the soft cortical crop of wood which is constantly still further out-cast. The infected branch assumes various contortions, and frequently swells out into a large knot or gall, and finally perishes. Such was a veritable hydra, which, having killed its canker, spoiled and occupied its host, and it produced new and vigorous wood that rendered the parasitically complete the work of destruction.

THE ABSORPTION OF GASES BY LIQUIDS AND GASES IN WATER.—Mr. W. M. Watts gives an account of the results of experiments on this subject in the new edition of the Account of Chemical Science. Dalton, who first propounded the idea that different gases afford no resistance to each other's particles, but expand freely into each other's spaces, as a vacuum, would appear to have been led to this conclusion from considering the homogeneous character of the atmosphere, and the fact that the different gases of different densities mixed the heavier does not separate from the lighter by virtue of gravitation. That the gases are absorbed by water, and that the quantity absorbed is proportional to the pressure, was discovered by Henry, and the truth of the theory is the fact of the diminution of the solubility of carbonic acid in water in proportion to the diminution of pressure. Professor Graham has studied the relations of carbonic acid and carbonic oxide and such mixtures of carbonic acid and of the gases common in the atmosphere as are found in the air contained in certain calculated from the several co-efficients of absorption in the assumption of the truth of this law. He has found that water takes more than twice as much volume with chlorine and chlorine with carbonic acid do not conform to this law; and Mr. Watts considers that chlorine forms with water a compound of hydrochloric acid and air, ammonia and hydrogen, and sulphurous acid and carbonic acid. Mr. Watts gives tables of the results of his calculations and experiments in the first edition.

A NEW CLASSIFICATION OF INSECTS has been proposed by Mr. James D. Dana, in continuation of his system of classification based on the principle of progress in the development of harmony of the lower in the other functions. It appears in the new number of Silliman's American Journal of Science. The author divides insects into the two great classes of our readers of the systems of this very distinguished naturalist.—I. Pneumatic or Tracheate insects, breathing by tracheæ.—II. Apneumatic or Branchiate insects, breathing by branchiæ (or those of the sea). 1. Hymenoptera—perforatorial, perpunctorial, and terebrantia. 2. Diptera—suctorial, pupiparous, and acalyptera. 3. Lepidoptera—haustellate, and rhopalocera (from ampulus, large, and $\kappa\epsilon\rho\alpha\varsigma$, horn). 4. Lepidoptera—perforatorial, pupivorous, and heterocera (from $\epsilon\tau\epsilon\rho\sigma\varsigma$, different, and $\kappa\epsilon\rho\alpha\varsigma$, horn). 5. Orthoptera—saltatorial, Ambulatores or Neuropteres.—a. Aplecoptera—perforatorial, permutatorial, pronubulatory, and terebrantia. b. Plecoptera—haustellate, and suctorial or permutatorial. c. Parastenoses or Typical Neuropteres—semipunctorial, permutatorial, and semipunctorial. d. Heteroptera or Rhynchota—monly terrestrial, pernutatorial, semipunctorial. e. Homoptera—mostly terrestrial, pernutatorial, and semipunctorial. 6. Coleoptera—Cursores, Ambulatores. (2). Saltatores or Typical Orthoptera. III. Thysanures or Apters, Myriapods, and Arachnidans.



ASTRONOMICAL OCCURRENCES IN APRIL.—Mercury (in Aries and Taurus) is invisible. Venus (in Aquarius) is an evening star.—Venus (in Pisces) is a morning star throughout the month, and rises, on the 1st, at 4h. 29m. a.m., on the 15th at 4h. 6m. a.m. and Pisces on the 30th rises the meridian at 8h. 20m. a.m.—Jupiter (in Libra) rises, on the 15th, at 9h. 19m. a.m., on the 30th at 8h. 31m. a.m.—The Moon on the 23rd, at 7h. 42m. p.m. Saturn (in Virgo), on the 4th, is in opposition to the Sun at 6h. 8m. a.m.—Uranus (in Taurus) rises on the 1st at 1h. 11m. a.m., on the 15th at 12h. 31m. a.m., and on the 30th at 11h. 51m. a.m.—Neptune (in Leo) rises, on April 1st, 9h. 9m. p.m.; First Quarter, April 14, 0h. 9m. a.m.; Full Moon, April 21, 7h. 19m. p.m.; Last Quarter, April 29, 4h. 4m. a.m.

ROYAL INSTITUTION LECTURES.—Professor Helmholtz, F.R.S., will give the first two of a course of six lectures "On the Natural Law of the Interchange of Force with Matter," on Tuesday evening, April 5 and 7; and Professor Frankland will resume his course "On the Metallic Elements" on Thursday, April 7. The Friday evening discourse will be given by Dr. John Percy, F.R.S., "On Recent Improvements in the Smelting of Iron and the Manufacture of Steel."

Lord Shaftesbury has made an appeal on behalf of the New Zealand chiefs who have been left in captivity for nearly a year and a half without the means of returning to their own country.

The penny postage system in Switzerland has been increased from 6d. to 7½ the single rate (half an ounce), the scale of progression being proportionately raised. The correspondence with Great Britain is now charged as having a half an ounce as a unit throughout, with the postage advanced by 1d. to 1½d. per half ounce. Newspapers, weighing 3 oz. to 4 oz., and not exceeding 1 oz., 2d.; above 1 oz. and not exceeding 1½ oz., 3d.; above 1½ oz. and not exceeding 2 oz., 4d. Book packets, weighing 1 lb. and upwards, letters for Venezuela must be paid in advance.

THE NEW POSTAL REGULATIONS.—In order to afford the public the means of posting letters and newspapers for most of the principal towns and places in England after the hour of delivery by the Postmaster-General has made arrangements for receiving such letters and newspapers at the following offices, on which the mails are subsequently dispatched on payment with each receipt when otherwise specified) of a fee for each letter of 1d. in addition to the postage, and for each newspaper of ½d. in addition to the postage. Letters and newspapers posted at the first hour named are sent by the first mail named and closed at the latter:—North-Western Railway, Euston-square, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; Paddington, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; Great Northern Railway, King's-cross, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; Great Western Railway, Paddington, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; Midland Railway, St. Pancras, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, Victoria-station, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, Victoria-station, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; South-Eastern Railway, Charing-cross, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; London and South-Western Railway, Waterloo, eight mail, 9 p.m., 9.30 p.m., 10 p.m., 10.30 p.m., 11 p.m.; Great Eastern Railway, Shoreditch, Ipswich night mail, 6.9 p.m. and 8.20 p.m.; Cambridge night mail, 6.9 p.m. and 8.20 p.m.; Colchester night mail, 6.9 p.m. and 8.20 p.m., &c. A special late letter box is erected for the purpose at each of the stations mentioned, and a list of the hours of closing of the mails for the day is published. Letters and newspapers posted at the hours named, but not found in these late letter-boxes either improperly posted (for instance, posted at the wrong railway station), or insufficiently stamped, will not be forwarded by the outgoing mail.

AVENDAE
GULF OF ALSEN
LITTLE BELT
SUNDEWITT
SURF FLOOR BALTIC SEA
Nordborg
Augustenburg
Broacker
Kekset Nor
Sonderburg
Gravenstein
Hostrup
Hoptrup
Hoptrup Wood
Hoptrup Hill
Wester Hill
Wester Wood
Wester Hill Wood
Wester Hill Battery
Wester Hill Redoubt
Wester Hill Ravine
Wester Hill Trench

NEW MUSIC.

REMINISCENCES OF SHAKESPEARE, for the Pianoforte. By C. W. GLOVER.
No. 1. THE TEMPEST.
No. 2. AS YOU LIKE IT.
No. 3. MACBETH.
With highly finished Illustrations to each Fantasia. Price 3s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE AVON QUADRILLE, by F. WALLERSTEIN, on the most favourite Airs indicated in Shakespeare's Plays. With beautifully illuminated titlepage, by PACKER. Piano Solo, 4s.; Septet, Sax[e]. 3s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

FOR THE TWILIGHT HOUR.
NEWEST and MOST POPULAR SONGS.
"The happy little man." Song by W. Randall ... 2s. 6d.
"The wanderer's return." Song by Miss Lindsay ... 2s. 6d.
"Just a little too late." Written by F. C. Burnand.
Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves ... 2s. 6d.
Illustrated and sold by all Musicsellers and Music Warehousemen.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS OF THE CHRISTY MINSTRELS.
Mother would comfort me ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Dreaming of sleeping villas ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Castle Law ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Weeping, sad and lonely ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
Beneath a hedge at the close of day ... Price 2s. 6d.
And a New Edition of the popular Song,
Virginia ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS by POPULAR COMPOSERS.
"Sylvy." Virginia Gabriel ... ... Price 2s. 6d.
"When Spring comes back." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Oh, open my Bar at last." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 2s. 6d.
"The Mermaid." Miss Lindsay ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Apologies of the Heart." F. Wallerstein ... ... 2s. 6d.
"Sweet Spring." Ch. Gounod ... ... 2s. 6d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S OTELLO (Prière and Romance), Transcription for the Piano, of moderate difficulty. Price 4s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S LE MOZE (Air de Ballet) and DON GIOVANNI. Transcriptions for the Piano. Price 4s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MADAME OURY'S QUI LA VOCE. Transcription (Valse) of Bellini's celebrated Air, for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

Third Edition. With Portrait and Autograph. Price 1s.
LIFE OF THEODORE HOOK.
LEADER and CO., 37, 38, 39, and 40, Great Marlborough-street, W.

KUHE'S LA FAVORITA.—A remarkably effective and brilliant piece on the best melodies in Donizetti's popular opera. 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S I PURITANI.—A new and most admirable piece on airs from the splendid opera of Bellini. Price 4s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA SONNAMBULA.—An elegant, pleasing, and most successful piece on Bellini's melodious and ever-popular opera. Price 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE. A beautiful and plaintive melody, treated with remarkable power and originality in a new form. A very favourite piece. 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE. A charming, dashing, and thoroughly effective piece, in the style of the "Tarentelle." 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANDANGO. One of the most successful and successful pieces in the refreshed and theatrically popular company. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR. A very effective and brilliant Valse de Concert, on the celebrated Violetta Valse of Schmidt. Plain Solo, 4s.; Duet, 5s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU. Played by the Composer at his Pianoforte recitals with distinguished success. A charming and effective drawing-room piece. 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. Fifteenth Edition. One of the most popular and sentimental pieces of the season. 3s.—ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop, "One of the most popular and brilliant pieces of the season." Illustrated London News, 4th April, 1863. 4s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song. Sung with great success at the Royal Italian Opera and Concerts. Price 2s. 6d.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

Just published,
MY HEART IVER THINE. New Song. Words and Music by C. M. V. OLIVER. Price 2s. 6d.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square.

FOUR SONGS from the Rev. Ch. KINGSLEY'S WATER BABIES—
1. "Cold and clear." 2. "Will o' the Wisp."
3. "When will the world be young, lad."
4. "Young and old." Price 2s. each.
Price 10s. 6d. each, or in one book, 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-street.

ANNETTE'S SONG, COME MY PRETTY MAIDEN, is now published. Price 3s.
ASHDOWN and PARRY, 18, Hanover-square, W.

OUR BOY, NATIONAL SONG. By F. F. COLLYER and Co., 10, Old Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC, QUARTER PRICE (Surplus Copies). A Catalogue of the newest music and best works in print, Vocal and Instrumental, Forwarded post-free.
NEW SONG by CLARIBEL.—"In Fairy Dress," sung by Miss Rainer; "I dream of thee in the street sights;" sung by Mrs. F. Watson; and by her inimitable "Lucy on the moon," sung by Mr. George Buller, written by H. B. Barr, composed by E. Berthen.
No. 26, High Holborn, London, W.C.

RODRIGUES' DRESSING CASES and TRAVELLING DRESSING BAGS, with silver or plated fittings, best morocco, Mocoroni and Russian leather, of the most durable, tasteful, and writing-table, and a choice selection of elegant Dressing Cases, from 2 to 100 guineas.—RODRIGUES', 42, Regent-street.

RODRIGUES' DESPATCH BOXES and Writing Cases, Writing Desks, Work Boxes, Envelope Cases, Blotting Books, Inkstands, Portfolios, Albums, Bibles, Prayer Books, and Church Services, elegantly mounted with Silver Locks and Hinges.—RODRIGUES', 42, Regent-street.

CARTE DE VISITE PORTRAIT ALBUMS, in splendid Binding, from 5s. to 10 guineas. Albums for the Cabinet Photographs, Stereoscopic Views, Cartes de Visite, &c., at RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly, W. Catalogues post-free.

NO CHARGE MADE FOR STAMPING PAPER and ENVELOPES with Arms, Crest, or Monogram. Copper-Plate Engraved, 4s. per 100; Wedding Cards and Notes, 50 for 2s. 6d. Steel Die, 2s. 6d. Initials, 1s. 6d. Business Cards, 50 for 2s. 6d. Name and Address, 100 for 3s. 6d. Wedding Cards and Notes, 50 for 2s. 6d. Illuminated Heraldic Engraving. Arms painted and engraved with Crest of Address at HENRY RODRIGUES', 42, Piccadilly.

THE ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS, Earlswood, Redhill, Surrey.
TALBOT, by command of Her Majesty, will hold, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS on SATURDAY, the 2nd, MONDAY the 4th, TUESDAY the 5th, and WEDNESDAY the 6th, in the Fortnight of Her Majesty's Concerts, the QUEEN,
H.R.H. the PRINCE OF WALES,
H.R.H. the Princess Mary of Cambridge,
and other distinguished Performers.
Quotidian and Periodical Tickets, Programmes, Guinea for the year, Irish Melodies, Quadrilles, Waltzes, Polkas, Galops, Pianographs, photographs, arietta, sketch, fanfare, war, and paper brown; sea and sea-shore, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh; Ballads, Songs, Duets, Trios, Quartets, Quintets, Sextets, Septets, and Concertinas, Concertos, Symphonies, and Overtures, Operas, Oratorios, Cantatas, Masses, Requiems, Anthems, Chants, Hymns, Psalms, Litanies, Canticles, Glees, Madrigals, Motets, Fugues, Canons, Rounds, Catches, Part-songs, Choruses, Solos, Duets, Trios, Quartets, Quintets, Sextets, Septets, Octets, Nonets, Decets, Undecets, Duodecets, Tridecets, Quattuordecets, Quindecets, Sexdecets, Septendecets, Octodecets, Novemdecets, Vigintets, Concertos, Symphonies,

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 1254.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

GARIBALDI, OUR GUEST.

THAT, come when, how, and wherefore he might to England, Garibaldi would receive an enthusiastic welcome from her whole population, no man who knows our countrymen could entertain a doubt. From the beginning of his public career until now his heroism has been precisely of that type which captivates the heart even more completely than it dazzles the imagination. The romance of perhaps the most strangely romantic life of modern times, fascinating as it is, in his history is inseparably associated with a character the moral majesty of which far transcends it in impressive power. His deeds have filled the world with his renown, but his virtues outshine his deeds. That, when tried by common standards, he has made mistakes, need not be denied, because his very mistakes have borne testimony to the loftiness of his aims, the guilelessness of his character, and the unselfishness of his heroism. No man of the present day has been so dauntless or so successful as a warrior; yet war is not his choice. No man has achieved a wider or more lasting fame; yet fame, for its own sake, has never got the mastery of his motives. Liberty! That was the two objects to which he has religiously consecrated all that he is and all that he has. His faith in them no misfortunes can shake; his love of them absorbs into itself all lesser passions; his patient endurance of suffering in their service is a spur to him than a sacrifice; and, so that he could see the realisation of his yearnings, his prayers, his efforts, and his hopes for a free and united Italy, we believe that he would gladly consent to have the name of Garibaldi blotted out for ever from the pages of history.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW: THE HIGH-STREET OF GUILDFORD ON EASTER SUNDAY.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

This is the man who is now amongst us—not for the first time. Our thoughts naturally retrace the stages of his wonderful career. He shall not stay to chronicle its vicissitudes. Whether as a novitiate in the society of "Young Italy," now thirty years ago, prescribed and hunted over the mountains that cradle his native town, yet sometimes finding a refuge in the very centre of converging dangers, a brief interview with his mother, and then swimming by night across the turbid Var, which divides Italy from France; or as the leader of a small band of Italians, on behalf of the oppressed, against the armament of Monte Video with equal energy and success at sea and ashore, spending his intervals of peace in teaching Italian, French, and mathematics, and spurning the offer of land and cattle made to his legion by General Rivera; or, as the commander of an army of volunteers, proffering his aid in 1848 to Charles Albert of Piedmont, who, in 1849, had condemned him to death; or, as holding Rome for four months against the military power of France, rallying his troops upon the first French army under Oudinot and routing the Neapolitans at Palestrina; or, as an exile in America, working as a journeyman in the candle manufactory of Signor Meucci; or, as a leader of partisan soldiers, carrying on the guerilla of his movements and the vigour of his attacks the immensely superior forces of Marshal Urban in the Napoleonic campaign; or, as the intrepid adventurer, landing at Marsala, wresting Sicily from the Neapolitan Bourbons, crossing over to the mainland and entering Naples, almost alone, but in triumph; or, having presented the Two Sicilies to Victor Emmanuel, retiring to private life on his island home at Caprera, or, finally, as heading the expedition which culminated in disaster at Aspromonte, his singularly active and varied life exhibits the same characteristic features—a majestic simplicity, a fervour of purpose, courage the most daring in danger, energy to push forward the most seemingly hopeless enterprises, virtue to resist the most seductive temptations, patriotism purified from all selfishness of motive, a will to impress itself lovingly upon all others, and, by overwhelming moral weight, to crush apparent impossibilities to dust.

One is hardly able to determine what is the most fitting reception to give to such a man, or the form in which a great nation can suitably express its sense of the value of his character and career. Popular ovations and civic addresses and entertainments, however hearty and well-managed, are, after all, but inadequate and vulgar interpretations of the sentiment which Garibaldi's life has awakened in the nation's heart. Still, even these, we hope, will serve to minister cheering encouragement to the heart of our heroic guest, and to convince him that the English people, besides cherishing a lively admiration for the independence of the unity, independence, and liberty of his beloved country, thoroughly appreciate the personal qualities, both of head and heart, by which he has so largely contributed to bellow the Italian cause as well as to accomplish it. We are not without hope that the earnestness and universality with which it cannot be doubted, the visit of Garibaldi will be welcomed will invest the ultimate object of the people's aspirations with additional importance and dignity in the eyes of Europe, and will give a fresh impulse to that public opinion which in the long run is fatal to any dynastic policy based upon injustice.

In furtherance of these results it is of the last importance that every demonstration of respect for the illustrious visitor should be characterised by something of that perfect disinterestedness which lends such a charm to his own life. Nothing could be more repugnant to the true principles of the occasion than any attempt to make use of Garibaldi's presence and fame, in subservience of either class or party objects. All ranks of society, we trust, will eagerly do honour to the nation's guest—and that in a spirit of unity—but in the middle classes and the working men, will do their part, we may infer from the fact that the Duke of Sutherland was among the first to greet his arrival, and that his Grace will be the stranger's first host during his stay in the metropolis. Garibaldi has himself deprecated any political demonstration, and they would show themselves to be but indifferent friends of his who should make the cause of patriot advocate of a party or class subserve the means of provoking divisions, or should detract from the most worth of England's reception of the hero by futile abuse, in his hearing, of the policy or conduct of foreign Powers.

There is, however, a sense in which Garibaldi's visit may be turned, without risk of mischief, to profitable political account, not by this or that party exclusively, but equally by all. The brightest living exemplar in modern times of patriotism, unselfish devotion, courage, of the purest spirit of practical activity towards purity of character, and of the marvellous results which may be achieved, even in the political world, by faith, love, and self-sacrifice, Garibaldi, it may be anticipated, may, by the mere excitement caused by his visit, attract the study and fire the ambition of not a few of our generous youth, and of some, perhaps, who not many years hence may take a conspicuous part in the government of the country. If, from having their gaze riveted for awhile upon this remarkable man, they should be helped to gain a true appreciation of the immense superiority of moral over material resources, of guileless simplicity of purpose over diplomatic craft, and of character over promising circumstances, England will have derived incalculable advantage from the exercise of her hospitality. In fact, her faith in what may be called the spiritual of political life has sunk low enough to need some revival. Dexterous management, clever expedients, successful compromises, have been for so many years past resorted to, if not called for, in the conduct of public affairs under the peculiar circumstances of this country, that the grander and more generous motives of action have all but slipped out of sight, and in their place the lower and baser have come to be ignored. It is well to be favoured with a timely corrective of this tendency, and especially to have set before all classes a brilliant and striking proof that the maxim of "every man for himself" is not the best conduct to the highest results. For a short interval the English people will be in close and friendly contact with the noblest exemplification of political virtue, and it is impossible to say how far thousands of young hearts may be touched, and how many plans of formation will be indebted to this visit for the infusion into their minds of a healthy and magnanimous tone.

Thus far, the General's reception has been all that could be wished. Enthusiastic, but not to excess; loyal and generous. The address of the municipality was brief and judicious, but hearty; the enthusiasm of the people, though restrained within decorous limits, was intense. Like the good sense and good taste, we will not allow ourselves to doubt, will mark the welcome which the metropolis will extend to the illustrious hero; and the popular demonstration, besides showing how completely the sympathies of the hearts of Englishmen, will also testify to the deep interest which they take in the objects to which he has so nobly consecrated his life—ITALY AND LIBERTY.

GARIBALDI IN ENGLAND.

THE VOYAGE FROM CAPRERA.

Garibaldi left the island on the 21st of March for England, and arrived at Malta on the 26th, leaving it on the 27th, 28th, 29th. During his stay at the Imperial Hotel, Malta, it was quite besieged by eager admirers, who thronged the street in front of all ranks, classes, and creeds being eager to do him honour. Soldiers, sailors, and civilians lined the shore on each side to give a parting greeting to the great soldier now the guest of England. On arriving at Gibraltar at six p.m. on the 29th of March, the steamers of the steamers was barely dropped before a Government steamer steamed alongside, bringing military and naval officers with a letter from Sir William Codrington, the Commander-in-Chief, requesting the General on his safe arrival and giving him a pressing invitation to visit Gibraltar. The General, however, declined, on the short stay of the Spice, which had to sail at eight a.m., so that it was impossible to comply with the kind invitation of Sir William.

HIS ARRIVAL AT SOUTHAMPTON.

Garibaldi arrived at Southampton on Sunday afternoon, in the Peninsular and Oriental steamer Spice, Captain Forbes, the day forbad much demonstration—both bell-ringing and salute-firing being given up in deference to the Sabbath observance—there was no lack of effort to welcome the great chief. Deputations were already in the town from Birmingham, Manchester, Leeds, Sheffield, and other parts of England, with gentlemen accredited to represent the Poles, Hungarians, Greeks, and Italians resident in the metropolis and not altogether unanxiety for the honour of playing host to the General. Mr. Seely, M.P., as stated last week, was the friend with whom it has been arranged for Garibaldi to stay at Stratford Park, Southampton and a fair claim to his company for one night; and a Mr. Richardson, M.P. for Hastings, had communicated with the Mayor to a notion in the General's honour in the City civic council was also at Southampton, and the Mayor, Aldermen, and Town Council, as the patriot, The Mayor had a steamer in readiness to meet the Rigon as soon as it should be signalled off the Southampton waters, but the importunate Mr. Richardson, or his friends, sent one out on Saturday intercepted the Spice, and boarded her, and, in spite of refusal, used their invitation upon the puzzled hero, not without, at one time, a chance of success. Eventually, however, the Mayor's arrangement was adopted—Garibaldi accepted for the night the hospitality of the Mayor.

At the first news of the Rigon being in sight the Mayor's steamer, with a party, including the Duke of Sutherland, Mr. Seely, some Italians, and the Mayor's secretary, left the pier. The steamer he is below the middle height, but his well-set frame and rather broad shoulders give him a rude appearance of natural robustness and activity, from which even his lameness could not much detract. His head, when seen at a moderate distance, does not have rather a sad aspect; but nothing can exceed the animation of their expression when he converses with friends. His face is a winning appearance of good humour about his eyes which is not easy to describe, but which is very pleasant to see. The beard is the for the rest, his portraits are like him in all but this expression and of his face that no photograph can convey. His hair, being an older and much taller man than he really is. At once, when he came into the saloon, he welcomed his friends with the most hearty cordiality, yet with a dignity that kept familiarity at a distance, and which no manner was remembered." With him were his son Menotti (who was wounded with his father at Aspromonte), and Dr. Basile, formerly accompanied the effects of his injury) and Ricciotti (who has been educated in England). Mr. Theodore Martin, the translator of Garibaldi's now his secretary, and, as he is half-playfully termed, his "chaplain"; Mr. Peard, Garibaldi's friend at Caprera; Colonel Elliot and Major, and whilom a fellow-senator of the General, were also with the General.

When the Rigon was in sight she was greeted with enthusiastic crowds of people. Garibaldi at once went up on the paddle-box, and the instant he was seen he was hailed with tremendous cheers, which were continued incessantly till the vessel came alongside. To all these salutations the General replied by cheerily waving the embroidered undress cap which he wore, and by the graceful actions of the Italian colours, and the ladies red jackets. Mr. Brinton, the Mayor, at Southampton, had given orders for a royal salute, and he was proud to welcome him to Southampton, and to feel sure that the welcome which he gave would be echoed by one which would be heartily repeated by not only his fellow-townsmen, but by all the people of England. He said Garibaldi's name was a household word in Great Britain. The formal invitation to the Mayor's house was then given, to which General Garibaldi replied by shaking his Worship warmly by the hand and saying, "I am grateful to you for your kind reception, and thankfully accept your hospitality." The General then left the Rigon and proceeded in an open carriage through the town to the Mayor's residence at East Park. Everywhere he was received in the streets with the most enthusiastic demonstrations, and, notwithstanding that it was Sunday, flags were hoisted in all directions. Before leaving the Rigon, Mr. Seely, M.P., Signor Meucci, and Mr. Peard, a man of his and an old friend, a small scrap of paper, on which he wrote with a pencil in Italian :—"Dear Friends,—I do not desire any political demonstration above all, not to excite any agitation."

PUBLIC RECEPTION OF MONDAY.

On Monday Garibaldi received a public reception from the inhabitants of Southampton. Splendid preparations had been made for the reception of himself and suite at Eastgate Park, the Mayor's residence: but on Sunday night Garibaldi, in accordance with his simple habits, retired very early, and, on the Monday morning, long before the inhabitants of the town had thought of moving, the General was out on a carriage, and in plain clothes, and unobserved, for there was hardly anybody in the streets, made several private visits to the friends who had entertained him on the Sunday evening. He returned to the Mayor's house before nine o'clock, and soon after ten the members of the Corporation, in their carriages and robes, were to have met in state reception, began to arrive.

There was a great deal of enthusiasm when Garibaldi at last emerged at eleven o'clock and stepped into an open carriage and four; accompanied by the Mayor (Mr. Brinton) and his son, Ricciotti Garibaldi. The other members of the Corporation followed in their carriages, the procession being preceded by the band of the 1st Hants Engineers playing the Garibaldi Hymn, and the whole all along the route to the old Bar-gate Townhall were thronged; people were seen at every window, while, at the Bar-gate the people were densely crowded; and from all alike came one continuous cheer, which quite drowned the music of the band, and all the bone-fronts seemed rippled over with the flutter of waving handkerchiefs. Garibaldi, his now more than ever famous cap in hand, which he raised and commanded in Monte Video, seemed quite moved at the warmth of the reception, and must have been overcome by the courteous efforts which he made to acknowledge the salutations he received on all sides.

The old Townhall was, of course, thronged in every part, and was made to hold, on this occasion, about double the number it was built to accommodate. The reception within, while, of course, overwhelming, as, leaning on his stick, he limped slowly along the narrow way kept clear for him by the police on the right of the Mayor, at the head of the hall. When the enthusiasm had in some degree subsided, after repeated cheering, the Mayor, in a very hearty and welcoming speech, received with immense applause, welcomed Garibaldi as "our honoured guest," and read the following address :—

TO GENERAL GARIBALDI.

Sir,—We, the Mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the town of Southampton, in council assembled, avail ourselves of the opportunity afforded by your visit to England to express to you the deep and profound respect we entertain for your public and private character, and our high appreciation of the services you have rendered to the cause of your country's freedom and independence. We desire, also, to offer you a hearty welcome on your arrival in this country, and to express our hope that your residence here may be one to the community to receive you on the shores of Britain. The fame of your great and noble achievements has preceded you here, and the name of Garibaldi is cherished and honoured in the homes of England, and your disinterested patriotism has been the theme of admiration wherever the English language is spoken or read. Your career, indeed, is one of unexampled interest and brilliancy in our own time. We may undertake to say that nowhere in her Majesty's dominions can your noble sentiments, "Italy and Victor Emmanuel," be more highly valued than they are among the people of Southampton. Having learnt that your chief object in visiting this country is to recuperate your health, we trust, sir, sincerely trust that, in the midst of sympathising friends, you will soon be enabled to complete your restoration to health, that, under the auspices of the Divine Power who has preserved you through so many dangers and vicissitudes, you may be long spared to your family and to the cause of the great end to which to his hitherto been devoted.—Given under our common seal, this third day of April, 1864.—By order and direction, Mayor.

General Garibaldi then bent forward, and remained for some minutes bowed in the attitude of a courteous listener, before which he was greeted. He at last spoke a few words with evident deep feeling, but with no strong display of emotion and symptoms of effort to overcome the difficulties of pronunciation that his delivery was remarkably slow, distinct, and clear, and was heard by all present.

It is not the first time that I have received proof of the sympathy of the English nation, and I have received these proofs not only in words, but in deeds (applause). On this, as on other occasions, I am grateful to you for your circumstance of my life, and very particularly in '49, when, without the help of the English people, it would have been impossible for me to have done so did in Southern Italy (Great cheering). The English people provided for us in men, and in arms, and in money—they help all the needs and wants of the human family in the struggle for freedom. What they have done I am thankful for as is worthy the eternal gratitude of the Italian people (Loud cheers). The sympathies of the English people were the cause of the Mayor, I will say to you that I did not sacrifice any part of my life; but I think I did something, and I hope few years I shall be able to do something more for the liberty of its duty of every man. I finish by giving my thanks to you for your generous sympathy, and for your very kind and good welcome to me here to-day.

It is impossible to describe the enthusiasm with which these few remarks were greeted.

The Mayor then, after thanks to the Mayor, the proceedings terminated, amid cheers for Garibaldi's son, cheers for United Italy, for the late Mayor and the present Mayor, for Mr. Seely, and, in short, for all in way connected with the reception or entertainment of the General.

As Garibaldi left the hall there was a rush made to shake hands with him on the steps of the entrance, which he at once good-humouredly responded to by stretching out his hand, and then at once there were so many claimants for this honour that his further progress was completely barred. It was some time before this rather tumultuous ceremony was over, but the General gradually descended and reached his carriages, and proceeded to the pier, where the Sapphire was waiting to convey the guest to the Isle of Wight.

DEPARTURE FOR THE ISLE OF WIGHT.

Immense crowds thronged all parts of the pier and its approaches, and especially the space in front of the gate which Queen Street a private road was taken, and great was the disappointment of numbers of persons who, having paid a shilling, many of whom had come from a long distance. He proceeded to Mr. Seely's house, in conformity with the wishes of the Duke of Sutherland, who resides at Stafford House in Brook. There were hardly a dozen persons waiting for him at the gates of Stratford Park, and the crowds earlier left—apparently Mr. Seely's house, with its stone portico and half ivy-covered walls, looking very picturesque. The entrance to the park is through a lane, bounded by chalk cliffs, and overlooking at the back the broad sea the General loves so well. The gates were left open the greater part of the day, and, without any noisy demonstration or fussy reception, the General was left to enjoy the quiet of the place.

The General has received several illustrious visitors at Brook House.

THE INTENDED VISIT TO LONDON.

It is settled that Garibaldi will enter London on Monday next, and be in the metropolis during the guest of the Duke of Sutherland, at Stafford House.

The following is the official programme of the proceedings on the arrival of Garibaldi in London, as adopted by the City and Working Men's United Reception Committee.

General Garibaldi, who will arrive at the Nine Elms station by the South-Western Railway, will be received on his arrival in the telegraphic office, and will to there received by the City, Italian, and Working Men's Committees, who will conduct to a carriage and four in waiting. He will then be presented with addresses by deputations from the three committees, after which he will enter a carriage provided for the occasion by his Grace the Duke of Sutherland. In the meantime the procession will be formed in the Wandsworth-road, and will march past the carriage containing the Generals, which, with the other carriages containing his friends and the members of the committee, will then fall into the rear. The procession will then take the following route :—From Wandsworth-road into Miles-street, through Bond-street, Oxford-street, Tottenham-court-road, Pentonville, Islington, Kingsland-road, Westminster Bridge-road, Westminster Bridge, Parliament-street, Charing-cross, and Pall-mall to Stafford House, arriving at which Garibaldi will take up his residence during the stay of the Duke of Sutherland. The procession will then pass by the east side of Stafford House into St. James's Park, where it will break up.

All organised bodies taking part in the procession will be expected to be on the ground by half-past two o'clock at the latest, and will be marshalled into line by properly appointed persons in charge of their arrival.

On the arrival of the train containing the Queen, the bell will be stationed on the platform will play the Garibaldian Hymn.

Admission to the station and platform can be obtained only by tickets. Up to Monday morning, however, one ticket will be issued to every subscriber of one guinea to the testimonial and demonstration fund. Tickets may be obtained of the Secretaries of the City Committee, at the London Tavern, or at 30, Bishopsgate-street; or of the Secretary of the Working Man's Committee, 10, Bolt-court, Fleet-street.

Lord Palmerston has declined to accede to a request that a body of volunteers should be allowed to act as a guard of honour to the General, on the ground that "it is essential that the volunteers should not assume a political character, nor become the instruments of political demonstrations."

FREEDOM OF THE CITY.

At a Court of Common Council, on Thursday, it was agreed (on the motion of Mr. Richardson, seconded by Alderman Abbiss) "that the honorary freedom of the City be presented to General Garibaldi in a gold casket of the value of one hundred guineas." There were only three dissentients, and the announcement by the Lord Mayor that the casket was presented was received with loud cheers.

Most considerable cities and towns in the country are candidates for the honour of a visit from Garibaldi: and if he should accept the invitations which have been, or are about to be addressed to him from Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, Edinburgh, Bristol, and other places, he will have a long, and, we suppose, a very trying campaign before him. It is said to be "all but settled" that Garibaldi, after receiving the homage of the Metropolis, will visit, in turn, Manchester, Newcastle, Manchester, and Glasgow.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW ON BLACKHEATH, NEAR GUILDFORD.

We have engraved this week two illustrations of the volunteer review and sham fight, which took place on Blackheath and the hills in one last. In the Sketch which appears on the front page of this Number our Artist has shown the aspect of the High-street of Guildford on the occasion of the review, the sight presented which consists principally of this main street, which runs up the steep hill on the east bank of the River Wey, the houses on either side presenting of an old-fashioned English country town than this snug little capital of rustic Surrey. Its principal streets are accessible, and cleanly place, with an important corn-market and some manufacturing industry, but it has many picturesque features—the old ruined castle overlooking from Guildhall, an almshouse or hospital, with some curious painted windows; and more than one church of considerable antiquity and interest which are quite worth the trouble of inspecting them. The High-street itself, with its wide and well-paved footways, its projecting gables, and long latticed windows, has a very characteristic appearance. The Guildhall, which is of brick, is time, and containing, besides a fanciefully carved mantelpiece and other curiosities, the portraits of that King and his successor by Sir Peter Lely, is distinguished outside by its projecting clock-case, the old-fashioned appendage of this framework. Such is the town of Guildford, which from Good Friday to Easter Monday this year was undergoing a change which was quite beyond its capacity of accommodating them. Most of the rifle corps, indeed, marched in on the Thursday, and marched at once to Blackheath, without entering the town; but there were many detachments which arrived from the South London and Brighton, which arrived at Guildford on the Saturday afternoon. Many companies—some from Guildford and some on the Sunday morning, when every loyal and patriotic volunteer made a point of going to church. In the evening there was a regular Church parade and a special service at St. Mary's Church, at which Mr. Hilcott, one of the Chaplains to the camp at Aldershott, officiated on this occasion.

Our second Illustration is from a sketch taken during the military evolutions of Easter Monday. The manœuvres took place on undulating ground, adjoining Putney Heath, about four miles to the south-east of Kingston, which, approached from the latter town by a long and narrow lanes, through which many thousands of spectators, in addition to 18,000 volunteers—some from Guildford and some from the Chiltwith station of the South-Eastern Railway—had assembled in the course of the forenoon. We have given the proceedings of that day. It need only be mentioned here that the incident chosen by our Artist is the fight of the London Rifle Brigade, nine companies strong, which formed part of the attacking division, under Major-General Rumley, in the sham fight. The defending party, under Major-General Lindsell, had established on their right wing, and were being slowly driven in towards the Grand Stand at the race-course, when the attacking force, which included Colonel Macdonald was in command of the brigade which is most conspicuous in our Engraving.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

The ball at the Tuileries on Tuesday night was not numerously attended. The night was generally supposed to be the Archbishop, the Bishop of Oxford, the Duchess of Somerset, Lord H. Lennox, Mr. E. Fitzgerald, and the Pope Hennessy, who were present at the conference with the English Ambassador, and the resignation of Mr. Stansfield, was the guest of the Imperial couple.

The Constitutional contradicts a statement made by some of the Paris journals that the Prince Imperial had received promotion in the rank of Sergeant. The Prince, it states, is still Corporal in the 1st Regiment of Grenadiers of the Guard.

Sir Moses Montefiore, who has just returned from Morocco, had the honour of an audience yesterday week with the Emperor, who very graciously received him on the morning of the day of his visit of Morocco in compliance with the petition which Sir Moses had personally addressed to his Majesty.

"We learn," says the Journal du Havre, "that the Council of State, at its last sitting, decided that the question of the maritime annexation of the citadel of Havre into a maritime establishment. A grant of eight millions will be appropriated to carry out the work.

Vice-Admiral Rosel-Willaumez, Maritime Prefect at Toulon, will, it is said, be appointed to the command in chief of the Mediterranean squadron, in the room of the late Admiral Penaud.

The treasure of the late Empress Carlotta of Mexico in favour of the British Charitable Fund amounted to over 18,000*l.* (£720), after all expenses have been paid.

A part of the gallery of the Louvre, extending along the quay to the west of the Pavillon Lesdiguieres, is about to be pulled down, in order to be rebuilt according to the plans drawn up by the late Duc de Fleur and the adjacent part of the Tuileries.

We have received accounts of the execution of the Archduke Maximilian. One is that the obstacles in the way of his assuming the Mexican throne have been overcome, and that he will shortly officially take arises, and that the departure of his Imperial Highness is again about.

PORTUGAL.

A reported intention of the King to ask the Cortes to pass a bill to enable him to travel in France and Italy has caused considerable excitement in Lisbon.

The Cortes have been prorogued until the 14th of May.

The Ministerial bill for the abolition of the tobacco contract has been passed by the deputies with a majority of seventy-three. Great opposition, however, is expected in the Upper House.

The railway to Oporto is ready, and only waits the Government inspection before being opened to the public.

The accounts from the Cape Verde Islands describe the population as being decimated by famine. Large subscriptions have been made in Lisbon.

ITALY.

On Monday morning the Pope went to the Church of Santa Maria Sopra Minerva, where he assisted in the religious ceremonies performed at the feast of the Annunciation. His health is reported by a telegram from his own capital to be "excellent," and it is added that his Holiness was enthusiastically received by the people.

A Pontifical rescript had been published authorising a loan of forty millions lire to defray the expenses of the public administration.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

Fighting, chiefly with artillery, is going on before Duppel. The bombardment, which was begun on Saturday afternoon, was continued throughout Sunday. On Saturday night the outposts on the right of the Danish position were attacked several times, but successfully without effect. There was also some fighting on Sunday afternoon. As yet, however, the works of Duppel have received no injury. The Prussian batteries are supposed to be now armed before Duppel. According to the Prussian account, the Danes did not discover the working of the batteries on Saturday night, and, consequently, the work was done without any opposition. On the night of the 5th, we are informed by a telegram from the Prussian head-quarters, one of the regiments drove in the Danish outposts and took up a position considerably in advance of the main redoubt. The Prussian telegram speaks of the capture of many Danes, with, of course, inconsiderable loss on the part of the assailants. A telegram from Copenhagen on the 6th says that the Danish position is as in the following effect:—"Last night the enemy drove back our outposts on the right wing. The latter occupied a retrenchment. At daybreak our troops reoccupied their former position. During the night the enemy threw up a battery of seven guns. Our loss is trifling."

A telegram from Ulkebøl states that the Prussians had bombarded Kackeburg without having given any preliminary warning; that "they unexpectedly, were discovered, and 1500 shells had been thrown into the town, which is now deserted. Not a single house has been burnt. The bombardment, which suddenly ceased on the morning of the 4th, was recommenced during the day; but no result is reported.

Various reasons have been given for the retirement of the Austrians from before Fredericia; and there is a persistent report that it was on account of a conspiracy against the Emperor Francis Joseph, to cause to the enemy. Count Rechberg, the Austrian Premier, took his guns on Saturday last, succeeded in the most extraordinary in London as follows:—"In good enough to deny the absurd rumour that a military plot had been discovered in the Austrian army in Holland. The spirit of these troops is excellent, and there is not a single case either of treason or misbehaviour to be found. The reports, however, persist in the statement.

The Austrian frigate and a gun-boat have sailed for the Baltic.

A telegram from Copenhagen announces that M. de Quaade and A. Steiger will leave for London to attend as Plenipotentiaries for Denmark at the conference in London. Meantime, the London Estates have protested against any decision of the Powers impairing the rights of the Crown.

The Norwegian Storthing has been closed. The King says that the union will always be maintained, and that he will be prepared to render assistance to Denmark against overpowering force.

AMERICA.

The Australasian, which arrived at Queenstown last Saturday, brings New York advices to the 23rd ult.

General Lee is said to have broken up his encampment on the Rapidan and to be moving on the Shenandoah Valley, and an early battle by the Army of the Potomac is looked for in consequence.

General Stuart was concentrating his cavalry at Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville previous to the movement. The Confederate operations in Virginia were delayed by a terrific snowstorm.

The movements of General Banks in Louisiana are rendered it doubtful whether he intended to enter Kentucky or to join Lee: the latter was considered most probable.

Fredericksburg and Port Hudson had left Vicksburg for Red River.

The steamer Norman has been destroyed in Suwannee river.

Hundreds of deserters from the Confederate army, the Nevada, Colorado, and Nebraska, allowing them to form State constitutions and become States, forthwith.

The negro colonists who left the United States for Hayti have returned, unable to get employment.

The decree of the United States District Court in the case of the steam ram Alabama, and the Confederate steamer Florida, recommends that Lieutenant Donovan, who shot Mr. Grey, should be tried by court-martial. The question of the right of compensation to the widow and to the owners of the vessel have been reserved.

THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

On the day after the departure of the last month's steamer, his Excellency Sir Philip Wodehouse left Government House, with their respective suites, left Simon's Bay for the frontier in her Majesty's ship Narcissus, and was received at Port Elizabeth with enthusiastic receptions. At Graham's Town their reception was of a still grander character. At Uitenhage, Colesberg, and Cradock the public dinners were given to his Excellency, and at them the Governor explained what was his policy on the eastern province, and in introducing the holding of occasional Parliaments to meet what was the policy he proposed to follow.

Sir Percy Douglas, Commander of the Forces, was in Kaffraria, on a tour of inspection of the military posts on the frontier.

All was quiet on the Basuto and the Griqua-Town borders.

Throughout the colony the country was in splendid condition, the harvest had been abundant, and the prospects generally fair.

Surveys for a direct line of railway to Graham's Town were being actively carried on, and the Government were about to take steps for settling the needful plans to Parliament.

There had been no disturbance of peace in the Transvaal Republic. In a battle at Crocodile River forty burghers are said to have been killed. The native tribes were quiet, and there is again in power.

Her Majesty's ship Rapid had arrived at Natal with the pleasant news of the safety of Dr. Livingstone and his party. She received a letter in the Lake Nyassa and the Governor of Natal, Mr. Scott, dated Murchison Falls, Dec. 21, and stated that Dr. Livingstone had some hard fare, but was progressing most favourably. He had left of the Murchison Falls in November, and they intended to come down in river as much as possible. Dr. Livingstone and his party were then down. Dr. Livingstone and the Bishop and party were well in health. The mission party were well received in the country, as it appeared an unsuitable field, and would return to England by the Cape. The Bishop and party of his clergymen, however, were to visit the Governor of Mozambique.

NEW ZEALAND.

The hopes that the war in New Zealand was at an end are not realised, for we learn that the natives still held out and were concentrated at Orakau. Brigadier-General Cameron, commanding the General Cameron's forces, the General intending to compel their surrender by starvation.

The Brazilian Government has accepted the mediation of Portugal in its dispute with England.

The steamship H.M.S. Orlando has arrived at Gibraltar after a remarkably rapid passage from New York.

Prince Michael Poniatowski, elder brother of Prince Joseph Poniatowski, member of the Provisional Government in Italy. He holds and been failing for some years.

Latest dates from Rio de Janeiro state that the Brazilian Government has accepted the mediation of Portugal in the dispute between England and Brazil.

The Canadian Ministry has resigned. Mr. A. J. Pianson Provincial Secretary, has been called upon by the Governor to form a new Ministry.

From Dresden a rumour comes that the Austrian Government is about at once to impose a state of siege on the Venetian provinces, and to take precautionary measures in the Southern Tyrol.

The Shakspeare Tercentenary Festival Committee at Stratford-on-Avon have, it seems, their difficulties as well as their London brethren. They announce that "Mr. Fechter has broken faith with them by declining to go the play of 'Hamlet' upon the stage on the 9th inst., and to take the part of Hamlet." At this late period the committee think that it is totally impracticable to get any tragedy upon the stage as forming part of the Tercentenary Festival, and they have, therefore, determined to have a "Grand Ball and Soirée." They intend to open the Shakspeare Hall "on the 23rd inst., "without any fault of our own; and are driven to the necessity of offering to those who have already paid for tickets for the play" a return of their money or an exchange of tickets for other entertainments."

LATEST NEWS FROM ABROAD.

The following telegrams have been received through Mr. Reuter's office :—

AMERICA.—New York, March 23 (Evening).—Advices from Charleston to the 19th inst. state that the Confederates have mounted six rifled guns in casemates on Fort Sumter, bearing on the channel, and they have completed another battery on the harbours. The Raleigh Progress asserts that General Beauregard has been appointed to the command of the army of the South West. Gainesville, in Mid land proceeds General Beauregard at Charleston.

March 24, 11 a.m.—Information has reached that the Confederates are preparing for a combined invasion of Kentucky from various points.

COUNTRY NEWS.

The first turf of the Ennistymon Railway, North Devon, was turned by the Duchess of Leinster on Thursday week.

The Apothecaries' Hall in Dublin has been destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at 10,000*l.*

At the West Riding Assizes, held at Pontefract on Monday, the magistrates passed a resolution in favour of Wakefield being selected as the new assize town in the district.

The power of the penny is well illustrated in the accounts of the Arrowhead fortune. The four-year sinking March 31, their returns were nearly £36,000, and their profits above £12,000.

Mrs. Luke has consented to allow the local authorities at Barnsley the estate to be styled the Locke Park; that lady has promised to invest £1000 in order that the interest of that sum may be employed in maintaining the park for public use.

Mr. Alderman Neild, of Manchester, died suddenly in a committee-room in the Manchester Townhall on Monday morning. He was in his seventy-fourth year. The unexpected gentleman was, we believe, a widow, mainly instrumental in obtaining a charter of incorporation for Manchester.

The Irish papers continue to report an extensive emigration from Ireland to the United States. In one week lately March 19, there left Sligo on Saturday, that number including forty from Lord Palmerston's estates, where emigration is encouraged by his landlords.

The South Yorkshire collieries have ceased work, through the combined operation of a "strike" and a "lockout." Nearly 4000 workmen are out; only one-fifth of the pits appear to be under work. Efforts are being made to settle the difference between masters and men, but hitherto unsuccessfully. The men demand 10 per cent "with the old rate of wages."

The working-men's club movement progresses rapidly and satisfactorily. Another has been established at the outset, at Bilston, on Thursday week. Mr. Wegwelin, M.P., and Mr. Foley, M.P., together with the Bishop of Lichfield, the county and a large number of gentlemen, were also present. The indefatigable secretary to the union, the Rev. Mr. Solly, explained the objects of the movement, and remarked that a chapel for the formation of a club.

A committee has been organised in Penzance with the object of raising a monument to the memory of the celebrated chemist, Sir Humphry Davy. At a meeting held on Wednesday it was announced that two ladies were willing to subscribe £1000, provided the monument take the form of a statue. Sir Humphry Davy was born in Penzance, and a statue of him has been already erected in the centre of the town.

The statue erected to the late Prince Consort in the University Museum, Oxford, was uncovered on Wednesday in the presence of the Vice-Chancellor, Professors Acland and Procter, Mr. Walker, the architect, and others. The statue is the work of Mr. Woolner, and represents the Prince in standing attitude, with the sceptre in his right hand, and resting over the left shoulder, while the left hand rests upon the hip. The statue was executed in Sicilian marble, and cost £1000.

We understand that the case of the Pampero will not now go to jury trial, as the counsel for the defence has made for his clients to believe that by the arrangement the owners have consented to a verdict being entered for Queen, forfeiting the vessel, and that one count of the indictment, to be selected by the prosecutor, they making such explanatory statement on the subject as they may think fit. Should this be done, it is not likely that the owner can be punished by more than a fine, and in the event of the fine being sent angry with the consent of the Crown; and that sanctions are to be paid in the interest of the Queen's Proctor.

The investiture of a Knight Companion and of the Registrar of the Order of the Bath took place last week in the Jerusalem Chamber, Deans Yard, in presence of the Duke of Cambridge, the Earl Grand Master, and the officers of the Order. Lord Ashburnham having produced the letter authorising the Chapter to be held, the Very Reverend the Dean of St. Patrick, Lord Talbot de Malahide, was invested with the insignia of the office of Registrar of the order; and Lord Lurgan was then introduced, received the honour of knighthood, and was invested with the badge and badge, as a Knight Companion of the same most illustrious order. The new Knight, Sir Richard Pennefather, is Commander-in-Chief in India, and Major-General in the Queen's service, and is a native of Ireland, the son of Sir William Beauvoisin, Lord Lurgan's ancestor, was knighted in Dublin Castle by Queen Elizabeth, and was created a Baronet by James I., when Sir Arthur Chichester was Lord Deputy of Ireland. Sir Richard Pennefather, who was also knighted by Lord Ashburnham, was also invested with the insignia of the Order.

The "April meetings" at Dublin began on Monday in the Rotunda, which was crowded to excess. These meetings correspondent to the winter may at this season pass from grave to gay in a moment. In the evening a rare con-of-the-wisp appeared. Thousands assembled in the square in the Round-room, when it is crowded with very curious people, who regard with a laughing indifference the fact that Mr. Gregory Nugent is walking with a leading member of whom he makes very free with, and who, in return, makes very free with him. Mr. Gregory Nugent, whose costume must be seen to be appreciated, was greeted by the numerous gallery orators, while from the opposite side streams from another crowd discussing the merits of the Lord Lieutenant's administration. In the centre of the room, the centre around which all these things move being a charitable institution, Mr. Gregory Nugent was conducting himself admirably by the popular gentleman theatricals, in which the "stars" were Captain Editor, Colonel Strong, and Mr. Gregory Nugent. Mr. Gregory Nugent, by the way, and which always crowded the Theatre Royal, yet the Easter holiday brought no benefit for all were at the Rotunda. The secretaries had to be up, and it was shown his usual judgment in suiting the supply to the demand by bringing out the "Rivals" and "Sheridan" on the night of the 23rd, the anniversary night. That is the night on which the whole town is always filled to overflow from the country, when the shops display all their finery, when great placards are carried along the streets announcing that in the face at every turn, when bills are distributed in millions, and when the Church and the World seem to be striving with one another which can make the most noise.

LAW.—There was a maiden Sessions at Berwick yesterday week, and the Sheriff had the pleasing duty of presenting the Recorder with a handsome piece of plate.

A homicidal lunatic was arrested at Liverpool. Mr. W. P. Rowe, a surgeon, some time ago corresponded with a Miss Ellis, who became annoyed and insulted him. On Saturday evening last Mr. Rowe, with an Irish friend named Scott, called upon Mr. Rowe, demanded the surrender of some letters and a portrait. Mr. Rowe refused, and Miss Ellis, producing a pistol, and, saying, "This is the way we do things in Ireland," began, with the assistance of Brie, who is a cousin of Miss Ellis, to apply the pistol to Mr. Rowe's ear. The result was that Mr. Rowe was found lying insensible, with his wife by his side, and the latter was arrested, and will be tried, and the former was taken to the hospital, and, of course, made out the pockets for the desired letters. They were taken to the police-station.

A verdict for £1000 damages has been given against the Rev. Richard Reformatory, was made by one of the inmates there on Saturday. A lad, named Bramwell Bramwell, was punished by Mr. Sturmey, Mrs. Sturmey, and another inmate-in-law were sitting, and, having fastened the door, he struck at them with a knife he had in his hand. One of them fainted away, and another defended herself as well as she could, but was severely wounded before rescue could come. Verdict for the plaintiff, subject to reduction.

The Quarter Sessions for Surrey were held at Lewes on Thursday, when the Chairman, Mr. Hall, addressed the jury in a charge to the prisoner charged with committing a breach of the peace by the green light and was charged at the Middlesex Sessions with the same offence, but was acquitted. The other prisoners were also discharged on their own recognisances to keep the peace.

The Yorkshire Assizes commenced on Tuesday. One hundred and thirty-five prisoners have been tried at them, and ten of these found guilty of having committed robberies with violence have each been sentenced to twelve lashes in addition to various terms of imprisonment.

The execution of Thomas Watkins for the murder of his wife at Benner, near Leominster, on the 14th of January last, took place on Tuesday morning in front of the Hereford County Gaol.

The British war-steamer Styx has returned to New York from a cruise in search of the Sir Charles Napier. She spoke on the 14th of the brig Bernard, who reported having passed on the 12th (lat. 45, long. 40) a vessel answering to the description of the Italian frigate, running before a north-west gale and that she showed no signals of distress, although a north-west gale was blowing at the time.

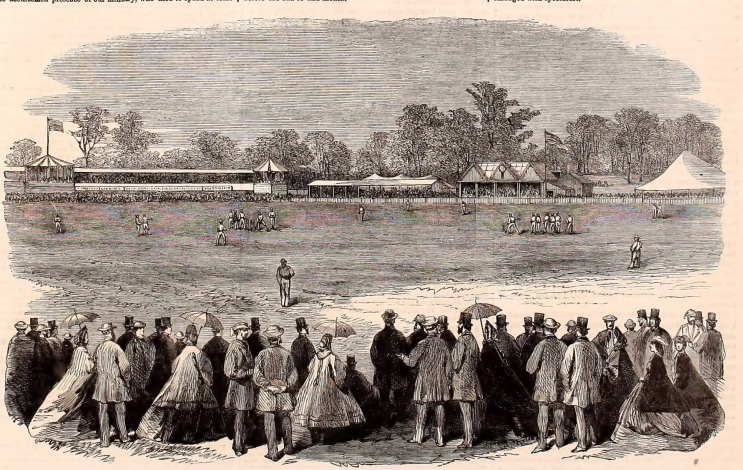
DESTRUCTION OF THE FORTIFICATIONS OF THE IONIAN ISLANDS.

THE ESCARP OF THE KEEP OF VIDO AFTER THE EXPLOSION ON MARCH 11.

FORT NEUF, IN THE HARBOUR OF CORFU.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

DESTRUCTION OF THE FORTIFICATIONS OF CORFU.

THE conduct of her Majesty's Government in demolishing the fortifications of Corfu before handing over the Ionian Islands to Greece has lately been made a subject of Parliamentary debate. We have therefore selected, from a number of sketches which were sent us by different correspondents at Corfu, those engraved on one page of our Journal this week. The first of them represents the appearance of a part of the Escarp of the Keep of Vido, after the explosion of three tons of gunpowder there, on the afternoon of March 11, when the massive stone walls were, in one moment, reduced to a heap of ruins. A similar operation, with 4800 lb. of powder, took place at Fort Abraham, on the 9th. Of Fort Neuf, which is the subject of our second Illustration, only the interior works are to be destroyed. The fortifications of Point Perpetua, however, which communicate with the Bell Tower of Fort Neuf by subterranean passages, are to be completely removed, and a public road is to be made over the ground on which they stand leading to the town of Corfu. Fort Neuf and Point Perpetua are situated on the north or north-west side of the harbour of Corfu. All the works on Point Perpetua were constructed by the English Government; but Fort Neuf, except the Bell Tower, is of Venetian architecture, and this part will be preserved. The whole fortress, taking Fort Neuf and Point Perpetua as one for military purposes, was of enormous strength on every side, with a number of batteries, all closely masked, so that not a gun was visible from outside. The batteries are now entirely dismantled. On the other hand, the Citadel of Corfu, properly so called, which is on the south side of the harbour, will not be materially altered, though, of course, the guns will be removed. It was chiefly built by the Venetians. There is a drawbridge by which it might be cut off from the town; so that the ancient foreign rulers of Corfu, if threatened by an insurrection of the people, could take refuge in this stronghold. On the summit of the citadel are a lighthouse and a signal-station. The building is founded upon a solid rock. During the last three weeks not only have the fortifications of Corfu been partially demolished, but hundreds of large guns and immense quantities of stores have been shipped for removal, and the English troops have begun to take their departure. The 6th Regiment, numbering 800 rank and file, has gone to the West Indies. There can be no doubt that the inhabitants of Corfu will sadly miss the accustomed presence of our military, who used to spend at least £200,000 a year in that town, besides what might be got from an occasional visit of the Mediterranean fleet. But they have chosen annexation to the Greek kingdom, and their wish is to be fulfilled before the end of this month.



MISS BATEMAN AS LEAH, AT THE ADELPHI THEATRE.

MISS BATEMAN, AS LEAH.

WE have engraved the Portrait of Miss Bateman, in her well-known character of Leah, which has during the past winter been performed more than a hundred and fifty times, at the Adelphi Theatre. Many thousands of the London playgoers have been enchanted with the power and grace of this touching dramatic representation, the effect of which can be compared to nothing of its kind upon the stage of late years, except the noblest efforts of Adelaide Ristori. Miss Kate Josephine Bateman was born at Baltimore in 1842. She was a precocious child, one of "the Bateman family," when she was exhibited in this country eleven or twelve years ago. She has since, we believe, spent much time in private study, and her reappearance on the stage took place in 1859. She then successively performed, in the principal American theatres, the parts of Evangeline, founded on Longfellow's poem of that name; Geraldine, in a play written for her by Mrs. Bateman, her mother; Julia, in Sheridan Knowles's play of "The Hunchback;" Pauline, in "The Lady of Lyons;" and Shakespeare's Juliet and Lady Macbeth. Since she arrived in England last autumn she has played no other part than Leah.

THE CRICKET-MATCH AT MELBOURNE BETWEEN THE ALL-ENGLAND ELEVEN AND TWENTY-TWO OF VICTORIA.

OUR Engraving (from a photograph by Messrs. Davies and Co., of Bourke-street, Melbourne) represents the cricket-match played on New-Year's Day and three following days, upon the ground of the Melbourne Cricket Club, between the All-England Eleven and a double number of the best cricket-players of Victoria province. We have already reported this affair, which resulted in a drawn match, the time having expired at six o'clock on the fourth day with six of the All-England wickets in their second innings yet to go down. But, since the All-England men had already scored 281 runs, while the Victoria men, who had completed both their innings, numbered only 280, there could be no doubt that the All-England would have come off the winners by a large majority if the game had been regularly finished. The weather was very pleasant; the ground was in perfect condition for playing; and the bright, green turf, surrounded with forest trees, made it an agreeable place of resort. The space within the chain fence, and the grand stand, which held three thousand persons, were thronged with spectators.

CRICKET-MATCH AT MELBOURNE BETWEEN THE ALL-ENGLAND ELEVEN AND TWENTY-TWO OF VICTORIA.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 16.

SUNDAY, April 10.—Second Sunday after Easter. Great victory of the Poles over the Russians at Siddless, 1831. The great Chartist demonstration in London, 1848.

MONDAY, 11.—Coronation of William and Mary, 1689. The general peace of Utrecht between France and Great Britain and her allies signed, 1713.

TUESDAY, 12.—Battle of Almanza; the French and Spanish, under James, Duke of Berwick (illegitimate son of James II.), defeat the English and allies; under the Earl of Galway, 1707. Revolution Service Bastion here, 1317. Moon's first quarter, 6h. 39m. a.m.

WEDNESDAY, 13.—Easter Term begins. Dr. Johnson's Dictionary appears, 1755.

THURSDAY, 14.—Victory of the Duke of Cumberland over Prince Charles Edward at Culloden and end of the Scottish Insurrection, 1746.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 16, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.	H. M.
1 30	2 0	2 30	3 0	3 30	4 0	4 30

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE KEW OBSERVATORY OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION.
Lat. 51° 28′ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 30″ W.; Height above Sea, 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.		WIND.		RAIN in 24 hours ending 10 A.M.
	Barometer Reduced to 32° Fah.	Dew Point.	Relative Humidity.	Ozone. Scale of 0 to 6.	Shade Temperature of Air.	Temperature of Evaporation.	General Direction.	Horizontal Movement in Miles.
	Inches.	°	°	0-6	°	°		Miles	Inches
30	29·666	39·9	84·9	·84	8	47·2	SW. WNW.	330	·240
31	29·722	40·1	87·1	·84	8	47·9	WNW. NW.	330	·240
1	29·873	41·4	79·9	·57	6	49·0	SW. W.	407	·030
2	29·799	39·3	76·7	·67	6	49·0	WSW. W.	358	·026
3	·000	·000	·00	·00	0	49·8	·000	·000	·000
4	29·913	·00	·00	·00	0	49·8	·000	·000	·000
5	29·949	39·1	85·0	·90	10	50·3	·077	ESE. S.	199	·267

* Rain and Snow.

The following are the readings of the meteorological instruments for the above days, to order, at 9 A.M. and 9 P.M.:—

Barometer (in Inches) corrected	29·554	29·815	29·696	29·876	29·876	29·867	30·044
Temperature of Air ...	39·0°	42·0°	47·0°	49·0°	49·0°	47·0°	46·0°
Temperature of Evaporation ...	38·0°	40·0°	39·0°	38·0°	44·0°	44·0°	44·0°
Direction of Wind ...	SW.	WSW.	W.	WNW.	NW.	NW.	WNW.

TO CONTINENTAL SUBSCRIBERS.—Mr. Ludwig Denicke, Leipsic, has been appointed our special agent for the Continental Sale or Subscription at Leipsic—including all the Double Numbers—One Year, 8 Thalers 20 Sgr.; Half-year, 4 Thalers 10 Sgr.; per Quarter, 2 Thalers 5 Sgr.

GARIBALDI IN ENGLAND.—Several Engravings, from Sketches by our own Artists, of the Welcome given to General Garibaldi at Southampton are of necessity deferred until our next Number, on account of the delay in the arrival of the Ripon.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON: SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1864.

The recent changes in the Ministry, with an exception, seem to call rather for note than for comment. The health of the Duke of Newcastle had long been uncertain, and his retirement from office occasioned, therefore, no surprise. In his resignation the Duke invariably gave the country his best services, and, though not by temperament a very ardent reformer, his good sense and unostentatiousness always made him incline to progress. He was, therefore, a useful public servant, and public wishes will follow him into his seclusion from business. Mr. Cardwell, his successor in the Colonial Office, is a man of somewhat the same type of mind, but perhaps a little more inclined to believe in the value of routine. He is a worker; but, as there are many questions of great importance which are likely to "crop up" very soon, it is possible that a Minister of somewhat more energy and originality may be needed for the great department which has been confided to the member for Oxford city. There is one advantage in his appointment—namely, his being a member of the House of Commons, for too many of the Ministers are in the House of Lords, and have been fairly pointed out as an anomaly that both the heads of the Army and of the Navy departments are out of the assembly which discusses the Estimates. Lord Clarendon's appointment to the Chancellorship of the Duchy of Lancaster is perfectly unobjectionable, and perhaps not quite so useless as some of our contemporaries have alleged; for, although it is true that his office is not one of much importance, the holder is a Minister of the Crown. Mr. Clarendon, who was in the Russian Embassy, who has been our Spanish Ambassador, and who was Foreign Secretary for several years, must be able to give valuable assistance when foreign affairs are under discussion. It is hardly to be said that Lord Palmerston's Government is weakened or strengthened by the changes consequent upon the failing health of the Duke of Newcastle.

But the resignation of Mr. Stansfeld is a matter of another kind. It may be considered as a prudential step, and one which could hardly have been avoided; and, we may remember, though with no ill-nature, that the present Premier's avital disagreeable experience of the effect of making an appointment against which there was much to be said, and of adhering to it when much had been said. The cases of Lord Clarendon and of Mr. Stansfeld are, it may be said, that Lord Palmerston's Government is weakened or strengthened by the changes consequent upon the failing health of the Duke of Newcastle.

But the resignation of Mr. Stansfeld is a matter of another kind. It may be considered as a prudential step, and one which could hardly have been avoided; and, we may remember, though with no ill-nature, that the present Premier's avital disagreeable experience of the effect of making an appointment against which there was much to be said, and of adhering to it when much had been said. The cases of Lord Clarendon and of Mr. Stansfeld are, it may be said, that Lord and the Government took credit, not unfairly, for selecting from the ultra-Liberal ranks a gentleman against whom nothing could be brought forward, and who at once showed himself an energetic and practical man of business. The cause belli was discovered after the appointment had been made. But English folk are very sensitive upon certain points, and it is well that they are so, although this sensitiveness works occasional injustice. A large number of persons say, and a good many among them think, that the continuance of Mr. Stansfeld in office would be contrary to "good taste," the heaviest social condemnation known in our time. We sweep away at once all the pretended indignation and the small suspicion that have joined to swell the cry against Mr. Stansfeld. Everybody knows that he is an English gentleman of spirit and honour, and it will be a bad day for England when a public man making a public statement is not absolutely believed. There is not a person in the House of Commons or out of it who would dare to say that he sincerely believes that Mr. Stansfeld has been guilty of any kind of intimidation plots, or other plots whatever. We did not need the disclaimer of a Lord of the Admiralty of England to assure us of that—of the England whose tradition it is to so thoroughly hate and detest the sanguinary Italian system, that at a time when the death of Napoleon I. would have been the greatest boon to ourselves and to the world, the English Minister of the day sent over to France information of a plot against Bonaparte's life—against the life of the man who, in the eyes of the whole race, was tried to murder the Duke of Wellington. But while Mr. Stansfeld was known to be about as much mixed up in any conspiracy as the Earl of Derby or the Archbishop of Canterbury, there was a strong feeling against him as he claimed as friend, and was proud of the friendship of, another person, whose whole life is plot—and we are not denying Mazzini's high qualities, or the statesmanship which he showed in Italian affairs—but not in accordance with the high courtesy that should exist between our Government and that of France, that a gentleman was adhered to such a friendship should form part of her Majesty's Administration. The feeling against him was made for party purposes; and party malevolence having incessantly reiterated the old charge and rung the changes upon the old accusations against Mazzini, the combination of honest and malicious enough to shake the Ministry. Therefore, Lord Palmerston, having chivalrously supported his colleague while he had been single in the storm, exercises his usual discretion, and permits him to retire before a storm that he has brewed; a proceeding that was so furiously menaced as to make the step an exceedingly wise one, and disappointing to the enemies of Lord Clarendon.

While yielding to none in strength of conviction that everything should be done to preserve the best understanding with an ally whose antecedents it is well to forget in presence of strong good faith, we do not think that the public has the belief that he understands this country better than any French ruler ever did before, and therefore desires to be on the best terms with us, it may not be amiss to point out that it must be in very exceptional circumstances that the foreign organs of foreign Potentates can be allowed any weight in our domestic matters. We do not believe that the Emperor of the French had, personally, any more doubt as to the exact state of the case than the Earl of Derby or Lord Lord Palmerston had. But the French, as a rule, know little of us, and it is not expedient that they should think their Sovereign insulted. The retirement of Mr. Stansfeld involves not the slightest question of Reform which may have not profited much by the lesson. Unless it is thoroughly learned we, speaking impartially, may counsel the gentlemen to the Speaker's left to abandon all hope of office. Their most brilliant leader has committed himself to the cry of "No Reform" and the Liberals to the country with the cry of "No foreign dictation," the new Parliament will, in the most handsome manner, give Mr. Disraeli a seven years' lease of the Parliamentary premises which he at present adorns.

The decision of the House of Lords on the Alexandra appeal case was given on Wednesday. The question at issue was whether the Queen of Spain was entitled to receive such portion of the Civil List as Crown a right of appeal in the case. The Lord Chancellor first gave judgment. He reviewed the circumstances of the Queen's abdication, and came to the conclusion that, under the 25th section of that Act, there was no authority to make such rules as the Court of the Exchequer had made, and that the rules were of a respondent that even if those rules were authorised by the statute they were not justified during the suit. He did not quite agree with that view, but he thought it was the duty of the Court to inquire into and examine the considerations of such important interests. The noble and learned Lord concluded by moving that the decree of the Court of Exchequer be reversed. Lords Chelmsford, Kingsdown, and St. Leonards took the same view. On the contrary, Lords Cranworth (late Lord Chancellor) and Wensleydale thought that the rules were valid. The majority being against the Crown, the appeal was dismissed with costs.

A Seville letter gives the subjoined account of the betrothal of the Count de Paris to his cousin, daughter of the Duke de Montpensier:—"The Count of Santa Teresa, Don Juan Bautista Topete, having succeeded for the occasion, the grand drawing-room and adjacent saloons, the staircase of which was lighted with 1,000 wax lights in parcels. At the appointed hour the young bridegroom and bride made their entry into the drawing-room, the former accompanied by the Duchess de Montpensier, and the latter by the Count de Paris. Behind the Duchess de Montpensier and Donna Christina, the Count de Bardaxi, Minister of State, followed by the Count de Bermudez de Castro, Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Archbishop of Seville, and the marriage contract was signed by the Count of Paris, the above-named Archbishop, Admiral Armero, General Turon (Captain-General of Andalusia), the Civil Governor of Seville, Count de Jornar (secretary to the Count de Paris), and the President of the Royal Court of Justice. A number of Generals and other superior officers, besides delegates from the Chapter of the Royal Chapel of St. Ferdinand, the Royal Court, the municipality, the chapter of the military orders, and other corporations of the city, were also present."

The Polish National Government has published a proclamation to the people of the Imperial alliance, in which it recommends the peasants not to pay the Russian authorities for the acquisition of land which they have proclaimed their property, but to refer all claims to the National Government. This decree maintained the indemnification of the landed proprietors by the State.

THE COURT.

A Court which was to have been held by her Majesty at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday, has been postponed until Saturday (to-day); and the following semi-official announcement, expressing the purposes of the Queen with regard to her Majesty's future appearances in public, was prominently given in the Times of Wednesday:—

An erroneous idea seems generally to prevail, and has latterly found frequent expression in the newspapers, that the Queen is about to resume the place in society which she occupied before her great affliction—that is, that she is about again to hold Levées and Drawingrooms in person, and, for the future, at Court balls, concerts, &c. This idea cannot be too explicitly contradicted.

The Queen heartily appreciates the desire of her subjects to see her, and whatever else on the part of her Majesty is in their loyal and affectionate wish she will do. Whenever any real object is to be obtained by her appearance on public occasions—any national interest to be promoted, or anything to be encouraged which is for the good of her people, her Majesty will not shrink, as she has not shrunk, from any duty, however painful or exertion, however painful.

But there are other and higher duties than these—duties of more representation which are now thrown upon the Queen, alone and unassisted—duties which she cannot neglect without injury to the public service, which are increasingly upon her, overwhelming her with work and anxiety.

The Queen has learned reconciliation to discharge these duties till her health and strength, already shaken by the utter and ever-abiding desolation which has taken the place of her former happiness, have been seriously impaired.

To call upon her to undergo, in addition, the fatigue of those more State ceremonies which are to be performed by others well performed by others of her family is to ask her to run the risk of entirely disabling herself for the discharge of those other duties which cannot be neglected without serious injury to the public interests.

The Queen will, however, do what she can—in the manner least trying to her health, strength, and spirits—to meet the loyal wishes of her subjects, to afford that support and countenance to society, and to give that encouragement to trade which her Majesty desires.

More the Queen cannot do; and more the kindness and good feeling of her people will surely not exact from her.

The Queen continues at Windsor Castle, in good health.

On Thursday week her Majesty left Windsor, accompanied by Princess Helena and attended by the Countess of Gainsborough, Lord Charles Fitzroy, and Col. Ponsonby. The Duke of Cambridge, and Lady Augusta Stanley, Duchess Dowager of Sutherland with a visit. Princess Louisa and Prince Leopold drove out.

Yesterday (Friday) the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena and attended by Colonel Ponsonby, drove out.

On Saturday last the Queen, attended by Lady Augusta Stanley, walked and drove in the castle grounds. Prince Leopold drove out. Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Prince Arthur, and Prince Alfred arrived at the castle on a visit to her Majesty. Subsequently the Queen, accompanied by Princess Augusta of Saxe-Coburg, drove out. Princess Helena, Princess Louisa, Princess Clotilde, and Princess Amelie accompanied her Majesty in a second drive. Prince Leopold and Princess Beatrice drove out. Earl Russell had an audience of the Queen. The Duke of Worcester and Sir Charles and Lady Mary Wood left the castle.

On Tuesday the Queen, attended by Lady Jane Peel and drove in the castle grounds. Earl Granville arrived at the castle.

On Wednesday the Queen drove out. The King of the Belgians, attended by Count Vilain XIIII, and Col. Koslof, left the castle for Buckingham Palace. Princess Augusta of Saxe-Coburg, Princess Clotilde, Princess Amelie, and Prince Ferdinand also left the castle for Claremont.

Thursday was the eleventh anniversary of the birthday of Prince Leopold.

The Hon. Emma Lascelles has succeeded the Hon. Lucy Kerr as Maid of Honour, and Major-General F. Seymour and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. Augustus Liddell succeed Charles Fitzroy and Colonel H. Ponsonby as Equerries in Waiting to the Queen.

Professor Owen has, during the past week, had the honour of delivering his third lecture before the Queen, the King of the Belgians, and the Royal family.

Mr. Tidy has had the honour of submitting to the Queen his picture in water colours of "The Night of the Betrayal."

COURT ARRANGEMENTS.

The following official announcements have appeared in the London Gazette during the past week:—

Notice is hereby given that her Majesty's birthday will be celebrated on Tuesday, the 24th of May next.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales will, by command of the Queen, hold Drawingrooms at St. James's Palace, on behalf of her Majesty, on Thursday, the 5th of May next; on Saturday, the 14th of May next; and on Tuesday, the 14th of June next, at two o'clock. It is the Queen's pleasure that presentations to her Royal Highness at the Drawingrooms above mentioned be considered as equivalent presentations to her Majesty.

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will, by command of the Queen, hold Levées at St. James's Palace, on behalf of her Majesty, on Saturday, the 23rd of April next; on Wednesday, the 4th of June next; and on Wednesday, the 22nd of June next, at two o'clock. It is the Queen's pleasure that presentations to his Royal Highness at these Levées shall be considered as equivalent to presentations to her Majesty.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales, with Prince Albert Victor, attended by the Hon. Mrs. Bruce, Lieutenant-General Knollys, Captain Grey, and Mr. Holmyansen, left Marlborough House yesterday (fortnight en route for Sandringham House. Their Royal Highnesses left Aldershott Junction terminus of the Great Eastern Railway in a special train at a quarter past two o'clock. Colonel Palmer and Mr. Hall were in attendance. The Prince and Princess were enthusiastically greeted at the several stations along their route. Their Royal Highnesses arrived at Wolferton at five o'clock. A numerous assemblage had congregated at the station, and the children of the neighbouring schools assembled to welcome the Prince and Princess upon their arrival. Their Royal Highnesses proceeded at once to Sandringham House, arriving at twenty minutes past five.

On Saturday last the Prince walked over the estate. Later in the day the Prince and Princess rode out.

On Sunday their Royal Highnesses attended Divine service at Sandringham Church, where the Rev. G. V. Moxon officiated.

On Monday the Prince went out shooting on the Wolferton estate. In the afternoon their Royal Highnesses went out coursing on the Hall Farm. The Princess rode on horseback.

On Tuesday the Prince and Princess walked over the grounds.

The Prince and Princess take daily rides and drives in the neighbourhood of Sandringham.

Captain Grey has succeeded Lieutenant-Colonel Keppel as Equerry in Waiting to the Prince.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred continues at Holyrood Palace. Yesterday morning the Prince, attended by Major Cowell, left Edinburgh for Wishaw House, on a visit to Lord and Lady Belhaven.

On Saturday his Royal Highness visited Hamilton Palace and Blantyre Priory, returning to Wishaw House in the evening.

On Sunday the Prince attended Divine service at Wishaw Church. The Rev. John Downes officiated.
On Monday the Prince returned to Holyrood Palace.

FASHIONABLE ENTERTAINMENTS.

Frances Countess of Waldegrave and Mr. Chichester Fortescue, M.P., received the Duke D'Aumale, the Duke and Duchess De Chartres, and a distinguished company at dinner on Wednesday evening, at their residence in Carlton-gardens. Her Ladyship had an assembly later in the evening, which was numerously and fashionably attended.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. William Gladstone entertained a large party at dinner on Wednesday evening at their residence in Carlton-terrace.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough have arrived in town from Blenheim, for the season.

The Duke and Duchess of Montrose have left town on a visit to the Countess of Perth, at Pointe Castle, Wrightsford.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Ormonde returned to their mansion in Bagnigge-square on Tuesday, from East Hampstead Park, Berks, for the season.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Normanby and Lady Laura Phipps have arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, New Bond-street.

The Marchioness of Ely has arrived at her residence in Princes-gate from a tour of visits.

Mark Marchioness of Ailesbury returned to town on Wednesday from visiting Viscount and Viscountess Newport, at Newport Lodge, Melton Mowbray.

The Marquis and Marchioness of Salisbury have returned to town.

The Marquis of Abercorn has returned to Beaudesert from Scotland.

The Marquis of Clanricarde and Lord Dunkellin have arrived in town from Melton Mowbray for the season.

The Marquis of Hastings has arrived in town from his seat in Yorkshire.

Earl and Countess Russell returned to Chesham-place on Tuesday from Pembroke Lodge, Richmond Park, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Clarendon and the Ladies Villiers have arrived in town from the Grove, Watford, Herts.

The Earl and Countess of Albemarle have returned to their residence in Grosvenor-place from a tour of visits.

The Earl and Countess of Ashburnham and the Ladies Ashley arrived in Grosvenor-square on Saturday last from Broadlands.

The Earl and Countess of Malmesbury have arrived at their mansion in Great George-street, from Heron Court, Hants, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Ashburnham have left town for the Hoddn House, Herefordshire.

Earl and Countess Howe have returned to Curzon House from Gopsall Hall, Leicestershire, for the season.

Earl and Countess Stanhope and Lady Mary Stanhope have arrived in town from Chevening Park, Kent, for the season.

The Earl and Countess of Lichfield have arrived at Brocket, Staffordshire, on a visit to the Marquis of Abercorn, from Lambton Castle, Durham.

Francis Countess Waldegrave and Mr. Chichester Fortescue, M.P., have returned to town from Strawberry Hill, Twickenham, for the season.

Viscount and Viscountess Sydney returned to town on Monday, from visiting the Earl of Sandwich, at Hinchinbrook, Hunts.

Field Marshal Viscount Combermere and Viscountess Combermere have arrived at Combermere Abbey, Cheshire, from Paris. Field Marshal will arrive in town next month to resume his duties as Gold Stick at the Court of Queen Adelaide.

The Right Hon. Sir George Grey arrived in town on Saturday last from Scaton Park.

The Right Hon. the Chancellor of the Exchequer returned to town on Monday from a visit to the Dowager Duchess of Sutherland, at Cliveden.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—The marriage of Viscount Newport with Lady Alice Mary Augusta Hill, only child of the Countess of Lisburne, will take place on the 14th inst., at St. George's, Hanover-square.—A marriage will shortly be solemnised between Mr. Ralph Sneyd, of the Grenadier Guards, and the Hon. Nina Lascelles, daughter of Lord and Lady Harewood. A marriage is spoken of as likely to take place between Miss Vigors and the Hon. Stephen Cadogan, son of Lord Cadogan.

CHURCH AND UNIVERSITIES.

The Bishop of Oxford has gone to Paris, and proceeds thence to Brussels on a visit, only, to take some confirmations for the Bishop of London.

A beautiful window has been placed in Guiseley Church, Leeds, by the families of Micklethwaite, Stansfeld, and Fawcett, the inhabitants of the parish.

Some years ago the Bradford churchmen resolved to build ten churches in that borough. On Thursday week the sixth of the number, a magnificent structure in the Early English style, built at the cost of Mr. F. S. Powell, M.P., for the borough of Cambridge, at an expense of £15,000, was consecrated by the Bishop of Ripon.

An influentially attended public meeting, convened by the Very Rev. the Dean of Ripon, was held at Harrogate, wherein, with the view of raising funds for the complete and much-needed restoration of the ancient church of the diocese. Upon the meeting took place in the chapter-house, which within the last few years has been very effectively restored at a heavy cost to the late Prebendary Hale, who originally presided. The subscriptions promised before the close of the meeting amounted to nearly £4000.

The following Preferments and Appointments have recently taken place:—Lancaster: The Rev. J. Bardsley, Holy Trinity, Salford. Rev. C. J. Williamson to St. Thomas, Birmingham. Worcester: Rev. J. T. Hutchinson, Kempsey, to Tardebigge. Ely: Rev. C. Kendall to Wisbech Parish Rev. Jonesborough. Rev. H. G. Bull to St. James, Wigan; Rev. D. B. Barlow to Christ Church, Ware; Rev. J. Bell to Christ Church, Ware. Rev. W. West to Suain, N.B. Surrey: Rev. W. C. Lovejoy to Haymarket and Lambeth Lyceum Theatre.

The following Presentations to Clergymen are noticed in the Guardian:—To the Rev. E. Geoghegan, of Ardee, a piece of plate and a purse containing upwards of twenty guineas, from the parishioners; also a handsome Bible, from the teachers and children of the Sunday-schools. The Rev. T. G. Hills, upon resigning the curacy of St. Wethorgh, Derby, to be Association Secretary for the north of England to the Church Missionary Society and South American Missionary Society—good watch and chain; Bible, with several smaller presents, from the parishioners. The Rev. Joseph Hall, Bolton, with several smaller presents. The Rev. R. J. Gordon, Cheltenham—a silver tea-service, a purse of gold, a handsome dining-room clock, bronze ornament, and portrait of Bishop Middleton, from the parishioners of Cheltenham. The Rev. Holmes of Alford's Greek Testament, and a beautifully bound and illuminated address—"Tempora Mutantur"—from the teachers of the Sunday schools; a very handsome vase, from the choir of Carisbrooke Church; besides several private presents from friends.

THE UNIVERSITIES AND PUBLIC SCHOOLS.—His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales has intimated his intention of proceeding to Cambridge, to visit Cambridge University during the present Term. This visit will probably take place in the early part of May. The office of High Stewardship of Dunfry has become vacant by the resignation of the Bishop of Ely. It is an office not on the heads of colleges, but on the Bishop for the time. The Bishop of Ely has also vacated his seat as the Council of the Senate. The English Lecturer at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has a public reading lecture, to begin on the 19th instant.—Public Reading of Shakespeare, English History, and Milton, by Professor Creighton. Special classes will be arranged for students in theology, law students, and candidates for Civil Service appointments.

The interest which has been manifested in the view of promoting the education of a University in Wales has not with general support from the nobility, clergy, colleges, and inhabitants of the Principality generally. Meetings of Welsh residents have been held in Liverpool, Manchester, and other English towns, and a considerable sum has already been subscribed towards the object. The proposed University will, as far as circumstances permit, be similarly constituted as the London and Edinburgh Universities, and entirely unsectarian. After a sufficient sum has been subscribed Parliament will be applied to for a charter and an annual grant as in Ireland.

The Rev. T. H. Kingston, Curate of Devizes, Wilts, has been appointed Vice-Principal of the Durham College of Theological Colleges.

On Monday the new site and, at the commencement of the Life Governors of the Liverpool Collegiate Institution, of which the Rev. Dr. Howson has been fifteen years Principal, it was decided that the name of these schools be hence forward to be Liverpool College.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

Mr. Kirkman D. Hodgson, M.P., has been re-elected Governor, and Mr. H. L. Holland Deputy-Governor, of the Bank of England.

At the church of St. Anne, Limehouse, on Thursday week, Emerriens Te Wharepapa, one of the New Zealand Chiefs residing at the Emerriens' Home, Limehouse, was admitted into the Church of Christ.

Sir Morton Peto has announced his intention of retiring from Parliament at the close of the present Session, the cause of such retirement being his illness. He has sat for Finsbury in 1859.

A series of lectures on horticultural subjects, to be given in the monster conservatory, Kensington Gardens, two or three times a month, are amongst the arrangements of this society for the ensuing season. The first lecture will be delivered by Mr. Robert Fish, on the 19th inst. The subject of the second lecture, which is to be delivered on the 26th inst., is "Vegetable Products of Commerce," by Mr. Fish.

At the meeting, on Monday next, of the Royal Geographical Society, Colonel Sykes, M.P., President, in the chair, the following papers will be read:—1, "Overland Expedition from Fort Denison to Rockingham Bay, Australia," by Mr. Walter Hill. 2. "Explorations in New Settlement at Cape York," communicated by Sir George Bowen, K.C.B., Governor of New Zealand, and late of Queensland.

Thursday being the anniversary of the birth of his Royal Highness Prince Albert, was kept as a holiday in the Royal Victoria hospital demonstrations took place. The Royal standard was hoisted on the steeple of the church at the hospital, and the Union Jack floated from the General Post Office, St. Martin's-le-Grand, Queen Anne's Gate Warehouse, and the Government Emigration Office. The flag of the Lords of the Admiralty was hoisted at Somerset House and the Admiralty.

A juvenile ball was given on Wednesday evening at the Mansion House by Miss Lawrence, the Lady Mayoress, and her daughters, between the hours of seven and eleven o'clock, when the young people invited. A company of the London Rifle Corps, under the command of Captain Lawrence, the Lord Mayor's son, were on duty, and partners were thus secure in procuring, and the dancing was carried on with great spirit in the open air, which had preceded a very gay appearance. Refreshments were provided in the Egyptian Hall, and supper in the Banqueting-room, at one o'clock, but dancing was kept up by the little folk to a much later hour.

The Hampden Gurney School, Bryanston-square, in Upper Berkeley-street, Portman-square, at a cost of £7000, were opened formally on Tuesday. A meeting was held in the afternoon, when the Bishop of London presided. The architect of the schools, provided. Addresses were made by Lord Ebury, Lord Calthorpe, Mr. Hollond, Mr. Mastiaux, Sir Benjamin Hamilton, Dr. Goodhart, Mr. Holland, Mr. Maitland, and others. It was stated that the schools, which will seat 1200 children, are intended, that, to meet the expense of £1300 (towards which many contributions had been received), the sum of £5000 is still wanting. The Archdeacon of Westminster, Wilson, to meet this, a cheque for £50.

Lord Ebury has had a statue—1072 boys and 1081 girls—were registered in London. In the ten corresponding weeks of the year 1863 the births of 19,000 children were registered. The total number of deaths registered last week in the metropolis was 1679. The average number in the corresponding weeks of the last five years was 1284, and the increase of population, 1847. The deaths of persons under twenty years of age were registered in the week to the number of 1000. Measles proved the most fatal in any week, with only one exception, during the present year. The deaths from this disease were registered in the week to the number of 96, more than they had been in any of the eight previous weeks, and 215 to twenty-seven other deaths. Scarlet fever caused 19 deaths, and 215 to twenty-seven other deaths. Hooping-cough 16, and 215 to twenty-seven other deaths. Hooping-cough.

WILLS AND BEQUESTS.

The will of Sir William Atherton, Q.C. M.P. (late her Majesty's Attorney-General), of Westbourne-terrace, was proved in London on the 29th ultimo, under £120,000 personalty, by the oaths of Henry Bromley, Esq., solicitor; William James Hall, Esq., the brother-in-law, of the Temple; John R. Hall, Esq., of Kensington-gardens, and Mr. Thomas Hall, of No. 1, Kensington Park-gardens and the Temple. Sir William executed his will in November, 1863, and a codicil in January last, and died on the 19th ultimo, leaving a family of eight children. His property consisted chiefly of railway debentures and shares, and he has left £1000 to his late clerk, Mr. Hall, on his estate generally, which, upon her decease, will revert to their children.

The will of the late James Pulham, Esq., M.P., late of Bedford, Suffolk, and of the Hill, Cumberland, formerly Inspector-General of Army Hospitals, was proved in London on the 29th ult., by the oaths of Mrs. Thomlinson (the testator's daughter) and the Rev. H. B. Pulham, Vicar of Ashbourne, the executors named in the will. The testator died, and served as head of the Army Medical Department in the Peninsula, as at Waterloo. He was knighted by the Duke of Wellington, and received other honours. He was a life trustee to the Bedford Infirmary, and bequeathed to that institution a handsome legacy. His daughter, Mrs. Thomlinson, is the sole heir to the property, the daughters of his late son James Robert; those brothers and sisters who survive him, and the children surviving by her late daughter, a liberal pecuniary legacy to the granddaughter, and the residue of the property, valued at £30 to £40,000, is bequeathed to the testator's nephew, Dr. Pulham, of the Devonshire-square Institution, for her great attention to the testator during his last illness.

The will of Admiral Octavius Vernon Harcourt, of Swinton Park, Bedale, Yorkshire, second son of the late Archbishop of York, bequeaths legacies, amounting to £16,000, which are to be paid free of duty:—To the Archbishop of Canterbury, £500; to the Rev. Francis Browning Chirton Knowsley, Employment of Additional Clergy, and the Longley Fund, Ripon, and the Church Pastoral Aid Society, £1000 each; and to the Families of Clergymen and Sons of the Clergy, each £1000. To the Societies for the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church; Church Accommodation and Endowment of Churches, Diocese of Ripon; Friends of the Clergy, Leeds; Bible Society, Leeds; Church Missionary Society; Bible Scripture Readers', West Riding of Yorkshire; Additional Curates Society, Leeds; Church Building Society, Additional Institutions, each £1000. To the Leeds Infirmary, £1000; to the Leeds Public Dispensary, £500; to Mrs. Harcourt, Mrs. Vernon Harcourt, Chester, Sir George, Sir Mary's, Charing-cross, and Matthew Thompson, Esq., Leeds, £1000 each. To the Archbishop of York, Plymouth; Royal Naval Schools for Boys and Girls, Marylebone School for Boys, Greenwich School for Boys, Greenwich School for Girls, Deptford, £500. To the poor of Muskam, £200; and to the Blind School, York, £100. In addition to these legacies the testator bequeaths £1000 each, free of duty, to his medical attendant, Mr. M. C. Ward; and to all the members of his house-hold, who had long and faithfully served him.

A new paper, called the Mercantile Chronicle, published in English and French, has appeared in Paris.

The Paris Court of Cassation has decided that a husband has no right to take from the post-office a letter addressed to his wife by name.

Mr. T. P. Cooke, the distinguished actor, died on Monday last, at his residence, Hammersmith, aged 76. He intend to give a Portrait of Mr. Cooke in our next Number.

THE DOUBLE-SCREW STEAMER ATALANTA.—Last week an Engraving appeared in this Journal representing the race across the Channel, on Thursday week, of the new double-screw steamer Atalanta, Captain Ryder, and one of the paddle-wheel steamers of the Dover and Calais mail-packets the Lord Warden, from which the accompanying Engraving was taken, attracted attention of both vessels; but in the event it was found that the Lord Warden was not in a condition, and could not have been desired to set right. The paddle-wheel steamer, which left Dover at 10 o'clock, had to make about a hundred minutes to make the passage, while the double-screw steamer left Calais at 11 o'clock, and accomplished the distance in seventy-seven minutes, was not the Empress, but the Queen. In the Lord Warden, which left Dover at 10 o'clock, and in the Atalanta, the importance of this mistake lies in the fact that the Queen is confidently said to be capable of the same speed as the Atalanta, and that the race between the Queen and the Empress was considered to be a match for a single engine to a double-screw steamer of the same tonnage. The Queen is a paddle-wheel steamer, and has a worthier competitor in the Brazen, the Samphire, and the Lord Warden. The Atalanta, which is a double-screw, has proved herself to be superior to both the Queen and the Empress; and the performances of this double-screw steamer have amply confirmed the opinion which was formed of her capabilities on her trial trip, when, with ten o'clock, she started from Gravesend Pier, went down the Channel, and back to the Nore Lightship, and back to Gravesend Pier, in the unprecedented hours of the voyage in consequence of a thick fog. Amongst her passengers on this trip was Captain Symonds, R.N., who was extremely much astonished at the great double-screw principle in this vessel. Her engines during the whole trip were worked with great regularity. The steam was kept up to 20 lb. pressure. There was not the slightest stoppage or hitch in any of the machinery. The wheels made 90 to 100 revolutions a minute, and the speed of the boat was from eleven to thirteen knots an hour. She proved so admirable sea-boat, never rolling, and keeping entirely dry. The vibration was scarcely at all perceptible to the passengers during the whole passage, not over the screws at the stern, but over the engines, which are in the centre of the vessel; and when just abreast of the town, by reversing one screw, turned round by her own centre. The Atalanta is built on the principle of the vessel. The advantage of the double screw are thus signally proved.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

It is more than probable that when the House of Commons reassembled after the Easter recess on Monday last, few members were aware that there was the basis of a sensation scene in store for them. Looking to the admitted fact with which the House in its corporate capacity—of course, individuals harbour any personal feeling—enjoys a "restful scene," there would, had it been expected, feeling—enjoys a "restful scene," there would, had it been expected, been a much larger gathering to witness the self-immolation of Mr. Stansfeld. As it happened, there was an unusual, or on Monday after the holidays, and when only Naval Estimates are promised for the evening, a considerable attendance, and notably Mr. Disraeli and all the principal members of the Opposition were present. Indeed, the Treasury Bench on the left hand of the Speaker was conspicuously empty. Something has been said about the Ministry being composed of a certain contempt by the leaders of the Opposition for the young member of the Government whose duty has fallen on this post, but who by his act of resignation had turned off an organised attack upon Ministers, which had been devised with the hope to have been founded on the fact of his holding office. It may have been so; but, founded on the fact of his holding office. It may have been so; but, it is at least doubtful, for Lord Palmerston has the art of turning the details of a resignation to comparatively small account, although Mr. Stansfeld's resignation took place on the previous Thursday, it was only generally known on Monday night when Lord Palmerston in a pronounced manner passed by the Treasury bench and took the seat below the gangway usually occupied by Mr. Stansfeld, that the public became aware of the circumstance of his retirement. Besides, Mr. Disraeli and some of his colleagues were absent, did not appear in force on Tuesday and Wednesday, so that there must have been other reasons for their absence than the holidays.

There was a singular combination of relief and mortification in the expression of Mr. Stansfeld's face, as he sat waiting for the moment when he could ingeniously enter into the statement with which he was prepared. To one's fancy he seemed to be not in an easier position than when he occupied a seat on the Government bench; for though much had been done, and he had done much himself, to render innocuous to him the charge of inconsistency said to be made against him, the seat of sunset, yet it does take time to brush in so free-thinking a mind as his, and to get rid of the effect of having a member of Ministerial discipline. One always thought that Mr. Stansfeld trod with an air of freedom when he was not, and came to see the Government side in divisions. Not that he was voting in matters which compromised his conscience, but it seemed as if the fact of the absence of absolute freedom acted on him with a sense of discomfort. It is, of course not to be supposed that he is in an easier position than he was, most have felt it irksome to vote, as it were, on compulsion, let the question be what it might. Everyone knows this sense of being tied by the tether of party, and how it must have existed, one thing is certain—that heretofore, if any, neophyte in official life ever adopted himself with the ease and freedom of a practised parliamentarian it was Mr. Stansfeld. It was curious and interesting to mark how great a change came over Mr. Stansfeld's spirit and position in the House, when he rose to put the strict and neat formation of his sentences there was, as may be supposed, no hesitation in the choice of appropriate language, balanced flights dispassioned, while the logical and sequential arrangement remained, as it had always been, perfect. Mr. Stansfeld's speech he had been accustomed to do with abstract principles and the dogmatic politics of the day. His success was like unfamiliar, however, to a success but expressive phrase, it "riled" the critics of the To use a somewhat Opposition to see a philosophical Radical—one, indeed, almost Radical—into an official position and a practical statesman, and with a career before him which implied his holding office on every Liberal Administration that might be formed. Doubtless he was confronted with an evil eye; and when the chance came it was eagerly seized, and Mr. Stansfeld's career ceased like a meteor that has gone down! Considering the style and the substance of the speech which Mr. Stansfeld delivered on resigning his Parliamentary Secretaryship of the Board of Trade, and which he has yet adequately delivered, the fiery and implacable Mr. Cox was moved to interrogate him from the conspiracy and treason of office. Mr. Stansfeld was not slow to preserve upon him, and have held his own against all comers. As it was, discretion battling with personal feeling, the sort of struggle that ensued between the two combinations caused him to assume a tone in the first instance which, lofty in itself, might have been effective with less strong-minded men, but which, by-judging from the effect, was turned against him, and he was compelled to succumb to a power that he could not withstand, and to fall back upon the tone of the speech which he had delivered in the first instance in the excited House.

As the very first business which came on upon Monday was the Naval Estimates, the Civil Lord of the Admiralty was at once massed, and, of course, by none more than by the Lord Clerk, who, as usual, had, of course, by none more than by the Lord Clerk, who, as usual, had come prepared to show that he could if not a very demonstrative support. It was something for the Secretary to the Admiralty, in his absence, to have a casual sparring with Mr. Lindsay and Sir James Elphinstone, to have by his side a calm and ready colleague, whose whispers might supply the matter for retort when the attack was of a personal character. In truth, Lord Clarence was present that night, and, when roused, was not a man to be trifled with, more especially because the provocation of his mind was disturbed by what, to him, was inopportune badgering. Sharply enough, Lord Clarence replied to the jokes of Sir Charles Wood the Admiralty, and when this Session has been accustomed to sit behind the Government Bench, and to see the Lord Commissioners of the Admiralty was nearly mobbed down by the half dozen naval reformers who go on, night after night, and have their little say, and interlocutors who go on, night after night, and have their little say, and when the same subjects are touched the same motions, which are never carried—did not show on this occasion in his usual mood. Such a piece of obstruction as that which he met in the gallery, and so, technically, out of the house. People looking on at this were fain to think that Lord Clarence was in the right, for he was always ready to resume his old post at the Admiralty, and so kept out of the way of the Lord Commissioners of the Treasury who were about to his acceptance of office.

Talking of this writs reminds one of the change of offices which has taken place in the Government, and which has caused the temporary retirement of Mr. Stansfeld. Mr. Milner Gibson is about to be elected. In the offices which he has already held Mr. Cardwell seemed a certain grandeur of demeanour, and now that he has become a Secretary of State he may be expected to loom very large indeed from the dignity point of view. Perhaps, as a Secretary of State, he may be called the Minister of Administration; and as for industry, his development in that respect is stupendous, as it happens, for the Secretary of State for war and a tolerably irresponsible department. The Secretary of State can occupy all day and all night in writing letters, and has been the best and safest mode of governing our dependencies is not to attempt to govern at all. Mr. Cardwell's transfer to the War Department into the House of Commons will operate a little unjustly to Mr. Childers—Under-Secretary, as Government has confided the business of the office in the Lower Chamber with great tact and ability. We have, we believe, been now instituted an office that is to be a model Under-Secretary, and it is hard upon him that he should be put into eclipse. Who an excellent arrangement it would be if he could become Secretary for Ireland!

The new Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster—who has sunk from the Under-Secretaryship of the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland to this function—has been in no hurry to parade his recent accession of dignity. He has come of Paris, up to the present writing, he has not taken his seat on the Ministerial Bench. Doubtless, in taking this post Lord Clarendon hopes that it will lead to better things—perhaps to the highest office.

The Wesleyan Methodist Missionary Jubilee Fund now amounts to about £100,000.

The Italian journals speak of a project to construct a bridge over the Straits of Messina, to unite Sicily with the mainland. The bridge proposed would be a suspension one, on a new system, the chains being of cast steel, and strong enough to support the weight of several railway-trains.

THE VOLUNTEER REVIEW AT BLACKHEATH, NEAR GUILDFORD, ON EASTER MONDAY.—SEE PAGE 354.

THE WAR IN DENMARK: PRUSSIAN BATTERY AT GAASBERG POINT, OPPOSITE THE FORTS OF DÜPPEL.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 349.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The House resumed its sittings for the first time after the Easter recess.

Mr. Trelawny took the oaths and his seat for Coventry.

Mr. Berkeley postponed his motion on the ballot until after Whitsuntide.

The Union Relief Aid Acts Continuance Bill passed through Committee.

Mr. Cardwell moved to issue the election of a member for Oxford city in the room of Mr. Cardwell, who has accepted the office of Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The GOVERNOR OF THE ISLE OF MAN, Lord PALMERSTON stated that all the Powers who had contracted the Treaty of London in 1852 had consented to send representatives to a general peace conference on the affairs of Denmark, but that no answer had been received from the German Diet, which had been formally invited to attend. This, however, would not stay the action of the Conference, which would proceed to discuss the matters submitted to it.

Mr. STANSFELD (who spoke from the benches below the gangway) stated that he had resigned his office in the Ministry. He felt a former colleague and his constituents, but it had been declined by Lord Palmerston. He thanked the noble Lord for the confidence he had given to his statements and for the courage the noble Lord had shown in supporting him; but he had conscientiously felt that he must act in a manner independent of the Government. He explained the steps he made on his return from the Conference at Paris having been renewed, he believed in vain, in his personal capacity, to the Government of the Duke of Cl.rence. He prayed the House to withdraw himself against the charge of want of candour in connection with the Conference, and to believe that he had not acted from any ground of his own. He felt that it was not the time for him to enter into any controversy with the Minister. He repeated his former statement that he believed Mr. Bernhard was capable of the intentions which had been attributed to him. While fully admiring his intimacy and sympathy with Madrid on the subject of the navy, and the existence of "ring" influence in the dockyards, he could not agree with him in his views for the practical attainment of those objects; and he definitely declined to accept the position of Assistant Secretary to the French Commission, feeling that he (Mr. STANSFELD) was implicated in the alleged attempt on the life of the Emperor of the French.

Lord PALMERSTON said that, having at first declined to accept Mr. Stansfeld's resignation, he had made many attempts to induce him to do so, but that gentleman had made up his mind to retire from office. He (Lord Palmerston) regretted the fact, and he would only express his regret at the loss of a member of the Government whose ability and integrity he had so frequently had occasion to admire. He repeated his former statement that he believed Mr. Stansfeld was incapable of the intentions which had been attributed to him. While fully admiring his intimacy and sympathy with Madrid on the subject of the navy, and the existence of "ring" influence in the dockyards, he could not agree with him in his views for the practical attainment of those objects; and he definitely declined to accept the position of Assistant Secretary to the French Commission, feeling that he (Mr. STANSFELD) was implicated in the alleged attempt on the life of the Emperor of the French.

Lord PALMERSTON said that, having at first declined to accept Mr. Stansfeld's resignation, he had made many attempts to induce him to do so; but that gentleman had made up his mind to retire from office. He (Lord Palmerston) regretted the fact, and he would only express his regret at the loss of a member of the Government whose ability and integrity he had so frequently had occasion to admire. He repeated his former statement that he believed Mr. Bernhard was capable of the intentions which had been attributed to him in the pamphlet, but that Mr. Bernhard had been entirely incapable of such sentiments and actions as had been attributed to him in reference to the Emperor of the French, on whom the noble Lord passed a warm eulogy.

The subject then dropped.

THE NAVY ESTIMATES.

The House resolved itself into Committee of Supply for consideration of the Navy Estimates.

On the vote for £1,564,100 for naval stores for the building, repair, and outfit of the fleet, steam machinery, and ships built by contract, a desultory debate ensued, in the course of which Lord CLARENCE PAGET was asked by Mr. Baillie to explain what was the policy of the Government with reference to the purchase on the part of foreign Governments of armour-plates was to continue building armour-plated ships, and to forego the building of wooden ships of war.

The question of wooden ships to be armour-plated was one which the Government establishments was subsequently brought under notice; and Mr. Laird took occasion to express his satisfaction that the building of ships by contract had never been fairly tested, inasmuch as the plans for the ships ordered to be constructed by contract were definitely over-ruled and altered by the Board; and his sentiments, whose hands were so bound that no opportunity was afforded them for the exercise of their talents and experience. In his opinion it would be better to abandon contracts altogether than to tie up the hands of contractors to an impossible task.

The vote was ultimately agreed to, as were the following votes:—

£661,312 for steam machinery in the Department of the Comptroller of the Navy.

£52,370 for medicines and medical stores.

£36,000 for medical establishments.

£607,700 for half pay, reserved half pay, and retired pay of the Navy and Royal Marines.

£400,981 for military pensions and allowances.

£376,000 for civil pensions and allowances.

And £334,420 for the conveyance of troops.

The whole of the Navy Estimates have now been agreed to, with the exception of that for the establishments abroad.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The House resumed sitting for the first time after the Easter holidays.

The report of amendments on the Mails for Cattle Bill was brought up and agreed to.

The Lunacy and Sales of Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

The Court of Session Regulation Bill (Scotland) and the Poor Removal (Ireland) Bill were passed through Committee.

The Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

Female Registrars in Ireland.—The Earl of Donoughmore referred to the case of the men who had been received into the United States ship of war to be employed as "contrabands" during the late war in the capitals, that he did not know of their being in the vessel, was contrary to the despatches of the noble Earl himself—that the noble Earl had left it to the determination of the American Minister to the case, and he was informed by him that instructions had been issued by the Secretary of the Navy to prevent the officer in charge of the vessel who infringed the Foreign Enlistment Act should be punished. He had also been informed by the Minister that the case was left with the Executive of the United States, but that the men were not to be delivered either the American Consul or the captain of the Scarrage was dismissed in this matter.—The Earl of Russell said that the noble Earl was correct in stating that his question was examined, attended, and at first in the American uniform on board the Scarrage; and it was, therefore, natural that he took any of the officers of the ship could be unaware of the circumstance.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE inquired whether the Government had received the sum of Her Majesty's dockyards under the circumstances.

Removal of Remains from Old Cemeteries.—The Marquis of CLANRICARDE moved for correspondence relating to the removal of the remains of the late Archbishop Whately from the old cemetery to the new, the wishes of their friends, the accredited agents of the deceased, to the contrary, and that it was quite possible to keep up the system of Cemetic without disturbing the dead bodies.—After some observations from the Earl of CARLISLE, the motion was agreed to, and their Lordships adjourned at a quarter to seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

The report on Supply was brought up and agreed to.

The Select Committee on Turnpike Bills was appointed.

The amendments to the Union Relief Aid Acts Continuance Bill were considered and agreed to.

Mr. Layard, in answer to Colonel Dickson, said that, in the judgment of an American prize court, the ship Saxon was to be given up to the owner, free of all charges. He trusted that Her Majesty's Government was to be tried for the killing of the mate of the Saxon.

LOCAL TAXATION.

Mr. Alderman Salomons called attention to the exemption from local taxation enjoyed by a large amount of property belonging to Government departments, and moved that all lands and buildings used and occupied for public purposes should be assessed to local taxes.—After a long discussion,

Mr. Mowbray supported the motion, urging the case of his own constituents, who were greatly suffering from the want of it.

Mr. Hankey opposed the motion on the ground that the payment of local taxes would only come out of the taxation of the country.

Several hon. members having spoken in favour of the motion,

Mr. Ayrton said that he could not agree that the principle Government property to the payment of rates had been in some instances conceded, it did not follow that all Government buildings should be so subject to local rating as private property. In those cases where the public establishments caused a considerable increase to the population of a locality, contributions were made to the rates.

The debate was continued for some time, the speeches running principally in favour of the motion.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer declined to commit himself to the principle involved in the question, but thought the Government of the country would account to an endowment of parishes at the public expense. He stated that the subject was under consideration by the Government.

On a division the motion was lost by 62 to 30.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

Colonel Strange took the oaths and his seat on his election for the county of Armagh, in the room of Mr. Close, resigned.

The Copyright Bill was withdrawn, leave being given to Mr. Black to bring in a bill in the event to consolidate and amend the laws relating to copyright.

The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill passed through Committee, with some amendments.

The Jersey Court Bill—the object of which is to amend the present system of the Royal Court of Jersey, where at present twelve jurats, who are not legally educated persons, have the power of deciding all questions of law arising in the island—was read a second time.

The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

The Union Relief Aid Continuance Bill was read a third time and passed.

A new writ was ordered for the borough of Launceston, in the room of Mr. Garnett, resigned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

The Mail for Aberdeen Bill, The Court of Session (Expenses of Business) Bill, and the Conveyances, &c. (Ireland) Bill were severally read a third time and passed.

The Bombardment of Sonderburg.—The Earl of Shaftesbury called the attention of the House to the bombardment of Sonderburg, which having had been bombarded without previous notice having been given. In the course of the discussion which followed, the Earl of DERBY pointed it one of the most cruel, one of the most outrageous acts ever perpetrated. The Earl of CLARENDON, the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, and the Earl of Hardwicke, all spoke in the same sense, and the subject then dropped.

The Queen's Speech.—The Lord CHANCELLOR announced that it would be at once disgraceful to put a stop to such cowardly and unjustifiable conduct. He trusted that the Government would be prepared to take immediate steps for the protection of the British subjects.

Lord PALMERSTON said that, having at first declined to accept Mr. Stansfeld's resignation, he had made many attempts to induce him to do so; but that gentleman had made up his mind to retire from office. He (Lord Palmerston) regretted the fact, and he would only express his regret at the loss of a member of the Government whose ability and integrity he had so frequently had occasion to admire. He repeated his former statement that he believed Mr. Bernhard was capable of the intentions which had been attributed to him in the pamphlet, but that Mr. Bernhard had been entirely incapable of such sentiments and actions as had been attributed to him in reference to the Emperor of the French, on whom the noble Lord passed a warm eulogy.

The subject then dropped.

THE NAVY ESTIMATES.

The House resolved itself into Committee of Supply for consideration of the Navy Estimates.

On the vote for £1,564,100 for naval stores for the building, repair, and outfit of the fleet, steam machinery, and ships built by contract, a desultory debate ensued, in the course of which Lord Clarence Paget was asked by Mr. Baillie to explain what was the policy of the Government with reference to the purchase on the part of foreign Governments of armour-plates was to continue building armour-plated ships, and to forego the building of wooden ships of war.

The question of wooden ships to be armour-plated was one which the Government establishments was subsequently brought under notice; and Mr. Laird took occasion to express his satisfaction that the building of ships by contract had never been fairly tested, inasmuch as the plans for the ships ordered to be constructed by contract were definitely over-ruled and altered by the Board; and his sentiments, whose hands were so bound that no opportunity was afforded them for the exercise of their talents and experience. In his opinion it would be better to abandon contracts altogether than to tie up the hands of contractors to an impossible task.

The vote was ultimately agreed to, as were the following votes:—

£661,312 for steam machinery in the Department of the Comptroller of the Navy.

£52,370 for medicines and medical stores.

£36,000 for medical establishments.

£607,700 for half pay, reserved half pay, and retired pay of the Navy and Royal Marines.

£400,981 for military pensions and allowances.

£376,000 for civil pensions and allowances.

And £334,420 for the conveyance of troops.

The whole of the Navy Estimates have now been agreed to, with the exception of that for the establishments abroad.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The House resumed sitting for the first time after the Easter holidays.

The report of amendments on the Mails for Cattle Bill was brought up and agreed to.

The Lunacy and Sales of Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

The Court of Session Regulation Bill (Scotland) and the Poor Removal (Ireland) Bill were passed through Committee.

The Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

Female Registrars in Ireland.—The Earl of Donoughmore referred to the case of the men who had been received into the United States ship of war to be employed as "contrabands" during the late war in the capitals, that he did not know of their being in the vessel, was contrary to the despatches of the noble Earl himself—that the noble Earl had left it to the determination of the American Minister to the case, and he was informed by him that instructions had been issued by the Secretary of the Navy to prevent the officer in charge of the vessel who infringed the Foreign Enlistment Act should be punished. He had also been informed by the Minister that the case was left with the Executive of the United States, but that the men were not to be delivered either the American Consul or the captain of the Scarrage was dismissed in this matter.—The Earl of Russell said that the noble Earl was correct in stating that his question was examined, attended, and at first in the American uniform on board the Scarrage; and it was, therefore, natural that he took any of the officers of the ship could be unaware of the circumstance.—The Marquis of Clanricarde inquired whether the Government had received the sum of Her Majesty's dockyards under the circumstances.

Removal of Remains from Old Cemeteries.—The Marquis of Clanricarde moved for correspondence relating to the removal of the remains of the late Archbishop Whately from the old cemetery to the new, the wishes of their friends, the accredited agents of the deceased, to the contrary, and that it was quite possible to keep up the system of Cemetic without disturbing the dead bodies.—After some observations from the Earl of Carlisle, the motion was agreed to, and their Lordships adjourned at a quarter to seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

The report on Supply was brought up and agreed to.

The Select Committee on Turnpike Bills was appointed.

The amendments to the Union Relief Aid Acts Continuance Bill were considered and agreed to.

Mr. Layard, in answer to Colonel Dickson, said that, in the judgment of an American prize court, the ship Saxon was to be given up to the owner, free of all charges. He trusted that Her Majesty's Government was to be tried for the killing of the mate of the Saxon.

LOCAL TAXATION.

Mr. Alderman Salomons called attention to the exemption from local taxation enjoyed by a large amount of property belonging to Government departments, and moved that all lands and buildings used and occupied for public purposes should be assessed to local taxes.—After a long discussion,

Mr. Mowbray supported the motion, urging the case of his own constituents, who were greatly suffering from the want of it.

Mr. Hankey opposed the motion on the ground that the payment of local taxes would only come out of the taxation of the country.

Several hon. members having spoken in favour of the motion,

Mr. Ayrton said that he could not agree that the principle Government property to the payment of rates had been in some instances conceded, it did not follow that all Government buildings should be so subject to local rating as private property. In those cases where the public establishments caused a considerable increase to the population of a locality, contributions were made to the rates.

The debate was continued for some time, the speeches running principally in favour of the motion.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer declined to commit himself to the principle involved in the question, but thought the Government of the country would account to an endowment of parishes at the public expense. He stated that the subject was under consideration by the Government.

On a division the motion was lost by 62 to 30.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

Colonel Strange took the oaths and his seat on his election for the county of Armagh, in the room of Mr. Close, resigned.

The Copyright Bill was withdrawn, leave being given to Mr. Black to bring in a bill in the event to consolidate and amend the laws relating to copyright.

The Chain Cables and Anchors Bill passed through Committee, with some amendments.

The Jersey Court Bill—the object of which is to amend the present system of the Royal Court of Jersey, where at present twelve jurats, who are not

The Registration of County Voters (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

The Union Relief Aid Continuance Bill was read a third time and passed.

A new writ was ordered for the borough of Launceston, in the room of Mr. Garnett, resigned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill was read a second time.

The Mail for Aberdeen Bill, The Court of Session (Expenses of Business) Bill, and the Conveyances, &c. (Ireland) Bill were severally read a third time and passed.

The Bombardment of Sonderburg.—The Earl of Shaftesbury called the attention of the House to the bombardment of Sonderburg, which having had been bombarded without previous notice having been given. In the course of the discussion which followed, the Earl of DERBY pointed it one of the most cruel, one of the most outrageous acts ever perpetrated. The Earl of CLARENDON, the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, and the Earl of Hardwicke, all spoke in the same sense, and the subject then dropped.

The Queen's Speech.—The Lord CHANCELLOR announced that it would be at once disgraceful to put a stop to such cowardly and unjustifiable conduct. He trusted that the Government would be prepared to take immediate steps for the protection of the British subjects.

THE BUDGET.

The House having gone into Committee of Ways and Means,

Mr. GLADSTONE said that, in the usual annual financial clearing, to bring forward his annual statement of the financial condition of the country. He assumed that the House would expect that he should first look back to the financial distress in Ireland and in the manufacturing districts, but that distress had now passed away. The actual expenditure for the past financial year was £68,285,000, but the actual expenditure had only been £67,000,000, leaving a surplus of £1,285,000, which would be applied to the reduction of a million sterling. Comparing the expenditure of the past year with that of the year 1859-60, the increase was £3,000,000, but of that sum £1,000,000 was for the increase of the Army and Navy Estimates, leaving only £2,000,000 for civil services and sugar duties, &c., since the year 1860-1 had amounted to £4,668,000; and the increase of the Army and Navy Estimates to £2,000,000, leaving £2,668,000. The effect of that was to show that the increase of revenue from the same or similar sources was £668,000 more than the increase of the expenditure for the year. The liquidation of debt within the year had been £2,000,000, leaving a surplus, including £300,000, expended on the Mexican expedition, of £1,285,000, and a further sum of 300,000, upon another account, making a total of £1,585,000, which would be applied to the reduction of the debt. As regarded the huge total of the debt, it was always a matter of interest to know how it stood as compared with previous years. In the year 1815, when the debt was first authentically taken to the amount of between three and four hundred millions, the interest of the debt was £32,000,000, and the charge for the sinking fund was £3,000,000, making a total of £35,000,000. It was to be regarded it as a very serious drawback. The total debt was £801,315,000, at the present moment, and the interest £26,000,000, and the sinking fund £3,000,000, making a total of £29,000,000; and during the Russian War it was raised to £30,000,000. Since the year 1815, the debt, which then stood at the highest amount known, was £61,349,000, showing, after all, a reduction of £30,000,000 sterling. He thought it was one of the wisdom and prudence of the Ministers and Parliaments of the country, the interest and sinking fund of the debt, duly and honourably to work it down to a petty, although still subject to very serious drawbacks. In 1861 the imports were £164,000,000, and the exports £135,000,000; in 1862, £181,000,000 and £146,000,000; in 1863, £189,000,000 and £160,000,000. These were the most significant total cessation of the most important taxpayer—namely, the cotton manufacture. In 1860, 1,390,000,000 lbs. of cotton were used, and the manufactures were 125,000,000l.; in 1862, 124,000,000l.; and, in 1861, 1,040,000,000 lbs., and the manufactures were 115,000,000l.; in 1862, 587,000,000 lbs., and, in 1863, 444,000,000. These results showed that since 1861, when Parliament met, the cotton manufacture, which employed a large proportion of the country, had totally ceased; and nothing could more forcibly testify to the fact that the cotton trade was not in a healthy condition than the fact that the exports of cotton goods in 1863 were 160,000,000l., while the value of the raw material was 189,000,000l. The result was, he proceed to show how this policy had affected various trade. He had received from the Board of Trade returns showing that since the reduction of the duty the price had fallen from 24 to 14d. per lb.; and that, although the duty had been reduced one-half, the price was the same as at the time, the diminution, which had then steadily increased up to the year 1860, when the duty was reduced one-half. In 1842 the number of paper-makers was 885; in 1846, 447; in 1858, 381; in 1859, 361; in 1860, 341; in 1861, 326; and in 1862, 309, showing that since 1842 it had recently been furnished with some remarkable facts showing how greatly the consumption of paper had increased since the reduction of the duties. It was to be hoped that they could do by the improvement of their processes of manufacture what they had done in the cotton trade. The number of persons employed in the paper trade in 1842 was 15,000, and that including a large number of women, at 20 per ton; and the article was a better one now than in the former year. At the present time, when the duty of 1d. per lb. on paper had not been suffered, was still not so prosperous as he should like to see it. But he had reason to hope that, in 1864, the consumption would be found to increase with respect to the export of rags from that country. He would next take the case of glass, which was subject to the duty, had increased since the year 1845 to the duty was raised to a high point, it being the desire of Parliament to raise a large revenue from that source, and consequently the largest amount of revenue. The expectation of a large revenue from that source had not been realised, and the duty was not so much a matter of the duty, but of the quantity consumed. The duty was 3s. 6d. per cwt. in 1845, and that including a large amount of window glass. In 1862 the duty was 12,281,000l., and that including a large amount of window glass. In 1863 the duty was 12,281,000l., and that including a large amount of window glass. The total revenue from British and colonial spirits in 1853-60 was 2,716,000l., and in 1861-2 it was 2,600,000l., showing that, in the latter portion of the year 1862-3, when it was affected by the prevailing distress, to 1,618

MR. HUSSEY believed that the matter, although it might not be possible to abolish it, might be remodelled, so as to give the poorer classe to be supplied with a better and more wholesome beverage.

MR. CHILDERS eulogised the Budget, which would be most satisfactory to the public at large. He, however, would suggest that it would be better to reduce the fire insurance duty by 5d. all round than to take 1s. 6d. off a portion of it.

After some remarks from Sir J. Ferguson and other members,

MR. WALDEN approved of the general features of the Budget, but objected in the partial relief of the insurance duty, which would only benefit a class. It would be more desirable to have great further and examined the general income.

MR. FORTESCUE said he believed that a reduction in the fire insurance duty would be recuperative.

After some remarks from Colonel Sykes and others,

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER said that the resolution would not bind the House formally, and he therefore thought that the Committee might agree to his proposals. The discussion had been somewhat desultory, but he was not at all disposed generally to complain of it. In the matter in which his statement and proposals had been received, for nothing could be more satisfactory as far as he was concerned. Indeed, the strong conviction was that it would not be advisable, nor for the interest of the agricultural body, to repeal the malt tax at the present time. He must also object to the proposal to reduce the fire insurance duty by 5d. all round. He did not think the reduction of 1s. 6d. on a portion of the duty would be better to be met until a more convenient opportunity for making a reduction, the benefit of which would be more general. He was also of opinion that the House would be better satisfied with a reduction of 1s. 6d. on a portion of the fire insurance, which was different in itself to all the other portions of that tax, than with the whole of the 5d. reduction which would not be felt, and which would not lead to any recovery in the revenue. With respect to the income tax, he begged to state that it was his view of the reduction, he estimated that it would amount to the same as last year, and that would be two millions and a half. He was sure that the spirit of the new assessment would be felt to a greater extent in future than it had hitherto been. He had also to state that the assertion that the increase in the duty had led to an increase in the illicit distillation in Ireland, where, in those years in which the price of corn was moderate and the price low, there was always a tendency to illicit distillation. With respect to the paper duty, he was not, when he made his statement, quite sure whether any duty on rags had been repealed in the French treaty, although he believed that it had been; but since then he had learned from a paper which had been laid on the table by the President of the Board of Trade that this was actually the case.

Progress was then reported.

The House then went into Committee on the Army Estimates, which occupied the remainder of the sitting.

THE GRAND NATIONAL HUNT STEEPLECHASES AT MELTON

MOWBRAY.—SECOND DAY.

Farmers' Stake.—Fred, 1. Mythling, 2. Mr. Gardner, 3.

Pot Hunting Steeplechase.—Lucinius, 1. Merriman, 2. Leading Article, 3.

Handicap Steeplechase.—Cockchafer, 1. Mr. Gardner, 2. Mr. Jackson, 3.

Steeplechase of 15 sovs.—Tuscarora, 1. Rococo, 2. Grey Fire, 3.

Dealers' Stakes.—Moonbeam, 1. Mr. Gardner, 2. Mr. Jackson, 3.

THIRSK SPRING MEETING.—THURSDAY.

Sowerby Plate.—Madeline, 1. Brother Sam, 2. Operator, 3.

Mowbray Stakes.—The Vicar, 1. Mr. Gardner, 2. Mr. Jackson, 3.

Hunt Cup.—Adonis, 1. Verdad, 2. Mr. Gardner, 3. Mr. Jackson, 4.

Members' Plate.—Good Advice, 1. Acorn, 2. Scarborough, 3.

Hambleton Plate.—Mr Mary, 1. Mr. Gardner, 2. Mr Wallis, 3.

WEDNESDAY.

Scurry Handicap.—Gaveston, 1. Accountant, 2. Wonder, 3.

Silver Cup.—Fly-by-Night, 1. Rosemary, 2. Southern Scots, 3.

Thirsk Handicap.—Mr. Summerscales, 1. Mr. Gardner, 2.

Tyro Stakes.—Catalogue, 1. Chaddington, 2. 3.

North Riding Farmers Cup.—Joy, 1. Mr. Beswing, 2.

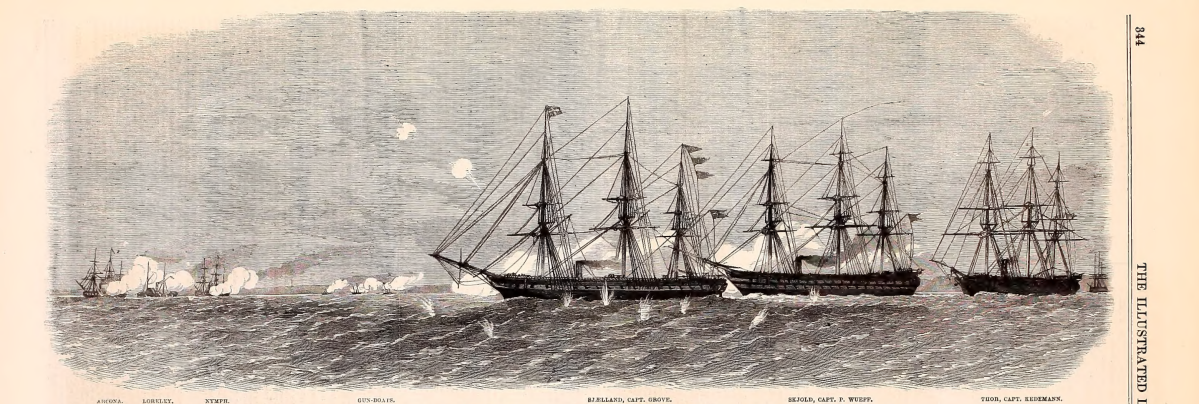
RUSSIAN RACES.—THURSDAY.

City and Suburban.—Merry Hart, 1. Bradamante, 2. Lord Burleigh, 3.

Two-year-old Stakes.—Constantinople, 1. Hungary, 2. Ambrosia, 3.

Ackerman Plate.—Prescription, 1. Alchymist, 2. Attraction, 3.

Trial Stakes.—Ariadne, 1. Vivid, 2. Mr. Stone's, 3.



Heathhouse Plate.—Trumpa, 1. Virginia, 2. Tailor, 3.

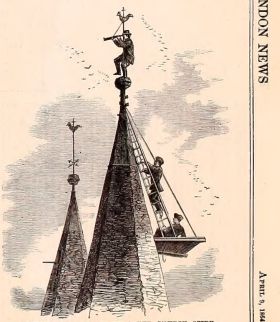
Acerdon Bridge Stakes.—Lesbia, 1. Vampire, 2. Belle Bella, 3.

An official inquiry has been ordered by the Board of Trade into the circumstances attending the disaster to the City of New York Atlantic steamer by striking on Saunt's Rock in the entrance to Queenstown Harbour. The inquiry will be held at Liverpool next week.

The first meeting of the Edinburgh Exhibition Society of Great Britain was held on Monday, in the great room of the Society of Arts, for the purpose of reading several papers on the subject of the proposed great exhibition in Great Britain, and places in the colonies that could be acclimatised in this country. Mr. Robert Bare occupied the chair. The first paper read was one by Mr. Frank Buckland, "On the Reports received from Hong-Kong, Labuan, Borneo, and Australia, relative to Sending Fish Ova and Spawn," and was an acclimatisation in Great Britain. Mr. Lowe, the joint secretary of the Society, then read a paper on the culture of the oyster, and the natural history of the oyster from the time of the Romans, and referred to the history the older Play had written on the subject, and the fact that the Romans were famous for grown the importance of cultivating the oyster it would be found in the market value. Two years ago the oysters sold in the London market for about 8s. per bushel, but now they were 20s. Common oysters which were 2s. per 100 years ago, were now from 10s. to 24s. The price of natives used to be 4d. per dozen, but they were now 1s. 6d. and 2s. Colchester oysters were 2s. 6d. There were also very interesting details respecting the oyster, and urged that many miles of our coasts which were now unproductive might be made productive oyster-beds. Mr. A. W. Crichton read a paper on the game birds and animals of Canada, which was a short discussion.

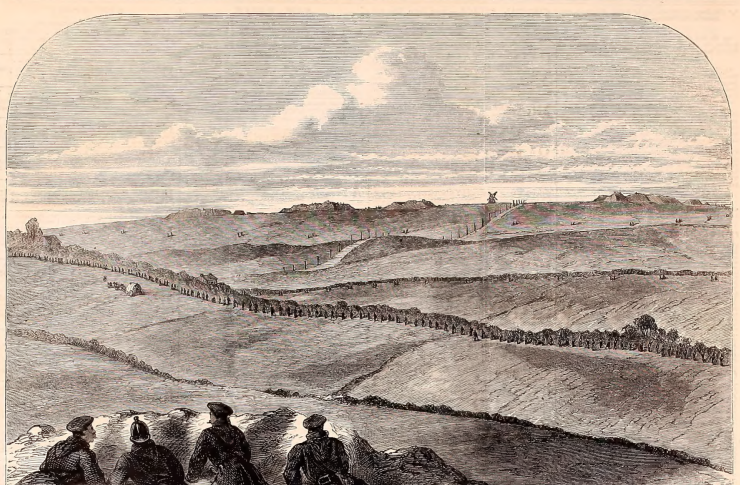
A meeting of the Royal National Life-boat Institution was held on Thursday, at the Mansion-house, London, when the receipts of £691 were voted to the crews of various life-boats of the institution, and of which 40 were voted to the crews of various life-boats of the institution, and of which 40 were voted to the crews of various life-boats of the institution, and of which 40

THE WAR IN DENMARK: DANISH CRUISERS OFF RUGEN CHASING A PRUSSIAN FLOTILLA INTO SWINEMÜNDE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR DANISH CORRESPONDENT.



PRUSSIAN OUTPOST AT THE CORNER OF BUFFEL-KOPPEL WOOD.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

ports of Pomerania from the 15th of March last, some ships of war were ordered to cruise off the Island of Rügen and the mouth of the river Oder. They encountered very heavy weather until the 17th, when the sea was calm. Some Prussian gun-boats had been observed reconnoitering on the previous day under the land at a great distance. The Danish cruisers consisted of three screw-steamers, one frigate, and two corvettes. A line-of-battle ship joined the fleet early on the 17th, and in the course of the same day a few more Danish steamers hove in sight, but too far off to be of any service. About eleven a.m. the Danish ships observed the smoke of steamers to the southward, and an hour or two after a Prussian flotilla, consisting of the heavy 28-gun screw-corvettes Arcona and Nymph, the wheel-steamer Loreley, and six or eight steam gun-boats, were seen steering northwards. Admiral Van Dockum, who had his flag on board the 42-gun screw-frigate Sjolland, now signalled the other ships to follow him, and, accordingly, the 64-gun screw line-of-battle ship Skjold, the 12-gun corvette Thor, and the 16-gun corvette Heimdal, steamed off in a line, following the Admiral's flag. On observing this the Prussians made about, at a distance of two sea miles from the pursuing Danes, running for their port and exchanging shots with them as best they could. Of the Prussian ships the three largest, and of the Danish ships the two largest, only were engaged, for about two hours—from three to five—and the pursuit ended at seven p.m., when the corvettes, which managed to keep their distance, without which they would have been lost, escaped into Swinemünde, and the gun-boats ran under the land of Rügen. The Loreley and one of the corvettes were badly raked; and their loss of killed and wounded, which, they say, were one officer, a pilot, and thirteen men, must have been considerable. It is well known that Prussia (like Russia) does not allow her real losses to transpire. The Danish Admiral's ship had three seamen dead and nineteen wounded; the other ship none. The greatest animation prevails in the Danish fleet.

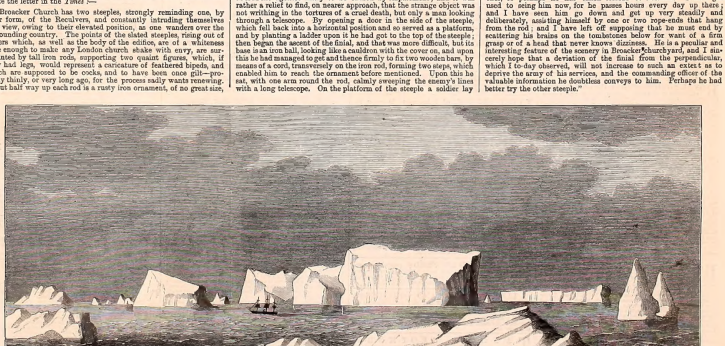


The sketch we have engraved shows the Prussian vessels, Arcona, Loreley, and Nymph, running away as fast as they can, on the left hand, while the Prussian gun-boats lie as close as possible to the shore. The foremost of the Danish ships is the Sjolland, the second is the Skjold, and the Thor comes last, all steaming their best in pursuit of the retreating foe, despite a shower of shot and shell from the Prussian gun-boats flying through the air and falling harmlessly into the sea. The land beyond is the Isle of Rügen, on the Baltic coast, just opposite Copenhagen.

PRUSSIAN OUTPOST AT THE CORNER OF BUFFEL-KOPPEL WOOD.

In the small sketch engraved under this title our Special Artist has depicted one of those rude straw huts improvised for the shelter of the Prussian soldiers on outpost duty in various directions around the encampment of their army at Broacker. The Buffel-Koppel Wood, which is traversed by the high road from Flensburg to Sonderborg, is situated between the inlet of the Nübel Noer to the west and the heights of Dapel to the east, occupying the little isthmus or neck of land which joins the Broagerland peninsula to the mainland of Sundewitt. It is essential, therefore, to the safety of the Prussian army, that they should guard this position against a sudden attack. As it commands the road to both the hostile camps, all passing strangers are stopped and narrowly scrutinised by the non-commissioned officers stationed here. In our Artist's sketch we see a gentleman on horseback, who has just submitted his passport to the inspection of the sergeant, and appears to be replying to his questions upon it.

PRUSSIAN LOOK-OUT ON BROACKER CHURCH SPIRE, FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.



THE WAR IN DENMARK: SKETCH OF THE REDOUBTS NOS. 4, 5, 6, AND 7, AT DUPPEL, SHOWING THE DANISH AND THE PRUSSIAN OUTPOST SENTRIES. FROM A SKETCH TAKEN ON THE RUHNENBERG HILL, BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

A PRUSSIAN LOOK-OUT MAN ON THE SPIRE OF BROACKER CHURCH.

The special correspondent of the Times at the Prussian head-quarters, in his letter of March 30, gave a rather amusing description of the look-out man climbing the church spire of Broacker to obtain a bird's-eye view of the country around. Since our own Artist has chosen the same figure for an Illustration, we cannot do better than quote the letter in the Times:—

"Broacker Church has two steeples, strongly reminding one, by their form, of the Beefeaters, and constantly intruding themselves into view, owing to their elevated position, as one wanders over the surrounding country. The points of the slated steeples, rising out of towers which, as well as the body of the edifice, are of a whiteness pure enough to make any London church shake with envy, are surmounted by tall iron rods, supporting two quaint figures, which, if they had legs, would represent a caricature of feathered bipeds, and which are supposed to be cocks, and to have been once gilt—probably thinly, or very long ago, for the process sadly wants renewing. About half way up each rod is a rusty iron ornament, of no great size, and of a form difficult to describe, but from below they looked to me like iron Catherine wheels, the rods passing through their centre. On one of the first days that I was at Broacker, returning home towards dusk, I was startled at seeing a living creature, whose genus I could not immediately define, apparently transfixed on the iron rod of the north steeple. Its limbs moved and curled themselves round the rod, as if in the agonies likely to be caused by impalement; and it was rather a relief to find, on nearer approach, that the strange object was not writhing in the tortures of a cruel death, but only a man looking through a telescope. By opening a door in the side of the steeple, which fell back into a horizontal position and so served as a platform, and by planting a ladder upon it he had got to the top of the steeple; then began the ascent of the finial, and that was more difficult, but its base is an iron ball, looking like a cauldron with the cover on, and upon this he had managed to get and thence firmly to fix two wooden bars, by means of a cord, transversely on the iron rod, forming two steps, which enabled him to reach the ornament before mentioned. Upon this he sat, with one arm round the rod, calmly sweeping the enemy's lines with a long telescope. On the platform of the steeple a soldier lay upon his back looking up at this adventurous climber, and probably transmitting his communications to some one within. By the aid of my glass I made out that the man on the rod was tall, and stout, and bearded, and that he seemed as much at his ease in that perilous post as if he had passed his life there. Assuredly he must, at one time or another, have been either a sailor or a tiler, or perhaps he has taken lessons of Blondin. I have got used to seing him now, for he passes hours every day up there; and I have seen him go down and get up very steadily and deliberately, assisting himself by one or two rope-ends that hang from the rod; and I have left off supposing that he must end by scattering his brains on the tombstones below for want of a firm grasp or of a head that never knows dizziness. He is a peculiar and interesting feature of the scenery in Broacker churchyard, and I sincerely hope that a deviation of the finial from the perpendicular, which I to-day observed, will not increase to such an extent as to deprive the army of his services, and the commanding officer of the valuable information he doubtless conveys to him. Perhaps he had better try the other steeple."

H.M.S. HIMALAYA AMONG ICEBERGS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC.—SEE PAGE 343.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTH.

On the 16th of December, 1863, at South End, Adyar, Madras, the wife of J. T. Fowler, Esq., H. M. Inspector of Normal Schools in the Madras Presidency, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 30th ult., at Newton Kyme, Yorkshire, by the Rev. John Chaloner, Rector, David Craigie Halkett, Esq., Lieutenant 93rd Highlanders, son of the late Colonel Craigie Halkett, Esq., of Cramond, Midlothian, to Constance Mary, eldest daughter of Thomas Fairfax, Esq., of Newton Kyme, Yorkshire.

At the residence of the bride's father, St. Peter Street, by the Rev. John Abercrombie, M.A., Rector of St. Mary's, Kirk, Edinburgh, Francis Fane, eldest son of William Fane, Esq., of Fenton Barns, Drem, Haddingtonshire, to Georgina Bagg, widow of the late Thomas Campbell, merchant, and only daughter of James Cleghorn, Montreal.

On the 17th ult., at Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, Canada, by the Rev. E. Sandys Lonsdale, Rector of Hull, Canada West, William George Sewhine, Esq., the Prince of Wales's Own Rifle Brigade, to Mary Isabella Jane Bregan Army, to Rhinebeck Harriett, second daughter of Thomas Bayley Esq., of Montreal, formerly of Saunton Brook, Bucks.

DEATH.

On the 24th inst., at Sydenham, Mary Ann, the beloved wife of the Rev. W. Taylor Jones, M.A., of Sydenham College.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE. Manager—Messrs. H. FALCONER and F. B. CHATTERTON. Every THURSDAY EVENING, during the season, will be performed THE ROSE OF CASTILLE, with the original cast (by permission of the author and by the public generally to be one of the most efficient ever produced at this theatre), supported by Miss Louisa Pyne and Mr. Harrison. The cast, including the chorus, is of a most powerful and talented nature, of the Marquis, Mr. Phelps; Manuel, Walter Fenton; Don Caesar, Mr. Aynsley Cook; Don Jose, Mr. Hardy; Don Ramiro, Mr. Wallworth; Alcalde, Mr. Stephens; Pedro, Mr. Lyall; Francisco, and Miss Emmeline Fabrini. The scenery and appointments painted by Mr. William Beverley, the costumes, newest, unique designs, all the stage appointments under the direction of Mr. Falconer. Doors open at half-past six, commencing with, for the last time, the popular farce, entitled, and justly claim of the theatre as they have been for the last twenty years, the Wonder, with the original cast, and with appointments as at present. Concluding with the new and original drama, in 3 acts, entitled A QUEEN before Night o'Clock each Evening. Preceded by the popular MARIONETTES, and by the performance of Mr. Punch, with a New and Original Patter, entitled AN APRIL FOOL—Mr. Punch. Commencing at Seven o'clock. Private boxes, stalls, and tickets for admission to the Grand Tier and Amphitheatre to be had of Mr. Austen, at the Box-office of the theatre, open from Ten to Five daily. Doors at Seven.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET. MONDAY, APRIL 11th, and during the remainder of the season, every evening (except Saturday), at Seven o'clock, will be performed a new and original comedy, in 3 acts, entitled TWIXT AXE AND CROWN. On Saturday, April 23, and the production of a new Comedy on Saturday, April 30. Mr. and Mrs. German Reed, Mr. Arthur Sketchley, and Miss Fanny Holland. Miss Miriam Lane, Mr. Compton, and Mr. Howe. The new Scene piece of VENUS AND ADONIS Every Evening.

ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE, Strand.—Sole lessee and manager, Mr. PETER BRANSCOMBE. On APRIL 4, and during the Week, THE DAY AFTER THE FAIR—Mrs. Alfred Mellon, Miss Marie Wilton, Mr. Alfred Mellon, and Mr. Compton. After which, at Seven, a new and original Comic Pantomime by Messrs. F. Morton, Jordan, Chaston, and Lingham, entitled HARLEQUIN AND THE FAIR ONE WITH GOLDEN HAIR, or, Harlequin Humpty Dumpty. Box-office open daily from Ten to Five. Commence at Seven.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI. Lessee and manager, Mr. WEBSTER. Every MONDAY, SUNDAY and during the Week, BIS ON PARLE FRANCAIS. Mr. Paul Bedford, Mr. Wright, Mr. Webster, Mr. Newbound, Mr. Fisher, Mr. Billington, Mr. Hill, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Hudson, Miss M. Oliver, and THE AREA BELLE. Mrs. Keeley, Mrs. Leigh, Mrs. Buckingham, and Miss Woolgar. Doors open at Seven.

ROYAL ST. JAMES'S THEATRE. Manager, Mr. BENJAMIN WEBSTER.—On MONDAY, EVERY EVENING during the Week, at Seven, DAY AFTER THE FAIR. Mr. Frederick Robinson and Miss Rosina Cae First Appearance On Wednesday, April 6, and during the Week, THE ROSE OF CASTILLE. Miss Louisa Pyne, Mr. Harrison, Mr. Aynsley Cook, Mr. Stephens, Mr. Frederick Clifton, Miss Emmeline Fabrini, Miss Clara Denvil, Miss Charles Mathews, Mrs. Frank Matthews, Miss A. Cottrell. Miss Fanny Holland, Miss Miriam Lane, Mr. Howe, Mr. Compton, and Mr. Arthur Sketchley. Concluding with UNDER THE ROSE. Mr. Arthur Sketchley, Miss Paul Josephs, and Miss A. Cottrell.

MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY will APPEAR at the ST. JAMES'S THEATRE, Tuesday, May 3rd, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, May 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 9th, in his Entertainment, entitled PARIS, entitled PARIS, and MRS. BROWN AT THE PLAY, Every Evening at Eight o'clock. Stalls, 5s.; Area, 3s.; Gallery, 2s. Tickets to be had of Mr. Austen, at the Box-office of the Hall open between the hours of Eleven and Five daily.

MR. and MRS. GERMAN REED, with MR. ARTHUR SKETCHLEY, will APPEAR at ST. JAMES'S HALL, PICCADILLY, To-morrow (last few times) with MRS. BROWN AT THE PLAY, and PARIS, Every Evening at Eight o'clock. Stalls, 5s.; Area, 3s.; Gallery, 2s. Reserved seats.

JESSY LEA.—OPERA DI CAMERA. Composed by G. A. Macfarren, Esq. EVERY TUESDAY AFTERNOON, at Three o'clock, NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, with Mrs. A. Kennedy, Lecturer on Chemistry, and Mr. Alfred Swaine Taylor, M.D., Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence, illustrated by Experiments. Admission, 1s.

SHAKESPEARE TERCENTENARY FESTIVAL.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL HALL, Islington. On THURSDAY, APRIL 21, will take place a GRAND FESTIVAL PERFORMANCE of SACRED and SECULAR MUSIC, commemorative of Shakespeare's birth-tercentenary, when the following eminent artists will appear:—Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, Miss Lascelles, Miss Palmer, Mrs. Lockey, Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington, Mr. Sims Reeves, Mr. Santley, Mr. Weiss, and Mr. Henry Phillips. The orchestra (regarding which we have not as yet completed our arrangements) will be under the direction of Mr. Costa, assisted by Mr. Benedict, Mr. Alfred Mellon, Mr. Hamilton Clarke, Mr. Sydney Naylor, Mr. Reed, Mr. Forbes, Mr. Richard Blagrove, Mr. Howell, Mr. Winn, and Mr. Lazarus. Mr. Phipps, the eminent organist, will read the first act of the "Tempest" to the music composed for it by Purcell. Mr. Sims Reeves will sing "Arise, ye subterranean winds," from the "Tempest," Purcell; Mr. Santley, "Where the bee sucks," Arne; Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington, "Come unto these yellow sands," Purcell; Miss Palmer, "Full fathom five," Purcell; Mrs. Lockey, "Ariel's song," Stevens; Mr. Weiss, and the Messrs. Phillips, the madrigal, "Hark, hark the lark," Dowland; Miss Lascelles, "Where the bee sucks," Arne; Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington, "Where the bee sucks," Arne; Mr. Sims Reeves, "Under the greenwood tree," Bishop; Mr. Santley, "Blow, blow thou winter wind," Stevens; Mr. Henry Phillips, "Orpheus with his lute," Haydn; Mr. Weiss, "Tell me where is fancy bred," Purcell; Mr. Sims Reeves and Mr. Santley, "Come unto these yellow sands," Purcell; Mrs. Lockey, Miss Palmer, Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington, and Mr. Henry Phillips, "Where the bee sucks," Arne; Mr. Sims Reeves, "Orpheus with his lute," Haydn; Mr. Santley, "Where the bee sucks," Arne; Mr. Lemmens-Sherrington, "Under the greenwood tree," Bishop

NEW MUSIC.

C. M. E. OLIVER'S NEW BALLAD,
OH! BLOW ME A KISS ON THE WIND.
Price 24 stamps. One of the best of this Composer's early songs.
HOWARD and CRUCH, 18, New Bond-street.

WORDS BY LONGFELLOW.
THE RIVER. By C. M. E. OLIVER.
Price 24 stamps. A very pleasing ballad, beautifully illustrated.
HOWARD and CRUCH, 18, New Bond-street.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST OF NEW PIANOFORTE PUBLICATIONS.
PRAISE ARTS NEW SONGS—"Searching with Green," 2s. 6d.; "Sweetest Flower," 2s. 6d.; "Sweet Bird," 2s. 6d.; "Sweet Lips," 2s. 6d.; "SHAKES TO THEE, Sweet Love," 2s. 6d. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. COME UNTO ME and THEY SHALL HUNGER NO MORE. Sacred Song. Words from the Bible. 2s. 6d. Sung by Mr. Lawler. "THE SUMMER IS DEAD," by Wrighton. Sung by Mr. Sims Reeves. RETURN HE CONSORT," by Virlet. By Brinley Richards, 2s. 6d. THE FIRST SNOWDROP. By Brinley Richards. Price 2s. 6d. Illustrated.
NEW DANCE MUSIC.
WEDDING QUADRILLES on the Theme of Music. By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 4s. net.
FRATERNITY WALTZES. By Brinley Richards. Price 4s. net.
NEW PIANOFORTE DUETS.—"DON PIANOFORTE, in Waltzes and Renewed, 4s. net; "Don Pianoforte Renewed," 4s. net. Illustrated covers and portraits free.
Publishers to Her Majesty the Queen, 6, New Burlington-street, W. Publishers to Her Majesty the Queen, 6, New Burlington-street, W. Publishers to Her Majesty the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Emperor of the French. Manufactory, 10, New Burlington-street, W. and Co., Chichester.

NEW COMIC SONG.—"THE MERMAID."
By Tom Hood, to G. R. S., on every shore, yet unalterable; and, Price 24 stamps. Illustrated by Brunton. Sung with immense success by Mr. Arthur Lloyd. Illustrated copies of large size, post-free for 24 stamps.
ENOCH, 71, WILLIAM-S., Tottenham-ct.-r.

CHISSHOLME and SONS' (from C. Brinsmead, late of Holland Street, Blackfriars) new Cottage Pianoforte, 7 octaves, 25 guineas. Check action Semi-Grands, 35 guineas. Full compass, 7 octaves, elegant cabinet, trichord throughout, 45 guineas.

MUSICAL-BOX DEPÔTS, 56, Cheapside, and 29, Ludgate-street. Sloane's large Musical Box, 12 airs, 4 guineas; 18 airs, 6 guineas; 24 airs, 8 guineas. Catalogues gratis and post-free, on application to Walter and Sloane, Sole Agents. The largest Stock in London, with newest accompaniments.

MUSIC FOR SALE OR HIRE for the Sole or Shooting Gentleman. Messrs. BOOSEY and SONS have the honour to call the attention of Gentlemen to their Stock of Music for the above beautiful and cheap publication, and have NOW ON SALE, at half the published price, the following:—"Rose of Allandale," "Bonnie Dundee," "Bonnie Scotland," "Bonnie Dundee," "Bonnie Scotland," "Bonnie Dundee," "Bonnie Scotland

NEW MUSIC.

GARIBALDI'S GALOP. By CHARLES BLAMEY. One of Blamey's best Galops. Beautifully illustrated with a Portrait of the great General. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI'S HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte by HAROLD THOMAS. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI MARCH, for the Harmonium. By LOUIS ENGEL. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW TRIOS for THREE PERFORMERS on ONE PIANOFORTE.—The following are just published, arranged expressly for the Pianoforte by Dr. S. ARNDALE. Price 4s. each:—
No. 1. D'Albert's Palermo Quadrille.
No. 2. Gung'l's Fairy Dream Waltz.
No. 3. D'Albert's Mont Blanc Quadrille.
No. 4. Gounod's "Ad o dema." Polka.
No. 5. Mercer's Gipsy Song with Dance.
No. 6. Meinhardus's Wedding March.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed of the popular Tunes of the day, by CHARLES COOTE. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY, Bandmaster of the Coldstream Guards, and Director of Music at Aldershot Camps, with immense success. Just published. Price 4s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By CARLO CATOZZI, Composer of the Serpentine Galop. Just published. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a Galop by LUDOVIC CROZIER, on the popular Galop Gaiety. Originally illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 5s.; Septet, 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

E. DE PARIS' L'APPEL. Galop di Bravura for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA. This popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S CHRISTMAS-TIDE. Original Fantasia on Airs from Rossini's favourite Operas, for the Pianoforte, by the popular composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a Grand Transcription for the Pianoforte of Airs from the charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBILE. Just published, Kuhe's new Salon piece, full of originality and fairyism with great success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREXELL'S LA PRIÈRE D'UNE MÈRE. Seventh post Piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREXELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP, Fantasia for the Pianoforte. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

TREXELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S EMMELINE. Just published, Goodban's new Valse, with Portrait. Price 3s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S BRIGAND'S DANCE. Disposition Scenes. For the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite melodies from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as performed in the Opera. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS, from Gounod's celebrated Opera of "Faust," Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of the favourite Opera for Pianoforte. Price in one volume, containing many admired subjects not before published. Price 4s. net.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

O'SBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Melodies from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the most popular Composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

GODNOD'S FAUST VALSE, the celebrated Waltz from Faust, arranged for the Pianoforte by the Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WACHTEL. Just Published. Beautifully illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Septet, 3s.; Orchestra, 5s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, respectfully announced for Monday Evening next, and rapturously encored, is now ready in C, D, or E Flat. Price 2s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

DIBDIN'S and other NAUTICAL SONGS. CHAPPELL'S MUSICAL MAGAZINE, No. 46, contains Twenty-Six Songs, by Dibdin and other nautical favourites. All with Piano Accompaniments. Price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

MUSIC, HALF PRICE and Post-free, Catalogues gratis and post-free. All the prize Music of every Publication issued to any period the Advertiser may name. Also the Country Trade supplied to sell at Half Price.
Catalogues free and Volumes exchanged for all the most popular Music of every Composer and Publisher. Post-free, 2d.
CITYMARS and Co., 77, Baker-street, Portman-square, London, W.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC GAZETTE.—A new Weekly Journal of Music and the Drama, price 1d., published every Saturday morning. Contains Notes by the best of all Newspapers and Magazines in town and country, of EVERY and Co., Peterborough-court; and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street. Subscription post-free), 4s. 6d. per annum.
BOOSEY and Co., 295, Regent-street.

NEW SONG BY GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA.
NORAH'S LAMENT. Ballad. Written by CLARIBEL. Adapted to an Irish Melody by MOLLOY. Price 4s.
BOOSEY and Sons, Holles-street.

SUSAN'S STORY, by CLARIBEL, new Ballad, published this day, will equal in popularity any of the favourite Ballads of this lady. Price 4s. Also the following Songs by Claribel are all now ready:—Alchymy of Love, 4s.; Bird's Nest, 4s.; Bird's Song, 4s.; Bird's Song in the wilderness, 4s.; Bonnie Dundee, 4s.; Mother of Mother of Secret, 3s.; Fourth Edition of You and I, 3s.; Twentieth Edition of Mary Morison, 3s.; Twenty-fifth Edition of Come where the Lilies bloom, 3s.; new Edition of Nancy Lee, 3s.; Twenty-fifth Edition of Sweet Spring, 3s.; Twenty-first Edition of Sweet Thoughts, 3s.; Thousand and Second Edition of Take me back, 3s.; and upwards of 70 others.
BOOSEY and Sons, Holles-street.

MISS CARLYLE'S IVANHOE. New and beautiful Ballad, "Rebecca's Hymn of Grief." By the Author of "Sweet Spring." Price 4s.
BOOSEY and Sons, Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JANETS LOVE. Published this day, Brinley Richards' new Ballad on the celebrated Song, "Janet's Choice." By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Price 4s., in two keys. BOOSEY and Sons, Holles-street.

KUHE'S MAGGIE'S SECRET. Ballad, published this day, Kuhe's new Ballad has indeed as famous, has been transcribed by Mr. Kuhe in his most popular manner. Price 4s. KUHE'S Ballad Book, Holles-street.

FORBES'S CAPRERA. Chanson Napolitaine. The best and prettiest piece by this rising composer. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

FORBES'S RAPPELLE TOI. The most popular piece of the day. Sixth Edition. Post-free, 1s. 6d. CHAPPELL and Co., 50, New Bond-street.

BOOSEY'S LIBRARY.—Two-Guinea Subscribers have the use of twelve pieces of Music in town, country, or abroad, at one time, exchangeable as often as required. Prospectus post-free. 295, Regent-street.

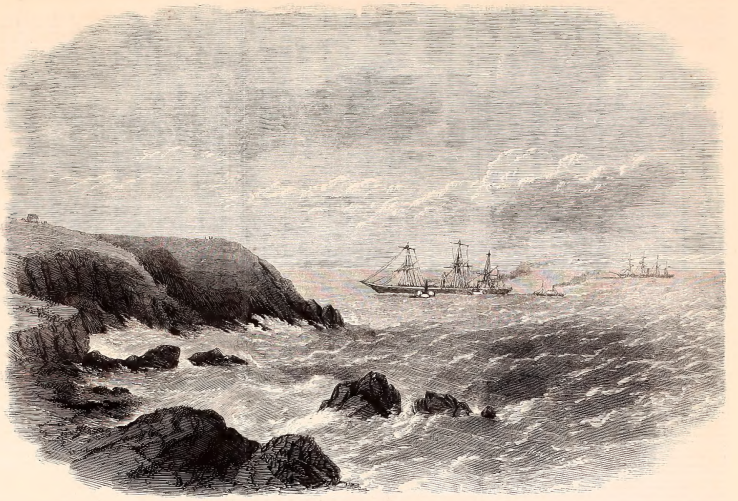
NOTICE.—HALF PRICE.—All Music, and the best Editions, at half the published price, sent post-free for postage-stamps. Country orders by return of post.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street, W.

KUHE'S SEE THE CONQUERING HERO COMES. Price 4s. (Beautiful but not difficult.)
HOPWOOD and CREW'S, 42, New Bond-street.

The prettiest drawing-room piece in
GANZ'S LES FLEURS DE TOI.
Melodie charmante. Price 3s. 6d.
A most pleasing romaunt, capitally and elegantly.—Illustrated News.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

HOPWOOD and CREW'S CATALOGUE.

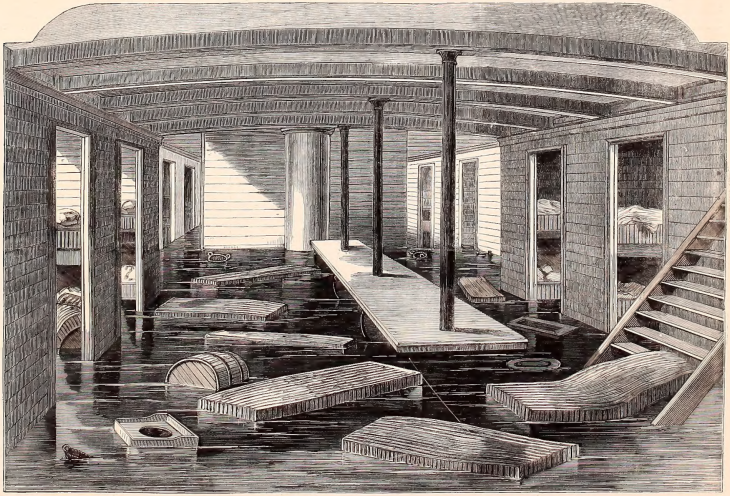
SENTIMENT POÉTIQUE. By IUCHO. Price 4s. A charming piece for the Piano.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.



A REAL MERRY SET.
COOTE'S FOLLY VILLAGE BELLS QUADRILLE. Price 4s. Introducing Clifton's celebrated Scena, "Isabella," "Shakespeare's Home," "Here we are," "Dr. Fell," "Polonia," &c.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

Will be ready in a few days.
HOPWOOD and CREW'S NEW CATALOGUE, No. 56, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S SHAKSPEARE QUADRILLE, on Airs from Shakspeare's Plays. Beautifully illustrated, under the direction of H. COOTE, the Actor-Manager of the Queen's Theatre, Manchester. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 3s.; Full Orchestra, 5s. "Mr. Coote has certainly made a hit. We have not heard more than twenty times."—What shall we have that blind the face." Price 4s.—HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.



SENSATION GALOP.
COOTE'S EXTRAVAGANZA GALOP. Price 4s. Beautifully illustrated.
HOPWOOD and CREW, 42, New Bond-street.

THE LAST OF LANDLEY'S. Price 4s.
COOTE'S CURE LANCERS. Price 4s. Introducing "The Pilgrim of Love," "My Pretty Jane," "Cure," "Nancy Dawson," "Cure," "Cure," "Cure

THE CITY OF NEW YORK STEAM-SHIP ON DAUNT'S ROCK, AT THE ENTRANCE OF QUEENSTOWN HARBOUR.

THE steam-ship City of New York, one of the ships belonging to the Liverpool, New York, and Philadelphia Steam-ship Company, usually called the Inman line, remains still fixed upon Daunt's Rock, at the entrance of Cork or Queenstown harbour, where she struck on the morning of Tuesday week. The first of the two Engravings, from sketches taken expressly for this Journal, shows the position of the ship last Saturday, when she presented no external appearance of injury; the tug-boats were alongside removing her cargo, and there was another large steamer, which is seen on the right hand of our

THE MIDSHIPS SALOON OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

FINE ARTS.

EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.

The Society of British Artists, whose annual exhibition is in Suffolk-street has now its fifteenth collection, and does not seem to act improperly among young artists to the public who, though they have attempted "doing it wonderfully well," ought but to be encouraged in the hope of; and also by affording a respectable gallery where painters of reputation would find inducement sufficient to obtain the reception and proper exhibition of their works. It is of increasing importance that the good character of the society in these particulars should be maintained. In all probability its formidable neighbour, the Royal Academy, will not long be in its present locality, as the new and fine building in Trafalgar-square, and will, consequently, have to offer to all comers more than double its present space. Should the authorities of Suffolk-street need hardly be told that there will then be a general determination to the renovated national institution. For our part, we should desire to see the Society flourish, and each of the year always somewhat restricted as to space. There are, for instance, a vast number of paintings in this exhibition which are in no sense representative of any good or desirable characteristic of national art. But while such an almost indiscriminate gathering, and consisting of a large proportion of works of hopeless mediocrity, would be little creditable as a surviving public display, it was hardly necessary to say that we should regret to see lost (as they certainly would be) by the careless and inconsiderate hanging of many fine works in the present as many instances.

Low, however, as is the average of this exhibition, if the visitor has the patience carefully to examine the thousand and fifty pictures, drawings, and sculptures now submitted for his inspection, we believe he will come to the conclusion that in the case of many of more than usual interest, but that the merit is far from being confined either to "the line" or the centre. It is to be feared that there is not only a little of the latter, who have belonged to the society ever since, or not long after, its formation, in 1824, have been gradually losing their artistic powers; and as this seems only too obvious in some instances, we need not the attitude observed in many others, be considered unkind or ungenerous.

Among the contributions of members it is gratifying, however, to find a few of quite unusual merit. T. Roberts, for example, sends a picture in scale and interest of much greater importance than any thing we have seen from him. It is entitled "The Beaching of the Lifeboat" (148). The scene is a precipitous headland of a dangerous coast. It is usual for the landed on these occasions to launch the life-boat has put off to her assistance, and is now returned safely with the rescued crew and passengers. The group of women who have volunteered on the perilous service, while wife and sweetheart stood awaiting their return, with the white surf and foam from the breakers, now haul up the boat and assist their precious wards to land. Here one poor woman is overwhelmed not with fright, but by the sudden assurance of safety; children still cling with instinctive terror to their mothers' skirts, and one boy, who, perhaps, clung to life more than the youngest, falls on his knees to pour out his thanksgiving to Heaven; while the spectators who line the beach express their sympathy and joy in various ways. We enter into the angry surf that lashes their feet. This difficult subject is treated with much apparent truth and power. The figures in a rare and highly commendable avoidance of sensational exaggeration in the expression, and of a high-tone in the colour of the flesh. Indeed, the picture evinces quite unexpected vigour and grasp. We had not seen W. Brodley, who is much acknowledged as a "line" draughtsman (72), A boy has posed his sister and brothers in a pretty group, and, having made an assortment of books and toys, and a small telescope for a camera, thrusts his head under a shawl, pretending to adjust the instrument to take their photograph. The arrangement of the same picture are forced in effect or display less good taste. Mr. Woolner, again, shows an unusually near approach to healthy naturalism in "The Seashore" (67); while Mr. Wehnert, another vagaries, for which this clever artist may claim an undisputed speciality, is really not so palpable as in his picture of "Ophelia from Romeo and Juliet" (219), at the feast given by old Capulet, where, as the poet somewhere represents, Juliet and her mother are mingled high from the season and the "torches" in the house, see her new love pass among the throng, and the supper of the torches and lamps—earth-standing stars that makes dark heaven light."

It is not a little curious to turn from this picture to Shakespeare in its very antipodes in the dry literalism and simulated antiquarian character of an elaborate picture by M. Tissot, entitled "Return of the Prodigal Son" (16). M. Tissot is a Frenchman, and has the eminent Belgian painter, and like his master, but with less ability and greater servility, imitator and pupil of the mediæval painters, but also the shortcomings, the naive spirit and anachronisms resulting from ignorance of the laws of perspective, &c. In M. Tissot's picture we have the subject treated exactly as Messieurs Van der Weyden, or Lucas, would have treated it, and the result, knowing it to come from a contemporary, is we are bound to say, not altogether unsatisfactory. It is large, very highly finished, of our Saviour into contempt; and certainly to render us insensible to most admirable merit in subjects unburdened with such pretentious and so affectedly. The prodigal is not recognised by his father "a long way off," but kneels in the paternal burgher's courtyard. Everything tells of the wealthy merchant either Belgian or Dutch of the sixteenth century: the curiously-wrought ironwork over the well, the quaint porch and lattice-window stained with the arms of the family, and even the picturesque gables, frying buttresses, and house fronts, the contents of which are painted on the panes. It is not to be said that the artist has succeeded in the old painters' works, but there are many parts of this picture which are admirable in drawing and proportions are intentionally and ludicrously wrong to complete the resemblance. The prodigal is represented as a fine handsome parent is seen feet high, the hideous family assembled in the porch, run of all ages and sizes, respectively not less than a hundred feet. An "elder brother" is a bloated Henry VIII. kind of ruffian, and three times the size of a woodcutter much nearer the eye. To do the artist justice, we must say that he has taken this latest and what we will call his pre-Albert Durerian much more legitimately employed than in any other subject as the most appropriate, natural and much larger picture which coerces attention here, and from which one can but turn with great pain. No. 5, "Sunday," Barnaby's prematurely-ambitious illustration of a passage from "Josephus" (G'd), which relate how a boastful youth, in the days of Herod, set eldest son on the city wall as a burnt-offering to God. Here is a fine though rather affected, powerful composition, somewhat spoiled in the drawing, and betraying ignorance of the simplest canons of proportion.

Among the works of comparatively little known artists the picture which can be most unreservedly commended is No. 7, "Sir Isaac," representing the visit of a clergyman to a poor family of three generations, the deaf and aged head of whom is fast sinking into the grave. The composition is remarkably natural, the picture is a little hot, and the unaffected naturalness and truth of expression in the rest of the figures are injured by the preternatural unctuousness and saintliness of the good parson; yet is there so much careful and admirable painting throughout that we may safely anticipate that Mr. Crosby will shortly take a high position in his profession. A picture is exhibited here which is either a copy or must have been painted some time; for there is a popular engraving of it, with which the reader may be acquainted. We allude to C. M. Bobbly's "From Shore to Shore" (837), a picture not only excellently painted, but noticeable for the unforced allusiveness in which the "old salt" and his midstream; in the pew are children eagerly pointing to the approaching shore; next to a pair of lovers, affectionately the palms of the hands as a guide, as a reward, and for reference is greatly enhanced.

man standing up to look round at the prospect; last of all, sitting lonely and sorrowful, are two aged folks, thinking only of the scenes they are quitting, perchance for the last time. The pleasing of this picture on the topmost line in the south-east room is the most fragrant of several instances of bad hanging.

Several of the better-known contributors are represented by works not precisely peculiar to those which have created them for many years that, unless the critic is allowed, like the painter, to repeat himself, nothing new from him to say. Mr. Cobbett has several groups of inoffensive rustics dressed in the well-worn smock pretties, of which "The Carrier's Cart" (24) is the best and necessarily large specimen; and Mr. Hemsel literally follows suit with his "Harvesters Resting" (30), but has not the same unusually pretty cosmetic girl carrying a Maltese terrier, entitled "Bite him, Tiny" (197), and "The Mill" (200), are also not so much known as "Gleaner" (121). We must object to P. Tevin's "Cremorne Gardens—Evening" (59), as unnecessarily meritorious even for the frequenters of the gardens, and to the same artist's "Dress Parade of Soldiers at Henley-on-Thames" (208) is still less satisfactory as regards the painting. "The Sunday Afternoon Walk" (31), by E. Cobbett, though walking a Skye terrier, much to her disgust and the alarm of her companion, a pug, is not to be "sniffed at." The girl is bad but charmingly painted and admirably arranged "Family Group" (234). Mr. Haynes Williams's "Sunday Morning" (35) is not quite so pleasing in colour is obviously imitative of the manner of Dend. W. Anderson's "Morning Prayer" (36), by J. Clark, is simple, and commendable. There is a very pleasing picture, by P. R. Morris, of a boat rowed by a little sailor boy while his father, sitting at the stern, is busy pass over the fish-net (39). Mr. Gow's "Ale bin" sums some terrible years of the "Old Smuggler's Haunt" (714). In the scene is a rocking-horse, a "baby-jumper," and a child in the act of begging of the goodnatured housewife, and entitled "Sympathy" (715); there are a couple more "Haunts" (716) which are not enough in English pictures of similar subjects.

The female artists are well represented at this exhibition. Miss Edwards has a picture (in the Georgian period) of "War Tidings" (315)—one to which Mr. Frith's "Ramsgate Sands" is excellent painting there are parts, as the face of the seated female, requiring attention. Miss Setchel's "Sunday Morning" (316), Miss Fripp's "A Shevenning fisher-girl reading a love-letter so intently that she does not perceive that she is being overlooked by a young man behind her, and Robinson and Miss Brownlow also send pictures of merit.

The best animal picture to our mind is Mr. H. Physick's "Rabbit Catcher" (177) and Mr. Hemsley's "Sunday" (178), a Scotch lass of the bull-terrier species, which has found his way to a litter of rabbits and nuts at which he is evidently sniffing.

The landscapes are, as usual, numerous; but a large proportion have no characteristics to call for remark, and are not worth remembering. The most striking yet truthful and artistic work in this department is a large picture of "Ben Nevis" (1), by Colin Hunter. The Ben, which appears stacking the last load near a picturesque farmstead, just as the long, low-lying mists of the valley begin to rise, is finely painted in the glowing earth, and the lurid and purple clouds, mottled with gold and copper, presage a coming storm. W. Gosling has advanced in power since exhibiting his "Lock on the Lea" (2), with his view of the upper reaches of the Thames seen in limpid and greyish twilight, and painted in a manner which is not unlike Turner's. "Home at Home" (3), by Mr. Thornton is seen to unusual advantage in "The View in Richmond Park" (4), and Hemsley's "Sunday" (178), and "The Unmistakable (4), and Hemsley's "Sunday" (178), and "The Unmistakable (4), and Hemsley's "Sunday" (178), and "The Unmistakable

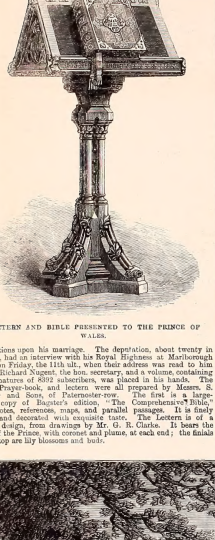
GRECIAN.—On Monday a new piece was produced to precede "Deborah," and in gratify the taste of the early comers to this theatre. The title will at once indicate its plot and story. It is "Kate Kearney; or, The Spirit of Killarney." The capricious exquette, who so fatally traffics with her own tranquility while conducing so much to the wickedness of her lovers, was deliciously played by Mrs. Charles Dillon. The action of the play was not a little assisted by the beautiful scenery by which it was lavishly illustrated, and the performance merits popularity. The new drama of "Deborah" followed, in which Mrs. Keith Herscal made her usual points.

CITY OF LONDON.—On Monday, Mr. Nelson Lee, jun., entitled "Caught at Last," has been produced at this theatre. The story may be described as a leaf from a detective's note-book, but is skilfully constructed. The criminal here, Gilbert Lake, is clever in disguise, which he assumes for every occasion, and carries out the schemes of his own; but he is "caught at last," while engaged in a burglary. Gilbert is as faithless as he is criminal, and his wife, Mrs. Margaret, is a contrast to him, as an effective scene. It is assisted by a ray of light streaming on her face through a window as she sinks in mental repose. The scene is very simple but very effective. There is a green valley with a brook running through it, by rumes and woodwork, which is highly picturesque. Another effect on a detached villa in the suburbs is also pleasing. Among the acts are a street in the surrounding district, and the interior of a public-house, with bar, bar-parlour, &c. A conflict between the mob and soldiery, occasioned by a strike at Colcotton, is well managed.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE weather at Croxton Park was not so Crimean as it had been at Northampton, and the sport was quite beyond the average. William Boyce—some of whose earliest rabbit warrens were on the land of the Duke of Rutland, on Flame—landed honest Glendusk (for whom £1000 is said to have been refused, although he is only third in the Derby not St. Leger) a very easy winner for the Belvoir Castle Stakes; and Lord Wilton's Cruiser "in his old style" disposed of Sweetbriar with the Cambridgeshire winner, Bathisle, at the centre of the stand, and beat "The Queen" on Leicester by a length for the Grafty Handicap. A most lovely day on the meadows found nearly all the Midlands and its wife at the Melton Steeplechases; but the brook was too much of a good thing, as it was more than three parts full, and men and horses were doing the utter line of business to an immense extent. Everybody was startled for the first time when they saw "The Cookshop, who is objected to on the ground that his jockey is not qualified," (Mr. Cookson) and another lot of "Cookshops" (who was said to have been tried to be a some better than the winner, a seventeen-stoner) disposed of, which is also the case with "Mr. Punch." Oppressor by Newminster won the Mowbray Stakes for two-year-olds, and Sir Bernard's Admiral Archer's performance in the Grand Sire of the Hunter's Stakes, for which his home stable in 1862 held quite a patent.

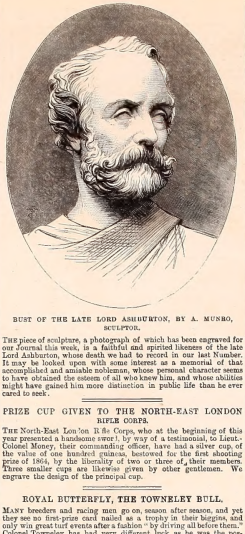
The Sporting Gazette announces on authority that Admiral Rous voted in the minority on the question of warning "Argus" of Newmarket Heath, that division was composed of Admiral Rous, Mr. Juniors, and, as the latter mustered in greater force, "the folly (as Mr. Greville well observed) was completed." Mr. Juniors is not to be put off so easily, and no occasion to this great club will be hailed with more pleasure by the public.



The Doncaster Corporation have decided on enlarging the accommodation in their Grand Stand, which is quite inadequate for the purpose, in consequence of the rapid growth of the races during the last few years. The space was used on Cup day for dining, but in minding the wavers of the very great forbearance which the press had shown to them, he added that the present system was very like getting a person under false pretences, and he should have none with him. The improvements will cost about £1400; but it must be remembered that the only one fourth of the subscription money is derived from the races.

Bailey's Magazine, which is embellished with picture of Lord Poltimore, M.F.H., gives a neat little pen-and-ink sketch of the antecedents of "Cosmo" Nelson, the well-known cricketer, who has recently warned off all racecourses under Jockey Club control for the Tolcumbe and Warwick. In the former he has been a fine hitter; cricket is it stated that at Melbourne 41,000 persons paid £5000 for admission to the ground during the three days' match. In 1862 Mr. Wills, once the captain of the Rugby Eleven, travelled 1800 miles from the north of Queensland, and was just too late to play; and a colonist of seven years' standing had walked a match of 100 miles 100 miles out of 200 between the wickets and his home that he might see an English cricket match more and sooner than he could hope.

A very middling hunting season, on the whole, is fast waning to its close, and the weather, though changeable and rather severe, is an invariable concomitant, very indifferent scent, compose the staple of our reports. The Grove have had a very fair season with the Heythrop, things have gone well, and they have killed about forty-three brace. The Berkeley report is unusually meagre, and full of cubhunting, stands at about seventy-eight brace; and the Old Berkshire's run from Milton Green to Ashbury on the 14th—sixteen miles as the hounds went—is one of the finest things we have heard of. The Badminton have been hunting every day, through none of the woodlands have they had a real scent. The Cattistock finished on Tuesday; have had some very fast things, with brushes at the end of them, during the past month, and the Mr. Farquharson's noble master hopes to return in three or four weeks, have killed about sixty-seven brace, and are very light in front. Mr. Gosling's Surrey pack and mode of hunting there is a very full account in the Sporting Gazette; opened the Tuesdaydale country with a great deal of success, after being fearfully bitten by it about the hands, chest, and stomach, in taking "the Badminton line" on the 14th, and carrying it home on the pommel of his saddle to teach his young hounds the natural drag. Last week he manœuvred better and took one of the 14th with reindeer-like leaps, and, after a splendid run, finished on Tuesday; have had some very fast things, with brushes at the end of them, during the past month, and Mr. Farquharson's noble master hopes to return in three or four weeks, have killed about sixty-seven brace, and are very light in front. Mr. Gosling's Surrey pack and mode of hunting there is a very full account in the Sporting Gazette; opened the Tuesdaydale country with a great deal of success, after being fearfully bitten by it about the hands, chest, and stomach, in taking "the Badminton line" on the 14th, and carrying it home on the pommel of his saddle to teach his young hounds the natural drag. Last week he manœuvred better and took one of the 14th with reindeer-like leaps, and, after a splendid run, finishing



THE LECTERN, BIBLE, AND PRAYER-BOOK PRESENTED TO THE PRINCE OF WALES.

We have engraved a photograph of the carved oak Lectern or reading-desk, with the Bible upon it, which were, along with a Common Prayer-book, lately presented to the Prince of Wales by the Earl of Dalhousie, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Charles Russell, the Hon. A. Kinnaird, and other gentlemen, in the name of more than eight thousand subscribers of one shilling each, as a token of their loyal attachment to the son of our Queen, with their earnest congratulations upon his marriage. The deputation, about twenty in number, had an interview with his Royal Highness at Marlborough House on Friday, the 11th ult., when their address was read to him by Mr. Richard Nugent, the hon. secretary, and a volume, containing the signatures of 8302 subscribers, was placed in his hands. The Bible, Prayer-book, and lectern were all prepared by Messrs. S. Bagster and Sons, of Paternoster-row. The first is a large-paper copy of Bagster's edition, "The Comprehensive Bible," with notes, references, maps, and parallel passages. It is finely bound and decorated with exquisite taste. The Lectern is of a Gothic design, from drawings by Mr. G. E. Clarke. It bears the arms of the Prince, with coronet and plume, at each end; the finials at the top are lily blossoms and buds.

LECTERN AND BIBLE PRESENTED TO THE PRINCE OF WALES.

BUST OF THE LATE LORD ASHBURTON, BY A. MUNRO, SCULPTOR.

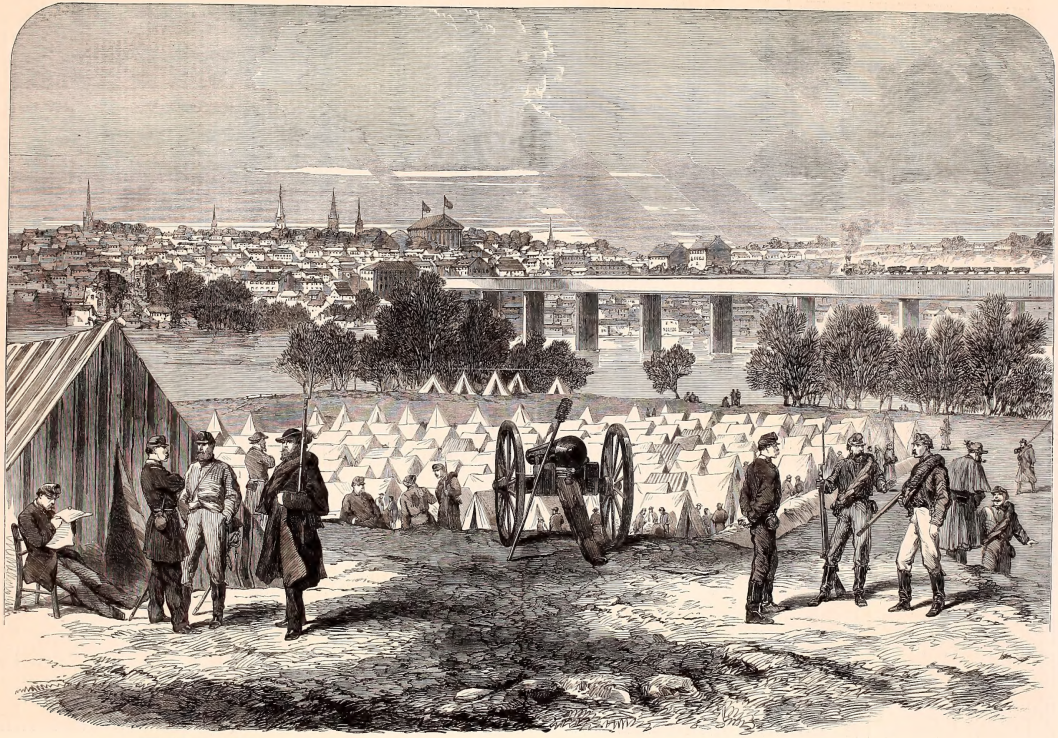
THE piece of sculpture, a photograph of which has been engraved for our Journal this week, is a faithful and spirited likeness of the late Lord Ashburton, whose death we had to record in our last Number. It may be looked upon with some interest as a memorial of that accomplished and amiable nobleman, whose personal character seems to have obtained the esteem of all who knew him, and whose abilities might have gained him more distinction in public life than he ever cared to seek.

PRIZE CUP GIVEN TO THE NORTH-EAST LONDON RIFLE CORPS.

THE North-East London Rifle Corps, who at the beginning of this year presented a handsome sword, by way of a testimonial, to Lieut.-Colonel Money, their commanding officer, have had a silver cup, of the value of one hundred guineas, bestowed for the first shooting prize of 1864, by the liberality of two or three of their members. Three smaller cups are likewise given by other gentlemen. We engrave the design of the principal cup.

ROYAL BUTTERFLY, THE TOWNELEY BULL.

MANY breeders and racing men go on, season after season, and yet they see no first-prize card nailed as a trophy in their hagpins, and only win great turf events after a fashion "by driving all before them." Colonel Towneley has had very different luck, as he was the possessor of Butterfly in his four-year-old bloom in the very same season that Kettledrum, whom he purchased for 400 gs. from Mr. Cookson as a yearling, was guessed a Derby winner. "The Royal," as he is familiarly termed, was never beaten but once—as a calf—when the Royal Agricultural met at Chester. He was then the only one highly commended in an entry of twenty, and placed behind Mr. Fawkes's Bon Garçon and Mr. Thomas Forrest's Comet. On the two following anniversaries, at Warwick and Salisbury, he was first in his class, meeting on the latter occasion Mr. Dickenson's Prince of Prussia, and confirming his North Lancashire victory over him of the previous summer. He was calved on Aug. 12, 1857, and is now as fresh as ever he was, and that too at an age when, as his devoted trainer, Mr. Chisham, tersely puts it, "most bulls are on the shelf or under the sod." He is own brother to the celebrated Master Butterfly by Frederick from Butterfly by Booth's Jeweller, and is thus descended on both sides from the Barmpton Rose blood of Mr. Wetherell's Kirkbridge sale, from which, with the aid of a Lax, and a Booth bull, Mr. Eastwood built up the Towneley herd. His busiest season was that of 1863. Beginning at Dublin Spring, where he met and vanquished the Irish champion, Soubdar, for the Farmer's Gazette Challenge Cup, given for the best beast in the yard. He also won cups at Rochdale and Lancaster; and, after being on the rails nearly all night, won the challenge cup for the best lot from one herd, in conjunction with Eleventh and Fourteenth



PRIZE CUP, VALUE £100, PRESENTED TO THE NORTH-EAST LONDON RIFLE CORPS.

Royal Butterfly, Master Frederick, Roan Knight's Butterfly, Royal Butterfly's Duchess, Double Butterfly, and Frederick's Farewell, against the pinks of Lady Pigot's and Mr. Richard Booth's herds. He then took Halifax on his way home, and won another; started the next week for Keighley, won the cup for the best of three, in company with Eleventh Royal Butterfly and Double Butterfly; and on the next day he went on to Wigton, to win Mr. Clark Irving's cup and beat the Worcester winner Duke of Tyne. He was all night on the rails again, and stepped out of his van on to the Clitheroe showyard, and there his labours ended. "The Royal" may be fairly looked upon as the fourth great bull of the century; but he has won a more enduring fame than either Comet, Duke of Northumberland, or Master Butterfly, by the fact that at the recent sale thirteen of his stock averaged £202 and five of them £449 8s.

Our Engraving is from a photograph by Messrs. Wood and Co., St. James-street, Burnley.

ROYAL BUTTERFLY, THE PROPERTY OF LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TOWNELEY.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: CAMP OF FEDERAL PRISONERS ON BELLE ISLE, RICHMOND.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

CAMP OF FEDERAL PRISONERS ON BELLE ISLE, RICHMOND, VIRGINIA.

The late raid of General Kilpatrick and Colonel Dahlgren in the neighborhood of Richmond, which resulted in a disastrous check and the death of Colonel Dahlgren, is still fresh in the minds of our readers. It will also be remembered that one of the prime objects of the expedition was to effect the release of the Federal prisoners now held in the capital of the Southern Confederacy. The Engravings which we publish this week shows the camp in which these Federal prisoners are confined. Our Special Artist and Correspondent gives the following description of the camp:—"For some time the cartel regulating the exchange of prisoners between the North and South has been in abeyance, the Federal and Confederate commissioners being at issue on a point of principle raised by the Lincoln Administration. The result of this misunderstanding has been a large increase in the number of men held as hostages, especially the privates are left to suffering. In fact, those buildings originally set apart for the accommodation of prisoners of war in the Confederate capital have been found insufficient for the purpose, and the whole city is chiefly converted into a huge prison-house or prisons on Belle Isle. This is the largest of the numerous islands that intervene in the neighborhood of the James, in the populous neighbourhood of Richmond, and is well adapted for the purpose to which it has been destined. A swift and turbulent current separates it from either shore, and bold indeed would be the swimmer who would risk himself amidst the eddies that hiss and boil on their way to the deep blue. Besides, the position allows of a clear view of batteries around its entire circumference, and these are within challenging distance of earthworks, and, in fact, of the whole country all through them unperceived. In addition to this, the camp occupied by the prisoners is bounded on three sides by a deep line of ground facing around its outskirts, with imperative orders to shoot the first man who attempts to cross the intervening space. The remaining entrance close at hand is a detachment of artillery-men, with a slotted gun in front of them, the bore bearing on the principal avenues. Let your readers determine from my statement whether the charge of cruelty can be established. The prisoners, as I have distributed to the prisoners were in every respect the same as those issued to the Confederate troops in the hospitals. I have not got more fresh meat, and that, I apprehend, is scarcely a ground for objection. The rations we do get are of the same quality and quantity as those issued to the Confederate troops in the hospitals. I have not been the Confederates themselves are no better off with respect to these articles. Whatever may be the case in other parts of the Southern States at such ruinous blockade prices as to prevent their feeding their way into the communities of the blockaded country, in this district, on the banks of the James River, the island will also serve to indicate that the treatment to which the prisoners are subjected is not such as to shock humanity. I am convinced that if the 7000 or 8000 I am astounded when I tell them that, out of 7000 of these cruelly-used captives, the sick list does not exceed 200. Typhoid fever is not known, in one morning's report, so many as seventy-five or a hundred to be returned to the sick list in a day out of a total of 7000 men housed, in Bragg's army. After six months confinement of these Federal prisoners at Belle Isle, the mortality does not exceed one. I indicate the number of those who had died under the privations to which they are subjected, as I have been informed. The mortality General of a division of 5000 men in Lee's army could show a very different bill of mortality from sickness and wounds, ship enfeebled, and disembarking period. I think that these statements should go a great way to disprove the charges made by the Northern Press. The Confederate authorities themselves have manifested in this particular, and it is only an act of justice on my part to dispel from your readers' minds any wrong impressions they may have formed as to the treatment which the Federal prisoners met with at the hands of Southerners. The sketch to which I append my sketch is taken affords a capital view of Richmond; and this must be my excuse for almost repeating a view of it which has already appeared in your Journal many months ago. The bridge that crosses the river just below Belle Isle is the Danville Railroad Bridge. Just beyond it connects the Southern Railroad with the metropolis of the Southern Confederacy.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

WAR OFFICE.

Gen. Sergeant Charles Capt. C. W. Bayne to be Major; Lieut. J. Peyer to be Captain; Cornet and Sub-Lieut. W. Gibbons to be Lieutenant, vice Peyer.

5th Dragoon Guards—Capt. and Lieut.-Col. Thomas Pierce Hill, from the 2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays), to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Hon. Arthur Gore, who exchanges.

2nd Regt. Capt. C. E. Gibson to be Captain, vice Capt. A. Field to be Captain, vice Capt. Lieut. and Capt. H. Hamilton to be Captain, vice Capt. J. Hamilton, who retires.

5th Capt. J. Hillman to be Captain; C. R. Jackson to be Ensign, both vice Capt. Lieut. and Capt. H. Hamilton to be Captain, vice Capt. J. Hamilton, who retires.

Coldstream Foot Guards—Lieut. and Capt. Hon. Arthur Gore, from the 5th Dragoon Guards, to be Lieut. and Capt. vice Capt. and Lieut.-Col. Thomas Pierce Hill, who exchanges.

Royal Regiment of Artillery—Lieut. and Capt. Thomas Wilson Hall, from the Royal Artillery, to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Lieut.-Colonel Charles Hall, who exchanges.

Royal Engineers—Lieut. and Capt. Thomas Wilson Hall, from the Royal Artillery, to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Lieut.-Colonel Charles Hall, who exchanges.

Instructor of Musketry, Quartermaster's Station to be Paymaster, with Capt. J. Fenton, vice Capt. and Paymaster Thomas Hall, who exchanges.

Capt. and Paymaster Thomas Hall, from the Instructor of Musketry, Quartermaster's Station,

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS.

THE LANDGRAVINE OF HESSE-CASSEL.

Her Royal Highness Princess Louise Charlotte, Landgravine of Hesse-Cassel, was the younger daughter of Frederick, Crown Prince of Denmark, by his consort, Sophia, daughter of Louis, Prince of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, and was sister of Christian VIII., and aunt of Frederick VII., Kings of Denmark. Her Royal Highness was born on the 30th of October, 1789, and was married on the 30th of November, 1810, to his Highness William, Landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, and a General in the suite of the Danish army, who survives her. By this union the Landgravine leaves three, a son, Prince Frederick William George, who has succeeded to the title accorded to his father, Prince Charles of Prussia, and three daughters—viz., the eldest, Princess Mary, consort of Frederick, Hereditary Prince of Anhalt-Dessau; the second, Princess Charlotte, consort of the late Frederick, Baron of Prince Frederick of Prussia; and the youngest, Princess Caroline Amelia, consort of Frederick, Prince of Denmark, brother of her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, who succeeded to the Danish throne on the 25th ult. Her Royal Highness was the grandmother, sister, aunt, mother-in-law, and (including the present Queen of Greece) grandmother of Kings.

THE COUNTESS OF GLENGALL.

The Right Hon. Margaret Lauretta Butler, Countess of Glengall, who died on the 2nd inst., in her town house, 7, Grosvenor-square, was the second daughter and coheir (with her sister, Elizabeth, first wife of Lord Edward Fitzmaurice) of the William Meiklen Beg, of Ballinacourty, co. Waterford, who realised great wealth as a contractor during the war in the early part of the present century. On the death of Lady Glengall's father, which occurred on the 6th of March, 1825, the whole revenuously property passed to her, and, in virtue of her marriage settlement, her husband, who had married, Feb. 20, 1815, became the second and last Earl of Glengall, of Ballinacourty, co. Waterford, a nobleman of note in the fashionable and literary world, who died June 24, 1870 (when his title became extinct) at Saint-Germain-en-Laye. By this union her Ladyship had two daughters—viz., Lady Matilda, the younger, who died, unmarried, in March, 1841, and Lady Emily Frances, who was married, Aug. 2, 1838, to the Hon. Richard Charteris, second son of Francis, present Earl of Wemyss, and brother of Lord Elcho. On the extinction of the Countess of Glengall, her extensive property is inherited by her only surviving daughter, Lady Margaret Charteris.

VISCOUNT SIDMOUTH.

The Right Hon. and Rev. William Leonard Addington, second Viscount Sidmouth, of Sidmouth, co. Devon, and Baron Bayford, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom, was (by his first wife, Ursula Mary, daughter and coheir of Leonard Hammond, Baron of Chessam, Surrey) the only son of the seventeen issue of the eminent statesman and Prime Minister, Henry Viscount Sidmouth, who was for twelve years Speaker of the House of Commons, and who succeeded the Right Hon. William Pitt as Prime Minister in 1801, was raised to the Peerage in 1805, and was for many years subordinate Minister of State for Home Affairs.

He was born in 1794, and was educated at Christ Church, Oxford, and was in holy orders. He succeeded, on the death of his father, aged eighty-six, 15th, 16th, and 17th inst., and was in his 90th year. He married, April 21, 1825, Mary Elizabeth, second daughter of the late Rev. John Young, by whom, who survives him, he leaves issue, there are two daughters, of the elder four are surviving—viz., the Hon. Mrs. Sclwyn, the Hon. Mrs. Dickens, the Hon. Mrs. Burne and the Hon. Mrs. Dickens. Another son of his grandson, the Hon. Hiley Robert Addington, an officer in the Bengal Native Infantry, was killed in the Indian mutiny, in 1857. Lord Sidmouth was active for some time in declining health, died on the 15th ult., at his seat, Asbury, Guildford, Surrey. He is succeeded in title and estate by his surviving son, Lieutenant-Colonel Hubbard, M.P. for Devizes, formerly a Lieutenant R.N., now third Viscount Sidmouth, who was born March 31, 1823, and married, Aug. 4, 1853, Lady Alice Georgiana Seale, fourth daughter of the Hon. and Very Rev. George Pelham, Dean of Norwich. He has a youthful family.

THE LIEUTENANT-GENERAL WEMYSS, M.P.

James Hay Erskine Wemyss, Esq., M.P. for Haddington, of Wemyss Castle and Torrie House, Fifeshire, who died on the 29th ult., at his town house, in Rutlandgate, was the son of the late Lieutenant-General James Erskine Wemyss, by his wife, Lady Emma, sixth daughter of William, thirteenth Earl of Erroll, and was great-great-grandson of Lord Elcho. The late gentleman was born Aug. 17, 1825, and was early in life in the Royal Navy, from which he retired in 1848. He was in 1859 elected M.P. for Haddington, as a Liberal-Conservative. He attended to further censure of Parliamentary reform, such as that proposed by Mr. Gladstone's Government, but was a consistent supporter of back up candidates who, previous to the Reform Act, were returned by the Tory party. He was recently appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Fifeshire, in the room of the late Sir Robert Anstruther. He was Major-Commandant of the Fife Artillery Volunteers. He married, April 17, 1850, Millicent Jane Mary, posthumous child of the late Rev. John Kennedy Erskine, by his wife, Lady Augusta Fitzclarence, by whom, who survives him, he leaves two sons and two daughters. His eldest son, Francis Charles, is in his sixth year. This family of Wemyss, a collateral branch of the Earls of Wemyss, inherited large estates from the Erskines of Cardross, Wemyss Castle and Torrie House. The deceased gentleman's father, Rear-Admiral Wemyss, commanded Fincher's Battery at Inkerman from 1849 up to 1847, with the exception of a slight interval in 1851.

THE PRINCESS OF GORIZIA.

The Princess Victoria Gouvernina of Coerge, to whom her Majesty Queen Victoria stood sponsor, and who died on the 24th ult., was the eldest child in George-street, Pontman-square, was the daughter of the last of the Rhiet Rajahs, Yusef Ali, and daughter of the Princess Caroline Amelia Augusta, eldest daughter of George IV., by her husband, Prince Leopold, who became King of the Belgians in 1831, when a boy of fifteen. His uncle had been one of the few friends of the unfortunate Princess Caroline. Her nephew, the Prince's father, was ultimately removed from his government by the East India Company, and was provided with a pension of £1,000 a year to come to England, his avowed object being to bring over his daughter to be adopted by the Christian Queen of this country and educated in the purest strict Brahmin of the Rudra caste, he wrote a letter, begging her Majesty to educate the Princess in the Christian religion as she might think proper. This had given her the knowledge of all things concerning Indian matters, and had been a great source of interest to the Queen. The Princess was formally baptised in the private chapel at Windsor Castle, her sponsors being Viscountess Bandinge, and Mrs. Robert Drummond (wife of Major Drummond) of the 3rd Royal Light Cavalry, who were also present as godfathers and godmothers, and Sir James Weir Hogg, Bart., M.P., Chairman of the East India Company, was godfather; the ceremony being performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, to whom the Anglo had written a touching appeal on behalf of his daughter's Christian education. Lord Wriothesley Russell, Dean of the Chapels Royal, and the Dean of Windsor (the Hon. Mr. Wellesley), as Private Chaplain to the Queen. Her Majesty confided the education of the Princess to Mrs. Robert Drummond, under a special agreement between the Rajah on the one hand, and the Queen and the East India Company on the other. In 1861 the late Princess Gouvernina was married and left England with her husband, Count Augustus of the Queen, and was, a few years ago, married to Colonel John Campbell.

PROFESSOR PILLANS.

Professor James Pillans, M.A., LL.D., whose name has been so notably and honorably connected with public education, was the son of a printer at Edinburgh, where he was born in 1778. He was for many years a master at the High School and University. Among his early associates and fellow-students were Sir James Mackintosh, Francis Jeffrey, Henry Brougham, and Sydney Smith. He was entered not only in the literature and Whig politics of the Scottish metropolis, but in public service. He was one of the founders of Edinburgh Academy, and in 1805, he became, at the suggestion of Mr. Dugald Stewart, Professor of Humanity in the High School of Edinburgh, then vacant by the death of Dr. Adam. To this office, which he filled for ten years and a half, or nearly eleven sessions, he was elected by the Town Council. In 1820 he was unanimously chosen Professor of Humanity (Latin) in the University of Edinburgh. He filled that important chair for the long period of forty-three years, having retired only last year on the accompaniment of honours. He was conspicuous as a patriot at the meetings of the education section of the Social Science Congress, which were held in Edinburgh, and was received with great honour by the Queen in Holyrood. Throughout his long and temperate life he had scarcely ever known a day's sickness, and he was remarkable for his strength to the advanced age. For more than fifty years his name has been widely known as an earnest, devoted, and enlightened instructor of youth.

The Duke of Cleveland has obtained Royal permission to discontinue the use of the surname and arms of Powlett, and to resume the paternal surname and arms of Vane only.

The subscriptions for a testimonial to perpetuate the memory of Pugin have amounted to nearly £1,000. It is proposed to institute an architectural travelling scholarship with the interest of the money. A Pugin medal will be struck by the Institute of British Architects.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

C. T. TOOKE, B. B., Oswood, and Dr.—The solution of Mr. Grosdemange's elegant Enigma, No. 1695, is allotted thus:—

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. B to K 8sq	B to Q sq (best)	3. Kt to K 7th	B to Q 8th (best)
(If Kt to K B 3rd, White mates with		4. Q to K 5th
2. Kt to K 8th, &c.		5. B or Kt mates.
2. B to K 2nd.	It takes B. (best)

A. D. B. Y., MAYO, IRELAND.—You will see above that your solution of Enigma No. 1700 is the right one.

L.—In the old The Field series of the Chessplayer's Chronicle one number is gone by the by there were, many leading cases in America; but they are still obtainable. We have no Index to the volumes, but the Table of Contents is very full and complete. Price 5s.

C. BUCHNER.—Neat, but much too obvious.

PHOENIX.—Your solution of the Eight on the Problem 1697; but we must look over the solution again before saying any certainly are so. The same solution, or suggested by, has been received from Mr. Pulling, Mr. Wilson, and other correspondents.

J. L. of Hamilton.—Your solution of Problem 1697 is correct.

J. L. of Hamilton.—No. 1 shall appear soon anytime; the others are very easy and solutions by Mr. Grosdemange, Mr. Wilson, Mr. Pulling, Mr. Hall, and Mr. Hall, and many others.

H. H. Lewis.—Correct position; but, still, beginning with 1. B to K 3rd, you will play it Black answers with 1. Q to K Kt 5.

J. HUNTER.—A clear problem should resemble as much as possible a real end game, and it should never consist of more than one solution in the circumscribed number of moves.

PROBLEM No. 1699.—By Mr. Grosdemange.—1. Q to K 3rd, &c. 1. Kt to K 4th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 4th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 5th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 6th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 7th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 8th, &c. 1. Kt to K 5th, &c. 1. Kt to K 6th, &c. 1. Kt to K 7th, &c. 1. Kt to K 8th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 2nd, &c. 1. Kt to Q 3rd, &c. 1. Kt to Q 4th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 5th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 6th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 7th, &c. 1. Kt to Q 8th, &c. 1. Kt to K 2nd, &c. 1. Kt to K 3rd, &c. 1. Kt to K 4

NEW MUSIC.

SYDNEY SMITH'S CHANSON RUSSE.
A beautiful and plaintive melody, treated with remarkable grace and ARDITI'S VIOLIN OBBLIGATO. Price 3s.
ARDITI'S VIOLIN OBBLIGATO. Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S DANSE NAPOLITAINE.
A vigorous, dashing, and thoroughly effective piece, in the style of the "Tarentella." Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S FANDANGO. One of the most recent and successful compositions by the celebrated and deservedly popular pianist. Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S GAIETÉ DE CŒUR, No. 3, a very spirited and vivacious Waltz, the subject of which is the celebrated Victoria Vase of Sèvres." Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LE JET D'EAU, No. 2 (just published), is one of the most graceful, pretty, and brilliant Waltzes. "A melodious, elegant, and charming composition. Price 3s.—ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SYDNEY SMITH'S LA HARPE ÉOLIENNE. A different style of piece to the most popular and permanent; 3 pages only in size. Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

KUHE'S LA FAVORITA.—A remarkably effective and brilliant piece on the best melodies in Donizetti's celebrated opera. Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S I PURITANI.—A new and most admirable piece on airs from the splendid opera of Bellini. Price 4s.—ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S LA SONNAMBULA.—An elegant, pleasing, and most successful piece on Bellini's melodious and ever-popular opera. Price 4s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

GANZ'S QUI VIVE! Grand Galop. "One of the most popular and effective pieces of the season." Illustrated London News. Price 3s.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

SING, BIRDIE, SING. GANZ'S popular Song. Sung by Miss Poole, Miss Dolby, Miss Lascelles, and other favourite vocalists. Price 2s. Post-free.
ARDOWN and FARRY, 31, Hanover-square.

Just published,
MY HEART IS EVER THINE. New Song. Words and Music by C. M. S. OLIVER. Price 2s. 6d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

REMINISCENCES OF SHAKESPEARE, for the Pianoforte. By C. W. GLOVER.
No. 1. AS YOU LIKE IT.
2. HAMLET.
3. OTHELLO.
With highly finished Chromolithographs. Price 3s. each.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

THE AVON QUADRILLE, by F. WALLERSTEIN, on the most favourite Airs introduced in Shakespeare's Plays. Price 4s. Post-free.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

AVON VALSES. By T. BROWNE. Price 3s. Post-free. Superior elaborately-tinted Chromolithograph of Stratford-on-Avon.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

New Edition, with splendid Illustration, 3s. 6d.,
GARIBALDI'S HYMN. Words by GEORGE LINLEY. Music by
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CHRISTY'S MINSTRELS' LATEST SUCCESS.
MOTHER WOULD COMFORT ME. Sung nightly by Mr. Harry Reeves, Mr. Pell, and Mr. Fox.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

NEWEST SONGS by POPULAR COMPOSERS:—
"Ruby." Virginia Gabriel ... ... Price 3s. 0d.
"Oh, when I'm Dead." Virginia Gabriel ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Oh, when I'm Dead." Virginia Gabriel, Duet ... ... 4s. 0d.
"The Reproach." Miss Cary ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Spring-time Call." Miss F. Wallerstein ... ... 3s. 0d.
"Spring-time Call." Miss F. Wallerstein, Duet ... ... 4s. 0d.
METZLER and CO., 37, 38, 33, and 36, Great Marlborough-street, W.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' BOLD MARCO, for song by Sir Julius Benedict. "Sir Benedict's Tragedienne." Price 2s.—Censor: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S BOLD MARCO. Sung by Mr. Santley, Mr. Sims Reeves, and Mr. Braham. Transcribed for the Pianoforte. Brilliantly and effectively. Price 3s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S YE BANKS AND BRAES. Price 4s. This is a most brilliant arrangement for the Pianoforte, and is effectively differed from the others.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S BOADMAN'S WATCH (on Spohr's popular song, "How, now, benighted wo-ye"). Price 4s.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S FANTAISIE DE CONCERT on "Bold Admiral Benbow." Price 4s. Brilliant and effective.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S MY LODGING IS ON THE COLD GROUND. For the Piano. Price 4s. Brilliant and effective.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. KUHE'S THE CAPTIVE GREEK MAID. Transcribed for Pianoforte. Price 4s. Brilliant and effective.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE FRIEND'S GIFT.—A Collection of the most Popular Tunes arranged in a very easy and simple manner, and fingered for the Piano. By J. BUCKNER. In 12 Books, price 1s. each, or in 3 Volumes, price 3s. each.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

W. H. MONTGOMERY'S BEL DEMONIO GALOP. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 2s. 6d. Played nightly at the Theatre Royal, Lyceum.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

THE ROSARY. Song by M. BALFE. Author of the popular Songs, "I dreamed that I dwelt," "I arise from dreams of thee," "The Maid of Athens," &c. Price 2s. 6d.
London: JOSEPH WILLIAMS, 11, Holborn-bars; and 123, Cheapside.

PIANOS.—WEN'S COLLARD and COLLARD MODEL PIANO, 72 guineas, seven octaves, attracted by their new workmanship and by their extreme cheapness. No such a business that he could cause sell it from their own manufactory, 16, Grafton-street, Fitzroy-square, and 104, Tottenham-court-road, W. (Removed from 56, Conduit-street, Hanover-square, W. Drawing facilities sent free upon application. References and Testimonials of the highest character can be given.

VIOLIN, of great antiquity, by Antonius Stradivarius Cremonensis, built anno 1692. This splendid-toned Violin was purchased by the late Mr. Thomas Dodd, and at the 13th inst., at Thomas Dodson's, Bed Manufacturer, 201 (late 60), Westminster Bridge-road, Lambeth, S.

ARCHERY.—Ladies' Equipments, from 15s. Gent. 30s. Prize Medal, London, 1862. No. 2 Archery: best Match Bow, 21s. Handbook Gratis. N. Archer's Guide and List of Prize gratis.
C. ARMSTRONG, 171, Oxford-street (next to Duke-street).

STRATFORD - ON - AVON FESTIVAL. THE TICKET OFFICE is now open, and members of the Committee can personally assist those who have not already received their Tickets.
Clopton and Peat Office Orders should be made payable to Mr. John Ireland Hemming, Stratford-on-Avon.

THE ASYLUM FOR IDIOTS,
Earlswood, Redhill, Surrey.
A BAZAAR, IN AID OF the ABOVE FUND, will be held, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on SATURDAY, the 2nd, SECOND, and THIRD of JUNE next, under the Patronage of the Queen and the Royal family.
Her Royal Highness the DUCHESS OF KENT.
H.R.H. the Duchess of Cambridge.
H.R.H. the Princess Mary of Cambridge.
And a Committee of Ladies.
Contributions of useful and ornamental work, clothing for the poor, Fancy Articles, Toys, Books, Prints, Pictures, Jewellery, Trinkets, Perfumery, Confectionery, Refreshments, Flowers, Fruit, Shells, Botanical specimens, tapestry, ribbons, cutlery, portfolios, Berlin wools, Fancy Dresses, and Articles of Vertu, are respectfully solicited to be thankfully received.
Tables for which the approved value of its guinea will entitle to a Transferable Ticket admitting Two Ladies, will be provided.
WILLIAM NOTTIDGE, Secretary.
Bankers—Lord Overstone, Messrs. Jones, Loyd, and Co., Messrs. Drummonds, Charing-cross, S.W.; Messrs. Hoare and Co., 37, Fleet-street, E.C.
Office, 21, Poultry, E.C.

THE LONDON and NORTHERN BANK (Limited), 3, Bank-buildings, London, E.C.
Capital, £1,000,000, in 20,000 Shares of £50 each.
Subscribed Capital, £600,000.
DEPOSIT ACCOUNTS are opened on terms of free and transfer of title bank, and interest allowed on the sums at the current rate of 2½ per cent. per annum.
Current Accounts are opened, and business transacted, on the most favourable terms.
J. P. TURNER, Manager and Secretary.

BANK of NEW ZEALAND,
INCORPORATED BY ACT OF GENERAL ASSEMBLY.
Bankers—The Union Bank of London, 2, Crosby-square, E.C.
CAPITAL, £500,000. RESERVED FUND, £60,000.

Branches and Agencies in New Zealand.

Auckland	Hokitika	Omaru	Invercargill
Port Nicholson	Lyttelton	Dunedin	Onehunga
Nelson	Christchurch	Waikouaiti	Wanganui
Wellington	Christchurch	Waitahuna	Otago
Wellington	Kaiapoi	Tokomairiro	Picton
Nelson	Timaru	Moeraki-bks	Queenstown
New Plymouth	Oamaru	Kakanui	Riverton

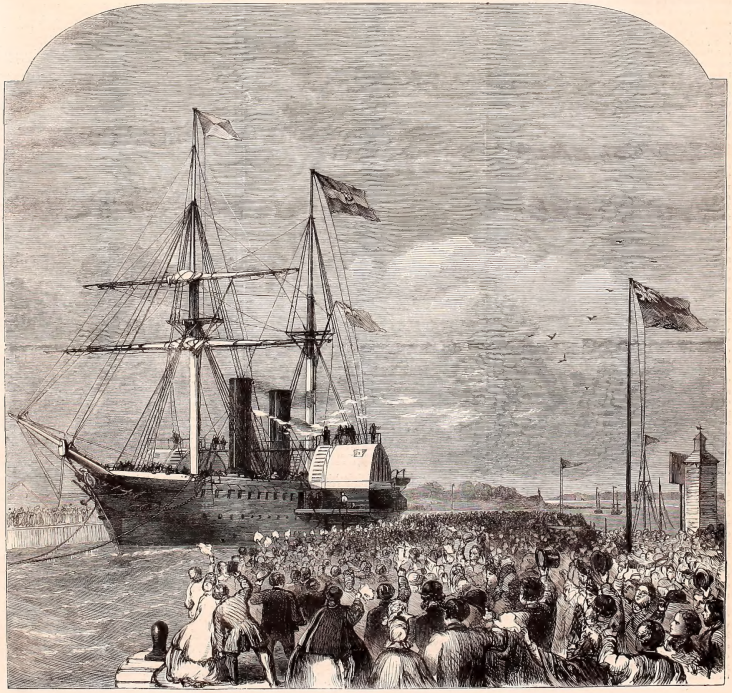
The Bank's proper branch on any of the above-named Towns in New Zealand, and transacts every description of Banking business connected therewith, on the most favourable terms.
Bills of Exchange and Circular Notes issued on the London Office.
F. LARKWORTHY, Manager.
Head Office, Wellington, New Zealand.

£1000 IN CASE OF DEATH, or an allowance of £6 per week for Injury caused by Accident of any kind, whether walking, riding, driving, boating, or otherwise, may be secured by an Annual Payment of £3 only, by the RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE COMPANY, 64, Cornhill, and 10, Regent-street, and 64, Cornhill.
WILLIAM J. THAN, Secretary.

MALVERN.—HYDROPATHY.—The Holy Rood House, Malvern, is now open. Terms and Prospectus will be OPENED for the RECEPTION of PATIENTS in MAY. It is situated in the most healthy part of Malvern, and is replete with every convenience for the Treatment of Chronic Diseases. Terms on application. Medical attendance and Baths included.
J. LAKE-CONSTABLE, Physician to the Establishment.

"RECONNOITRER" GLASS, 10s. 10d.!! and "not dim, weighs only 6 oz., and shows distinctly windows and chimney-pots at a distance of 10 miles." Sold by all Opticians, or sent free by the maker, 102, Great Russell-st.

"RECONNOITRER" GLASS, 10s. 10d.! "most powerful."—The Reconnoitrer" is very good."—Morning Post.—"Excellent."—Standard. "Wonderful power, a focus adjustment which combined so much power, for its size, with so much simplicity."—Bell's Life. "Perfect in every way."—See Sun and Atlas



THE ILLUSTRATED
LONDON NEWS.

No. 1255.—VOL. XLIV. SATURDAY, APRIL 16, 1864. WITH A SUPPLEMENT, FIVEPENCE

THE BUDGET.

WHEN the annual statement of the Minister of Finance is based on the principle of reduction of taxation, and when it is, moreover, conveyed to the country in the form of a magnificent oration, its interest ought not to be limited to the enjoyment of the hour of its production. One of Mr. Gladstone's fiscal exercitations possesses a longer life than is to be measured by a week. While giving to his plan that general smoothness and acceptability which is derived from a sense of relief from burden on the part of taxpayers, the Chancellor of the Exchequer always contrives to create a few points for argument. It would be scarcely agreeable to the mobility of his temperament if his Budget were to be so perfect a financial chrysolite as to defy criticism and swamp discussion. Those who are accustomed to listen to those stupendous speeches by which the largest audiences that can be packed into the House of Commons are enchained for periods varying from three to five hours conceive that Mr. Gladstone bestows most pains and care on those portions of his statements which relate to the minutest of his arrangements. He dandles and pets these weaklings with curious tenderness and care. It may be that he yields a little too much to the temptation of that rhetorical artifice by which a skilful speaker dwells on minor matters, while his hearers are yauting for great revelations; and in the present instance, he would impatience up to its highest pitch by enlarging on the value of diminishing the duty on tea licenses in rural districts, and the charge upon hawkers' ponies, when every one was eager to know what was actually the available surplus and how it was to be disposed of. But, beyond this, it would would seem that, in framing his rearrangements of existing taxes, he purposely infuses a few grains of dissatisfaction into them, with a view to raise debate, and so to enable him again and again to argue out his principles and to defend, even if afterwards he has to amend, his details. Apart from this stimulus, which really may be intended in those patches which the ladies of the time of the Spectator used to put on their faces under the impression that they heightened their natural charms, the Budget of 1864 is one which in its matter and its purposes is worthy of as much consideration as any of its famous predecessors.

THE ARRIVAL OF GARIBALDI AT SOUTHAMPTON ON BOARD THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAMER RIPON.—SEE PAGE 374.

In the comparisons between the present and former years, which Mr. Gladstone now, as hitherto, made it part—and a most interesting part—of his business to draw, which aimed at giving the trade and commerce of the country, the growth of the revenue, or the state of expenditure, he told a wondrous tale. What a marvellous suggestion is contained in the simple but comprehensive statement that in the last twenty years the use of our trade had been such that the money value of our exports and imports represented a sum equal to a million and a half for every working day of the twelve months! It was this, too, one cannot be surprised that the Chancellor of the Exchequer should have laid such emphasis on the circumstances of that unexampled which this prodigious advance in that which stands accountant for the wealth and prosperity of the country, and which, he adds, and should show that the inherent vigour of our commercial system would not to despise obstacles which the boldest feared, but which were swept away by the force of the onward march of enterprise. From the mass of the dullest truths cannot there be a moment could boast the statement of such facts would seem akin to eloquence: but in the flowing language and the graceful periods of Mr. Gladstone they reached the ear with a sound like descriptions of heroic deeds in an epic poem. Nor, indeed, do we were listening to something which might be designated the common English commerce—a tale of which the story of Aladdin's palace may be taken as the allegorical type. Again, facts and figures take a shape which causes them to be viewed as the images of fiction, when we are told that, although in the last four years there has been a reduction of no less than six millions of taxation, the revenue—which is the produce of the taxes which remain—stands but a few hundred thousand pounds less than it did before those reductions. This necessarily means that it has increased by nearly the sum of which taxpayers have been relieved; and, in short, that the rate of the natural proportion to the growth of the prosperity of the country, increase in the rate of a million and a quarter per annum. It is impossible to contemplate this glowing picture of the condition of England without satisfaction; it is not the satisfaction of party faction, because in the midst of this statement of swelling wealth and manifest improvement in the social condition of the working classes, did occur to us to consider whether there was not a certain class which in the circumstances relatively to grow poorer. We allude to that large number of the middle classes who subsist upon fixed incomes, on whose means neither the large gains of the commercial community nor the high wages of the working classes have any influence, except that of adding to the cost of living, and who thus seem to form an exception to that which is emphatically called the prosperity of the country. This we mention by the way, and with no design to suggest remedy where. The defect is one which, is perhaps, inherent in the economy of the world, and may not be remediable by the efforts of statesmen or financiers.

Turning to what may be called the action of the Budget—that is, the dealing with a surplus of two millions and a half, a special fact, and one worthy of all acceptation—it may be observed that Mr. Gladstone has left the House with ample powers of invention. Everybody who ventured to prophesy about reductions of taxation spoke of the sugar duties, of the income tax, or of the tax on the insurances as the obvious objects on which the Chancellor of the Exchequer would lay the relieving hand. As regards the first of these, the sugar duties, however Mr. Gladstone may have elaborated his explanations, it is doubtful whether the nonintelligent comprehend the system by which these imposts are regulated. A multitude of interests which surround the subject are admitted by the Finance Minister in so many words, while he practically admits them by leaving the scale in the present position as far as principle and regulation are concerned. All that he does is to reduce each item of charge, so as in the main to diminish the duty one shilling in the hundredweight. Those who profess to understand the subject declare that this will produce no sensible effect in price to the consumer; but, however that may be, we cannot quarrel with a change which is founded on the broad motive of decrease of taxation. The removal of a penny in the pound from the income tax is intelligible in the utmost sense of the word. Every one can understand the difference between sevenpence and sixpence in the pound; and, while granting this patent boon, the Chancellor of the Exchequer holds out hopes that next year he may be able, and will certainly be willing, to bring the charge down to fivepence in the pound. If he does not as yet venture to talk of its utter abolition, he comforts those who pay it with the usual groans which direct taxation always elicits, by denouncing it as an immoral and demoralizing tax—to the State—and bestows on it generally an eloquence which—to the reverse of benediction. In dealing with the duty on fire insurances we confess we are but little satisfied with the tentative movement of the Finance Minister. Can it be that there is, despite of his better nature, lurking within him a feeling born of an unconscious avowed contest between him and the chief advocate in Parliament of the diminution of this particular duty, which has caused him to maim this part of the Budget? Whatever the occasion of half the charge on, if not the least important, at any rate the smallest, portion of the subject of the tax, is but the ghost of a measure. Of a measure which has been made, and which has been formally sanctioned by a vote of the House of Commons. The answer, of course, is obvious—namely, that when he came to Fire Insurance, the surplus was touching the point of extinction, and therefore no more could be done. But a skilful and at the same time more heroic manipulation of the rogue duties might have been effected by the willing hands of so dexterous a financier, so as to have left a wider margin for the less, and most especially the last, boon, of, on the whole, the very acceptable reliefs of the Budget of 1864.

In one of the most glowing periods of his speech, Mr. Gladstone dwelt on the circumstance of the increasing trade and commerce of the country as a standing guarantee that England was and would continue to be at once the steady champion and the insensible promoter of the peace of the world. Here it be permitted us to borrow the idea from him and apply it to the finance of the Budget, by venturing to say that the Budgets of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and that last especially, are accepted and recognised as indications of a resolve that the best efforts of Ministers will be directed to secure to this country the blessings of economy. Such an income tax is a political barometer, constructed, it is true, on the exactly opposite principle to the material instrument so called; for while the latter we predict fair weather, and the lower it goes the farther from us we feel that we are the storms which rage with more or less violence in other nations.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

On Tuesday the Emperor, accompanied by the Empress and the Prince Imperial reviewed six regiments of cavalry in the Champs de la Marche. The Emperor rode a splendid charger, and in front of his Staff, "Presently (says the Daily Telegraph correspondent) a little round figure appeared on a small pony on a small pony cantered past the Emperor, and, going well up the front, reined up his pony, faced on the boulevard, was saluted with a hurra which might have been heard on the boulevards. The Empress was present, looking very handsome, and mounted like an Empress. But I confess the little spring pony, with the little boy on the front, reined up his pony, looking boy, who cantered laughingly before his father, receiving the salutes of the troops, was the sight of the day to me."

The Moniteur announces that the Prince Imperial will give a fête, on the 6th of May, in the Bois de Boulogne, in honour of his birthday.

Lord Cowley has gone on a special mission to the Imperial Court. The Emperor received the noble Earl on Thursday. His Lordship subsequently had an audience of the Empress and Dowager Queen. One of the Paris papers announces, probably with truth, that the object of his mission is to obtain a complete understanding between France and England on Danish affairs. The Times Paris correspondent is assured that a very friendly understanding existed of the cabinets which would be represented at the Conference now exists between the Governments of France and England.

The Duchess of Sutherland and Lady Augusta Fitzgladstone have passed their report. The report announces an increase in the revenue of the ministry for the year 1864. It states that the receipts during the Budget will be balanced without augmenting the existing amount of deficit. The report concludes by expressing the hope of maintaining peace in Europe, and expresses its confidence in the policy of the Government in order to attain that end.

The Budget stipulates that the stamp duty, levied in accordance with the law of 1862, on bills of sale, on receipts, leases, and public securities of foreign Governments, shall not be increased during the year. This measure is to take effect from the 1st of July, 1864.

The annual ceremony of the Fête Dieu in the Roman Catholic way held last week in the Church of the Oratoire, Rue St. Honoré. The altar was richly decorated with flowers, and the music selected in inspiration of the Scriptures against recent writers.

The spring meeting at Longchamps began on Sunday last, and the weather being fine, an immense number of spectators was on the ground. The Imperial box, immediately in front of the Judges' and the pasture of the Grand Stand presented the usual array of brilliant toilets.

The plantation of the internal boulevards at Paris observes the Moniteur) is now complete. Nine hundred new trees now ornaments the whole line from the Place de la Madeleine to the Bastille. Twenty-six new streets completed, each boulevard has been planted with only one kind of tree, carefully selected with reference to the soil which is best in the climate of Paris.

DEPARTURE OF THE ARCHDUKE MAXIMILIAN OF THE MEXICAN CROWN.

The Archduke Maximilian formally received the Mexican deputation and finally accepted the Mexican crown on behalf of Miramar. The new Emperor announced that he intended to depart almost immediately for Mexico, calling, however, at Rome on his way thither to receive some advice and, perhaps, to receive some concessions from the Pope.

The Emperor and Empress of Mexico left Miramar on Thursday afternoon for their capital. The demonstrations of the whole was first by all the batteries on their departure.

M. Forey believes that the French army of occupation will be gradually withdrawn from Mexico.

The Emperor Napoleon has given his consent to the forming of a Mexican legion, with officers who volunteer from the French army, and who are to be allowed to retain their Austrian military rank for a period of six years.

The Emperor Maximilian has made the following appointments:—M. Velasquez, Minister of the Household; Count Woll, Adjutant-General and Private Secretary; M. Schergenbacher, Councillor of State; Baron Lago, Chief of the Diplomatic Department; M. Arnoldi, Ambassador at Brussels; M. Aguilar, Ambassador at Rome; Count Pachtenberg, Grand Master of the Ceremonies; Captain Rabbatta, Governor of the Palace; Naval Captain Heinfeld, Consul-General at Vienna.

Advices had reached New York that nine French frigates had appeared off Matamoras, and that an attack on the town was expected. There was also a report—very doubtful—that Juarez had captured Guadalajara.

SPAIN.

The Ministry have stated, in reply to a question in the Cortes, that they will energetically carry on the war until the submission of Mr. Domingo be obtained.

The Count Reus and Salaverria, supported by the principal bankers, have agreed to offer 140 millions to negotiate the bonds given by the purchasers of national property.

AUSTRIA.

The family agreement entered into between the Emperor of Austria and the Emperor Maximilian will be communicated to both Houses of the Reichsrath. The Emperor Maximilian's renunciation for himself and his heirs of the right of success on to the Austrian throne does not depend upon the stability of the Government in Mexico, but is unconditional.

The Emperor has dissolved the Dalmatian Diet, "on account of party intrigues and attacks on the Government."

The general Synods of the Lutherans and Calvinists in Austria have at length been convoked for the 22nd of May, and their sittings will be held at Vienna.

The sum of 12,000 florins has been subscribed at Vienna by the admirers of Schubert's compositions for the construction on a monument to his memory.

THE POLISH INSURRECTION.

Telegrams from Breslau tell of a large body of insurgent infantry and cavalry having crossed from the East Prussia into the kingdom of Poland and having had a severe engagement with the Russians.

Statements have been received from Dresden to the effect that out of 160 Polish recruits conveyed from Warsaw to Wilna, only 40 have reached the Silesian frontier.

In Lithuania fresh insurrectionary bodies are beginning to appear.

On Wednesday the official seal was affixed to the offices of the Credit Industriel and the Credit Foncier proprietors at Turin, as the higher officials were arrested. A special commission, under the presidency of General Cordero di Montezemolo, has been appointed to examine the assets, accounts, and management of the institution, as well as the payments due from the land proprietors.

DENMARK AND GERMANY.

The siege of Düppel is proceeding with great activity. The bombardment by the Prussians has been increased, and they have completed their second and traced their third parallel. The trenches advanced to within five hundred paces of the left wing of the Danes. The latter suffer considerably from the fire of the besiegers' batteries, and are too weak to make sallies to impede the sap of the Prussians. The batteries at Broacker continue to shell the town of Sonderburg at intervals. The windmill at Düppel Hill has been burnt down. Little impression, however, appears to have been as yet made on the bastions of Düppel. A bold attempt to send across a considerable force in boats to the rear of the Danes on the island of Alsen was defeated by the tempestuous weather. The Danish Minister of War, on his return to Copenhagen, declared that the army was in good order, the condition of Düppel. The troops have executed a second line of defence behind Sonderburg No. 1 and No. 2 redoubts were the most exposed to the fire of the batteries of Broager. The men are also sufficiently disciplined to man the projectiles, and are acquiring daily more assurance. The Minister is therefore full of confidence in the solidity of the troops and in the strength of Düppel.

A small body of Danish troops has landed between Hadersleben and Apenrade.

An engagement is reported in the neighbourhood of Fredericia, showing that the Austrians have not definitively left. The story of the Hanoverian mutiny is now officially declared to be false.

The Danes have, it is said, 17,000 men at Düppel, 10,000 at Fredericia, and 10,000 at Alsen. Altogether—making together 38,000. There are also 800 Swedish volunteers serving in the Danish army.

The Danish correspondent of the Times gives a description of the ruins of Sonderburg, which have resulted on the attacking of the bombardment on Tuesday week:—

There is always, in the most severe savage pleasure in the contemplation of devastation on a large scale. As for myself, after two nights' nurse, I felt my heart in a glow of delight as my wandered through the sad recollections of battered Gaels, and tumbling up those blackened staffs and broken walls which had been the pride and joy of the inhabitants of Sonderburg. Scarcely a house of one hundred dwellings in one cluster were made utterly uninhabitable by our enemies' shells. Of the 1,200 houses of the town, not one in twenty is free from the effects of many of them, rescued from the ruins, was piled up a miserable heap in the middle of the street. Many families were living in the cellars, with their own errands in speechless contemplation of other people's troubles. Business did not seem to be going on much at the town; life was a desperate contest. Most shops were open, never having been closed; owners had no chance of selling anything, and the only people in the streets were those belong to nobody. The two streets sloping down on each side of the Town-hall were a mass of ruins, and the Town-hall itself was one of the most wrecked of the town. Not a window was left, and the roof was in a terrible state of decay. Where are the bell and the house now? What has become of the bell and the house now? What has become of the bell and the house now? What has become of press. Alexandria was occupied on the 16th ult. The Confederates on the north and south of the river were concentrating at Shreveport. Fort de Russy was accidentally blown up, killing four men. A reconnaissance seventy-five miles above Alexandria engaged the Confederates, capturing 200 prisoners and four pieces of artillery.

An attack by the Confederate General Forrest upon Union City, Western Tennessee, on the 24th ult., resulted in the capture of the town and 500 Federals. Immediately afterwards, Forrest entered Kentucky, and on the 25th occupied Padurah, on the Ohio River, from which he removed many valuable spoils. He also attacked the fort, but for want of heavy cannon was compelled to retire. The Federal gun-boats from Cairo opened fire to dis'odge his forces during which a large portion of the city was destroyed. Forrest then retired to Jackson, Tennessee, thirty-five miles distant.

A conflict between the soldiers and civilians (or, as modest despatch-writers between Copenhagen and Berlin would say, the Charleston, Illinois, on the 26th ult., in which between twenty and thirty combatants are said to have been killed. The civilians (Copenhagens) were driven from the town, but have intrenched themselves at Coaling Hill, and the Chicago troops are said to be under arms, also threatened. General Heintzelman, commanding that department, has called for 1000 troops to support the garrison.

AUSTRALIA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

(Received April 13.)

MELBOURNE, Feb. 25.—Parliament was opened on the 26th ult. by the Governor, Sir Charles Darling. A few days afterwards the Treasurer made his financial statement, which was received by Parliament with great interest, inasmuch as the announcement of a considerable deficiency was anticipated. Contrary to expectation, however, not only was there no deficiency to record, but when the accounts for 1897 are finally closed, a surplus of at least £100,000 will be carried to the credit side of the current year's accounts. The estimated revenue of 1898 shows an equally satisfactory state of things, the Treasurer expecting to raise £3,017,892, while the expenditure is set down at £2,816,189; and in this sum is included a sum of £100,000 for old-age charitable institutions, education, &c. £70,000 is voted for a new lunatic asylum, £25,000 for a residence for the Governor, £4000 for reclamation-land purposes, &c.

The Land Bill, that bugbear of every Session, was introduced by Mr. Hedles and passed a second time on the 3rd inst., after a long discussed in Committee. Like its predecessors, it is likely to prove unsatisfactory to the whole—that is to say, the agricultural community to whom the final settlement of this question would prove a real blessing, for then they would be able to see their way clear for stump oratory. The new bill aims at correcting the errors which experience has pointed out in the Act of 1890.

The Estimates have been already nearly all disposed of, our legislators appearing to be fully desirous of getting through as much as possible before the dissolution, which takes place, by effluxion of time, in July next.

The Federation question is discussed with as much fervour as ever, the assurance of the Duke of Newcastle that the number of convicts sent to New South Wales would be in no way increased has looked upon as not at all a satisfactory reply to the remonstrances already transmitted to England against the fact that a passenger mail takes home a minute to the Colonial Secretary, passed by the Victorian Mint, recording the issue of sovereigns and half-sovereigns to the colonists on this subject; and memorials from South Australia and New South Wales are also forwarding.

The friends and admirers of Mr. Charles Kean in England will be glad to hear that the health of the distinguished actor's widow, Mrs. Kean, is now to appear on an early day at Ballarat, and on the 9th proximo in Melbourne. Afterwards they are to sail for California, arrangements having been made for them, to make a farewell visit on their return to Europe.

The All-England Eleven met with a more enthusiastic reception in New Zealand than even in Melbourne. Their sojourn in the sister colony has been a remarkably successful one in every respect—in the colony, and will commence a three-days' match at Castlemaine to-morrow. The first match will be in Melbourne, when the All-Englishmen will be divided as follows:—Parr, Cuesar, Caffyn, Carpenter, Turner, and Tinsley on one side, and Grace, Hayward, Grace, Hayward, Jackson, and Lockyer on the other, with five of our best local players in each set.

The weather in this province has been very unlike what we have been accustomed to at this season of the year: in fact, so common have storms rain been that "Sydney storm" has become a well-understood expression. A few days ago a smart shock of an earthquake was experienced, which passed off with no worse effects than those of not a few of the female population, and my quantity of crockery.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SYDNEY, Feb. 25.—The tariff of the new Ministry has passed the Lower House; but it continues an open question in the Upper House. A petition, signed by 14,000 persons, was presented to the Council against it. On the motion that the bill be read a third time, it was rejected by the Council by a majority of 19 to 17. The rumour was prevalent that the Governor refused to appoint new members of the Upper House unless the Ministry were defeated, instead of nominating with the view of carrying their tariff bill. Business is very dull, owing to the great uncertainty as to the passing of the new tariff.

The financial state of the colony shows no symptom improvement. To get over the present difficulty Parliament has authorised the Government to borrow £1,000,000 for public works.

The Customs' revenue for January amounted to £49,569. The returns somewhat less than in that month in 1897.

The Bank of New South Wales is to increase its capital to one million sterling, a meeting of shareholders having been called for that purpose.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, Feb. 25.—The first half of the new railway is to be turned at Ipswich by Lady Bowen to-day. The contract for the construction of the line, to the Queensland Central Railway terminus, has been given to the firm of Peto, Brassey, and Co. The line is to be a single one, and gauge, the same which should decide to take down wool from the interior, great difficulties having hitherto existed in the transhipment of the article to the coast. The line is to be of an uncommon thing for a delay of two years to take place between the time the wool is grown and its shipment.

Dredging operations at the bar at the entrance to Brisbane are going on very energetically and successfully. In the course of next month it is expected vessels drawing 22 ft. long, 30 ft. in width, and 9 ft. 6 in. in depth at low water, will have been cut.

NEW ZEALAND.

The war seems to be so far from settlement as ever. The natives are concentrating their energies and their forces upon another stronghold, which General Alexander is endeavouring to surround and cut them into submission. Great difficulties are experienced in getting supplies from the seaboard to the front; but the General and his army are sanguine as to speedy success.

Two other steamers have been taken to bear the town of Auckland; it is opposed by Maoris.

A destructive fire occurred at Dunedin, by which property to a large amount was consumed. The coasts were also visited by a severe storm, which did more damage than the fire.

There is nothing new to record in mining operations. Much dissatisfaction and distress exist at the diggings.

The fresh water canal from Ismailia is completed to Port Said. It is said to be an entire success.

The future Emperor of Mexico has turned author, and issued privately "Souvenirs de Voyage à bord de la Fantasia," and "Un Hiver dans l'Ile de Madère."

King Victor Emmanuel, who, as is well known, is a great friend of the chase, has just received twenty stags from California. They have cost, voyage and all, about 3000*l.* apiece.

Our Engraving last week of the famous Towneley bull, Royal Butterfly, was from a photograph taken by Messrs. John Ravenhill and Co., photographers, of Burnley, Lancashire, in which neighborhood Colonel Towneley resides.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

Lord Ellesmere has thrown open the library and gallery of Bridgewater House to the public.

MESSRS. W. H. C. Flowden and W. Dent were on Wednesday elected members of the East India Company.

The annual concerts of the corps of Commissionaires, in the Cambridge Infantry Barracks, commenced last Saturday afternoon, and continue daily from 4.30 till 8.30 p.m.

The annual ball in connection with the Ranelagh Yacht Club took place at St. James's Hall on Thursday night. The Commodore presided at supper, which was presided at one o'clock.

The report which has been issued has been made against Mr. Chidley, one of the relieving officers of Bethnal-green Workhouse, have issued in the Poor-law Board Inquiry proceedings.

On Tuesday an elaborate lecture was delivered by his Excellency Signor Pecorini, the Italian ambassador, in the Architectural Museum, South Kensington Museum, on the "Prospects for Good Architecture in London."

The National Portrait Gallery, 29, Great George-street, Westminster, is open every day during the week, from ten o'clock. Any respectable person, in order to afford the public an unrestricted opportunity of access to the collection, is admitted free of charge.

The statue of Sir Charles Barry, the only one as yet represented in a sitting posture, on the south, overlooks pertinently all the bottom of the grand staircase leading to the principal entrance of the House of Commons, but as yet remains in the sculptor's studio.

Thursday was the anniversary of the birth of Princess Beatrice Mary Victoria Feodore, youngest daughter of her Majesty and the late Prince Henry of Battenberg. She is now in her 22nd year, and has already seven years of age. The day was ushered in with the usual loyal demonstration at Windsor and Osborne.

At the last weekly meeting of the City Commissioners of Sewers, Dr. Tidy reported that the sewer-gas explosion-houses had been duly inspected during the week, and the officers had condemned 5364 lb. of meat as unfit for human food. The quantity destroyed by the sanitary sub-committee had also been of internal excess.

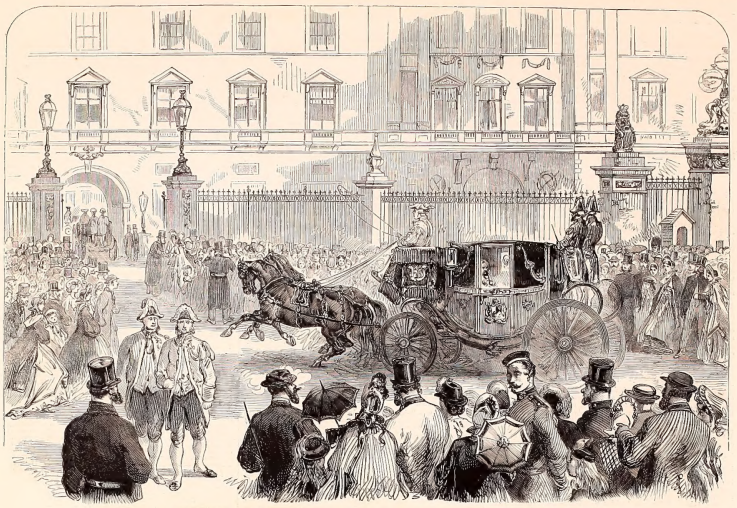
A woman, Mrs. Stevenson, aged sixty-three, has died at Bethnal-green in destitution owing to her utterly habits. She kept a small lodging-house in Hackney-road, and was found dead in the parlour in front of her poorer neighbours and the clergy. More than £300 in securities was found in her pockets, and £100 in gold and notes in a box under the bed. Her will has been found.

The second exhibition of spring flowers took place in the gardens of the Royal Botanic Society, Regent's Park, last Saturday, and the fineness of the weather was the means of attracting a large and fashionable attendance. Notwithstanding the early period of the season, the general appearance of the gardens was very attractive, and the Band of the Royal Horse Guards (Blue) attended, and played various selections.

The forty-first annual festival dinner in aid of England Young Men's Society was held on Tuesday at Exeter Hall—the East of Hartwell in the chair. The report stated that the number of young men in the provinces during the past year, and amongst other things called attention to a new branch, the commercial travellers' section, which was established by Mr. Bardsford, a member of the central society. The Bishop of London subscribed £100.

A meeting was held at the London Tavern, on Wednesday, to take resolutions with reference to the Jews. The Rev. Dr. Wilkinson took occasion in undertaking his journey to Morocco to procure the enfranchisement of the oppressed race in that country. Sir Moses Montefiore also unanimously attended. Alderman Salomons presided. The resolutions passed not only thanked Dr. Wilkinson for his visit, but also for the many years in which he has given the self-denying philanthropist. They also acknowledged the services of the British Government.

Last week the births of 3012 children—1018 boys and 993 girls—were registered in London. The average number in the 52 years 1854-63 the average number (corrected) was 1960.—The deaths in London last week were 1,716, the corresponding number in the previous 10 the average number, corrected for increase of population, was 1885. There were 197 deaths from measles, 29 from scarlet fever, 19 from diphtheria, 21 from typhus, and 15 from enteric fever. The deaths from whooping-cough were 53 from small-pox, 16 from diarrhœa, and 1 from cholera.



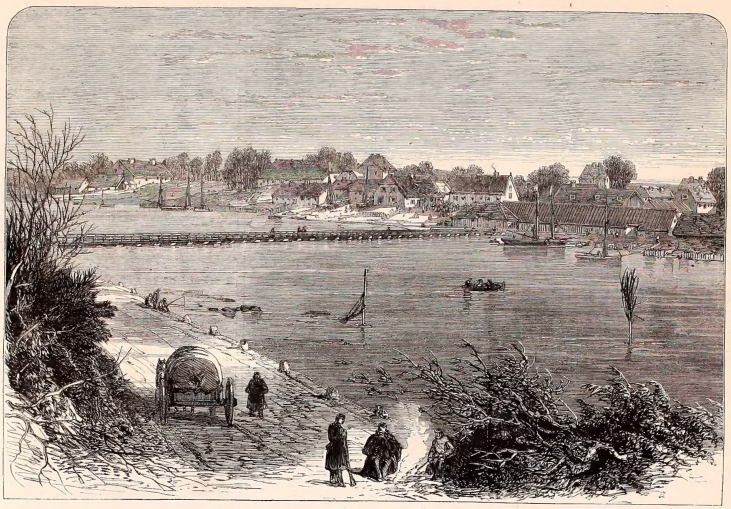
The annual dinner of the committee of the Licensed Victuallers' Protection Society was held on Wednesday evening at Mr. Marcus Tarrem, when advantage was taken of the occasion to present Mr. Lamb, the late secretary, with a testimonial in recognition of his valuable services, in testimony of his valuable services during his year of office.—On Thursday evening the annual dinner of the Licensed Victuallers' Asylum Elleen (the Female Orphan Asylum) was held at the Freemasons' Tavern, by his friends, on which occasion a service of plate, consisting of four epergnes and a salver, was presented to the secretary, Mr. Lamb.

The fourth conversazione of the Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts was held on Wednesday evening at the Suffolk-street Gallery, Pall-mall East, by permission of the Royal Society of Painters in Water-Colours. The exhibition consisted of a collection of pictures, drawings, and the admirable collection of pictures, water colours, and sculpture contributing the chief attraction to the exhibition. Music added to the gratification to a numerous assemblage. Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, the recently elected president, was in the chair. Lord Stratford de Redcliffe, and his genial manner of the occasion to the company, pointing out the excellent features of the exhibition, and the encouragement which pictures in bad made and the many advantages it had conferred, both on the profession of the fine arts and the public, since the society had its establishment, in 1857, and expressing a sanguine hope that are long the society would become, in every respect, a national institution. The Lord Mayor, Sir Walter Foster, and a numerous assemblage of wood and instrumental music.

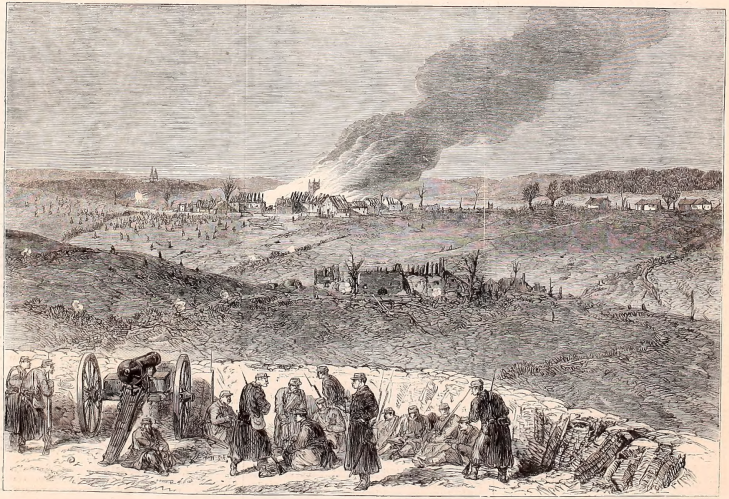
The annual meeting of the Institution of Engineers held their annual festival, on Wednesday, at the Freemasons' Tavern—Mr. M'Clean, the president, in the chair. The chairman, in proposing the toast of the evening, "The task of proposing "Prosperity to the Institution of Civil Engineers" was allotted to the Right Hon. Lord Ashbourne, who spoke in eulogistic terms which the science of engineering had made within the last few years, and which had led to the construction of railways, docks, and other great works, in a remarkable degree to the social convenience and comfort of mankind. The toast was responded to by Sir Benjamin Baker, K.C.M.G., who said that "The Learned Societies" was proposed by Mr. Bryan Donkin, and by Professor Dunkinson. The latter gentleman, as President of the Institute of British Architects, said that the profession of architecture and that of engineering might be greatly promoted if the science of architecture were examined more closely into by engineers, and that the two professions joined with much éclat.

THAMES NAVAL INSTITUTIONS.—A public dinner in aid of the funds of the University College Hospital was held on Tuesday night at Willis's Rooms, Mr. Alderman Faudel-Phillips in the chair. The object of the institution was to raise £100,000 to place it in the position of the charity, there having been an increase of 50 per cent in the number of patients in the last few years. At the same time there is a yearly deficit of £4000, which is a subject of very serious consideration. The sum of £6000 was promised at the meeting. The Shah's wards of 1200 in-patients are annually admitted, 6000 out-patients are yearly attended to, and 1000 operations performed. The scholarships connected with the hospital is about £6000 a year, but the total income from all sources is only about £30,000. The Duke of Cambridge, Lord Rosebery, and others have subscribed, and we suggest that 200 persons at £500 each in annual subscriptions and donations to the amount of £100 were announced.

The fifteenth annual festival dinner in connection with the benevolent festival at the hospital on Wednesday at the Albion Tavern—Mr. G. Gisbon, M.P., in the chair. The object of the festival, Dr. Barnardo, in proposing "The Health of the Queen," adverted in feeling terms to the tenderness of heart which her Majesty had shown to the orphan children. Since he had afford amusement to the suffering little ones in the hospital. (Cheers.) He was glad to say that the number of children under the care of the institution year grows during the past year. The number of the beds had been increased, and the number of children in the hospital was 1,200. The number of beds in the hospital was 1,200. The number of beds in the hospital was 1,200. The number of beds



THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE ON SATURDAY LAST: ARRIVAL OF THE FOREIGN AMBASSADORS.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.



RUINS OF COLONEL COLT'S PATENT FIREARMS FACTORY AT HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT, RECENTLY DESTROYED BY FIRE.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

THE WAR IN DENMARK.

VILLAGE OF EKERNSUNDE AND BRIDGE OF BOATS.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

THE REPULSE OF THE PRUSSIANS ON MARCH 28, VIEWED FROM THE DANISH REDOUBTS.—SEE PAGE 378.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 23.

SUNDAY, April 17.—Third Sunday after Easter. Luther appears before the Emperor Charles V. and the States of the Empire, at Worms, 1521.
MONDAY, 18.—Battle of Sierra Gorda; total defeat of the Mexicans by the Americans under General Winfield Scott, 1847.
TUESDAY, 19.—Archbishop Arundel, of Canterbury, martyred by the Lollards, 1413. Battle of Lexington, Lord Sydney, 1st poet, 1644. Treaty of Peace between Holland and Denmark, 1857.
WEDNESDAY, 20.—Richard Baxter, the holy recluse of Kent, executed for conspiracy, 1534. Birth of the Emperor Napoleon III., 1808.
THURSDAY, 21.—The first of the new public improvements in London set up at St. Sepulchre's Church, 1615.
FRIDAY, 22.—Conclusion of the exclusive rights of the East India Company in Chinese commerce, 1834. Full moon, 1h. 19 m. a.m.
SATURDAY, 23.—St. George the Martyr. Shakspeare born, Shakspeare born, 1564; died, 1616. Arrival of the Great Western at New York, establishing steam communication with America (she sailed from Bristol April 8), 1838.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE FOR THE WEEK ENDING APRIL 23, 1864.

Sunday.	Monday.	Tuesday.	Wednesday.	Thursday.	Friday.	Saturday.
M A M A M A M A M A M A M A M
3 15 3 37 4 0 4 23 4 46 5 10 5 36

THE WEATHER.

RESULTS OF METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS AT THE OBSERVATORY OF THE ROYAL ASSOCIATION.

Lat. 51° 28′ 6″ N.; Long. 0° 18′ 47″ W.; Height above sea 34 feet.

DAY.	DAILY MEANS OF				THERMOMETER.		WIND.		Rain in Inches.
	Barometer reduced to 32°.	Dew Point.	Humidity.	Ozone.	Highest in Shade.	Lowest on Grass.	Greatest Direction.	Greatest Velocity in Miles per Hour.
April.	Inches.		Saturation = 1.	Scale of 0 to 6.					Inches.
6	29·599	42·1	0·82	2·1	54·6	31·2	SE. & SSE.	18	·000
7	29·264	42·6	0·92	2·4	49·5	31·5	ESE. & SE.	16	·000
8	29·237	43·2	0·94	2·5	49·6	31·6	SSE. & SE.	17	·000
9	29·237	48·9	0·96	2·7	57·9	38·0	WSW. WNW.	28	1·112
10	29·466	42·1	0·87	2·5	56·9	27·0	WSW.	17	·000
11	29·644	34·8	0·70	2·7	48·2	23·1	WSW. WNW.	28	·000
12	29·593	42·1	0·81	2·7	54·3	31·1	WSW. WNW.	28	·000

The following are the readings of the instruments referred to the above data, in order, as half-past nine a.m.:—

Barometer in Inches	29·592	29·264	29·237	29·239	29·466	29·647	29·601
Temperature of Air	39·0	43·0	46·0	48·0	49·0	41·0	43·0
Temperature of Evaporation	36·0	41·0	39·0	39·0	41·0	33·0	41·0
Direction of Wind	S.	S.	S.	W.	W.	W.	W.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—Managers, MESSRS. E. FALCONER and F. B. CHATTERTON. Tremendous success of the Revival of Shakspeare's first Part of Henry IV., which will be repeated every evening (except to-night) to the great and by the public generally to be one of the most efficient representations of the character of Falstaff ever witnessed on the English stage. Mr. Phelps has received the warmest and unanimous support of the most eminent members of the Profession. His Majesty Walter Montgomery Walter Lacy, Taylor, Addison, G. Belmore, R. Roxby, H. Vandenhoff, Ryder, Ashley, Mrs. Stirling, Miss Heath, Miss Fanny Huddart, Miss Rose Leclercq, and Miss Rosalie Pateman. The fairy scene and dances by Mr. and Mrs. Leclercq, Miss Rosalie Pateman, Chatterton, Stevens, and pupils, scenery, decorations, and the stage appointments the actors, movements of Princes, nobles, and the whole of the supernumeraries, in short the entire performance is highly wrought, truthful, and really pictures of the times as they have been chronicled, and which will be found to be the most attractive feature in the present performance. The whole to conclude with the Grand Ballet Divertissement, entitled LA FILLE DE MARBRE, by Leclercq. Preceded by the Farce of MASTER TUBBS, and to conclude each Evening with a Grand Ballet Divertissement, entitled LA FILLE DE MARBRE, by Leclercq. Mesdames Williams, and Miss Lydia Thompson, and Mr. Leclercq. Doors open at Half-past Six; Drama to commence at a quarter before Seven. Box-office open from Ten to Five daily. Fabrication.

THEATRE ROYAL HAYMARKET.—MONDAY, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, positively the Last Five Nights of Lover Evening. On FRIDAY, APRIL 22, SHERIDAN'S SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL. Last Appearance of SOPHIE YOUNG and its progression to HUNGARY. On SATURDAY, April 23, will be produced, for the first time, a new Comedy, in Three Acts, by Tom Taylor, entitled MRS. SCRIBBLE. Mr. Conway of TWELFTH NIGHT. VENUS AND ADONIS Every Evening.

ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Under the sole MANAGEMENT OF MADAME VESTRIS.—EVERY EVENING, for THE LAST TEN DAYS AFTER THIS FAIR, MRS. ROBERTSON, Sankey, Woodward, and WOX. A LIGHT HEART AND A HEAVY PURSE. Mrs. Robertson, Sankey, Woodward, Wilkinson, Bentley, Clarence, Mrs. Leigh Murray, Miss Fanny Wyndham, Miss Maskell, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Eady Storey, Lovrose, Miss Lee, and Miss Rosenthal. Box-office open all day. Doors open at Half-past Six. Commence at Seven.

ROYAL ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr BENJAMIN WEBSTER.—On MONDAY, and during the Week, at Seven, A LIGHT HEART AND A HEAVY PURSE. Mrs. Robertson, Sankey, Woodward, and Wox. At Eight, a Comedy, entitled THE GENUINE ARTICLE. Mr. Benjamin Webster, Mr. J. Robinson, Mr. Addison, Mr. Montague, Mrs. Charles Mathews, Mrs. Frank Matthews, Miss Fanny Wyndham, Miss Maskell, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Eady Storey, Lovrose, Miss Lee, and Miss Charles Mathews. To conclude with UNDER THE ROSE.—Mr. Ashley, Miss Farrell Josephs, and Miss A. Cottrell.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Sole Proprietor and MANAGER, Mr. WEBSTER.—On MONDAY, and during the Week, THE OLD FARCE ENGLISH—Mr. J. L. Toole, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Billington, and Mrs. Selby. At Seven, THE LEAD—Mr. Toole; supported by Messrs. Billington, Phillips, Rogers, Clarke, Mrs. Billington, and Mrs. Selby. At Eight, THE LAST SHILLELAGH, a Comedy, by Mr. John Poole. Mr. Gallery as Dion Boucicault, Mr. Billington, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Rogers, Mr. Clarke, Mrs. Billington, Mrs. Selby, Miss Fanny Josephs, and Miss Woolgar. To conclude with THE LOAN OF A LOVER. Mr. Toole, Mr. Billington, Mr. Phillips, Mrs. Billington, and Mrs. Selby. Doors open at Half-past Six. Commence at Seven.

MR. KENNEDY'S SONGS of SCOTLAND.—EVERY EVENING, at Eight, MONDELL, Hanover-square, in his Entertainment, entitled SCOTLAND, POETRY, and SENTIMENT, SONG, with Illustrative Anecdotes. Pianoforte, Mr. Land, harmoniums, and the celebrated Mr. Mellon'd Jim Crow Band.

MR. V. S. WOODIN'S ELOPEMENT EXTRAORDINARY and MARRIAGE at GRETNA GREEN, EVERY EVENING, at Eight, and on SATURDAY MORNINGS (next) at Three.—POLYGRAPHIC HALL, King William-street, Charing-cross. Admission, 1s., 2s., and 3s. Stalls, 5s. Private Boxes, 21s. and 31s. Acacia Saloon, 1s. Programmes, 1d.

GRAND CONCERT and BALL.—HERR WILLEM COENEN MATINÉE MUSICALE at the above Rooms, on WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, at Three precisely, by Herr Coenen, assisted by Madame Rudersdorff, Miss Arabella Goddard, Herr Willem Coenen, and M. Lemmens. Tickets, 10s. 6d.; Family for three, one guinea. Stalls to be taken, at Herr Coenen, and at Chappell and Co.'s, New Bond-street.

MR. DRACON begs to announce that his THREE MATINÉES at Chappell Hall will take place at the QUEEN'S CONCERT ROOMS, Hanover-square, on MONDAY, APRIL 25, MAY 2, and MAY 9, at Three o'clock precisely. Vocalists: Mdlle. Parepa, Mdlle. Liebhart, Mdlle. Drasdil, Mdlle. Lemaire, Mdlle. Vanzini, Mdlle. Ferni; Vocalists, Sig. Ferni; Conductors, Mr. H. Drayton; Pianoforte, Mr. Dracon. Tickets for the Three Matinées, 1l. 1s.; Single Tickets, 10s. 6d. Stalls, 7s. Reserved Seats, 5s. Gallery, 3s. Programmes, Tickets, and Places to be had at Chappell and Co.'s, 50, New Bond-street, Cramer, Beale, and Co.'s, 201, Regent-street, and at the principal Musicsellers; at the Rooms; and of Mr. Dracon, 35, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square.

GRAND BARDIC JUBILEE in HONOUR of the TERCENTENARY ANNIVERSARY of SHAKSPEARE'S BIRTH. ROYAL AGRICULTURAL HALL, ISLINGTON. MONDAY, APRIL 18, TUESDAY, APRIL 19, BARDS AND CHORUSES EVERY TWO HOURS. THURSDAY, April 21, FRIDAY, April 22.

FIRST DAY (MONDAY, April 18).—GRAND BARDIC and DRAMATIC READING, to commence at Eight o'Clock. The following distinguished Artistes have most kindly undertaken their valuable services:—Mr. Charles Dickens, Mr. Charles Kean, Mr. Sothern (Lord Dundreary), Mr. Compton, Mr. Toole, Mr. Leigh Murray, Mr. Arthur Sketchley, Mr. Corney Grain, Mr. Fitzroy Stanhope, Mr. Arthur Matthison, Mr. Alfred Mellon, Mr. Land, and Mr. Mellon'd Jim Crow Band. Mr. Sothern will read the Ball and Supper Scene in "Much Ado About Nothing," Mr. Charles Kean Hamlet's Soliloquy, and Mr. Charles Dickens the Trial Scene in "Pickwick." Dr. Aaron Irish Minstrels. A Grand Chorus of 1000 Gentlemen, Mr. MEREDITH. Tickets, 5s., 3s., and 2s. 6d. Doors open at Seven o'Clock. Commence at Eight.
SECOND DAY (TUESDAY, April 19, GRAND HISTORICAL and DRAMATIC READING, in commemoration of SHAKSPEARE'S TERCENTENARY. Mr. Charles Dickens, Mr. Charles Kean, Mr. Sothern, Mr. Compton, Mr. Toole, Mr. Leigh Murray, Mr. Arthur Sketchley, Mr. Corney Grain, Mr. Fitzroy Stanhope, Mr. Arthur Matthison, Mr. Alfred Mellon, Mr. Land, and Mr. Mellon'd Jim Crow Band. Miss Dolby, Miss Poole, Miss Fanny Huddart, Miss Rosalie Pateman, Miss Eliza Wilton, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Eady Storey, Miss Lee, Miss Rosenthal, Miss Fanny Wyndham, Miss Maskell, Miss Farrell Josephs, Miss Woolgar, Miss Lydia Thompson, Miss Rose Hersee, Miss Poole, Miss Susan Pyne, Miss Emma Heath, Miss Rose Leclercq, Miss Eady Storey, Miss Lee, and Miss Rosenthal. Mr. Sothern will read the Ball and Supper Scene in "Much Ado About Nothing," Mr. Charles Kean Hamlet's Soliloquy, and Mr. Charles Dickens the Trial Scene in "Pickwick." Dr. Aaron Irish Minstrels. A Grand Chorus of 1000 Gentlemen, Mr. MEREDITH. Tickets, 5s., 3s., and 2s. 6d. Doors open at Half-past Seven o'Clock. Commence at Eight.
THIRD DAY (WEDNESDAY, April 20, MONSTER PERFORMANCES by the WORKING CLASSES, GRAND CONCERT and RECITALS MUSIC, Pianos, Mdlle. Rose Mercier, Miss Rosebank; Mr. Montrose Smith, and other eminent Artistes. Band and Chorus of Two Thousand Voices. Tickets, 2s. 6d., 1s., and 6d. Doors open at Seven o'Clock. Commence at Eight.
Doors open at Half-past Six, to commence at Half-past Seven o'Clock.
Tickets to be had at the Number Two Committee, Mechanical, and of the Artists, Agricultural Hall Offices (open to five daily).
By order of the National Shakespearian Committee.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—GARIBALDI.—All desirous of reaching the Palace on MONDAY are earnestly advised, whether by railway, or by any conveyance, to endeavour by 10 o'clock, to COME EARLY. Doors open at Nine. Palace lighted up at Night.

ON MONDAY AFTERNOON NEXT, APRIL 18, GENERAL GARIBALDI will RECEIVE at the CRYSTAL PALACE (in front of the Great Concert), ADDRESSES from corporate and other public bodies who have voted Addresses in public meeting assembled.
The Grand Concert in the Transept will commence at Three precisely.
ADMISSION, ONE SHILLING.
Entire Trains and Omnibuses from all parts of London. Particulars of time, fares, &c., in Handbills and Advertisements. Entire Trains will also run from London Bridge, Victoria, Kensington, and Crystal Palace Stations, to the Concert, and back after the Concert, at Half-past Four, Five, and Six o'clock.

THE SHAKSPERE TERCENTENARY will be celebrated at the CRYSTAL PALACE on SATURDAY, the 23rd of APRIL. One Shilling. Open at Nine.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—The THREE-HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY of the BIRTH of SHAKSPERE will be celebrated on SATURDAY, APRIL 23, by a GRAND FESTIVAL.
The Great Transept will be decorated with Flowers, Evergreens, and Shrubs, and the Shakspere Court will be opened on this occasion. Other arrangements, including Illuminations, &c., will be announced hereafter.
ONE SHILLING; or by Season Tickets, the new issue of which will obtain on and after the 23rd.

CRYSTAL PALACE.—A PHOTOGRAPH of SHAKSPERE'S BIRTH-PLACE, taken from the Original Picture in the Possession of Mr. Fell, will be PRESENTED FREE to all visitors to the Palace on SATURDAY, APRIL 23, that it may be engraved with the Shakspere Number of the Illustrated London News, of Mr. E. T. Payne.

MUSICAL UNION.—TUESDAY, APRIL 19, Half-past Three.—Quintet, G minor—Mozart; sonata, B flat, op. 31, pianoforte—Beethoven; quartet, E flat, op. 74—Beethoven; quartet, C major, op. 54, No. 2—Haydn; Lieder ohne Worte, Nos. 1 and 2—Mendelssohn; Fugue, A minor, op. 72—Bach; Lieder ohne Worte, Nos. 3 and 4—Mendelssohn; Trio, Finale—Haydn. Vocalist: Madlle. Rudersdorff. Pianoforte, Mr. Charles Hallé. Violoncello, Signor Piatti. Violin, Herr Ries. Viola, Herr Hill. Conductor, Mr. Benedict. Stalls, 10s. 6d.; Admission, 3s. Visitors' Tickets, One Guinea, of Messrs. Chappell and Co., 50, New Bond-street, and of the Austrian Hall.

NATIONAL PORTRAIT GALLERY, 29, Great George-street, Westminster.—DURING the WEEK of the SHAKSPEARE CELEBRATION, Saturday excepted, the Gallery will be OPENED GRATUITOUSLY. On SATURDAY it will be FREELY OPEN to the PUBLIC, between the Hours of Ten and Five.
By order of the Trustees, GEORGE SCHARF, Secretary and Keeper.

EXHIBITION of ILLUMINATIONS and MISSAL-PAINTING, SNOW GORE, 168, Piccadilly.—Open Daily, Admission to the Gallery, 1s; and 10, Great Portland-street, Oxford-street. Stone Tracings for Illuminators, 10s.—except Fridays and Saturdays, when the charge for admission will be One Shilling.

INSTITUTE OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—On SATURDAY NEXT, April 16, the EXHIBITION of the SOCIETY will be OPENED, at PALL-MALL (near St. James's Palace). Daily from 10 to 6. Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

THIRTIETH ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING of the ROYAL ASYLUM of ST. ANN'S SOCIETY, for the Children of Soldiers (Limited), held at the Bank, 37, Cannon-street, E.C., on SATURDAY, APRIL 9, 1864.
THE RIGHT HONOURABLE LORD ELCHO, M.P., in the Chair.
The entire convening the meeting and the following report and statement of accounts were unanimously adopted.
The Committee have much pleasure in presenting the Thirtieth Annual Report for the year ended 31st of December last, and to report that after making ample provision for all bad and doubtful debts the sum of £1,000 has been invested in the Funds, and £1,000 in the Bank.
The Committee have also to report that the Asylum was opened on the 1st of February. Thirteen of the first of 15 per cent per annum each, and have added to the list of those to be elected at the next election, which will take place on the 1st of May, the names of the eight of one million sterling.
The Committee regret that the directors have refunded to reserved fund account the sum of £1,000 invested in the Funds, and £1,000 invested in the Bank, and to increase the balance of the bank, have carried to credit a further sum of £3,000, thus raising the fund to £10,000. The Committee have also to report that the Asylum was opened on the 1st of February, and that 15 children have been admitted.

it is true he is a fine soldier, but grasping, and a libertine. We have not to say that he is a wise ruler, but the less said of his personal character the better. We have not to say that he has done great things, but that his victories were stained by subsequent cruelty, or that he was worthy of a better cause than that for which he fought. Garibaldi has battled for the noblest thing of earth, and has done so in the noblest way. He has sought no reward but the prospect of the welfare of those whom his arm has raised and whose tyrants his arm has prostrated. It is well, therefore, that the great heart of England should beat high when that man comes among us—that the people of England should shout high as he advances through our crowded streets. In no other country in the world could his visit have elicited aught but party demonstrations. In England the presence of Garibaldi unites all classes in a tribute to Liberty and to Virtue.

THE COURT.

The Queen held a Council on Thursday week, which was attended by Earl Granville, the Duke of Somerset, the Earl of Clarendon, Sir George Grey, and the Right Hon. Edward Cardwell. Mr. Helps was clerk of the Council. The Queen in Council and Bishop of Ely was introduced to the Queen by Sir George Grey, and had an audience on being appointed. The Dean of Westminster was and took the oath, on being appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The Right Hon. Edward Cardwell received the oath and was sworn, and took the usual oaths. Mr. Chichester Fortescue was introduced, and took the oath and was appointed to the Privy Council. After the Council the Ministers returned to town. Subsequently, the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the castle grounds. Princess Arthur, Prince Leopold, and Princess Beatrice, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington, Lieutenant-Colonel Du Plat, Major Elphinstone, and Mr. Boff, went to London and honoured the Lyceum Theatre with their presence. Prince Leopold and Princess Beatrice returned to the castle at night. Princess Arthur attended by Major Elphinstone returned to Greenwich Park. This was the first appearance since the birthday of Prince Leopold. Lieutenant-General E. Bouverie arrived at the castle.

Yesterday week the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked in the castle grounds, and in the afternoon drove out. Prince Leopold and Princess Beatrice also drove out.

On Saturday last her Majesty left Windsor Castle to hold a Court at Buckingham Palace, returning to the castle in the evening. Princess Arthur, attended by Lady Caroline Barrington, Mrs. Emma Lucelles, and Lieutenant-General the Hon. C. Grey, honoured the Adelphi Theatre with her presence, arriving at the castle at night. Prince Alfred, attended by Major Cowell and Lieutenant Bigge, arrived at the castle from Cambridge.

On Sunday the King of the Belgians, Prince Alfred, Princess Helena, Princess Louise, Princess Beatrice, and Prince Leopold attended Divine service in the private chapel. The Rev. Dr. Wellesley Very live, the Dean of Westminster officiated. In the afternoon Princess Arthur left for Greenwich Park. Lieutenant-Colonel Barrington, were present at the confirmation held by the Right Rev. the Bishop of Oxford in the private chapel. The Queen, the Royal Highnesses occupied the Queen's closet during the service.

On Monday the Queen, attended by Princess Beatrice, walked in the castle grounds. The King of the Belgians, attended by General Count de Merlebeke, Colonel Count Lehon, and Colonel Count Amelie. The Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary arrived at the castle upon a visit to her Majesty.

On Tuesday the Queen, accompanied by Princess Helena, walked and drove in the castle grounds. The Duchess of Cambridge, Prince Alfred, Princess Louise, Princess Mary Adelaide, the Duke of Cambridge, and four Princes Leopold and Princess Beatrice drove out. Prince Alfred, Princess Louise, Princess Mary Adelaide, and Lady Caroline Barrington, the Hon. Emily Cavendish, Captain West, and Lieutenant Haig went to Buckingham Palace and witnessed Mr. Shakspeare's "Henry IV.," at Drury Lane Theatre, with their presence, returning to the castle at night. The King of the Belgians, Belgian Minister, Viscount and Viscountess Castlerosse, and Rear-Admiral the Hon. Frederick Gough-Calthorpe arrived at the castle.

On Wednesday the Queen, accompanied by Prince Alfred, walked and drove in the castle grounds. The Duke of Cambridge, attended by General Count de Moerkerke and Dr. Kocpl, left the castle for Buckingham Palace. The Duchess of Cambridge and Princess Mary left the castle for Kew.

Viscountess Jocelyn has succeeded the Countess of Gainsborough as Lady in Waiting, and the Hon. Mrs. Bouverie and the Hon. Mrs. Sackville West have succeeded Lord Rivers and Colonel F. Seymour, C.B., as Lord and Groom in Waiting to the Queen.

Professor Owen has, during the week, had the honour of delivering his fourth course of lectures before the Queen and Court.

Her Majesty will hold a second Court to-day (Saturday) at Buckingham Palace.

The Queen is expected to leave Windsor Castle at the close of next week for Osborne.

THE QUEEN'S COURT.

The Queen held a Court at Buckingham Palace on Saturday last. Her Majesty arrived at the palace from Windsor Castle early in the morning, entered the White Drawing-room at three o'clock, accompanied by the Royal Family, and received the Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Arthur. In attendance upon the Queen were Earl and Countess Russell, the Earl of St. Germans, Viscount Sydney, the Duchess of Wellington, Viscountess Canterbury, Lady Augusta Stanley, the Hon. Caroline Cavendish, the Hon. Emma Lucelles, and the gentlemen of her Majesty's household.

The following members of the Corps Diplomatique, having had the honour of being invited, attended the Court:—The Turkish Ambassador, Mdme. Musurus, and Mlle. Musurus; the Austrian Ambassador and Countess Apponyi; the Spanish Minister and Count Alexander Appouyi; the Russian Ambassador and Baroness de Brunnow; the Prussian Ambassador, the French Ambassador, and the Vicomte and Vicomtesse de Contades, the Belgian Minister and Mdme. de Vrints, the Portuguese Minister and Baroness de Corte, the Italian Minister, the Minister for the Netherlands, the Swedish and Norwegian Minister, the Greek Minister, the Minister Resident for Honduras, the United States Minister and Mrs. Adams, the Swedish Minister and Countess Wachtmeister, the Peruvian Minister, the Chilian Minister, Chevalier de Bunsen, and Mdme. Cousyn, the Minister for the Argentine Republic, the Minister for Hayti, the Chargé d'Affaires for Mexico, the Hanoverian Chargé-d'Affaires and Baroness Blome, the Greek Plenipotentiary, and the two Plenipotentiaries for Madagascar.

The Queen wore a black silk dress, covered with deep black crape and edged with net over a skirt of white crape, and a train of the crape of Mary Queen of Scots, with diamonds, and a long white veil fastened with diamonds. Her Majesty wore the cordon, star, and badge of the Garter, a diamond necklace, and a large cross containing the Empress Eugenie's miniature, and an opal brooch set in diamonds.

Princess Helena wore a dress of white satin, handsomely trimmed with rich lace. Headdress of white roses with black leaves, and diamond ornaments.

Princess Louise wore a similar dress and headdress, with pearl ornaments.

The Court being in mourning, the ladies who attended the reception were attired in full-dress mourning costume, without trains. The gentlemen were in full dress, with crape on the left arm.

A guard of honour of the Grenadier Guards was in attendance in the court of the palace.

The Queen, accompanied by the King of the Belgians and Princess Helena, left Buckingham Palace at five o'clock and returned to Windsor Castle.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES.

The Prince and Princess of Wales continue at Sandringham House. Yesterday week their Royal Highnesses joined the "meet" of Mr. Birchall's harriers, at Flitcham Abbey. The Prince and Princess, attended by Lieutenant-General Knollys, Captain Grey, and Mr. Wood, arrived on horseback and were received by the field with a hearty welcome. In the course of the day five good runs were given, some of them ending after dark.

On Saturday last the Prince and Princess walked and rode out.

On Sunday their Royal Highnesses attended Divine service at Sandringham Church. The Rev. G. B. Moxon officiated.

On Monday the Prince and Princess again joined Mr. Birchall's harriers, the "meet" being at Ashwicken, and the field was numerous. During a fair day's sport their Royal Highnesses returned to Sandringham House.

The Prince and Princess take frequent rides and drives in the vicinity of Sandringham.

PRINCE ALFRED.

His Royal Highness Prince Alfred, attended by Major Cowell and accompanied by Mr. Fletcher Gyll, left Holyrood Palace in a carriage-and-four on Thursday week, and posted to Saltoun. His Royal Highness arrived at Mr. Fletcher Gyll's, the hospitable mansion, returned to Holyrood Palace. In the evening the Prince honoured the Edinburgh Theatre Royal with his presence.

Yesterday week the Prince was present at the oratorio of "The Messiah," performed in the Music Hall, Edinburgh.

His Royal Highness left Edinburgh at ten o'clock on Saturday morning by the North British Railway, en route for Windsor Castle, arriving in the evening.

The vacant Garter will, we believe, be bestowed upon his Grace the Duke of Sutherland.

His Excellency the Belgian Minister and Mdme. Van de Weyer have returned to Grosvenor-square, from New Lodge, Windsor Forest.

His Excellency the Prussian Minister has arrived at the residence of the Legation in Grosvenor-place from Hanover.

The Duchess of St. Albans, Lady Diana Beauclerk, and Viscount Malden have arrived at Holywell House, St. Albans.

The Duke and Duchess of Richmond returned to their residence in Richmond Park on Wednesday from Goodwood.

The Duke of Devonshire arrived in town on Wednesday from Chatsworth, Derbyshire.

The Earl and Countess of Stratford have arrived at their residence in St. James's-square from Wrotham Park.

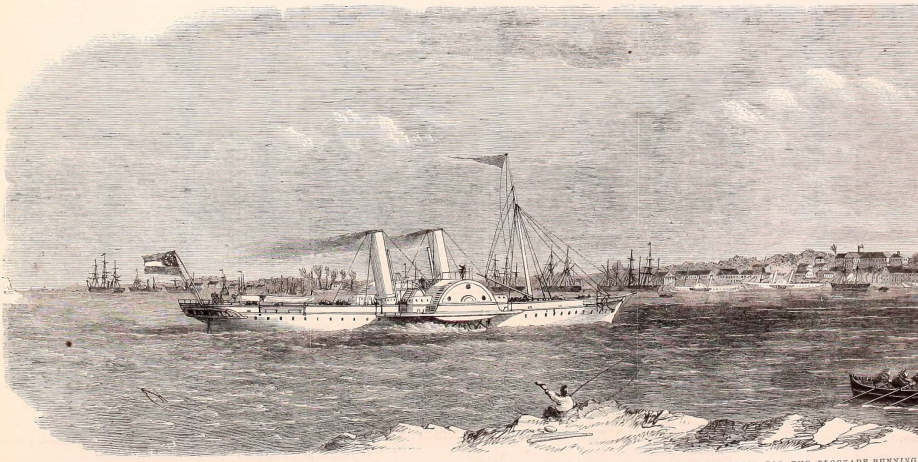
The Earl and Countess of Derby and Lady Agnes Courtenay have arrived in town for the season.

The Right Hon. Benjamin Disraeli, M.P., and Mrs. Disraeli have returned to town from Hughenden Manor, Bucks, for the season.

FASHIONABLE AND POLITICAL ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Duchess of Wellington received a distinguished company at Stratfield House on Wednesday evening, to meet General Garibaldi. The evening was a most brilliant one. Among the guests were Prince Edward Palaeologus, the Earl and Countess of Derby, and many distinguished guests were present.

The Marchioness of Salisbury had an assembly on Wednesday evening in Hyde-park-gardens, to meet General Garibaldi. The Duke and Duchess of Cleveland Palaeologus, the Earl and Countess of Derby, and many distinguished guests were present.



The Marchioness of Salisbury had an assembly on Wednesday evening in Hyde-park-gardens, to meet General Garibaldi. The Duke and Duchess of Cleveland Palaeologus, the Earl and Countess of Derby, and many distinguished guests were present.

The Marchioness of Salisbury had an assembly on Wednesday evening in Hyde-park-gardens, to meet General Garibaldi. The Duke and Duchess of Cleveland Palaeologus, the Earl and Countess of Derby, and many distinguished guests were present.

The Duchess of Wellington received a distinguished company at Stratfield House on Wednesday evening, to meet General Garibaldi. The evening was a most brilliant one. Among the guests were Prince Edward

THE WAR IN DENMARK: VIEW OF DUPPEL DURING THE PRUSSIAN BOMBARDMENT ON SATURDAY, APRIL

THE WAR IN AMERICA: VIEW OF NASSAU, IN THE BRITISH WEST INDIES, THE DEPOT FOR THE BLOCKADE-RUNNING

PRUSSIAN BOMBARDMENT ON SATURDAY, APRIL 2.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 371.

NDIES, THE DEPOT FOR THE BLOCKADE-RUNNING TRADE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

H BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 377.

SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

THE WAR IN DENMARK: VIEW OF DUPPEL DURING THE PRUSSIAN BOMBARDMENT ON SATURDAY, APRIL 2.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE PAGE 371.

THE WAR IN AMERICA: VIEW OF NASSAU, IN THE BRITISH WEST INDIES, THE DEPOT FOR THE BLOCKADE-RUNNING TRADE.—FROM A SKETCH BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.—SEE NEXT PAGE.

NASSAU, NEW PROVIDENCE.

WITH reference to the annexed Engraving of the capital of the Bahamas, our Special Artist and Correspondent writes as follows:—Nassau at the present moment is a point of very great interest indeed, being the head-quarters of the Anglo-Confederate blockaderunners; and at no time, I presume, has its harbour shown so much activity as now. The enterprise of British merchants has lined its quays with long light-coloured, rakish-looking steamers, discharging their rich freights of cotton that have run the gauntlet through the Federal cruisers off Wilmington. The voyage from the Confederate States to Nassau averages about fifty hours; but then these fifty hours are fraught with an excitement and a danger of fifty days would fail in producing. From the time of leaving Cape Fear River, Wilmington, to the time of sighting the first point of the Bahama waters, three adventurous craft are never safe from being overhauled by a Northern man-of-war. Many a time a blockade-runner is displayed by the ducky Englishmen who command them, and I have known instances of a vessel being chased for the best part of a whole day, and the only answer given in reply was to display the British ensign more prominently. Of course, the Federal cruisers are bound to be strictly speaking, violating the neutrality which her Majesty's Government has promised to hold, for all this; but, nevertheless, to the proud of the spirit of enterprise shown by our countrymen, who set at defiance the guns of the belligerents, and to those Englishmen who run into an open port, Nassau is the point whence most of the blockaders start with the cargoes destined for the Southern Confederacy, and it is here that they return with the bales of Sea Island and Upland cotton which they have obtained in exchange for the rifles, blankets, and shoes so much needed by the Confederate soldier. The climate of the Bahamas, of which New Providence is one of the largest, is indeed tropical, and as the Special Artist and Correspondent was the change from the wintry weather which he had experienced on the banks of the Delaware. Oranges, shaddocks, bananas, cocoanuts, pineapples and many other varieties of fruit abound, and nobody to the spirit of hospitality which is one of the charming bugbear residences are embedded. The people of the place, led by their popular Governor and his lady, are the most hospitable I have ever met; and the officers of the 1st West India Regiment, stationed at Nassau, are the best set of men it has been my chance to fall in with on a foreign station.

SKETCHES IN PARLIAMENT.

WHEN Mr. Gladstone metaphorically addresses himself to the country he is usually in a theatrical position, as many of the people in London actually get into the little queer Chinese-looking room, in which the Commons of England sit. In the ordinary course of events, when the House laudents of those who cannot obtain entrance congregate, specthing of the certain exhilaration which is to be found in the faces of some of the more fortunate insiders may give way and create wearisome for a time, which includes the whole body the virtue of patience to an immense extent. Sometimes, when the sound of a louder cheer than usual comes from the House, and the faces of the ears of these outsiders, they start and sway in a body towards the inexorable door, in which they are kept by a strong force of police, and then subside into the monumental attitudes expressive of grief and despair which they have unwillingly assumed. But in the Strangers' chamber where the well-trained actor of the evening is about to do his sparring spare is allotted by the crucial measure which is peculiar to chambers of strangers overlap each other, and are sometimes packed on stool ones' Peers, including ex-Prime Ministers, climb over the benches which ought to separate them from the Commoners, and the cure (at other times) of the third estate, and no one raises the suggestive cry of "privilege." The result is a certain feeling of uncomfortable stirring, knowing that he will be immovable for three hours certain, perhaps for four, and that he will be lucky if he does presently achieves himself a slight, middle-sized gentleman, with no personal grace and no commanding air, but with a face that possesses in perfection a clear, unflagging, and equable voice, a luxury that never grows hoarse, and a power of graceful utterance which never fail, great rhetorical skill, and a faculty for marshalling facts and figures which rises to the height of poetic art. He does not seem fully conscious of the dimensions of interest in the delivery of Mr. Gladstone's Budget; and this year all the features which have hitherto made the Budget speech one of the prominently present as ever. Opinions vary, not as to the merits of the scheme of finance with which the speech deals, but as to the little which are intended to stimulate interest, and are, as it were, the playing of the fiddle before the dance. Some say that there is; there was a slight increase in the tendency to speculate in the matter, and perhaps that the Chancellor's task there-fore became precisely to deliver, might, without absolute declamation, have been pronounced in two. But consider the temptation which besets the Chancellor of the Exchequer to be as interesting as his nature to love to be listened to; and when such listeners and such listening as are to be achieved are spread over half the year, there is no his advantage with slight indiscretion. The test of criticism on the Budget-speech must be, not how it is received on the night on which even a moderate sense of enjoyment consider and put his finger on the exact point to be new; that is impossible. The only test of selection would at once settle the point whether it might have been shorter and more effective. Mr. Gladstone's speech, during which Mr. Gladstone dispenses on these occasions, his physical capabilities are put to the severest test, and he is apt to grow hoarse, not only is his perennial uttered in mellow tones, but he afterwards make little speeches with ease and apparent absence of fatigue; and some one has pointed out that he is in the habit after having spoken for so many hours, if he should mean just a little more tired than he has accustomed to be, to take the first fair occasion to say a "few words" to the House of Commons.

Mr. Newdegate, who is said to be considered by his enemies country no one, it is asserted, rides better up to hounds. Certainly he rides his business in Parliament with equal vigour and success. For the nights ago he had an unusually long gallop, and evinced considerable enjoyment in the course of his spurt. He is a man who believes that any controversial remarks are to be made on the case of the Roman Catholic clergy-priest which he has in hand, and which is coolly mixed up with the kidnapping of weak-minded Protestants by the fraternity of the Confessional. Religion and the semi-heinous (as he put it) appropriating of their forfeitures, we love to say this for that, if what Mr. Newdegate described at such length, and with such emphasis, is correct, and that which is popularly supposed to be donnè craft, the persons in question are not deliberately committing a fraud. The question it seems us is to mention that it is the fact that a dull, sententious speaker can be. Mr. Newdegate undoubtedly is dull, and owing to the influence of something like fanaticism, free to positive eloquence; and as the House for once let him have his own way, and he was in the unsparking, he fell into a rest of trap, and, getting precious out of the speed his legislative powers, he was completely overwhelmed. Mr. Howard, who surprised every one by the mingled pathos and acrasm of a speech which drew from him, under circumstances, a few certain grace and fitness. What was not expected, however, was the intervention of the Attorney-General, who, for the first time, since during the short time he has been in the house, establishes for himself such a character for gentleness of temperament, tact, and good sense, and, above all, has exhibited such an un-Irish sympathy of tongue, that one was surprised to find him rise with a warmth and a spirit, natural to the occasion, so far as he was concerned, to rebuke attack which, if not wanton, were sweeping, and almost exceeding the limits of Parliamentary license. It is only due to him to add that in the very whirlwind of his indignant remonstrance he preserved a certain soundness, and shewed that, if his better feelings were roused, he was not under the influence of mere temper. If Mr. Newdegate intended to get up something like a row, he was quite successful; and we venture to appeal to Sir Patrick O'Brien, who took a principal part in the fray, and to say if in the idea that if the time had been one in the morning, instead of half-past six in the evening, there would have been a tumultuous adjournment.

An incidental and brief debate on the affairs of Denmark was an opportunity for Mr. Osborne once more to publish his tender and amiable feelings towards the Prime Minister, who was so blind as not to see the advantage of keeping a hard-talking member of Parliament quiet in a remote seat on the Treasury bench. The noble lord, who is the Governor-General of the Ionian Isles, made a bit advertising station for amateur statesmen, who are to be found in every country from £1000 to £1500 a year. Timber observant Premiers turn their eyes when they wish to infuse warm blood into their Ministries. Lord Palmerston found the blood becomes tepid when it flows in a Government channel. It is from the Lord Lieutenancy of Ireland that Lord John—has scalded and jerked for five years—and probably will scald and jake during the latter years of reign of Palmerston; and Mr. Osborne, which is not critical or too precise about the quality of the blood which he sees circulate, is persuaded, it would be an unkindly act to a very dull and unluminous gentlemen to deprive him of the chance of a little more laughter, even though the provocative matter be neither very nice nor very new. This time last year Mr. Osborne was on the point of resigning his Ministry, and now it appears that Mr. Lowe is to be eliminated from office. The question of the Danish Duchies has not been accused Mr. Lowe of garbling the reports of the Inspectors of Schools to suit his own opinions and purposes, was the culminating point of a series of attacks which he has had to endure during the session for which he has hitherto been able to avoid. The junction of Mr. Walter in this attempt was a surprise to the House, for no one could see that anything in common between Mr. Lowe and certain journalists. In what he did say Mr. Walter was, for the evening, Mr. Lowe preserved intact all his wonderful powers of attack and retort—did almost everything that he could have done to make matters worse, without the least disturbance of the level of his voice, and which, moreover, rendered it impossible to accuse him of the least touch of a snake in which it is supposed to spit venom. Practically, the House of Commons has decided that Mr. Lowe must remain in the Government; and, in such cases, members of Governments are accustomed to pose to members of Governments. The question is—What will Mr. Lowe do?

When an election for Coventry took place in the autumn, hope were then entertained that Mr. Gregory would be elected. It that peculiar place in the House of Commons which has been filled for nearly three months by Mr. Trahorne, the gentleman in question. That is to say, Mr. Gregory, the representative of Colonel Sibthorp can hardly be said, for his style is different, although not less effective. Mr. Gregory, however, has long located the expectations which were entertained of him. Anyone who wishes to see him at his best must hear him hear and see for himself. There are some things which defy description.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

(The following abstract of the doings in both Houses of Parliament on Friday, the 8th inst., appeared in our Town Edition last week.)

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY, APRIL 8.

The Settled Estates Act Amendment Bill passed through Committee.

The Court of Chancery (Funds of Suitors) Bill was read a second time and committed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY, APRIL 8.

Sir R. Peel consented to the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the state of the Harbour of Kingstown.

Mr. Dillwyn called the attention of the House to the insufficiency of the number of Inspectors of Factories and Workshops.

Sir J. Pakington called attention to the commission to examine the Packs of Fugitive reports of the Inspectors of Schools.

The Wardenship of British Spitals Bill passed through Committee.

The Life Assurance Companies Bill passed through Committee.

The House went into Committee of Supply pro forma.

Mr. Hennessy called the attention of the House to the Government had received reports from her Majesty's Consular Station, New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, in which it was stated that persons in British dominions, who had been confined in prison on their arrival there, filled with attempts to escape from the Federal Government, and that Lord Lyons and Lord Russell had made representations to the Federal Government on the subject.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER and Mr. STEPHENS.—On the motion for the House resolving itself into Committee of Supply, moved that the Select Committee to inquire into the allegations contained in the petition of Mr. Hutchinson, and others, be appointed of Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Hennessy, Mr. Sydenham, burial-ground; and, further, into the existence, increase, and mode of dealing with the Fenian conspiracy, and the connection of the Rev. Michael Hutchinson, Mr. Hutchinson, and Mr. Hennessy with the circumstances of the conversion of the late Mr. Hutchinson (brother-in-law of Mr. Hutchinson), and the subsequent proceedings in the Court of Chancery in the Order of Corinthians at Brompton under the late Father Faber, and his mode of dealing with the property of the late Mr. Hutchinson and others. He directed special attention to the fact that the will of Mr. Hutchinson had been drawn up, and was duly executed by the testator, in the presence of two other priests of the Oratory. That will necessitated a considerable sum of money to be conveyed to the Oratory. Mr. Hutchinson died a lunatic. Father Newman, on his memorial relative, visited the burial-ground and applied for an extract from the register of burials, which was refused. The Rev. Michael Hutchinson was ordained a priest of the Church of England in a way as was required by the law of this country. Mr. Stephens, in detail a number of facts relative to corporate property, and to the conversion of Mr. Hutchinson from the profession of another name between the Christian and surname of the deceased, and to the fact that the Rev. Michael Hutchinson, Mr. Hutchinson, and Mr. Hutchinson was described as William Anthony Hutchinson. He (Mr. Newdegate) did not intend to make any remarks on the subject, but merely to answer to after the names of the deceased as to avoid identity. He therefore moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the allegations contained in the petition. It was necessary inasmuch as it was evident that convents, monasteries, and similar institutions were increasing rapidly in this country. They had 500 such convents now on the Continent, although a cause in the Act of 29 Geo. 3, c. 60, prohibited the establishment of such institutions in this country. Mr. Hennessy said he had no objection to the appointment of the Committee; but he was of opinion that that gentleman's petition did not afford sufficient grounds for the appointment of such a Committee. He (Mr. Hennessy) denounced the allegations in the petition as a tissue of slanders.—Mr. Neate was of opinion that the Rev. Michael Hutchinson, Lord Stratheden called attention to the correspondence in reference to the Dano-German question, and moved, "That, in the opinion of this House, if the Government of Her Majesty had been more successful in the principle laid down in the protocol of Paris in 1856, and been more decidedly supported by her Majesty's Government, the bloodshed and the other evils already occasioned by the war in Denmark might have been prevented, and there would have been less danger than there now is of a more general conflagration." He (Lord Stratheden) was of opinion that upon the Dutch question, in order to lead to a practical result, ought to be accompanied by such steps as might convince the Powers of Europe that her Majesty's Government adhered to the treaties in which the duchy of Schleswig had been guaranteed to Denmark by Germany. After a long and interesting discussion—most of the speakers discussing the way in which the war had been carried on—Lord Russell and Prussia—the motion was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

Lord Hotham moved Mr. Hunt to bring in a bill to amend the laws relating to the conveyance of the Queen's mail by railway companies and other purposes relating thereto; and to the Attorney-General, to introduce a bill to consolidate and amend the Church-Building Act and the New Parishes Act.

The Cost Security Bill was read a second time upon the Common Law Procedure (Ireland) Act (1853) Amendment Bill, the object of which is to facilitate the recovery of debts under £20 in the county courts.

The Warehousing of British Spirits Bill was read a third time and passed.

Mr. Hennessy moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the state of Ireland in a result of the approaching conference that England undertook now to maintain the integrity of the Danish dominions. He demanded that the Ministers should be prepared to submit such engagements to the consideration of Parliament before they were finally entered into.—Mr. Gregory and Mr. Fagan deprecated such agitation and such an exhibition of trouble with foreign Powers noted with the Crown, acting on the advice of its responsible Ministers, and the House, as the Grand Inquest of the Nation, and representative assembly, could not be called upon to interfere, Ministers would adhere to the spirit and practice of the Constitution.

Mr. Hennessy withdrew his motion, but only for twenty-four hours' second debate on the bill, Mr. AYRTON entered into a critical analysis of the measure, which he characterised as a monstrous proposal to subsidise Dissenters and their private enterprise. The bill was also opposed by Mr. Hubbard and Mr. Bentinck, and was supported by Mr. Cowper, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, who said that the bill was not a Government measure, but a Select Committee, upon the understanding which was sanctioned on the previous night, that its terms, and not its principle, should be inquired into.

THE ARMY ESTIMATES.

The House went into Committee of Supply on the Army Estimates.

On the vote for the pay, allowances, and special staff and regimental pay allowances and charges some discussion ensued, in the course of which Mr. O'Reilly complained that the pay of the Irish militia cavalry, corresponding to that of the soldier in France cost the country £47 18s. 10d. per man per annum, while that of the Irish militia cost only £17 10s. 10d.—Mr. Sidney Herbert, Secretary for War, Mr. Bentinck, Mr. Whitbread, and Colonel Dickson also criticised the vote, objecting to the fact that the Government proposed to reduce the number of officers in the country's service, and to the manner in which they could not be replaced as soon as vacancies in other branches of the service. The Marquis of HARTINGTON, Secretary for War, in reply, said the Government agreed to withdraw a division.

A vote of £1,717,000 for commissariat establishment services and movements of troops; of £236,484 for clothing establishments, services, and supplies; of £311,146 for medical establishments and services; of £45,621 for miscellaneous services agreed to.

A vote of £40,349 for martial law, Lord HOTHAM, at some length, called attention to the state of martial law in Ireland, with the facts of which the public are already familiar. The noble lord moved a vote of £40,349 for martial law, which the Government proposed to discontinue in the Army. No opposition was offered to the vote, and the chairman reported progress.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The Charitable Assurances Enrolment Bill went through Committee pro forma.

The CASE OF GEORGE HALL.—The Earl of CARNARVON moved an address for a copy of the correspondence which relative to George Hall, who in the last Warwick Assizes of murder, and subsequently reprieved by the Crown. He called attention to the case of George Hall, who had been found guilty and condemned of the capricious administration of the Home Office in matters of capital punishment.—The Earl of DERBY.—The Lord Chief Justice, who presided at some length into a defence of the Secretary of State, and said it was impossible to lay down any rule which would not be liable to serious objection from the moral point of view. He could not, however, think Lord Lyttelton wanted a charge that should direct their attention to the case of George Hall, and he was sure the Lord Chief Justice of England would be willing to do so.—A few remarks from the Duke of Marlborough and Earl Grey, the motion for papers was withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

A new writ was ordered for the election of a member for the borough of Devizes, in the room of Mr. Addington, now Viscount Sidmouth.

DUTIES ON HOPS.—Mr. Hussey Vivian called attention to the grievances of Indian officers, and complained that the promises made to them on the introduction of the Indian Army Bill into the British Army had not been kept. He had not been carried out. He moved a resolution to the effect that it was inexpedient that the Indian officers should be compelled to retire from the service.—The Lord Privy and Colonel Sykes supported the motion.—Sir C. Wood said that the Government had no objection to the motion, but that the question of the future position of the Indian officers had by the successive Governments been made. He was preparing, however, to meet the objections, and in the meantime he could not have the House called to adopt a resolution. He was consented to this, and, after a brief discussion, the motion was withdrawn.

Lord EUSTACE CECIL moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the allegations contained in the petition of Mr. Hutchinson, and others, relative to the conversion of the late Mr. Hutchinson to the Church of Rome.—Mr. Walter seconded the motion.—Mr. LOWE said his attention had been called to the petition, and he had made inquiries, and he was satisfied that there was no foundation for the charges that had been made against the Roman Catholic priests of such a thing. That was the basis of the charges which had been preferred against them. He (Mr. Lowe) had himself stated that he had their instructions should be carried out, and, he contended, it would be most injudicious to appoint a Committee. Mr. Lowe, Mr. Walpole, and Mr. Cowper-Temple supported the motion, which, after a brief discussion followed, in which Mr. E. Forster, Mr. Hennessy, and Mr. Newdegate took part, was withdrawn. The motion was carried by 101 votes to 93. The announcement of this result was received with loud cheers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The Registration of Voters (Ireland) Bill passed through Committee.

The Charitable Assurances Enrolment Bill went through Committee.

Mr. LOCKE KING moved for leave to bring in a bill to amend the law relative to the qualification of voters in counties in England and Wales. He contended that there was a demand for the extension of the franchise in those counties, and that the measure was a moderate one. Although a similar motion had been made to introduce measures of Parliamentary reform on a large scale but failed, he thought that the present was a favourable time to attempt to give the franchise to a considerable body of men whose position and intelligence entitled them to it. The bill which, while it would not increase the number of electors, yet was more especially directed to the representation of householders and persons occupying property of the annual value of £50 and upwards. The persons to whom its provisions would extend were amongst the most respectable and intelligent of the middle class. The number of persons to whom it would be entitled to vote in the counties would exceed 150,000. In the counties constituencies had decreased, this would not be an unreasonable addition to that body. He proposed to accomplish his object by a simple measure. He proposed to make a compromise between a £50 and a £10 franchise, and the latter sum was the one which he proposed to be fixed upon. The bill was referred to Parliamentary reform by its leaders on both sides, and it was its duty not to postpone the question. He (Mr. Hennessy) thought that the proposed measure could be passed it was advisable to accept reform in fragments, and that it was the duty of the House, in the case of reform, that it should be acceded to.

Mr. GRIFFITH moved the previous question, contending that the manifest indifference of the country to Parliamentary reform was sufficient to command the House from any pledge on the subject which might have been given. He (Mr. Griffith) opposed the principle of the bill, which he considered to be unnecessary, if not dangerous.

Several members having addressed the House, chiefly in opposition to the bill, Lord PALMERSTON said he was not prepared to oppose the second reading, but it might be advisable that the bill should proceed to adopt any changes in the county franchise. His opinion was, however, that an advantageous change might be effected by the adoption of the principle of the bill by a select Committee, to vote for vesting the suffrage to £10. It seemed to him that the bill would not be satisfactory to the country, and that it would not settle the question of Parliamentary reform. He was not prepared to adopt any change of the county. Any alteration of the existing system which infused too much of the town into the county would be extremely objectionable. The principle of representation which it was so essential to preserve. Upon the whole, he thought it would be better to proceed with the existing system of suffrages. It could not be denied that since the improvements introduced in our commercial system, the working classes had risen in the estimation of the representation.

The House then divided, when there appeared—For the second reading, 227; for the "previous question," 214: majority against the bill, 13.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

The Improvement of Land Act (1864) Bill was read a second time.

The Earl of DERBY moved for a return from Malmesbury contributions complaining that an invention of his for constructing arms-plated vessels had not received a fair trial at the hands of the Admiralty, although they had agreed to test the value of the invention if he undertook to defray the expense.—The Duke of Somerset said that Mr. Chalmers undertook to construct a target which was to be lighter, more simple in its construction, and more economical than the Warrior target; but in each of these respects, what having received a fair trial, it signally failed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

THE MALT DUTY.

Colonel BARTTELOT moved that the consideration of the duties upon malt be postponed until the House should have had the opportunity of considering

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

No change of importance has taken place in the value of National Securities this week, but the transactions have been on a very limited scale. Consols have been dull, and prices have very restricted range, both for Money and Time. The Unfunded Debt has ruled about stationary, the leading quotations being 7⅞ to 8, discount.

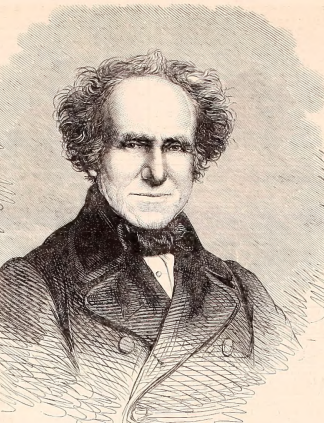
The Foreign Stock Market has been influenced by the rumoured Dannevirk Murder. The demand for it, however, is active, at rates fairly open to last week.

Throughout the Continental money is in fair request, with an increased supply on offer from the Bank of France and Bank of Belgium.

	Bank rate.	Open market.		Bank rate.	Open market.
	per cent.	per cent.	Amsterdam	per cent.	per cent.
Paris	3	2½	Hamburg	4	3½
Vienna	6	5	Brussels	3	2½
Berlin	4	3½	Frankfort	4	3½
Trieste	6	5	Madrid and Cadiz	5	4½

The imports of the precious metals have amounted to about £250,000; but, as the demand for the Continent has been moderate, the Bullion in the Bank has not fallen off to any large extent. The absence for India has been small.

The Bank of England Quarterly Return and the Joint Stock Pocket Company will be 47 for 49 pm.



A meeting of the holders of Mexican Bonds has been held. The terms proposed to them by the agents for the Mexican Loan are as follows:—That each Bond of £100 shall be paid off at 25 per cent discount (which would be £25 less), and that the Bonds of £20 and £10 each shall be paid off at 20 per cent discount (which would be £4 and £2 less). The Bondholders have agreed to these somewhat favourable terms.

The Railway Share Market has been dull, and the transactions in them were trifling. Caledonian Ordinary Stock realised 93¾ to 94; Chester and Holyhead, 12 to 13; Great Eastern, 52½; Great Northern, 102½; Great Western, 66½ to 67; Lancashire and Yorkshire, 103 to 104; London and North-Western, 98½ to 98¾; London and South-Western, 87½ to 88; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 107½ to 108; London, Chatham, and Dover, 23½ to 24; Midland, 103 to 103½; Scotch Preferred, 83 to 84; South-Eastern, 72½ to 73; Ditto, for Time, 80; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 93½; New Two-and-a-Half per Cents, 87½; Ditto, for Time, 87½; Reduced and New Three per Cents, 1903, 92½; Ditto, for Time, 92½; Bank Stock, 218; Ditto, for Time, 218½; India Stock, 218; Ditto, for Time, 218½; Exchequer Bills, 2s. to 5s. pm; Ditto, Small, 2s. to 5s. pm; India Bonds, 2s. to 5s. pm; Ditto, for Time, 2s. to 5s. pm; Long Annuities, 15 1-16; Annuities to Expire, 1885, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1886, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1887, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1888, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1889, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1890, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1891, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1892, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1893, 1 15-16; Ditto, 1894, 1 15-16; Ditto,

THE RAMSGATE LIFE-BOAT: MORNING AFTER A HEAVY GALE—WEATHER MODERATING.—FROM THE PICTURE BY E. W. COOKE, R.A.

"THE RAMSGATE LIFE-BOAT—MORNING AFTER A HEAVY GALE: WEATHER MODERATING."

THE fine picture by Mr. E. W. Cooke, R.A., an Engraving of which we publish this week, was in the exhibition of the Royal Academy for 1857, but reappeared in the last Winter Exhibition in Pall-mall. It is now, we believe, the property of Mr. Henry Wallis. It was painted by Mr. Cooke with the express view of advancing the objects of the Royal National Life-boat Institution. He has more recently shown the interest which he takes in those objects by a donation of £200 to pay for a new life-boat. It is called the Van Kook; and another donation of £25, from Mr. James Heppord, of Clapham-common, heads the subscription to erect a boathouse for it. We must not, however, dwell upon Mr. Cooke's pecuniary contribution for this benevolent purpose, but pass on to describe the work of art which is illustrated by our Engraving. In the catalogue of the Royal Academy Exhibition for 1857, the subject is noticed as follows:—"The crews of a pilot-boat and life-boat of Ramsgate, after hearing at daybreak signal-guns from the Goodwin floating light-vessel, have communicated with it, and now bear up for a water-logged Indiaman, the crew and passengers of which have perished during the night, when their boats were knocked to pieces. The Captain, who would not desert his ship, is rescued by the life-boat just before the vessel founders on the North Sandhead of the Goodwin." The life-boat represented in Mr. Cooke's picture is the Ramsgate "self-righting" boat, one built on the plan of those of the Life-boat Institution. This is the same boat which, on the night of the 3rd and morning of the 4th of December last, in conjunction with the steamer Aid, performed a most important service by saving a hundred and twenty persons, being the whole of the crews and passengers of the emigrant-ship Pauline, of London, and the ship Demerara, of Greenock, wrecked on the Girdler Sands, off Margate. What must the crew of the life-boat have done and suffered in a night like that! To be sixteen hours hard at work in the raging waves, fighting a December hurricane, while tons of water are now and then dashed over the boat, and the soaked ribbon of the mast is frozen stiff by the icy wind,—that is a performance which we cannot sufficiently praise. Mr. Cooke's way of bearing testimony to the merits of the life-boat men and of the Life-boat Institution is more effective than any words of ours.

THE LATE MR. T. P. COOKE.

THE LATE MR. T. P. COOKE.

WE have engraved a photograph by Messrs. J. and C. Watkin, of Parliament-street, which will be recognised by many playgoers as a likeness of Mr. T. P. Cooke, whose death we recorded last week. The veteran actor, who was almost seventy-eight years of age, made his first appearance at the Royalty Theatre, in 1804; and in his last years he continued to perform occasionally till within a year or two of his death. He was born in the parish of Marylebone on Shakspeare's birthday, April 23, 1786. As a little boy he was sent to the Marine Society's School; but he must have entered the Navy at a very early age. He served under Lord St. Vincent and Lord Nelson. He was at the bombardment of Copenhagen in 1801, and received a medal for his good conduct on that occasion. He left the Navy two or three years afterwards and came upon the stage. He was the popular representative of the dramatic character of a British seaman in all those Jack Tar pieces which were so familiar to Londoners of the last generation. He was great, also, in the part of William, in Douglas Jerrold's play of "Black-Eyed Susan." Not only did he act the sailor as none but a real sailor could; he was really a good actor, with considerable powers of humorous and pathetic expression. He thus earned and kept a permanent standing in his profession. He took an active part in every plan for the benefit of its members. In private life he was much esteemed. The death of his wife, but a few months ago, is thought to have hastened his own by the grief it caused him, already enfeebled by age. Many of our surviving elders, the contemporaries of T. P. Cooke, may recollect some evening, half a century ago, when they saw him on their first visit to the play.

THE DOG SHOW AT DUBLIN.

WE have engraved, from photographs by Messrs. Nelson and Marshall, of Sackville-street, Dublin, the portraits of four of the prize dogs at the "Grand National Irish Dog Show," which took place at Dublin from the 30th to the 31st of March. As it was the first exhibition of this kind which had been held in Ireland, it excited much curiosity, and was visited by great numbers of people, amongst whom were the Lord Lieutenant and many other noblemen and dignitaries of Ireland. There were about 450 dogs entered for the show, including mastiffs, Newfoundlands, bulldogs, setters, hounds, spaniels, greyhounds, and some foreign varieties. The exhibition was not, indeed, limited to animals the property of persons residing in Ireland, for it will be observed that the bulldog shown in our Engraving is the famous King Dick, belonging to Mr. Jacob Langdon, of Handsworth, near Birmingham, which figured in the last dog show at the Agricultural Hall, Islington. The owner of the setter Jack, however, is Mr. W. G. Batson, of Dublin; and the sired greyhound, Blue Rat, the property of a Dublin gentleman, Mr. W. Barden. The pretty little animal with a ribbon about its neck is a Chinese dog, bred by Dr. McSheehy, of the Cavalry Depôt, Canterbury, who brought its mother from Pekin, where he served with his regiment, the 1st Dragoon Guards, in the late Chinese War. "Chin-Chin," a female, and about fifteen months old, belongs to Mr. J. T. McSheehy, J.P., of Shannon Lawn, Limerick, and is valued at £200. Each of the four dogs which appear in our Engraving was judged worthy of the first prize in its class.

PRIZE DOGS AT THE DUBLIN DOG SHOW.

 The charge for the insertion of Births, Marriages, and Deaths is Five Shillings for each announcement.*

BIRTHS.

On the 5th of February, at Cape Town, Cape of Good Hope, the wife of Matthew Woodifield, Esq., of a son.

On the 24th inst., at 35, Otely, West Indies, the wife of P. B. Griffith, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 5th inst., at the church of St. Mary Magdalen, St. Leonards-on-Sea, by the Rev. A. Gordon, M.A., incumbent of Dasden, Middlesex, Hugh William, C.B., of Try-ph Cottage, Hastings, to Matilda Beconsall, the fourth daughter of William Wyatt, Esq., of Linton, Herefordshire.

On the 31st ult., at St. George's Chapel, Lisbon, Walter C. Cumming, Esq., to Charlotte Elizabeth Wynn, daughter of William Wynn, Esq., of Linton, Herefordshire.

On the 6th inst., at the parish church of Ecclesfield, by the Rev. Edward Smith, D.D., Vicar of Ecclesfield, Samuel Dawes, the bridegroom, assisted by the Rev. Henry Powell, B.A., Mark Dawes, Esq., M.D., of Leeds, surgeon, Belgravia, eldest son of the late Captain Tanner, R.N., of Bentley, in Dudley, and Mary Ann Alexander of Thomas Arthur Pontney, Esq., of 47, Gloster-place, Hyde Park-gardens.

On March 15, at Woodford Church, Jamaica, by the Rev. Colin MacKenzie, M.A., assisted by the Rev. R. F. Jarmer, B.A., Coore Missionary, Esq., inspector of Constabulary, Jamaica, to Isabella Anne, second daughter of Colonel Bush, eldest son of the late Rear-Admiral Bush, C. Dwyer, Esq., to Isabella Anne Reed, daughter of the late Rev. Charles Reed, late minister of H. M. Privy and Legislative Council of that island, and of the late Isabella Hight Mon. Sir Edward Hyde East, Bart. No cards.

DEATHS.

On the 11th inst., at his residence, 83, Old Kent-road-William Bettell, Esq., late of the Legacy Office, Somerset House, in the 72nd year of his age.

On the 12th ult., at Kingston, Jamaica, Mr. Thomas Hamilton Gordon, aged 30, to his 6th year.

On the 31st ult., after a long and painful illness, Samuel St. Barbe, Esq., of Belmont, Lymington, Hants, aged 57.

On the 31st ult., after a very short illness, borne with cheerful and patient resignation, Anne Maria, widow of the late Admiral Apsley, having survived her husband only four months.

PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE.

No. 15, Cornhill, and 69, Pall-mall, S.W.

Established 1806.

Subscribed Capital, £1,000,000.

Annual Income, £100,000.

Bonuses declared, £1,483,187.

Claims paid and reversionary interests purchased, £3,372,013.

Chairman—The Right Honourable Earl of Ellesmere.

Chairman of Directors—Frederick Squire, Esq.

Deputy Chairman—Richard Hodgson, Esq.

Managing Director—John A. Beaumont, Esq.

The Profits are Divided Annually among the Assured and the Bonuses

Examples of Bonuses added to Policies issued by THE PROVIDENT LIFE OFFICE.

Number of Policy	Year of Assurance	Annual Premium	Sum Assured	Bonus Added
		£ s. d.	£ s. d.	£ s. d.
4718	1822	30 0 0	1000	1057 1 6
4031	1824	100 0 0	3000	3171 4 6
4031	1824	200 13 4	6000	6342 9 0
5707	1830	50 0 0	1000	1057 1 6
5707	1830	100 0 0	2000	2114 3 0
5707	1830	125 13 4	2500	2642 18 9
5846	1831	100 0 0	2000	2114 3 0
7	1806	19 18 4	1000	1057 1 6

JOHN DIGHTON, Secretary.

FOR FAMILY ARMS—the LINCOLN'S-

INN HERALDIC OFFICE—any name or crest will be Painted, Impaled, and Quartered, Sketch, 3s. 6d. or sharper. The Pedigree of Families, &c.—H. Ley, Genealogist, 4, Clement's-inn, Strand.

LINCOLN'S-INN HERALDIC OFFICE.

The Engraving by the Lions of Garter King-at-Arms. Cost on Search or Search, 2s. 6d. per name, Arms and Crest, with Pedigree for One, 21s.; a Grant Free, Arms, and Crest, with Pedigree, £5.

FOR ARMS AND NAME and

County to CULLETON'S Heraldic Library, the established authority for Genealogies, Arms and Crests, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square. Arms painted on Carriages, Plate Drawing, 3s. 6d.; in Seconds Colours, 5s. Arms, crest, and motto on Seals and Dies, 10s. 6d. Search 2s. 6d. Fee. The Library contains the Records of the Heralds' College, Ulster's Manuscripts, "Burnbrig Rock," and nearly every work published in connection with Heraldry, Family History, Topography, and Antiquities. Cranbourn-street, W.C.

FAMILY ARMS.—CULLETON'S HERALDIC

OFFICE, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, continues to the Lovers of Quaint and Usher Kings-at-Arms, by authority. Crest Seal Engraved, 7s.; Arms, 12s. Book Plate, Arms, Crest, and Motto, 12s. Pedigree, Extracted from every Genealogical Work, and Old Signet-Rings, 10-carat, Hall marked, engraved with Crest, 21s.; Arms, 42s. Arms painted on Carriages, 10s. 6d. Arms and Crest on Seals and Dies, 10s. 6d. Search 2s. 6d. Fee. Arms and Crest Painted in Colours, 5s. Apply, by letter, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales and all the Royal Family. By appointment and head of the Heraldic and Antiquarian Establishment—25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

CULLETON'S GUINEA BOX of

GOLD MEDALS. Price One Guinea, for Stamping the Crest and Motto, Monogram, or Address on cheapest for by other houses, Wedding Cards, Dies, Seals, Presses, Rings, Plate, Steel Stamps, and Book-plates, Arms and Crest. Reference, all the Nobility. Apply or letter for 64.—T. Culleton, 25, Cranbourn-street, W.C. (corner of St. Martin's-lane).

VISITING CARDS. Best quality.—A card-plate engraved and 50 cards printed, 3s. post-free. Wedding cards, envelopes stamped with arms, crest, or initials. Steel dies and hot-pressing for stationery at usual terms.—T. CULLETON, 25, Cranbourn-street, Leicester-square, and 25, Cranbourn-street (corner of St. Martin's-lane), W.C.

CULLETON'S PLATES for MARKING

LINEN prevent the ink spreading, and are the best ever introduced. Set, 18 Name-plates, 3s. 6d.; Set of Movable Numbers, 2s. 6d. Crest, Initial, and Address Engraved with directions for use.—T. Culleton, 25, Cranbourn-street, W.C.

CAUTION.

FOX'S FRAMES FOR UMBRELLAS AND PARASOLS.—CAMILLE FOX and SON, Manufacturers and Sole Introducers of the Improved Frames, and manufacturers of Frames, Tassels, and Trimmings to the Trade, beg to caution the Public against a recent attempt to obtain Local, which should be distinguished from Improved and Tweed, and to caution Dealers and the Public against imitations of the name of Fox, and of the Fox Trade Mark, which is registered by an assumed name, and by which the public are liable to be deceived and inferior frames or umbrellas those manufactured by A. Fox and Co. Fox's Frames are to be had of all the leading wholesale houses in the city, and of all retail dealers in Umbrellas and Parasols.

2, Fox-court, Gray's-inn, London, E.C.

The Fox and Co.'s Patent Paddle Tube, being cut only as a right length, and not requiring to be sawn off, will not stop nor become unscrewed in the handle, and will last as long as the frame. Observe name Fox on the tube.

Fox and Co.'s Patent Paddle Tube, being cut only as a right length, and not requiring to be sawn off, will not stop nor become unscrewed in the handle, and will last as long as the frame.

Observe name Fox on the tube.

REMOVAL.—Messrs. ALEX and JONES beg to announce that their PRACTICE in Mechanical Dentistry has been REMOVED from 57, New Bond-street, to 5, Grafton-street, and 40, Grand Opposite Clarence-street Gallery Entrance). Mr. Alex will continue to devote his entire attention to the mechanical and comfortable, they say, yet perfected, Combination Free, for use in Speaking, Masticating, and Appearance.—5, Grafton-street, W.

NEW INVENTION.—ARTIFICIAL

TEETH.—These Intensely similar are Messrs. GABLER'S Improved Mineral Teeth, which, after a trial of many years, continue to appear quite as fascinating enabled. A considerable saving is effected, Gabler's Pamphlet on the Teeth, just published gives by post, explains their system. Messrs. Gabler, 37, Harley-street, W., and 34, Ludgate-hill (over Bennett's). Est. 1815. 10s. Gabler-street, Liverpool. 15, Rue Vivienne, Paris.

TEETH.—Mr. ESSELL'S TOWN ADDRESS is 110, Quadrant, Regent-street, Residence, 29, Sussex-place, Regent's-park. Improved system of Dentistry. Painless treatment and satisfactory results. Attendance by appointment. Terms free for 1 stamp. At home daily.

NEW BOOKS.

Just published, in an elegant volume, small size, cloth gilt, 2s.; morocco, 3s. 6d.,

SHAKESPEARE, HIS BIRTHPLACE, HOME AND GRAVE. A Pilgrimage to Stratford-on-Avon. By the Rev. J. M. JEPHSON, B.A., F.S.A. With 16 Photographic Illustrations by Frank Edwards, B.A.

"Mr. Jephson's visit to Shakespeare's localities has stimulated excellence of the sort."—Athenæum.

"A book of far higher value than merely to suit the temporary demand for Shakespeare."—Times.

Rudd and Carleton, 6, Royal Exchange.

This Day, at all Libraries, three vols., post 8vo,

A WOMAN AGAINST THE WORLD. By RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street.

This Day, at all Libraries, post 8vo, 10s. 6d.,

IN SPAIN: a Narrative of Travel in 1863. By HANS CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Publisher in Ordinary to her Majesty.

Just ready, in 3 vols., post 8vo,

BERNARD LEE. A Novel. By the Author of "Mr. Arle."

RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street.

Ready this day,

DALZIELS' ILLUSTRATED ARABIAN NIGHTS.

Part IV. (for April), price 7d., contains

THE THREE CALENDERS, and THE HISTORY OF THE BARBER'S FIFTH BROTHER.

Ready this day, Parts I. and II., price 6d. each; per year, 6s.

DALZIELS' ILLUSTRATED BIBLE.

THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD, with Illustrations by Thomas Dalziel.

London: WARD and LOCK, 158, Fleet-street.

Ready this day, price One Shilling.

THE OFFICIAL PROGRAMME OF THE ECCLESIOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S FESTIVAL, held by all Ecclesiastics.

CASSELL, PETTER, and GALPIN, Belle-sauvage-hill, E.C.

Price 1s., with 12 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 1s. 3d.,

BORDERS for WINDOW-panels, in Gothic styles to be executed in DIAPHANIE, with full instructions.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Eighth Edition, with 15 Lithographic Plates; post-free, 8s.,

STAINED WINDOWS: the Improved Method of Producing Them. By JOHN BARNARD, Architect.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

DECK'S Series of Books containing Designs, Materials, and Instructions for this beautiful Art, post-free, 1s. 1d. each. Also, DECK'S Manual of Wax Flowers, 2s. 6d. Sole Agent for the Patterns, 340, Oxford-street, London, W.

Price 1s., post-free, 1s. 1d., with Illustrations,

ALPHABETS and DESIGNS of different Periods, for the use of Draughtsmen, Engravers, &c. By F. G. DELAMOTTE.

London: J. BARNARD and SON, 339, Oxford-street, W.

Fifth Edition, enlarged, price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.,

THE DOMESTIC ARTS of DYEING and ORNAMENTING in GOLD and METALS. By HENRY ELLIS.—Crosby Lockwood and Co., 7, Stationers'-hall-court, E.C.

Second Edition, price 2s. 6d.; post-free, 2s. 10d., Illustrated with Coloured Plates and Woodcuts, by the Author, LANDSCAPE PAINTING and SKETCHING from NATURE. By JOHN CHASE, M.R.S.A.

London: Winsor and Newton, 38, Rathbone-place, W.

Third Edition, price 1s.; post-free, 1s. 2d.,

MED FINTS, WITH AN ESSAY ON LIGHT AND COLOUR. By EDWARD FIELDING, Author of "Rudiments of Drawing Cattle and Animals."

London: WINSOR and NEWTON, 38, Rathbone-place, W.

ENGRAVED ON STEEL.

BEAUTIFUL and LIFE-LIKE PORTRAIT of her Royal Highness the PRINCESS of WALES in Court Dress, engraved on steel by C. H. JEENS, from a Photograph by Caldesi, Blanford, and Co., by Command of her Royal Highness. Size of Engraving, 12 in. by 9 in. Price 2s. 6d. each. A limited number of Advertisements taken up to the 30th inst.

London: J. S. VIRTUE and CO., 26, Ivy-lane.

2Rd Edition, fcp. 8vo, 4s., IMPERFECT SENTENCES, Grammatically Corrected. By the Rev. P. FRAMPTON, D. Mus.

"It is no exaggeration the best book on the subject."—Educational Times. "Very useful."—Literary Churchman.

DR. YEARSLEY'S WORKS on the EAR. Price 1s. each. 1. On Diseased Deafness. 2. On the Artificial Tympanum. 3. On Deafness.

London: JOHN CHURCHILL, New Burlington-street.

15,000 BIBLES, PRAYER-BOOKS, and CHURCH SERVICES, in every variety of type and size and style of binding, kept constantly on sale at PARKINS and GOTTO'S Bible Warehouse, 24, Oxford-street.

PRESENTS.—PURSES, Pocket-books, Ladies' Companions, Dressing-cases, Writing-desks, Envelope-cases, Work-boxes, Blotting-books, Albums, and all goods of the kind, Note-case, &c., the largest stock in the country upon progressive terms.

PARKINS and GOTTO, 24, Oxford-street, W.

PRESENTS.—WRITING-CASES, Inkstands, Envelope-cases, Blotting-books, Albums, Work-boxes, Pocket-books, Purses, Tourists, Glove-boxes, &c.

PARKINS and GOTTO, 24, Oxford-street.

PRESENTS.—DRESSING-CASES and BAGS, fitted with Ivory and Silver Brushes, &c. Everything for the Largest Choice in London.

PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

ALBUMS for POSTAGE-STAMPS, Monograms, Autographs, Photographs, Scrapbooks, and Pictures. PARKINS and GOTTO 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

ALBUMS, for 50 Portraits, 2s. 3d.—A large assortment, very elegantly mounted, beautifully bound, and richly gilt, at PARKINS and GOTTO'S, 24 and 25, Oxford-street.

STRAW WRITING-PAPER (PARKINS and GOTTO).—Throughout in wide open lines any other. Has a fine surface, and is remarkably strong. Price 1s. per quire, or 20 quires for 18s. Sold only by PARKINS and GOTTO, Paper and Envelope Makers, 24, Oxford-st.

NO CHARGE at PARKINS and GOTTO'S for Stamping Arms, Crests, Monograms, or Addresses. Steel Dies Engraved, Initial Paper and Envelopes Stamped in One Colour, Gratis. Card Plates and Address Dies cut in Self-price. Specimens of Stamping and Prices Sent Free by Post.

PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

120 SIZES of WRITING-CASE, fitted with Paper and Envelopes, Ink-bottle, Pencil-case, Postage-stamp Case, and Pocket-book, in Russia, Morocco, and Velvet. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

SIX PRIZE WRITING-CASES, fitted with Paper and Envelopes, Ink-bottle, Pencil-case, Postage-stamp Case, and Pocket-book, in Russia, Morocco, and Velvet. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, London.

NICKACS SUITABLE FOR PRESENTS, 1s. 6d. and upwards. PARKINS and GOTTO, 24 and 25, Oxford-street, W.

BERRY'S DIABOLO D'ABONNEMENTS for 5 ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, post in Dutchess, for 5 Francs, in Prints, in Rotheads, for 7 francs; par Invalides Pilules, Flageolet, et Dépêches, 10 francs par trimestre. Abonnements pour tous les Journaux Illustrés de Londres, Paris, et Leipzig. Dépôt d'Ardoises de Pharmacie. Boîtes Mixtes and dépôts de Cartouches de Journaux. W. S. BERRY and CO., Paris, Rue St. Honoré, 27, London, 27, Salisbury-street, Strand.

NEWSVENDERS, STATIONERS, &c., Agents wanted for the Sale of Mr. Ackroyd's Patent Inkstand Cleaning, 1s. 6d., and 3s. 6d. per gross, post-free all extra. Patent Paper Cleaning, 1s. 6d. per gross, post-free. Sample of pens in Engraving and terms 4 stamps. Cheap Stationery and Toy Warehouse, 56, High Holborn, W.C.

NEW MUSIC.

ROBERT COCKS and CO.'S LIST OF NEW MUSICAL PUBLICATIONS—

THE PATHENKIRCHAN MARCH. For Piano. By Stephen Glover. With a view of the Norfolk residence of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales. 3s.

THE WALTZ WITH DANCING. Song. By Richter. As sung by Mr. Sandercock at her farewell concert. 3s.

THE FIRST DANCE. Song. By Frank Ali. 3s. 6d.

SPARKLING WITH GEMS. Song. By Frank Ali. 3s. 6d.

THE MAGIC OF LOVE. Song. By Frank Ali. Encored. 3s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN'S HOPE. Sacred Song. By C. L. Sedgwick. 3s.

MISS CATHCART'S NEW SET of DANCES for the Season. Illustrated. 4s.

THE ROYAL ALBERT QUADRILLE. Large Orch. 4s.

HAMILTONS PIANOFORTE TUTOR. 400th Edition. 4s.

HAMILTONS MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the MAINTENANCE of the VOICE. 400th Edition. 4s.

LIST OF NEW MUSIC. Gratis and post-free.

ROBERT COCKS and CO., New Burlington-street, W., Publishers to the Queen, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and the Royal Family. Where all the Music Sold—Boosey Illustrated Music, 2s. 6d.

"BLAME NOT THE HEART." Ballad. By VIOLETTA. One of the simplest, prettiest, and most touching ballads we have seen for some time. Any singer can create great effect under this."—Court Journal. Price 2s. 6d.

Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street.

SHAKESPEARE VOCAL ALBUM, 21s., in SHAKESPEARE VOCAL ALBUM, No. 1, 3s. SHAKESPEARE VOCAL MAGAZINE (still publishing). Nineteenth Edition. Price 1s. Nos. 1 to 12, 12s. 6d. each. "Shakespeare Vocal Magazine."—Vide Athenæum. "A full and clear reading appears. Words are brilliantly illustrated."—C. LOWDELL'S Musical Magazine. Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street.

"MARY, DEAR," SIMS REEVES'S New Song. "MARY, DEAR," SIMS REEVES, encored at the Crystal Palace, at the Conquerors' Concert, on 8, Joseph's Hall, is now published, price 2s. 6d. Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE, and other Sacred Melodies, arranged for the Pianoforte. Second series, arranged for the Pianoforte by BRINLEY RICHARDS. Solos, 3s. each; Duets, 4s. each. Boosey and Sons, 24, Holles-street.

EWER and CO.'S MUSICAL LIBRARY British and Foreign Publications. Subscribers may serve day by, 21, Regent-street, S.W.

PIANOFORTES.—The best 20-guinea Piano in London is JOHN PATEY'S PATENT, with the latest improvements and handsome antique case (walnut or rosewood). A large assortment of Pianofortes by all the best makers in Lists free. Pianofortes for hire, Illustrated Lists free. Orchestrelles.

MUSICAL DEPÔT for the Sale of NICOLS'S celebrated Musical Instruments in EBONITE and IVORINE. Lists free. Lists of Tunes and Prices gratis and MUSICAL-BOX DEPÔTS, 32, Ludgate-hill, and 57, Cheapside, London. Every description of Musical Box for sale; Small-boxes, 10s. to 40s. Cabinets of Tunes and Prices gratis and post-free. Repairs to WALES and Co., 32, Ludgate-hill, the largest Stock in London, with newest accompaniments. Established 1800.

UNIVERSAL MICROSCOPE, price £5 5s., with Condensing Lens, Forceps, &c.

21, Cornhill, E.C. (late 4, Coleman-street). Illustrated Catalogues, with Testimonials, sent free.

OPERA, RACE, and FIELD GLASSES. The largest assortment in the kingdom is at CALLAGHAN'S, New Bond-street, W. (corner of Conduit-street). The new Opera Glasses, invented and manufactured by him, are the most powerful and portable ever made. Price from £2 2s. to £10 10s. Sole Agent for the celebrated Race and Field Glasses of Voigtlander and Son, Vienna.

ARCHERY, CROQUET, and CRICKET. The best and cheapest stock in London; at C. ARMSTRONGS, 63, Piccadilly, W. Archery, 10s. 6d. to £5 5s. Croquet, 21s. to £10 10s. Cricket, 10s. 6d. to £5 5s. Illustrated Catalogues, 2 stamps.

THE PRETTIEST GIFT FOR A LADY is one of JONES'S LEVER WATCHES, at £11 11s.; for a Gentleman, at £10 10s. Jones's Chronometer Watch, Gold Medallist of Exhibition, 1851, Strand, opposite Somerset House.

DENT, Watch Maker by special appointment to her Majesty the Queen and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, 61, Strand, and 34, Royal Exchange.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—FREDC. HARRISON, Watch and Clock Manufacturer, Clerkenwell, under by special appointment to his late Majesty George IV., begs to call attention to his Stock of Watches, Clocks, Chronometers, &c. Repeating and Plain Watches, 2s. 6d. to £50. Clocks, striking hours and half-hours, 7s. 6d. to £50. Clocks, striking hours and quarters, 15s. to £50. Clocks, striking hours and Repeat-cirrus, Gothic, Grecian, &c. Fredc. Harrison, Manufacturer, 146, Regent-street, W. (from the Strand and Cornhill).

EVERY ONE who has a GARDEN should have a LAWN MOWER, the best and cheapest are SHANKS'S. Prize Medal Machines, 1862, 12-inch, £3 15s.; 14-inch, £4 5s.; 16-inch, £4 15s. Carriage paid to any railway station in England. Catalogues, post-free, on application to SHANKS and CO., Arbroath, N.B.

HORTICULTURAL TOOLS.—DEANE and CO., 46, King William-street, London Bridge. Lawn Mowers, Machines, from 30s. Grass, Shanks's, Samuelson's, Ransome's, and other Machines, Scythes, Hay-knives, Rakes, Hoes, Edging Shears, Hedging, Ornamental Chairs, and every description of Garden Implement. Illustrated Catalogues, with prices, sent free. Established 1700.

FOUNTAINS, STATUES, JARDINIÈRES, ANIMALS, &c., the celebrated Bronze of Arabic, by the Royal Academy, Paris, and Sculptor to the Queen of Spain, for Sale by the Artist, 3, Rue Bayard, Paris. Prize Medal, 1862. Apply for the above beautiful and cheap productions and have NOW ON VIEW at the Crystal Palace, Sydenham, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000, 1001, 1002, 1003, 1004, 1005, 1006, 1007, 1008, 1009, 1010, 1011, 1012, 1013, 1014, 1015, 1016, 1017, 1018, 1019, 1020, 1021, 1022, 1023, 1024, 1025, 1026, 1027, 1028, 1029, 1030, 1031, 1032, 1033, 1034, 1035, 1036, 1037, 1038, 1039, 1040, 1041, 1042, 1043, 1044, 1045, 1046, 1047, 1048, 1049, 1050, 1051, 1052, 1053, 1054, 1055, 1056, 1057, 1058, 1059, 1060, 1061, 1062, 1063, 1064, 1065, 1066, 1067, 1068, 1069, 1070, 1071, 1072, 1073, 1074, 1075, 1076, 1077, 1078, 1079, 1080, 1081, 1082, 1083, 1084, 1085, 1086, 1087, 1088, 1089, 1090, 1091, 1092, 1093, 1094, 1095, 1096, 1097, 1098, 1099, 1100, 1101, 1102, 1103, 1104, 1105, 1106, 1107, 1108, 1109, 1110, 1111, 1112, 1113, 1114, 1115, 1116, 1117, 1118, 1119, 1120, 1121, 1122, 1123, 1124, 1125, 1126, 1127, 1128, 1129, 1130, 1131, 1132, 1133, 1134, 1135, 1136, 1137, 1138, 1139, 1140, 1141, 1142, 1143, 1144, 1145, 1146, 1147, 1148, 1149, 1150, 1151, 1152, 1153, 1154, 1155, 1156, 1157, 1158, 1159, 1160, 1161, 1162, 1163, 1164, 1165, 1166, 1167, 1168, 1169, 1170, 1171, 1172, 1173, 1174, 1175, 1176, 1177, 1178, 1179, 1180, 1181, 1182, 1183, 1184, 1185, 1186, 1187, 1188, 1189, 1190, 1191, 1192, 1193, 1194, 1195, 1196, 1197, 1198, 1199, 1200, 1201, 1202, 1203, 1204, 1205, 1206, 1207, 1208, 1209, 1210, 1211, 1212, 1213, 1214, 1215, 1216, 1217, 1218, 1219, 1220, 1221, 1222, 1223, 1224, 1225, 1226, 1227, 1228, 1229, 1230, 1231, 1232, 1233, 1234, 1235, 1236, 1237, 1238, 1239, 1240, 1241, 1242, 1243, 1244, 1245, 1246, 1247, 1248, 1249, 1250, 1251, 1252, 1253, 1254, 1255, 1256, 1257, 1258, 1259, 1260, 1261, 1262, 1263, 1264, 1265, 1266, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1270, 1271, 1272, 1273, 1274, 1275, 1276, 1277, 1278, 1279, 1280, 1281, 1282, 1283, 1284, 1285, 1286, 1287, 1288, 1289, 1290, 1291, 1292, 1293, 1294, 1295, 1296, 1297, 1298, 1299, 1300, 1301, 1302, 1303, 1304, 1305, 1306, 1307, 1308, 1309, 1310, 1311, 1312, 1313, 1314, 1315, 1316, 1317, 1318, 1319, 1320, 1321, 1322, 1323, 1324, 1325, 1326, 1327, 1328, 1329, 1330, 1331, 1332, 1333, 1334, 1335, 1336, 1337, 1338, 1339, 1340, 1341, 1342, 1343, 1344, 1345, 1346, 1347, 1348, 1349, 1350, 1351, 1352, 1353, 1354, 1355, 1356, 1357, 1358, 1359, 1360, 1361, 1362, 1363, 1364, 1365, 1366, 1367, 1368, 1369, 1370, 1371, 1372, 1373, 1374, 1375, 1376, 1377, 1378, 1379, 1380, 1381, 1382, 1383, 1384, 1385, 1386, 1387, 1388, 1389, 1390, 1391, 1392, 1393, 1394, 1395, 1396, 1397, 1398, 1399, 1400, 1401, 1402, 1403, 1404, 1405, 1406, 1407, 1408, 1409, 1410, 1411, 1412, 1413, 1414, 1415, 1416, 1417, 1418, 1419, 1420, 1421, 1422, 1423, 1424, 1425, 1426, 1427, 1428, 1429, 1430, 1431, 1432, 1433, 1434, 1435, 1436, 1437, 1438, 1439, 1440, 1441, 1442, 1443, 1444, 1445, 1446, 1447, 1448, 1449, 1450, 1451, 1452, 1453, 1454, 1455, 1456, 1457, 1458, 1459, 1460, 1461, 1462, 1463, 1464, 1465, 1466, 1467, 1468, 1469, 1470, 1471, 1472, 1473, 1474, 1475, 1476, 1477, 1478, 1479, 1480, 1481, 1482, 1483, 1484, 1485, 1486, 1487, 1488, 1489, 1490, 1491, 1492, 1493, 1494, 1495, 1496, 1497, 1498, 1499, 1500, 1501, 1502, 1503, 1504, 1505, 1506, 1507, 1508, 1509, 1510, 1511, 1512, 1513, 1514, 1515, 1516, 1517, 1518, 1519, 1520, 1521, 1522, 1523, 1524, 1525, 1526, 1527, 1528, 1529, 1530, 1531, 1532, 1533, 1534, 1535, 1536, 1537, 1538, 1539, 1540, 1541, 1542, 1543, 1544, 1545, 1546, 1547, 1548, 1549, 1550, 1551, 1552, 1553, 1554, 1555, 1556, 1557, 1558, 1559, 1560, 1561, 1562, 1563, 1564, 1565, 1566, 1567, 1568, 1569, 1570, 1571, 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, 1576, 1577, 1578, 1579, 1580, 1581, 1582, 1583, 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587, 1588, 1589, 1590, 1591, 1592, 1593, 1594, 1595, 1596, 1597, 1598, 1599, 1600, 1601, 1602, 1603, 1604, 1605, 1606, 1607, 1608, 1609, 1610, 1611, 1612, 1613, 1614, 1615, 1616, 1617, 1618, 1619, 1620, 1621, 1622, 1623, 1624, 1625, 1626, 1627, 1628, 1629, 1630, 1631, 1632, 1633, 1634, 1635, 1636, 1637, 1638, 1639, 1640, 1641, 1642, 1643, 1644, 1645, 1646, 1647, 1648, 1649, 1650, 1651, 1652, 1653, 1654, 1655, 1656, 1657, 1658, 1659, 1660, 1661, 1662, 1663, 1664, 1665, 1666, 1667, 1668, 1669, 1670, 1671, 1672, 1673, 1674, 1675, 1676, 1677, 1678, 1679, 1680, 1681, 1682, 1683, 1684, 1685, 1686, 1687, 1688, 1689, 1690, 1691, KING and CO., SILKMERCERS, &c., 243, Regent-street.

Great fortunes
at large sacrifices, in British goods, completely new and very fashionable.
Patterns free. £20 000 at 2s 6d per yard.
Also a Lot of 40 pieces to be sold in the present, Large Lots will be found cheaper than the market value, and this week, be dear at any price.
New Goods can be bought 2/3 less in price.
KING and Co., Regent-street, London.

THE
NEW SPRING SILKS at KING'S.
243, Regent-street.
Patterns post-free.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
WATERPROOF FOULARDS, £1 1s. a Dress.
at KING'S,
241, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
CHECKED SILKS, 1s. 9½d. a Yard,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
STRIPED SILKS, £1 5s. a Dress,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
MOIRE ANTIQUES, 3s. 6d. a Yard,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
GROS GRAINS, 2s., 11½d. a Yard,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
CHÊNÉ SILKS, £1 15s. a Dress,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
CORDED SILKS, 3s. 3d. a Yard,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
PLAIN SILKS, 2s. 6d. a Yard,
at KING'S,
243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5650 WORTH of SILK SILKS,
1s. 6d. per yard,
at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£4763 WORTH of BROCHÉ SILKS,
Black, 1s. 6½d. per yard,
at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£7542 WORTH of CORDED SILKS,
Black, 1s. 3d. per yard,
at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£3758 WORTH of WIDOWS' SILKS,
All to the 1st Quality,
at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£5642 WORTH of MOIRE ANTIQUES,
Black, 3s. 6d. per yard,
at KING'S, 243, Regent-street.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
FRENCH LAWNS, 9s. 6d. a Dress.
Swiss Cambrics, 4s. 6d.
Organdie Muslins, 8s. 6d.
Chintz Muslins, 10s. 6d.
Jaconet Lawns, 10s. 6d.
Nun Cambrics, 10s. 6d.
Poplins, 10s. 6d.
Address to KING and CO., Regent-street, London.

IMPORTANT SALE of SILKS.
NEARLY ONE MILLION
announced the following lots of very choice SILKS to the especial notice of the Nobility, Gentry, and Ladies of the Court and Metropolis, viz.,
Several Hundred Pieces of New Fancy Silks, in a great variety of Beyond Patterns, at 2s. 6d. the 14 yards, worth 4s. 6d.
Rich Black and Coloured Silks, in all the New Colours, at 2½ pence per yard.
A large lot of very rich Black Gros Grains, from 10s. 6d. to £1 pieces; extremely cheap.
The richest Plain All French Moiré Antiques, in all Colours, at 2½ guineas Full Dress. Many of the Extend in this Unique Collection at 1½ guinea.
Plain Black Glacés and Black Checks, at 2½ guineas for 14 yards, made of pure Italian Silk, and strongly recommended for wear.
Handsome Barèges figurés, Mantelet, in Lilac, Grey, Mauve, &c., at 5d. each.
Nos. 58, 59, 60, 61, and 62, Oxford-street; 3, 4, and 5, Wells-street London.

JAMES LOCKE and CO.'S SPRING and SUMMER NOVELTIES.
Ladies will find upon inspection an abundant assortment of all the new and fashionable shades of colour in Poreda Cloths, Mohairs, Alpacas, Grenadines, Barèges, &c., at the lowest prices at which genuine can be produced. A variety of attractions, new designs with some most attractive styles, designed and manufactured expressly for themselves. Patterns post-free.
THE NEW SILK WAREHOUSE,
15, 17, 19, and 21, Regent-street.

HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL SCOTCH WAREHOUSE—SCOTT ADIE, Successor to the late ROBERT SCOTT, Begs to call the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to his Stock of Shawls, Plaids, Tartans, and Scotch Woollens, manufactured on the whole of the Highland Clan and Family Patterns forwarded to the country free.—11, Burlington-arcade, entrance of Vigo-street.

LADIES' MANTLES, CLOTHS.
H. VICARY Travels and Advises. Blue Diagonals, Black Cloths, and Coloured Cloths, for Ladies' Mantles, Jackets, and Costumes, in a large variety of Textures and Colours, the best wear from 1s. 6d. per yard, to the finest qualities, equally elegy. Patterns free.
H. VICARY, MERCHANT and DRAPER,
111, Holborn-hill corner of Hatton-garden), London.

FORD'S PRINCESS ALEXANDRA JACKET, the most fashionable shape of the season. Price, Velvet, 3½ guineas; Silk, 1½ to 2 guineas; Cashmere, 25s. to 35 guineas.
See "Cornhill Magazine" for this month.
Thos. Ford, No. 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

FORD'S SILK and CASHMERE JACKETS, in endless variety. Silk, from 25s.; Cashmere, from 10s. 6d. See "Cornhill Magazine" for this month.
Thos. Ford, No. 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

FORD'S RICH SILK MANTLES.
A handsome Silk Mantle made in Glacé and Gros-grain, of splendid style and quality. Price 3 to 4 guineas.
See "Cornhill Magazine" for this month.
Thos. Ford, No. 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

FORD'S RIDING HABITS.
Price 3 to 5 guineas. Patterns and Illustrations free. Ladies' Habits, Trousers, Vests, and Boots, for Gentlemen.
Thos. Ford, Merchant Tailor, No. 42, Oxford-street, London, W.

REDMAYNE and CO., having completed the Retention and Enlarging of their Premises, have now on Sale a Large and Choice Stock of Silks, comprising every Novelty for the Season, of and 20, New Bond-street, and 19, Conduit-street.

MOIRE ANTIQUES.—SEWELL and CO. have the largest selection of 68/74 LEADING MOIRE ANTIQUES, in White, Black, and all the New Colours, at 2½ guineas the Full Dress.—Compton House, 247, Regent-street, Soho-square.

ORGANDIE MUSLINS, 1s. per yard, of every variety of design and colour, in the newest and most beautiful fabric ever produced. Muslins, and new shirting fibres at the above price.
Compton House, Old Compton-street; and Pulteney-street, Soho-square.

ESTABLISHED TWENTY YEARS.
NICHOLSON and CO. are now prepared with their NEW STOCK of SPRING SILKS, comprising 10,000 parts of choice and elegant designs, from 1s. 6½d. to 2s. per yard. Patterns free. 50 and 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London. No connection with any other House.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
7640 YARDS of LAST YEAR'S SILKS,
from 2s. 6d. to 4s. per yard. Half-their original price.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
9326 YARDS PLAIN COLOURED SILKS, Thirty different Shades, at 1s. 6d. the yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
8230 Yards NEW CHECKED and STRIPED SILKS, at 1s. 6d. per yard, and 13 guinea the Dress.
Patterns post-free.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£3400 Worth of MOIRE ANTIQUES, in all the New Colours, at 2½ gns. the Dress of 14 yards, with width.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£2543 WORTH of BROCHÉ and CHÊNÉ SILKS, Black and Coloured, from 2s. 6d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
£2400 WORTH BLACK SILKS,
Glacés, Gros Grains, Checks, Figures, and Stripes, all of the celebrated Notre Impériale dye, from 2s. 6d. per yard.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

200 PATTERNS POST-FREE.
15030 YARDS FOULARD SILKS
of the most charming and elegant designs, warranted all pure silk, and guaranteed to wear, from 2s. 6d. per yard, 28 inches wide. Worth 3s. 6d. Dress of 10 yards. 28 inches wide.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

PATTERNS POST-FREE.
3000 YARDS of PLAIN COLOURED IRISH POPLINS, at 2s. 6d. per yard. Half price.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

NEW MANTLES.—MESSRS. NICHOLSON and CO. beg to inform their Customers and Ladies generally that they have now received their Stock of Novelties for the Season. An Illustrated Magazine of latest Fashions, post-free.
Nicholson and Co., 50 and 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

100 PATTERNS POST-FREE of the NEW PLAIDS, BERAGE POPLINS, MOHAIRS, and GRENADINES, from 6½d. per yard, 28 inches wide.
Write to NICHOLSON'S, 50 to 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

DO YOU WISH YOUR CHILDREN WELL DRESSED?—Boys' Knickerbocker Suits in Cloth, from 5s. 6d. Youths' Suits, from 12s. 6d. Address for Self-Measure, directions for measurement, and Illustrations of New Dresses, Hats, Caps, &c., to H. and J. NICHOLSON, 50 and 51, St. Paul's-churchyard, London.

BAKER and CRISPS ALPINE KID GLOVES, 5½ Buttons, 2s. 6d. per pair. Sole Brussels Agents for Kid Gloves. Ladies' Dressing Cases, Portmanteaus, Travelling Bags, and Despatch Boxes.
Baker and Crisp, 198, Regent-street, London.

1500 BLACK SPANISH LACE SHAWLS, at 12s. 6d., 15s., and 1 guinea each, purchased last September at half-price, and now selling at half-price and less.
BAKER and CRISP, removed to 198, Regent-street.

LAST YEAR'S MUSLINS, GRENADINES, MOHAIRS, at Half Price.
Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, removed to 198, Regent-street.

SILKS RETURNED FROM AMERICA.
BAKER and CRISP are now offering upwards of 20,000 yards Striped, Checked, Corded, and Fancy SILKS, in beautifully assorted Colours and Designs, at 1s. 6d. per yard, worth 2s. 6d.
Baker and Crisp, 198, Regent-street.

BLACK and BLACK SILKS.
Rich, Brilliant, Wide, and Durable, at 1s. 6d. per yard, Patterns free.
BAKER and CRISP, 198, Regent-street.

THE NEW HEADDRESS.
The Most Recherché Assortment of Flowers, Feathers, Lace, and Ribbons, at 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 3s. 6d., 5s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. 6d., and 15s. 6d.
BAKER and CRISP, removed to 198, Regent-street.

NEW SUMMER DRESSES, &c.
The Most Beautiful Assortment in the World.
The New Spring Muslins, in 24 Full Dress.
The New Printed Muslins, from 6½d. per Dress.
The New Printed Muslins, from 6½d. per Dress.
The New Printed Muslins, from 6½d. per

NEW MUSIC.

GARIBALDI'S HYMN, with English Words, by JOHN OXENFORD, Esq. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI'S GALOP. By CHARLES DUBLY. One of D'Albert's best Galops. Beautifully illustrated with a Portrait of the great General. Price 3s. Solo or Duet. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI'S HYMN. Arranged for the Pianoforte by HAROLD THOMAS. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

GARIBALDI MARCH, for the Harmonium. By LOUIS ENGEL. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

SHAKESPEARE'S SONGS.—Just published, SIXTEEN of SHAKESPEARE'S best SONGS (with Piano Accompaniment) for One Shilling, in No. 47 of "CHAPPELL'S Musical Treasures." Price, post-free, 1s. 2d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

MRS. JOSEPH ROBINSON'S NEW COMPOSITIONS for the PIANOFORTE.
THE VILLAGE FETE. Price 3s.
THE VILLAGE FETE. Harmonie de Salon. Price 3s.
CONSTANCY. Melody ... ... Price 3s.
THE SPRING. Melody ... ... Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW TRIOS for THREE PERFORMERS on ONE PIANOFORTE.—The following are just published, arranged as Trios for the Pianoforte by H. S. THOMALIN. Price 4s. each:—
No. 1. D'Albert's Fortuna Quadrille.
No. 2. D'Albert's New London Quadrille.
No. 3. D'Albert's West End Polka.
No. 4. Gounod's "Faust" Waltz.
No. 5. Mozart's Grand Duo from "Don Giovanni."
No. 6. Mozart's Overture to "Don Giovanni."
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE GUARDS' WALTZ. By D. GODFREY. Played at the Ball given to the Prince and Princess of Wales, and at Public Concerts with immense success. Just published, price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE MERRY TUNES LANCERS. Just published. A new Set of Lancers, composed of the most popular and merry tunes of the day. By D. GODFREY. Price 4s.; Orchestra, 1s. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S LEGGERO INVISIBLE. Just published, Auld's new Solace, sung by Miller, Tietjens and Vougel with great success, arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on the four Rossini's favourite Operas, for the Pianoforte, by this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a new Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from this charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon for the piano, on favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. Solo or Duet.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA, This popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS, from Gounod's celebrated Opera of "Faust." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Airs from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Pianoforte Professor. Just published. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S EMMELINE. A Pastorale for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S BRIGAND'S DANCE A Quadrille Dance. For the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite Airs from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as a Pianoforte Duet. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 3s. Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of the most admired Songs as Pianoforte Duets in easy keys, containing many admired subjects not before published. Price 4s. In two Books, 3s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE DUNE NIÈRE. Sacred Melody for the Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP. Rhapsody for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

E DE PARIS' L'APPEL. Galop di Bravura for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Oliver Anley, and rapturously encored, is now ready in D, C, or E Flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASHIN (Composer of the Burlesque Galop). Just published, extensively Illustrated. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop by CHARLES COOTE (Composer of Harum-Scarum Galop). Capitally Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

BOOSEY'S MUSICAL and DRAMATIC REVIEW.—A new Weekly Journal of Music and the Stage, 16 pages, 2d., price One Penny. Published every Saturday. To be had of all Booksellers and Newsvendors in Town and Country. 2, Catherine-court, Strand, and 24, Poultry, E.C., and Exeter-hall, Strand, and Boosey and Sons, Holles-street. Subscription (post-free), 8s. 6d. per annum.

M. GOUNOD'S NEW OPERA, MIRELLE, is now ready, for Voice and Pianoforte. Price 10s.; also, for Pianoforte Solo, 10s.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

HOME SANITORY DOLBY'S NEW SONGS.
NORAH THE NURSE. New Ballad. Written by CLARIBEL. Adapted to an Irish Melody by MICHAEL ROONEY. Post-free, 1s 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

SUSANNA'S STORY, by CLARIBEL. New Ballad. Written by CLARIBEL. Adapted to a Swedish Melody by JOHN OXENFORD. Post-free, 1s 6d.
Also the following Songs by Claribel are all just ready.—Although the day be never so long; Dreaming; Fairy Bells; Farewell at the window, The; My Own Lost Love, Is; Sixth Edition of Shepherd Boy, The; Sixth Edition of Sleep, Baby, Sleep; Sweet Spring-time; Third Edition of Take back the Heart; Twenty-second Edition of Wreath Around Bridal. Also new Editions of Won't you tell me why, Ballot Box, The, Cradle Song, Dreaming, Farewell, The Fairy Bells, Flower Parting. All post-free, 1s 6d each.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

MISS HAWLEY'S IVANHOE. New and popular Ballad. "Rebecca at the Casement Gray." By the Author of "Isalgela." Post-free, 1s 6d.
BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JANET'S CHOICE. Ballad. Sung by Miss Poole with great success at the celebrated Song, "Janet's Choice." By BRINLEY RICHARDS. Post-free, 1s. 6d.—Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

KUHE'S MAGGIE'S SECRET. Claribel's beautiful ballad, which Miss Lascelles has rendered so popular, arranged for the Pianoforte by KUHE. Post-free, 1s. 6d.—Boosey and Sons, Holles-street.

KUHE'S SEMIRAMIDE. Grand Fantasia on the four Rossini's favourite Operas, for the Pianoforte, by this popular Composer. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S MASSANIELLO.—Just published, a new Grand Fantasia for the Pianoforte on Airs from this charming Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

KUHE'S FAUST. Fantaisie de Salon for the piano, on favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' JUANITA. This popular Song arranged as a very pleasing drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s. Solo or Duet.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' MARAQUITA, This popular Ballad arranged as an easy and effective drawing-room Pianoforte piece. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' SOLDIERS' CHORUS, from Gounod's celebrated Opera of "Faust." Arranged for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.; Duet, 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

OSBORNE'S FAUST. A Fantasia on Favourite Airs from Gounod's celebrated Opera, by the above popular Pianoforte Professor. Just published. Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S EMMELINE. A Pastorale for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

H. W. GOODBAN'S BRIGAND'S DANCE A Quadrille Dance. For the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW PIANOFORTE PIECES FROM FAUST.
FAVARGER'S FAUST. A Fantasia on the most favourite Airs from Gounod's "Faust." Price 4s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE SOLDIERS' CHORUS in FAUST, as a Pianoforte Duet. Arranged for the Pianoforte by W. H. CALLCOTT. Price 3s. Duet, 4s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

W. H. CALLCOTT'S BEAUTIES OF FAUST. A new arrangement of the most admired Songs as Pianoforte Duets in easy keys, containing many admired subjects not before published. In two Books, 3s. each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S LA PRIÈRE DUNE NIÈRE. Sacred Melody for the Piano. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S THE ANGELS' HARP. Rhapsody for the Pianoforte. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

TREKELL'S WAVING LILY BELLS. Morceau de Salon for the Pianoforte. Price 3s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

E DE PARIS' L'APPEL. Galop di Bravura for the Pianoforte. Just published. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST WALTZ, on Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST QUADRILLE, on Favourite Airs from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 4s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

COOTE'S FAUST GALOP, from Gounod's Opera. Beautifully Illustrated. Price, Solo or Duet, 3s.; Septet, 1s.; Full Orchestra, 2s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

FAUST POLKA. By F. WALLERSTEIN. Just published. Beautifully Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE STIRRUP CUP, MR. SANTLEY'S NEW SONG, expressly composed for him by Oliver Anley, and rapturously encored, is now ready in D, C, or E Flat. Price 3s. 6d.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

THE HARUM-SCARUM GALOP. By JAMES CASHIN (Composer of the Burlesque Galop). Just published, extensively Illustrated. Price 3s.; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

HELTER-SKELTER GALOP.—Just out, a New Galop by CHARLES COOTE (Composer of Harum-Scarum Galop). Capitally Illustrated. Price 3s., Solo or Duet; Orchestra, 1s.; Septet, 1s.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC.

THE ORCHESTRA.—"The leading Musical Journal" (vide "Athenæum").—Office, 201, Regent-street. Quarter's subscription (stamped), 6s. 6d. Facilitates Musical and Literary Intercourse. Music and Artists, Cheap, Lectures, Reviews, Gossip, free Advice, &c.

THE STEPS TO CONQUER OPERA, by O. A. MACFARREN. Complete Opera, 32s. net. All the Vocal Parts may be had separately. Pianoforte Accompaniments by Stanley Rickard, T. H. Mullis, F. Berger, W. MacFarren, Natalia Macfarren, and Oliver King. Overture and Quadrilles by D. Conia. Polka by Rimé Godwin.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 215, Regent-street.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST, by Sir JULIUS BENEDICT. Complete Vocal and Pianoforte Score, Instrumental Part for first bands ... (net) 15s. 6d. Separate Vocal Parts ... (net) 1s. each. Overture, Solo and Duet, by Bernard Molique, Benedict, and Wippern. Fantasia by Rimé. Dances, Rocker, Marriage, Blumig. Duet for Female Voices 2s. 6d. "Where the Bee sucks," Song, 2s. 6d. Full Score, 1 guinea.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 215, Regent-street.

SWEET SPIRIT WALTZES. By J. P. KNIGHT. Illustrated by Brandard. Founded on four of the most favourite Songs of the day.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 215, Regent-street.

THE PRETTY BARMAID POLKA. From "The Steps to Conquer." By HENRI DELORME. Illustrated.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 215, Regent-street.

COOTE'S "SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER" QUADRILLES. 4s. "Illustrated."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 215, Regent-street.

COOTE'S "SHE STOOPS TO CONQUER" WALTZES. 4s. "Illustrated."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BRINLEY RICHARDS' LEAH'S SONG. 3s. "Illustrated."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"THE PIPE." A Student's Song. By HENRY FARNIE. Illustrated. Portrait of "the great Dr Walter Kelpius."
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

BOAT SONG. By VERDI. 2s. 6d. A Venetian Song.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE MAIDEN'S PRAYER. By VERDI. 2s. 6d. Illustrated. Portrait of the young Queen of Denmark.—CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

THE BUCCANEER. 3s. The New Sea Song. By J. LAIDLAW.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

LITTLE GOLDEN-HAIR. A Venetian Ballad. By CHARLES COOTE.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

GARIBALDI, Song. By ARDITI. Words by the Rev. G. J. CHESTER. Illustrated. 3s.
CRAMER, WOOD, and CO., 201, Regent-street.

"IT WON'T TIRE." SELL DEMONIO VALSE (performed every evening at the Royal Lyceum Theatre). Illustrated with Portrait of Miss Nelly Power, 3s. Full and other favourite airs in "Sol Demonio." Composed by W. H. CALLCOTT. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, and 15, Cornhill.

GARIBALDI'S TRIUMPHAL MARCH, for the Pianoforte. Composed by CHARLES COOTE. Illustrated by the admirable march, in honour of the great Italian patriot, is played by all military bands. Price 3s. CHAPPELL and BROUGHTON, 50, Oxford-st.

ALL MUSIC HALF PRICE.
VIRGINIA GABRIEL'S NEWEST SONGS. "Thou art the Rose," sung by Miss Poole; and "Bird of Dawn," sung by Madame Lemmens-Sherrington, 2s. each. "Ballad-Book" of Virginia Gabriel's Songs, 2s. 6d. Post-free for 13 stamps each.
CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, and 15, Cornhill.

NEW MUSIC, Quarter Price (Surplus Library Copies). A Catalogue of the same sent for two stamps. Vocal and Instrumental. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

NEW SONG—JESSY GRAY. By E. L. BLUMENTHAL. Sent for 18 stamps. One of the greatest hits of the season. Also, the Duet for Soprano and Contralto, sung by the words in very interesting, the melody remarkably breathing and tender. Sent for 18 stamps. CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street.

PARFAIT AMOUR. Romance for the Pianoforte. By W. H. CALLCOTT. Sent for 18 stamps. One of the most exquisite and captivating romances we have ever heard.—CHAPPELL and CO., 50, New Bond-street, and 15, Cornhill.

BOOSEY'S 17-GUINEA PIANOFORTE. "The Minuteness in the best cheap Pianoforte ever manufactured. It is the only Cheap Piano in Walnut, and possesses an extension top and carved legs.

BOOSEY'S 20-GUINEA PIANOFORTE, in rosewood, or 2 guineas in Italian walnut, in a highly finished, compact cabinet, suitable for any drawing-room; the tone naturally is of the very best description, the touch elastic, and the whole of the workmanship and materials guaranteed.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

BOOSEY'S 35-GUINEA PIANOFORTE in rosewood, and 37 guineas in Italian walnut, form indeed a most beautiful Pianoforte, and the tone is remarkably rich and powerful. This Piano is also to a superior ornamented case, and is recommended as the best Piano for the money ever manufactured.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street, London.

THE COTTAGE, or SIX-GUINEA. HARMONIUM has a soft, agreeable quality of tone, and is strongly recommended.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE SCHOOL, or TEN-GUINEA, HARMONIUM has a rich, full tone, suitable for leading choir and congregation.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

THE CHURCH HARMONIUMS, at 20, 25, and 30 guineas, are very powerful instruments adapted for those of worship.—BOOSEY and SONS, 24, Holles-street.

BOOSEYS' ENGLISH HARMONIUMS, by Bevington, are unrivalled in tone, workmanship, and accordance, at greatly reduced prices including instruments with two rows of vibrators.—BOOSEY and SONS, Holles-street.

PIANOFORTES.—OETZMANN and PLUMB'S New Pianoforte is acknowledged the best and cheapest Pianoforte manufactured, and is the only one that will stand in any climate. Can be had twelve months on trial. One in the Windsor Castle Exhibition. Lists free.—27, Baker-street.

OETZMANN and PLUMB'S DRAWING-ROOM PIANOFORTES, in fine walnut cases, 25 to 35 guineas, are unrivalled for tone, touch, and durability.—27, Baker-street.

PIANOFORTES, — OETZMANN and PLUMB'S GRAND OCTAVE, a new invention, producing the effect of two pianos. Lists free.—27, Baker-street.

